COTTON.—The market for Bengal Cotton continues firmer, the stock being so very short, and there being, from the late accounts, little probability of any further supply for some time. In Bombay and the inferrior kinds of Madras we have no improvement, good Tinnevelly is, however, more enquired for.

OPIUM.—There is no change in this trade; reports are afloat that the smuggling boats will be allowed to run a short time, but we do not place much faith in them and we believe it is only founded on the probability of the inferior mandarins being willing to try the experiment for their own benefit during the absence of the Viceroy, who leaves on his tour of inspection to morrow. Prices therefore continue quite nominal, and, for the causes stated in our last, the deliveries both in the river and outside have been very short; in addition to which the arrival of the Antonio Pereira and Red Rover with the new drug has put a stop to any operations. No price is yet named, but with so heavy a supply close at hand, holders will no doubt feel anxious to realize at any thing near prime-cost. We have received no report yet of the weight or quality of the new drug. The deliveries to the 13th were, Patna, 218; Benares, 44; Malwa, 283; Total 545 chests. Turkey, is quite nominal and the price will, in a great measure, be regulated by that of the other qualities.

EXPORTS.

RAW SILK.—No further supplies have yet arrived although daily expected. Some purchases have been made during the week of the middling cargo silk, we understand, at our quotations.

TEA.—A good deal of business has been done during the week and at advanced prices. Very little good Tea of any kind remains, and the same prices are now demanded for low qualities as were formerly current for the better descriptions. Low Hysons are plentiful.

RADICALS IN CHINA.

The names of YANG and MIH have, already, been mentioned. They were leaders of sects; and taught principles directly the opposite of each other. YANG taught, that SELF-LOVE should be the ruling principles of all a man's actions. MIH, on the contrary, held, that an equal and indiscriminate affection to all men, of whatever class or character, should be cherished. MANG TSZE labored hard to reduce them from these extremes. The following brief extract contains the sum of their doctrines.—" MANG-TSZE said—YANG is for SELF alone. Could the plucking out of a single hair benefit an empire, he would not do it! MIH loves all men alike. Could the grinding down of his whole body, from the crown of the head to the heels, be of service to a country, he would submit to bear it."—Kwan VII. page 11.

On a slight view of this latter gentleman's principles, one is apt to consider them benevolent and patriotic in the highest degree; but MANG TSZE judged differently. He perceived REVELLING spirit in them, which would ultimately destroy all relative ties, and lead a man to love a stranger as much as his father, and a prostitute as tenderly as his wife. He perceived the tendency of MIH's principles would be to introduce anarchy into government, while that of YANG's would be to disorder families.

There were, at that time, some stickler-for "LIBERTY and EQUALITY," who thought it was as reasonable that princes should plow and plant, and gain their daily bread, with their own hands, as that others should do these for them. HEU HING was the most notorious of this levelling fraternity. He affirmed, that a truly good prince would "labor for his breakfast and supper, in the field, along with the people; be his own cook; and govern the people too!" He also complained, that princes stored up the produce of the taxes in their granaries and treasuries to feed themselves, while the people were injured and oppressed. A certain person who had become a proselyte to HEU-HING's view, informed MANG TSZE of his master's opinions. The following conversation between MANG-TSZE and CHING-KEANG took place on the occasion:—"MANG-TSZE—Then, does Mr. HEU eat of that which he himself plants? CHIN-KEANG—YES. MANG—Does he wear the cloth of which his clothes are made? CHIN—NO: he wears a coarse barmade cloth. MANG—Does Mr. HEU put on a cap? CHIN—YES. MANG—Of what sort of a cap? CHIN—A very plain one. MANG—Did he weave it himself? CHIN—NO: he bartered it for grain. MANG—Why did not HEU weave it himself? CHIN—That would have impeded his plowing. MANG—Does Mr. HEU use pots and pans in cooking, or iron instruments in plowing? CHIN. To be sure. MANG—Does he make these himself? CHIN—NO: he barters them for grain. MANG—To give his grain in exchange for implements and vessels, injures not the smith, or the potter; and if the smith and the potter give their implements and vessels for grain, what detriment is done to the husbandman? (None—this is all fair.) But how comes it to pass that Mr HEU does not himself act the smith and potter, and bring every implement out of his own house as he requires it? What use for all the bustle and vexation of exchanging here and there with all the different trades? Surely such a man as Mr. HEU does not fear the toil of even handicraft. CHIN—were he to labor at the several handicrafts, it would be impossible for him to cultivate the land. MANG—Is, then, the government of an empire the only labor that may be associated (in the person of the sovereign) with the labors of common humanity, without suffering injury! There are labors proper for the higher ranks, and labors suitable for the common people. A single individual requires, in his own person, the fruits of an hundred (i. e. all the) different mechanical occupations. For each person, with his own hands, first to make and then use every thing he requires, would be to convert the empire into an high way. Hence the ancients said—

"Hwo laou fin; hwo laou lih. Laou fin chay, che jin. Laou lih chay, che yu jin." i. e. Some to labor with their mind; and some to labor with their strength. Those that labor with their mind rule others. Those that labor with their strength are ruled by others"—Now, that those who are ruled by a prince should support him—and that he who rules, should be fed by the power whom he rules, is a just principle, confirmed by universal consent."

MAULMAIN.

(From the Moulmain Chronicle 9th Dec. 1837.)

We regret to have to report the loss of the Charles Stuart, at sea, on the 13th ult., in N. Lat. 15d. 34m. and E. Long. 93d. 30m. having been apparently upset by a sudden squall. Five persons were drowned but the majority of those on board, 17 in number, got into the jolly boat which floated upon and arrived at Goa, a village on the Arracan Coast, on the 6th day after the accident.

She was laden with Timber and had a considerable quantity of money on board all of which was of course lost, and we hear, was not insured.

Various reports have reached us by the late arrivals from Rangoon, among others, that the half-brother of the late and present king, the Bo-thmon Meitha, has effected his escape from the capital. If this be true, he will of course direct his flight to the Shan states of which he was formerly the Governor-General, and by whom he is, from all accounts, much beloved. He is said to be a man of far more energy and strength of mind than either of his half-brothers, and if he has escaped out of the present king's hands, the latter is likely to find in him a very troublesome disturber of his quiet, and one whom it will not be easy to put down.

We have seen a copy of an order, or proclamation, or whatever else it may be called, addressed by His Majesty to all his loving subjects, in which he informs them that while his elder brother was on the throne, the Government was bad and the people oppressed and unhappy, but that he intends to restore justice and happiness—that for this purpose he did intend establishing himself at the birth-place at his great ancestor, but that it having been represented to him that Amrapoora was the residence of his father—that it is a holy and fortunate city, and that all the omens and conjurations and divinations point to that city as the most eligible site for his throne and palace, he has determined upon re-establishing it as the Capital—that he has given orders for building a palace there, and that it is not his intention to call upon his people to contribute towards the expense which will be defrayed from the Royal Treasure. This last assurance, if abided by, which we much doubt, will be highly popular.

Reports are prevalent at Rangoon of Mr. Sarkies having obtained from the king a monopoly of Timber, and it has naturally created considerable dissatisfaction. The report, however, requires confirmation.

We learn from Tavay, that a party of Siamese have arrived at that place, bringing with them a letter requesting to be informed of the real state of our present relations with Ava. It appears, that reports had reached the Court of Siam of war having been declared between us and the Burmese, and that the latter, having been joined by the French, had succeeded in driving us out of these Provinces. Such a report must indeed have set speculation afloat in the Siamese Capital, but we doubt whether the real facts of the case, when learnt at the Court of Siam, will tend to allay this speculation, though they may tend to divert it into another channel. They will be much inclined to suppose there is some hitch in our affairs, which causes us to put up so quietly with the insulting pretensions of the king of Ava. To them it must appear, whatever may be said to the contrary, that our Resident has been ejected from the Burmese Court, they will hear of the king's assertion, that he will not allow a British Resident at his Court, and they will know that the Resident quitted it some months ago. It would be useless to explain to them that he came away of his own accord.

We understand that a party of Siamese may shortly be expected here on a similar errand as those at Tavoy—that of obtaining intelligence of what is going on. They are not likely to return much wiser than they came, though they may charge themselves with some of the absurd reports that are prevalent, and indeed, without some absurdities in their narration, their tale would not be believed. A mere statement of facts, unvarnished by the marvellous or the mysterious, never goes down with these people.

We learn that great hopes are entertained of a caravan of Chinese traders visiting Maulmain this season. Captain McLeod, during his late mission, fell in with a considerable number of them, who all expressed a desire of visiting us, and some promised to come at all hazards. Our only fear is, that the route will be found too long, but as they are known to be a bold and enterprising race, and content with moderate profits, a few of their number may be induced to try the market. Once here with their goods, however small the number, the question will be whether an overland trade with this place will prove sufficiently profitable, and, if it do so, we may be assured we shall be visited by annually increasing numbers. They would bring with them bullion (silver,) raw silk, bartal, and articles of Chinese manufacture, all of which they may, perhaps, dispose of to advantage, but we doubt whether our market will afford the articles they will desire in exchange. Raw cotton (except the finer qualities of which we have no great quantity) they can procure in sufficient abundance, much nearer home; birds' nests, shark fins, sea slugs, and other delicacies of the Chinese table, are not to be found here, but they abound in the Southern Provinces, and if these overland traders offer a fair price for them, they will naturally be sent here annually for sale, instead of the round-about sea route to Cohin. They are expensive articles however, and require considerable capital to trade in them, which makes us doubt whether they would suit the means of these traders. From all that we can learn we do not suppose these people will carry away much of our manufactures, but we are still in much ignorance as to their real wants.

If these people possess a fair share of observation and intelligence, it would be highly interesting to watch them amid scenes and objects so utterly different from anything they have been accustomed to. The very sea is a sight unknown to them. The ships moving on its waters, some with sails and some with smok, the troops in battle array, the carriages, the white faces, all are calculated to excite their astonishment and give them ample materials for "traveller's tries" to their friends at home. If they do come, we shall be very glad to hear they are pleased with their visit in every respect, and we hope that our Government will be held out to them to repeat it.—*Sing. NIPAL AND CHINA.

The following we take from a very interesting article in the Repository for last month on the official communication the Government of India had with the Chinese authorities during and after the war with Nipal.

Scene—Shigatsee; a gardenhouse, near the city.

"With the tsengkeun (generalissimo) were the two tajin seated in chairs, and all the subordinate officers of various ranks stood around them, with their hands joined before them, as if in the act of supplicating. The Nipalese sirdars, having previously obtained permission to be attended by their armed escort of 111 men, proceeded to the residence, marching by files, in slow order. When they approached the tsengkeun, the whole sainted him after the Chinese manner, by falling on their knees, from which position they rose by an order. During the visit, the Chinese brought out a painting, containing likenesses of several of the old officers of the court of Nipál, and compared them with those present, but only found the likeness of one of the chieftains now before them. The tsengkeun asked, "Where are your Pundyes and your Parsarams fled to?" And who are these thapas, that I never be ore heard of?" Entering into the subject for which they had met, he soon got exceedingly angry, and said, "You are great rascals: you have always been playing tricks, and have been the ruin of many rájás. You once plundered Shigatsee without provocation, and when you went to war with the English, it was under the impression that you could act the Shigatsee scene over again. Why did you commit a breach of faith, and murder a the sirdár, after agreeing that hostilities should be suspended? You have now received your punishment; you first wrote to us of war having been commenced; you then apprized us of your having made peace; and now you come and ask aid of us! What kind of a peace is this? But you were never to be depended on!" To all this, the Nipálese sirdárs simply replied, "If you cannot afford us effective aid, give us a letter to the English, that will induce them to quit Nipál." The tsengkeun rejoined, "You have already told us that the English first entered your country for the sole purpose of establishing a warehouse there, and upon what plea can I attempt to remove merchants for such people are not molested in any country whatever?" One of the sirdárs answered, "If they were merely merchants, it would be of no consequence, but they are soldiers, and commanders; and what connection have troops with merchants?" The tsengkeun resumed; "The English have written to inform us that they sent their resident with your consent, of what then have you to complain? As to what your rája stated about the English having demanded of him the roads through Bárán with the intention of penetrating into China, it is false; and, if they had any such views, they would find less circuitous routes." The sirdárs remained perfectly silent, and the tsengkeun then addressed himself, in a strain of irony, to Runbeer. "You Górkhas think there are no soldiers in the hills but what are in Nipál. Pray, at what do you number your fighting men? And to what amount do you collect revenue?" Runbeer replied, that the number of their soldiers was about that mentioned by the tsengkeun, and that their revenue amounted to about five lakhs of rupees per annum. "You are, indeed, then," said the tsengkeun, "a mighty people!"

It was soon after intimated to the Nipálese mission, that it was time to take leave. They were honorably dismissed, and presented on their departure with silver to the value of 20,000 rupees, together with furs, silk, &c.

HUMAN SACRIFICES IN THE GOOMSUR COUNTRY.

On the day preceding that of the intended sacrifice, the victim is adorned with chaplets of flowers, and having been, if possible, stupified with liquor, is bound to a post, close to the village idol or Zukuwree Pennoo represented by three stones, near which the effigy of the elephant or peacock is buried. The assembled persons, generally many hundreds in number, then dance round the post to the noise of their rude music, shouting these words, 'O God, in return for this victim, give us health and plenty.' They next address the victim, saying, 'we have purchased and shall now sacrifice you according to custom.'

On the day appointed for sacrifice, the victim is again stupified with liquor, and having been bound to the post as on the preceding day, is anointed with oil. Every one present, then touches the victim, and wipes off the oil on his own head. The procession is afterwards formed, led by musicians, the victim borne in the midst, with a pole ornamented with peacock's feathers held aloft. It moves around the village, and along its limits, then returns to the spot whence it started. In front of the idol, a shallow trench or pit is prepared by the priest, on the brink of which a hog is slaughtered as a first sacrifice, and its blood having all run into the trench, the wretched human victim bound hand and foot, is cast therein, its face forcibly crushed into the bloody mire, and there held by means of cross bamboos, until life is extinct through suffocation; the din of tomtoms drowning any screams that may have escaped the victim. A piece of flesh is then cut from the still palpitating body by the Zanes, who buries it with much ceremony, near the idol, as an offering to the earth. This done, the assembled persons rush upon the body with fiend-like eagerness, each striving to secure a piece of the flesh, which having cut off, is carried away to their own villages, and there offered with like ceremonies; a part being near the village idol, the remainder in pieces about its boundaries, or in the cultivated lands of individuals. The head and face remain untouched, and when the bones are completely bared which is quickly accomplished, the earth is thrown into the trench, still reeking with the warm blood of its victim. Shocked as our readers must be at this horrid relation, still more so will they feel on learning, that the above is the least atrocious method of sacrifice, and that in the districts of Shree-Rampooram and Goddapooram, as well as in other parts of the country, the flesh is actually severed from the body of the living victim, whose agonised writhings and piteous moans are alike unheeded by the merciless monsters bent on their diabolical purpose. Happily the blood-thirsty eagerness with which they rush upon the devoted object, their knives actually slashing in the living flesh, must soon ensure a release from sufferings that great almost for imagination to conceive, and which cannot be thought of without the most intense horror. The ceremonies however are not yet complete, and the closing act to the day's tragedy, is worthy of its diabolical commencement, for after the sacrificial trench is filled up, a buffalo calf is brought in front of the idol, and its fore feet having been chopped off at the fetlock joints, the wretched animal is left in that state till the following day, when women dressed and armed as men, dance around it with songs and music; the calf is then killed and eaten by them, and the sacrifice is ended; after which the Zanes being rewarded for his trouble, by a present of grain, a calf, or hog, takes his leave, and the assembled persons retire to their homes.

The practice of human sacrifices, appears to have prevailed amongst the Khonds from time immemorial, but as these people are said to be altogether unacquainted with writing, it is by tradition only that any thing can be learned of their early history. The Missionary Register contains the following story, which is said to have given rise the custom of human sacrifices:—

"When their ancestors emigrated from the great mountain above mentioned, they were accompanied by a female leader, a Queen named Attah or Appah: at the time they experienced great difficulty from the circumstance of the earth being unstable, so that wherever they trod, it sank beneath their weight. It so happened that Attah in cutting wood, chanced to wound her finger with the axe; and the spot upon which the blood fell, immediately becoming firm, she insisted upon their sacrificing her, by which means she said, the earth would become solid and fruitful. Appah by having thus caused herself to be sacrificed for the benefit of her country, obtained divine honors, and has ever since been regarded as their chief divinity. She is supposed to possess the power of rendering the earth barren or fruitful; health, and disease, and even death, are subject to her decree. It is therefore to propitiate her that human sacrifices have ever since been regularly offered. I was told that sacrifices only take place annually; and that on a particular day which occurred last year at the full of the moon in January; this day is probably the anniversary of the death of Attah." Madras U. S. Gazette, Dec. 1816.

THE AID REQUIRED FROM THE BRITISH GOVERNMENT.

It is at all times easier to point out grievances and abuses, than to devise a remedy for them; and this is peculiarly the case with regard to the foreign trade in China. The remoteness of Canton from the seat of government renders it impossible to the foreigners to ascertain the policy of the Imperial government with respect to the foreign trade, or to know if the acts of the local authorities spring immediately from that policy, or if they are merely the suggestions of their own self interest or caprice.

Either from one or other cause, the foreigners are, no doubt, subjected to many annoyances in carrying on their commerce, some of which have already been submitted to the British Government, and remedies have been proposed involving questions attended with remote consequences, which it does not fall within the province of this enquiry to enter into. Its object is limited to obtaining payment of the debts owing to British merchants by the Chinese, and guaranteed by the Chinese government, and to lessen the risk, if possible, of incurring similar responsibilities in future.

These debts constitute a transfer of British capital to the Chinese Hong-merchants, of about three millions of dollars, which the creditors require, surely not unreasonably, to be repaid within that time in which that capital would double itself by compound interest at the usual market rate of twelve per cent; which time is about six years. Whereas the Chinese propose to liquidate the debts in nine years, beginning with next year; which, in the case of Hingtae, would be ten and a half years from the date of adjustment of account, and a still longer time in the case of Kinqua. The British Government may interpose its authority with the Emperor of China to obtain earlier payment of Hingtae's debts, without fear, it is conceived, of compromising itself; since a Committee of foreigners and Hong-merchants, appointed by mutual consent, has examined and authenticated the debts, and the Viceroy of Canton has declared officially, that they shall be paid to the uttermost mite; but without specifying a period for the liquidation. The demand for payment of the debts, within a given time, may be met by the Chinese government with precedents of former protracted liquidations of debts; but we conceive that the justice of their being paid within the time specified above, will be found unquestionable. But, even if the zeanest objections of the Chinese, or motives of policy, render it inconvenient to the British Government to insist upon a definite period of payment for debts already contracted, it is humbly submitted that both policy and regard for the welfare of the British subjects in China demand that a definite, if not immediate, payment shall be required for debts which the Hong-merchants shall be found to owe in future. This alone would be a considerable boon to the foreigners in Canton and possibly also to the Hong merchants themselves, by shielding them awhile from the exactions of the mandarines, and from the liabilities which the solvent Hongs become exposed to, by having needy and incompetent persons thrust into their corporation.

Respect for European international law, as well as common justice, may also render it an excellent to the British Government to dictate to the Emperor of China, if it have the power, the regulations under which the commerce of his Empire with foreigners shall be conducted; but it may surely require of him to respect and enforce the rules he has himself laid down. He has prescribed to the foreigners to trade with the Security merchants only, who are nominated by himself or by his delegates, and, in so doing, he tacitly engages for their capability and proper conduct. It is for him to take care that the foreigners capital, which passes through the Security merchants hands, be not diverted from its proper use, either by the folly of those parties or by the extortions of his own officers. This duty will, it is conceived, be indirectly but pressingly enforced upon him, by the British Government insisting upon the debts being paid immediately which the culpability of his officers assist in forming. The mere demand will, at the same time, accelerate the payment of the debt, sustained, as we believe it to be, by both right and reason; and it may easily be made in such a way as to compromise the British Government in no ulterior measures, whilst it may also be readily made the basis of further requisition, if it be deemed advisable.

Although accidental circumstances of trade have, in some instances, as at present, conduced to the debts of the Hongs, it will be seen throughout the preceding pages, that the exactions of the Hoppo and other mandarines are the principal absorbents of the capital of the Security merchants, and, through them, of that of the foreigners.

Their extortions are the necessary and understood consequence of their small salaries. This state of things belongs to most governments, perhaps, in a certain stage of their career, and no effectual change in it by foreign interference can be foreshown, short of reform amounting almost to a revolution in the government.

So long as this practice exists, any treaty or tariff made with the Chinese government will always be evaded or misdirected, like the supposed Consoo fund, unless watched over incessantly and checked by some more powerful control than is possessed at present by the British Superintendent or any foreign Consul in China. But the firm and decided demand of the British government for the immediate payment of money owing to its subjects, which may otherwise be diverted by the rapacity of the mandarines, may ensure the temporary exertion atleast of the Emperor's power to restrain their extortion.

The alternative may suggest itself to the Emperor of abolishing the Co-hong system altogether, and this, if it led to unrestricted competition amongst the Chinese merchants, would be perhaps, the happiest result which could be expected; but caution will be required in admitting the proposition. If the Co-hong be abolished, the Hoppo's office must be remodelled, and a host of subordinates who belong to the system, should fall with it, else the evil will be stifled merely, and not eradicated. The exactions of the mandarines would follow the free-traders as grievously as it now does the Hong-merchants, and the foreigners would have lost the only check they now have on those exactions, the necessity of the Hong debts being unpaid.

The abolition of the Co-hong would be totally ineffectual also, unless attended by a better system of collecting the Custom's duties, and the general acquisition by foreigners of warehouses, in which to store their goods; but to obtain the warehouses will require either that their residences be permitted beyond the precincts of the present foreign factories, or else that the factories be considerably enlarged.

To the first plan the Chinese government seems to have an almost invincible objection, and the value of property in the neighbourhood of the factories beyond what is necessary for mere residence, would make the last so expensive, that, if gained, it will almost certainly impose additional duties upon the trade. The only middle course, which seems to present itself, is one which has been talked of amongst the Chinese themselves, that two or more of the existing Hongs be constituted custom and bonded warehouses, through which all foreign imports shall be passed, and pay duty accordingto a fixed tariff. Yet these, if under the controul of the Chinese mandarines, would only subject the foreigners to the petty vexations and delays by the underlings of government, which the Hong merchants and their assistants now encounter.

This objection might be obviated by the British merchants having a common warehouse of their own, and under their own controul, through which the goods should pass, and duty be paid, and a manifest handed to the mandarines for their satisfaction, attested by the British Superintendent, or some similar plan. These suggestions however are not intended to dictate any particular course to the British government, but only in the hope to draw its attention to the unprotected situation of British subjects in China, and to point out the assistance which may most readily be afforded, and will, at the present moment, be most gratefully received.

The preceding statement cannot better be concluded, perhaps, than by the paragraph already quoted from the Records of the E. I. Company's Committee in 1783, viz:

"It seems to be an established maxim amongst the mandarines at this place, to discourage, as much as possible, all applications to the Emperor, both as they may prove dangerous to their persons and derogatory to their consequence; except in circumstances that cannot be concealed, as in the case of Capt. Panton, without whose interference, we are well assured, no representation from the creditors or any other body of men could ever have reached the Court, much less can we expect the assistance of the Hoppo, through whom it must necessarily pass in the first instance."—The Chinese Hongmerchants and their debts.

LIBRARY

OF THE MORRISON EDUCATION SOCIETY.

We have now before us the Catalogue of this Library, from which we are glad to observe that it already counts upwards of 3000 volumes, all of them gifts from friends to the institution. The library is about to be removed to a very convenient apartment, and will in a short time be open to the members and subscribers. The Catalogue divides the books into eleven sections, most of them being again divided into sub-sections. The sections are as follows: Sec. I., General Philosophy, science of the mind, Sec. II., Language, Rhetoric, and Logic. Sec. III., Religion, Ethics, Education. Sec. IV., Jurisprudence, Government, Political Economy, Commerce. Sec. V., Science of numbers—Mathematics. Sec. VI., Natural science. Sec. VII., Applications of science, Arts. Sec. VIII., History. Sec. IX., Polite Literature Sec. X., Mixed works. Sec. XI., Works relating to China.

Many of these sections are already well filled with standard works, and they Library would make ample returns to the subscribers for the small annual subscription required. For the in formation of our readers we subjoin the REGULATIONS OF THE LIBRARY.

1. That all Books, labeled and numbered, be arranged in cases, in some convenient room connected with the factories, and entrused to a Librarian, under the care of the Recording Secretary.

2. That no Book be taken from the Library without an order, signed by the person wishing to take it, and specifying the number of the book, and the time of taking it.—N. B. Printed orders to be furnished, with the Catalogue, to all who have access to the library: an order at any time between 10 A. M. and 4 P. M., being sent to the Librarian, he is immediately to deliver the book. and retain the order, which order should be given back by the Librarian when the book is returned to him.

3. That no single volume be retained more than half a month, nor any book, of two or more volumes, more than one month; but that any book returned at the expiration of the limited period, may, if not called for by any other party, be again taken out.

4. That any book lost or injured be paid for, or replaced, by the person by whom it is lost or injured, the value to be determined by the Trustees.

5. That any person, who is not a member* of the Society, may be admitted to the privileges of the library, by the payment of $10 per annum, or of $5 for six months or any shorter period.

6. That all donations of money to the library be applied for its improvement and increase, in the purchase of books, &c.

N. B. The Trustees think it unnecessary, for the present, to multiply the rules of the Library, believing that every individual who has access to it will desire to increase and preserve it, and to render it as serviceable as possible. Many of the Works now in the library, are chiefly valuable as books of reference, which it is desireable should not be removed from the library, except in special cases. The number of books drawn by any one individual, at one time, therefore, should always be determined with proper regard to general convenience. In case of new books, it will be desirable that they be speedily returned; and when more than one application for them is made, priority in time of drawing must be determined according to priority in the time of making application. The catalogues may be revised, and the list added to, as often as the receipt of books shall make in desirable.

CONSIDERATIONS OFFERED BY THE COMMITTEE OF THE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE, IN FAVOUR OF FIXING THE RESPONSIBILITY OF PAYMENT OF IMPORT DUTIES ON THE CONSIGNEES THEREOF.

The Settlement of Import duties, it is assumed belong solely to the Consignees of goods, for they alone hold all documents, and have the necessary knowledge of quantity, quality, dimensions &c., they have the absolute control of the goods, choose their own Hong-merchants, purchaser, and mode of sale, whether at short or long price, and a voluntary or marked interference on the part of any one else would not be, and in point of fact is not, tolerated. The Consignee of the ship could not, if he would, conclude or even expedite, a settlement of duties on goods consigned to another without express authority being first granted by the latter.

The only proper time for the settlement of duties is believed to be before the goods are landed by arrangement with the Hong-merchant, or, at the moment of landing, by arrangement with the mandarins. An omission to adopt either of these modes leaves room for the impositions on the part of the Hoppo's servants so often and loudly complained of, and is productive of the delay in procuring the Grand Chop, which the Committee by a change of system, are desirous to obviate. A neglect on the part of consignees of goods to adjust the duties at a suitable moment often arises, it is supposed from an opinion that it is not their peculiar business but belongs to the Hong-merchant, or the consignee of the ship, or some one else, and that a detention of the vessel for want of her port clearance by their own acts does not render them liable for damages, nor for any consequences however detrimental to owners or shippers.

The result is that the most vexations and injurious delays are sometimes caused to vessels ready for sea with valuable cargoes, controversy and ill feeling arise between consignees of goods and consignees of ships, and the injustice occurs of imposing the payment of disputed duties on the consignee or security merchant of the vessel, neither of whom is at all concerned in the matter.

In discussing this question it has been urged that the establishing as a custom of the port, that consignees of goods were in all cases answerable for the payment of the duties and for the detention of the ship, in consequence of non-payment, would probably lead the security merchant to suppose that he was released from a portion of his responsibity, and to relax in his efforts to effect a satisfactory settlement, knowing, as he would, that the consignee of the vessel did not rely on him but on the consignee of the goods. But this apprehension is now believed to be groundless and the Committee do not perceive that any ill consequences, but much good would result from the contemplated measure.

In order therefore to facilitate the procuring of the Grand Chop, or port clearance, of ships when ready for sea, it is recommended that the settlement of import duties be considered as the business exclusively of the consignees of goods, and that in all cases they be held therefore responsible to the consignee of the ship, on which they have been imported.

CORRESPONDECE.

We have been requested to publish the following letter as a testimonial of gratitude from the writer, who was by the Chinese authorities taken on the coast of China and thence sent overland to Canton where for some time he has been confined. and was gnally released from thei surveillance of the local fiovernment a day or two ago.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE CANTON PRESS,

Sir.—Will you do me the favor to insert these lines in your paper, as a testimonial of my gratitude for the kindness experienced from several Gentlemen during my painful stay in this city which I am now about to leave.

The state of utter destitution in which I arrived here must be known to you, but the same providence that conducted me thus far, unwilling entirely to abandon me, let me find some gentlemen willing to assist me, among these were my dear countrymen, with the exception of a few who would have nothing to say to me, and Messrs Bridgman and Thom. By the assistance of my countrymen I was provided with every thing necessary, and Messrs Bridgman and Thom enabled me to correspond with the local authorities. The obligations under which I am to these my benefactors will for ever remain impressed on my memory, and on that of my beloved family. I praise my fate for having encountered the gentlemen to make known whose praiseworthy conduct I had no means except through your paper, nor shall I be found wanting, should an opportunity occur, of making a return to my bene factors for the obligations conferred.

F. L. DE PINNA.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE CANTON PRESS,

Sir—I am an individual here trying to make the best of circumstances to gain some dollars.

A few years since I considered the reception of a China Coun Chop an event to be recorded!! and treated it as such, and respected them; now your correspondent receives two or three in a day and gives to them just the value they deserve which is nothing!

DELTA.

1st March 1838.

CANTON PRESS,

3rd March, 1838.

The Roman from Newyork 1st Novbr. has arrived and we have been kindly favored with the loan of some of the latest papers brought by her. They teem with accounts and surmises regarding the capture by a pirate, almost within sight of land, of the Packet Susquehanna bound from Philadelphia for Liverpool We subjoin below the pilot's statement on oath made before a Philadelphia Magistrate. of this most extraordinary incident. and this furnishes, as far as we can find, all that is yet known. A black, low, and long schooner had been seen by some vessels, and we find in one of the papers that it is supposed the pirate meant to intercept the Ship Chandler Price, about to sail for China with a quantity of Specie and made a mistake propably in carrying the Susquehanna which is said to have had no more than 8 a 10,000$ in specie on board. Revenue cutters and men of war had been sent in pursuit, but nothing had since been learnt. The alleged piracy took place on the 21st October.

The Peacock, U. S. Ship of war, after her cruize round the globe had arrived at Norfolk.

A most melancholy wreck is recorded, that of the Hope, steamer, from Charleston bound for Neworleans, with 160 passengers. She was driven ashore in a gale and most of the crew and passengers were drowned. The survivors accuse her Captain of having been unable, from inebriety, to have taken due precautions for the safety of the vessel.

We give a short extract on Canada affairs which seem to be in a threatening state.

We find no allusion in the papers to the state of commercial matters in general, and infer that they were proceeding more prosperously. It was expected that many of the banks would soon resume cash payments, Most banks were contracting their issues as much as possible toward the meeting of Congress.

Exchange on England 115 @ 116—Specie 6½ @ 7 per cent. premium.

Near Red River, it is stated from New-Orleans 19th October, a conspiracy of negroes against the whites had been detected, in consequence of which many of the former had been executed.

THE SUSQUEHANNA.

THOMAS ROWLAND SWORN. I am a pilot. I reside in Lewis-town. I saw the Susquehanna as she went out of the Cape last Saturday, about 11 A. M. I was in the pilot boat Mary Ann, in 15 fathoms water, Cape Henlopen Light House bearing W.N.W. about 15 miles. The ship passed us, and kept her course E. by S. and went out of sight of us. We hard up in our boat, and steered S. of E. about an hour and a half. We lay to under our foresail, until half past 3 P. M. Then our boys went to the mast head and made a We made sail to go to her She turned out a ship. We steered E.S.E. We still kept run down on the ship, until we made her out to ship standing in. She was then steering S. W hoisted colors, and the ship wore round, and schooner alongside of her, and then steered E. some time, say 20 or 30 minutes;—then they ed the ship's course, and went south as long could see, till dark, by the spy glass, and schooner along with them.—At the time we spying her we saw a cross in her foretopsail. I the Susquehanna; she belongs to the line of Copes,—their packets have a cross on their fore sails. I have therefore reason to believe this the ship.—We were within four or five miles sight two hours—pretty good sized schooner—not see hull; but from the look of her mast, s el pretty good size, 150 or 200 tons. I saw hull of the ship—could barely see her hull a jumped on the sea. We lost sight of the Sus hua about half past twelve o'clock—she had a b eeze and went very fast; the last we saw at t the two vessels were in company.—When I saw them they were three of four hundred y from each other. The ship had three top courses, foretop-gallant sail, main royal and fl jib. The course they stood would not run t ashore—they were too far from land—in 25 fathe water—wind was N.N.W. when she went ou the afternoon it was about north.

AFFAIRS IN CANADA.—The following resolu among others, was adopted at a large meeti Royalists held in Montreal, on Monday last. Sto show which way the wind blows. Such resoluti belie themselves and the motives with which t seem to be offered.

Resolved, That this meeting is persuaded t there exists no substantial cause for apprehens of a successful rebellion against the British Gove ment, by the mass of our fellow subjects of Fre origin, though the utmost activity and perseve are employed to create disorder and sedi amongst them; but feeling that to guard aga the pernicious influence of that activity and p severance, and to arrest it is the boundeu dut every good subject, this meeting calls upon t fellow subjects throughout the province to organ themselves into local associations, as the most fectual means for the security of good order, protection of life and property, and the maintena of the connexion happily existing between this p vince and the British empire.

GENERAL CHAMBER OF COMMERCE. We in another column some proposals made by t Committee of the Chamber of Commerce to members generally, as to the expediency of both the Consignees of goods liable for the payment the duties due thereon. A general meeting w convened on Wednesday the 28th ult., to disc the propriety of recording the above proposal of t Committee as the regular custom of the port, wh on Mr. Wilkinson Dent proposing the motion, was unanimously agreed to. Previous to this wa conversation ensued and it was not denied by m members of the com- mittee that the proposal th had laid before the chamber was liable to seve objections, but that it being very desirable that fixed understanding should be come to on a poi which had occasioned so much controversy a dispute, they had, after maturely weighing eve argument as well in favor as against the prop osa arrived at the conviction that they were less o jectionable than any other mode of settling t duties, and the generality of those present at t meeting seemed to concur in this sentiment.

We certainly approve of these Resolutions as pr sed at the Chamber of Commerce, as protecti ships against undue detention and the expen and loss thereby caused, but we should have wish that, at the same time, that this new regulati protects the consignee of ships against the capri or convenience of the importer of goods, and, m be, at times rendering the latter, in order to compl with this law, more liable to extortion from th Hoppo's officers than otherwise would have bee the case, it should also have provided some kin protection than he now enjoys, to the importer of goods against the sudden sailing or despatch of ships from Whampoa, which, if not informed o in due time, may expose him either to loss in the shape of the payment of higher than customary duties, or to demurrage for detention of the shi about to sail. We should think that some provi sion ought to be made for such cases, and it ought to be obligatory on consignees of ships to giv timely notice to the owners of the goods importe by her, of their intention as to the time of he departure. Should the committee see fit to act on this suggestion, they will best be able to decide as to how many days such notice ought to precede the despatch of a ship.

THE PASSAGE BOATS. The Vice-roy, Fuh-yuen and Hoppo have jointly issued an edict against the foreign passage boats which are lately supposed to have been actively engaged in the smuggling of Opium. The Edict says that on a former occasion peremptory orders had been issued to order all the passage boats with holds away, and that the Hong merchants then assured them falsely that this order had been complied with. But, says the edict, we have now learned that the foreigners use these boats to smuggle Opium and other articles, and if they are caught they will be punished with the utmost rigour of the law, nor is any distinction to be made in future with foreigners, but these, when taken, are to suffer the same punishment as was heretofore inflicted on the fai-hai men (fast boat smugglers).

We also hear that orders have been given to the commanders of the forts at the Bogue not to allow any of the Passage boats to enter the river. If this edict is enforced we shall again have but a precarious communication with Lintin and Macao; the interests of smugglers is most likely to affect much, most of the smuggling on the river having ceased partly through the watchfulness of the mandarins, partly through the fraudulent practices of the Chinese smugglers themselves, and partly owing to the low prices offered for the drug at Whampoa, the profit on it no longer remunerating for the risk attending the operation.

LOSS OF SHIP HOPE.

We copy below, from the Boston Daily Advertiser, some particulars in relation to the loss of the Hope, East-Indiaman, Captain Norman. In addition to the statements there made, we learn that the ship was freighted with 815 tons of goods, consisting of teas and other products of the East, consigned to Messrs. Rogers & Co. of this city, and John McCrea, of Philadelphia, and valued at $200,000. This valuable cargo, we are happy to learn, is fully insured—about $73,000 in this city, $42,000 in Boston, and the residue in Philadelphia.

From the accounts received, it appears that the silks and part of the teas were saved.

The owners have not, as yet, received any letters from the captain.—Com. Adv.

Ship Hope.—We have been favored with the particulars of the loss of the ship Hope, Norman, master, of Philadelphia, off the Cape of Good Hope, July 30th. It appears the Hope left Whampoa on 25th April, and proceeded prosperously on her voyage until the 28th July, when she encountered a heavy gale in lat. 34° 10' S., long 26° 26' E. On the morning of the 29th, she was found to be leaking so badly that it was thought necessary to hoist a signal of distress to an English barque then in sight, which proved to be the Duke of Roxburgh, Captain Dissington, who kindly detached four of his crew to assist at the pump, on board the Hope, in addition to whom several gentlemen passengers volunteered their services.

According to an arrangement which Capt. Dissington obligingly entered into, both vessels kept together during the night. At 5 A. M. the following morning, it was ascertained that the leak gained so rapidly on the Hope, that it was thought best to transfer the most valuable part of the Hope's cargo on board the British vessel. Captain N. succeeded in saving the greater part of the silks and some other articles on board. At 3 P M there was 12 feet of water in the hold, and the wind had increased to a strong gale, so that the boats could no longer ply from one vessel to the other. The officers and crew of the Hope then abandoned her to her fate, and proceeded in the barque to St. Helena.—Boston Daily Adv.

COMMERCIAL REMARKS.

IMPORTS.

COTTON MANUFACTURES.—LONGCLOTHS, have further declined; white and grey and the market is very heavy, and, it is expe[cted] will give way still more from the large supplies of Ame[rican] Cotton goods. COTTON YARN. There has been little bu[siness] doing, and there is no demand but for good quality; the inf[erior] remaining very depressed. CHINTZES are in good demand, importations having been moderate, and a late supply of not [very] good quality nor of favorite patterns sold at from 4½ @ 5[…] according to quality, we believe.

WOOLLENS.—The market has declined during the week, and of the l[arge] sales of SPANISH STRIPES made in the last month, nearly whole remain in the hands of the purchasers. LONGELLS of sorted colors have also declined, but scarlets fully maintain t[heir] price. CAMLETS,—both English and Dutch have also declined the latter there are several heavy parcels offering in the mark[et].

METALS.—IRON continues as before. LEAD,—has advanced to […] QUICKSILVER quoted @ 140 $, but there is none in the ma[rket] and a moderate quantity would easily affect the price.

STRAITS PRODUCE,—without alteration.

RICE,—has advanced. The supply from the Interior for the Ca[nton] market being short, with very few importations.

COTTON.—There has been a considerable advance of fully 6 mac[e …] Bengal Cotton within the last two or three days from the […] short stock, and all other descriptions have improved, partic[ularly] good Bombay and Tinnevelly, but not to the same extent […] the clearances have been large, leaving a stock only this d[ay] about 34,000 Bombay, 6000 Bengal, 5000 Madras. Total 4[…] balles.

OPIUM.—Few or no transactions have taken place during the [past] week, parties delaying until the quality of the drug is ascerta[ined]. The weight of the Patna is said to average 117 @ 119 and Benares 116 @ 118 caties, and the touch and flavor good, Benares particularly. We hear that some sales have been [made] at 440 for Patna and 390 @ 400 for Benares, but sales to any [ex]tent could not be expected at these rates. Last year's Opi[um] consequently still more depressed, and we heard of sales @ […] for Patna and 380 for Benares, but the Chinese will not ta[ke] any quantity. Malwa is of more ready sale at 380 @ 390, [Tur]key very dull @ 400 @ 420. The deliveries in the last m[onth] were; Patna, 791; Benares, 190; Malwa, 1073; total […] leaving a stock of Patna, old 1493; new 1169; Benares, old […] new 163; Malwa, 2960; Total, 6685 chests. And within [a] day or two we learn that the foreign boats are again deliv[ering] freely in the river, notwithstanding the late seizures. The[re is] no talk of any change in the measures of the government.

EXPORTS.

RAW SILK.—A few hundred bales have lately arrived, and more shortly expected, but the supply continues short. Two or […] purchases have been lately made of middling cargo silk at […] 430 @ 450. There is no good and fine in the market.

TEA.—A good deal of business has, during the week, been done in black and green teas. Considerably advanced rates have [been] paid for all. Of Twankay the market is entirely bare.

The exports of teas to England in this season up to the pres[ent] have been: Congo, 121,520; Caper, 3,939; Souchong, […] Campoy, 217; Ankoi, 118; Hongmuey 1,517; Pekoe, […] Orange Pekoe, 1,830; Total of black teas, 143,166 P[iculs] […] Hyson, 3,606; Young Hyson, 2,900; Hyson Skin, 651; Twan[kay] 21,934; Gunpowder, 1,381; Imperial, 801; Total of green 30,573 Piculs. Total of Teas shipped up to the 28th Febr[uary] 23,565,300 lbs., according to the statement from the Cham[ber of] Commerce.

FREIGHTS, Tonnage to England scarce, and 8 £ per ton, has, we been given

KWEITSZES PETITION.

REFLECTIONS ON GRIEF AND JOY.

Freed from all care, bestow a leisure hour on quiet thought:
Sad or gay, going or coming, the busy eye of man is ever on us.
Life may be compared to a short passing dream.
Virtuous conduct ensuring a lot of tranquility and bliss,
While unchanging misery is the portion of the wicked man;
Whose attempts to injure others always recoil upon himself.
I shall now conclude my reflections on the past,
And proceed to relate an amusing history of the present age.
The grandsire (of our hero) at first dwelt in the principal district of Tsekeang.
But subsequently removed with his family to Tsinchang
His grandson named Le and surnamed Ke, was an honest man
And governed his actions by truly virtuous principles.
He repaired the bridges and roads and generously assisted his neighbors;
He burnt incense at the altar of every temple and shrine.
In marriage he found a mate with an equally kind heart,
Named Chin—A lady happily selected by the Go-between.*
Heaven rewarded their union with a son and daughter.
The son Potung was governed by his fathers example;
The daughter Kweitsze, the eldest, was surpassingly fair;
Indeed she had no equal either in beauty or talent.
At twelve years of age she excelled in embroidery,
And Potung when only seven composed an essay, in verse.
—Altho' his ancestors had all adorned the magistracy,
Le Ke's talents were of no ordinary a stamp,
That he was unable to follow in their steps.
Tho' he was thus unfitted to shine in literature,
His goodness of heart, preserved him from disgracing his name.
He suddenly resolved to go to Shang-yang,
And there purchase a Stock of Horses to trade with.
His plan turned out successful and his riches daily increased.
—It is an old saying "that every one, however noble must taste of misfortune."
So heaven decreed the separation and dispersion of his family.
For ten years the measure of his grief was always full;
He then emerged from misfortune, in dignified majesty,
His birth-day fell in the middle of the eighth moon,
And he determined to celebrate it with joy and feasting.
His wife, Chin's, birthday, happened at the same time;
What happiness thus crowned the labours of the Go-between!
Le Ke sent Cards of invitation to each of his relations:
And several of his neighbors came to congratulate him.
Some retired magistrates from the adjoining village,
His wifes relations, and his own family, having all arrived.
They conversed for some time on his family affairs,
And then assembled in his elegant mansion to congratulate him. (To be continued)

EUROPE NEWS.

From the Singapore Free Press Extra of 3d Febr.

By the Rob Roy which arrived this morning, we have received Bombay Gazette Extraordinary of 31st, December, containing intelligence from home by the overland despatch down to the 1st November, the most interesting items from which we have transferred to our present columns.

The French have gained Constantine after a desperate struggle. The Commander-in-Chief, General Desmaresmont, was killed; by a cannon ball, Colonel Coombes, was also killed; General Perriguax and Col. Lamoriciere were dangerously wounded.

The number of Arabs killed is supposed to be about 6,000. The French had about 1,000 killed and 1,500 wounded. In another paper the French loss is estimated at 3,000.

To the City banquet given to the Queen on the 9th ultimo. no ladies were invited exceptin those belonging to the Queen's household.

The complete defeat of the ciartists by the Viscount das Antas on the 19th of September terminated the civil war in Portugal. The battle was fought at Rutrasa, and the constitutionalists who have acted throughout with great moderation afterwards concluded a convention amounting to a general amnesty, with the exception that the great promoters of the insurrection are expatriated. The other officers are allowed to retain their rank but retire from active service. The soldiers are incorporated as before in the army; Saldanha and the Duke de Terceira withdrew to Irgo and have since come to this country. The cortes have decided their second Chamber which is to be called the senate, shall be elected by the people without any interference on the part of the Crown. According to the last accounts dated the 18th, Inde Bandeira had arrived in Lisbon to settle the ministerial arrangements.

Two Queens of Holland have just departed this life Hortense (Duchess of St. Leu,) widow of Jerome Bonaparte, and the mother of the young man who made the rash attempt at Strasburg, and the wife of the present sovereign who still calls himself K (the Netherlands, though he retains but the least hali .. the country. The Dutch states General were opened on the 16th of November by commission, the King being prevented from attending in person in consequence of the death of the Queen. The speech afforded no prospect of a settlement of the Belgian question.

A few days ago the French announced the taking of Constantine on the 13th instant, and at the same time the death of the Commander in Chief and Governor of Algiers, General Desmaresmont, who while reconnoitring the breach was cut in two by a cannon ball. No further accounts were received until this morning, when the French mails brought the Toulonnais and some Paris Papers containing a variety of extracts from private letters. It appears that the slaughter was dreadful, the French having been repulsed from the breach four times in succession. At last on the fifth attempt they entered, but then the contest continued during the whole of the 13th. Some brief letters from the successor of Desmaresmont, sent to General Valee were published in a number of the Moniteur of Saturday, but the full official details had not then reached the Government. It is said that the French Cabinet have determined upon maintaining the contest.

It is impossible to enter into particulars of the Spanish intelligence, the movements of the scattered corps are so various. In general however it may be stated as certain that for some time past success has been on the side of the constitutionalists. The Carlists have been repeatedly defeated, and the last Bulletin dated from Bayonne on Tuesday last states that Espartero had defeated Don Carlos on the 14th and was pushing him on the 16th.

Messrs. T. Wiggin and Co., the American commission-merchants, who lately suspended payment, have sent a letter to the Times stating that their surplus capital, after payment of all-demands, is upwards of 425,000*l.*

The Revenue tables were printed and they exhibit a deficiency (chiefly in customs) of £ 1,793,973.

The firm of Baldwin and Cradock (London booksellers) has failed for £ 180,580. The deficit is estimated at about £ 48,000.

£ 100—is given for a floor in the streets that command a good view of the Queen's procession on the day of her dinner at Guildhall. The day will be a holy day in the City.

Andrew Amos Esq. succeeds T. B. Macauley as member of the Council in India.

The Royal stud was sold in the meadows at Hampton Court, 81 horses for 15,692 guineas; the sale lasted six hours.

Vittoria and Bilboa are again besieged by the Carlists. The peasantry are allowed 2 days to buy in these towns, which are filled with British goods, after which time death is proclaimed to all who attempted to enter either place from the country.

Espartero announces another victory over the Carlists in which, he says, they fled in so many divisions that he does not know whers to find them. He therefore waits at Huerta del Rey for the information in order to disperse them again.

THE REVENUE.

(From the British and Foreign Price Current, October, 28.)

The following paragraph having appeared in 'The Times'—a paper exercising so much influence in commercial circles, appears to us to require notice.

'So serious a decline in the public revenue as that which has just been made known has taken most people here by surprise, though the anticipation of any other than an unfavorable return was altogether out of the question, and diffused a very uneasy feeling all over the city. That the state of trade was bad every one knew, and had made their calculations accordingly as to the effect upon the revenue, but the most gloomy predictions that were formed in any case have been far exceeded. Nothing can more strongly show the fearful extent of the commercial crisis through which the country has just passed, and of which no proper estimate could have been formed without such evidence. The expedients which were resorted to by the Bank of England, and the merchants and bankers who were solvent themselves, to prop up those that were falling, have tended to keep the evil partly out of the public view, but it is here developed in its full force. The greater part of the loss has fallen upon the trade department of the revenue, and in that respect the present return stands alone, and is without parallel for a very great number of years past. It is the most remarkable, as the Treasury is known to have received large sums in duties on Corn in the last quarter, and has not that windfall occurred, which was quite unexpected, the deficiency, large as it is, would have been considerably increased. The real causes of the falling off seem to be studiously kept from the public eye, and can be accessible only to those who have the accounts to inspect, but it is certain that none of the causes assigned have made the impression in the city which was desired from them. So far, therefore, are the merchants from looking to the future with that hope which usually succeeds any sudden and violent depression, that they generally anticipate a further considerable decline in the next return.'

MONEY MARKET.

(From the Spectator, October 28.)

STOCK EXCHANGE, FRIDAY AFTERNOON.

The amount of bullion in the Bank of England, which according to the statement made public on Saturday, last, was upwards of 6,830,000£, has been further increased this week, by a considerable arrival of gold from the Continent. The importations are principally from Paris and Hamburg; from the former, bar gold has been received, and from the latter coin, principally Russian, of the description called imperials, which are of about the same value as the French 20 francs. This circumstance has imparted considerable firmness to the Money market; and in the early part of the week, Consols for account were as high as 93¾; some very large purchases having occurred in them. These operations are said to have been undertaken on behalf of the Bank of England, the Directors of which find great difficulty in obtaining employment for their capital in the discount of commercial bills, at 5 per cent., their present rate of interest; and as they are understood to be averse to the reduction of it at present, they are seeking an outlet for their surplus in the purchase of Stock. The rise thus produced has had the effect of bringing Stock to market, and a reaction of about ½ per cent. has since occurred. Great pains have been taken lately to bring prominently forward the difficulties under which the American mercantile houses are suffering: and many exaggerated statements have appeared as to the small dividends which will be recoverable from the estates of those firms that have been compelled to suspend their payments; we are happy to be enabled to state, that there is little doubt that the three chief houses, viz. Messrs. WILDES, WIGGINS, and WILSONS, and Co., will ultimately be enabled to liquidate all claims upon them. Messrs. MARJORIBANKS and FERRERS, the Indian firm, who suspended payment a few months ago, have issued a circular stating that they will pay in full in the course of next month; and another firm of less note, who also stopped during the period of disaster, have already paid 15s. in the pound on the amount of their liabilities. If proof were wanting of the honest intentions of the American merchants, it may be found in the large amount of specie shipped by them to this country, which amounts since June last to nearly 15,000,000 dollars of declared export; and if we may credit a report recently made public, the surreptitious shipments of bullion from New York has been of equal amount, so that the whole amount of precious metals imported from the United States into Great Britain, during the period, has been nearly 30,000,000 of dollars, or 6,000,000*l.* sterling.

The Northern Continental Stocks are at higher prices, in consequence of the rise in consols.

The impulse which was recently given to the South American Bonds seems to have died away; and they are all lower.

The Railway Shares are almost entirely neglected: some inquiry has occurred after the shares of the United Brighton lines, at an improvement of about 10s. per share.

The public sales of Free Trade Tea, comprising 65,000 packages, commenced on Monday last and of 38,000 now gone through barely one-half has been realised. The demand for most kinds of black Tea has been good, particularly for Bohea and Congou, in both of which an advance has been obtained, in the former of ½*d* a ¾*d*, and in common qualities of the latter 1*d* a 2*d*, per lb.; the finer descriptions of Congou have not improved to an equal extent, but these, as well as Souchong, Flowery and Orange Pekoe, are also rather dearer. Green Teas are comparatively neglected, and the proportion which has found buyers is limited, although without material variation from the prices of the sales in September last, excepting for Twankay, which barely maintains the value then established. The market by private contract is firm, and in Canton Bohea and common Congou of the East India Company's import a further advance of 1*d* a 1½*d* must be quoted, the price of the former being now 2*s.* 7*d.* (duty paid), and of the latter 1*s.* 8¾*d.*

The public sales of private-trade Silk, subsequent to that at the East India House, referred to in our previous circular, were concluded on Friday last, without any material alteration in prices: of the quantity brought forward (1,600 Bales Bengal and 2,400 China) it is estimated that about two-thirds of the former and half of the latter found buyers; the market has since been steady, but the transactions only to a limited extent.

CHILE AND PERU.

From the Araucano, St. Yago de Chile, 21st November, we translate the following abstract of the success the Chilian armament against Peru had met with up to the 11th October, the date of its taking possession of the town of Arequipa.

"The expedition sailed from Valparaiso on the 15th September, consisting of the Frigate, Montezuma, the corvettes Libertad and Valparaiso, the brigs Aquiles and Arequipeno, and the barque Santa Cruz. There were seventeen transports for the army, horses and ordnance; thus making altogether 23 sail, though in Peru 24 were counted, owing to the British corvette the Rover having been mistaken for one of our forts.

"Six days afterwards, on the 21st, we anchored in the port of Iquique where we landed. Here we were received with transports of joy by the scanty population, and learned that Santa Cruz had gone to Bolivia, where symptoms of discontent with his government had shewn themselves. We could not ascertain what number of troops there were in South Peru, though, from such information as we could collect, we were led to believe that we should not meet with any opposition on our march to Arequipa. We therefore embarked for Arica.

"In the afternoon of the 24th we arrived off the port of Arica, and two companies of light troops and the men from the Libertad were sent to effect a landing on the mole, while the men of war were to bombard the batteries and to drive thence the garrison, which, it was supposed, would oppose the landing of our forces. However the shew of our determination alone to take the port caused the enemy to haul down he South Peruvian flag, and on our landing we only found a number of countrymen who received us with open arms, just as they had done at Iquique. Here we learnt that the Bolivian General Lopez was at Tacna with a thousand men, and that there were at Torata other detachments of the army of Santa Cruz amounting to about 2000 men.

"On the morning of the 25th it was discovered that the custombouse of Arica had been robbed; and though it was at first believed to have been merely an invention of Santa Cruz's agents to make it appear that the troops of Chile had entered Peru to plunder, it was found that Capt. Carrillo had really committed this robbery. The general in chief immediately called a council of war on board the Libertad, where the delinquent was tried, and Capt. Carrillo condemned to death, and Lieut. Moria dismissed the service for having been privy to the robbery without giving information. Carrillo was on that same day executed in front of the custombouse, which caused considerable consternation among the inhabitants of Arica. The estimated amount of the robbery of 3285 $ was paid to those interested.

"On the 26th Colonel Ugartache was sent with a flag of truce to Tacna to ascertain the force of General Lopez and their disposition in favor of Santa Cruz' government. Having nothing more to do in Arica where the batteries had been destroyed, the gun carriages burnt, and the cannon spiked, it was resolved to disembark at Ilaia, where we anchored on the 29th. We found nobody here, the governor of this place having fled upon the approach of the troops, by publishing an order by which every body who either saw, heard, or spoke to any Chilenos was threatened with punishment of death. Here it was resolved to disembark the horses at Arauta and the troops in Quilca, these ports being considered more convenient for that purpose, and the road from them to Arequipa being better and shorter than from Ilaia.

"On the 30th we arrived at Guata, a short distance from Arauta, and here the barque Carmen, on board of which were some horses, most of the equipment General Fuente had prepared for the Peruvian division, and all the horseshoes of the cavalry, got on shore. With great trouble the troops, crew and horses were saved, without the loss of a man. Most of the effects on board were also saved though wetted by seawater; the horseshoes, however, and a few cases with muskets were lost.

"On the 1st October the horses were disembarked from the transports with considerable danger and difficulty and seventy horses were lost, partly dead during the passage, partly drowned on disembarking.

"On the 3rd the chaincable of the corvette Libertad snapped, and we sailed in consequence for Quilca, taking on board an inhabitant of Arequipa who had offered to our General in chief to provide a number of mules which he had on the hills.

"On the same day at 4 o'clock in the afternoon General Adunate with 28 mounted cazadores and the battalion Valdivia set out from Quilca. The other troops followed on the following day. The different forces having been united, they moved towards Arequipa, in the suburbs of which they arrived on the 11th, and on the 14th the General commanding in chief took possession of the town to the great joy of it's inhabitants who received our troops as friends. On the 16th the whole army was in Arequipa."

The army of Chile has assumed the denomination of "ejercito restaurador" and General de la Fuente has been elected "supreme chief of the Peruvian Republic."

Thus far no blood has been shed in this war, but it was expected that a decisive engagement would soon take place, and General Santa Cruz was collecting his forces to prepare for it.

THE HORSBURGH MEMORIAL.

TO WILLIAM STANLEY CLARKE ESQ., AND THE MEMBERS OF THE COMMITTEE TO THE HORSBURGH MEMORIAL LONDON.

Canton, 10th January 1838.

Gentlemen,

The active and judicious means you have taken to further the views of the General Committee in raising funds for the purpose of erecting a lasting tribute to the memory of one who toiled through a long life for the benefit of his fellow creatures, meets with the sincere thanks and warmest approbation of your fellow labourers at Canton in so pleasing a task. The only point in which our feelings appear not to be unanimous in respecting the manner in which that tribute should be paid. You propose that it should be a monument erected in St. Pauls or Westminster Abbey,—we, that it should be a Light House on one of those spots through which, surrounded with all its difficulties, he has traced a safe and com-

REFLECTIONS ON GRIEF AND JOY.

Freed from all care, bestow a leisure hour on quiet thought:
Sad or gay, going or coming, the busy eye of man is ever on us.
Life may be compared to a short passing dream.
Virtuous conduct ensuring a lot of tranquility and bliss.

While unchanging; misery is the portion of the wicked man;
Whose attempts to injure others always recoil upon himself.
I shall now conclude my reflections on the past.
And proceed to relate an amusing history of the present age.

The grandsire (of our hero) at first dwelt in the principal district of Tsekeang
But subsequently removed with his family to Talinchang
His grandson named Le and surnamed Ke, was an honest man
And governed his actions by truly virtuous principles.

He repaired the bridges and roads and generously assisted his neighbours;
He burnt incense at the altar of every temple and shrine.
In marriage he found a mate with an equally kind heart,
Named Chin—A lady happily selected by the Go-between.*

Heaven rewarded their union with a son and daughter.
The son Potung was governed by his fathers example;
The daughter, Kweitsze, the eldest; was surpassingly fair;
Indeed she had no equal either in beauty or talent.

At twelve years of age she excelled in embroidery,
And Potung when only seven composed an essay, in verse.
—Altho' his ancestors had all adorned the magistracy,
Le Ke's talents were of so ordinary a stamp,

That he was unable to follow in their steps.
Tho' he was thus unfitted to shine in literature,
His goodness of heart, preserved him from disgracing his name.
He suddenly resolved to go to Shang-yang,
And there purchase a Stock of Horses to trade with.

His plan turned out successful and his riches daily encreased.
—It is an old saying "that every one, however noble must taste of misfortune."
So heaven decreed the separation and dispersion of his family.

For ten years the measure of his grief was always full;
He then emerged from misfortune, in dignified majesty.
His birth-day fell in the middle of the eighth moon,
And he determined to celebrate it with joy and feasting.

His wife, Chin's, birthday, happened at the same time;
What happiness thus crowned the labours of the Go-between!
Le Ke sent Cards of invitation to each of his relations:
And several of his neighbors came to congratulate him.

Some retired magistrates from the adjoining village.
His wifes relations, and his own family, having all arrived.
They conversed for some time on his family affairs.
And then assembled in his elegant mansion to congratulate him. (To be continued).

EUROPE NEWS.

From the Singapore Free Press Extra of 3d Febr.

By the Rob Roy which arrived this morning, we have received Bombay Gazette Extraordinary of 31st, December, containing intelligence from home by the overland despatch down to the 1st November, the most interesting items from which we have transferred to our present columns.

The French have gained Constantine after a desperate struggle. The Commander-in-Chief, General Damremont, was killed; by a cannon ball, Colonel Coo uhen, was also killed; General Perrigaux and Col. Lamoriciere were dangerously wounded.

The number of Arabs killed is supposed to be about 6,000. The French had about 1,000 killed and 1,500 wounded. In another paper the French loss is estimated at 3,000.

To the City banquet given to the Queen on the 9th ultimo no ladies were invited excepting those belonging to the Queen's household.

The complete defeat of the chartists by the Viscount das Antas on the 18th of September terminated the civil war in Portugal. The battle was fought at Ruivaes, and the constitutionalists who have acted throughout with great moderation afterwards concluded a convention amounting to a general amnesty, with the exception that the great promoters of the insurrection are expatriated. The other officers are allowed to retain their rank but retire from active service. The soldiers are incorporated as before in the army; Saldanha and the Duke de Tercera withdrew to Irgo and have since come to this country. The cortes have decided their second Chamber which is to be called the senate, shall be elected by the people without any interference on the part of the Crown. According to the last accounts dated the 18th, Inde Bandeira had arrived in Lisbon to settle the ministerial arrangements.

Two Queens of Holland have just departed this life Hortense (Duchess of St. Leu,) widow of Jerome Bonaparte, and the mother of the young man who made the rash attempt at Strasburg, and the wife of the present sovereign who still calls himself King of the Netherlands, though he retains but the least half of the country. The Dutch states General were opened on the 16th of November by commission, the King being prevented from attending in person in consequence of the death of the Queen. The speech afforded no prospect of a settlement of the Belgian question.

A few days ago the French announced the taking of Constantine on the 13th instant, and at the same time the death or the Commander in Chief and Governor of Algiers, General Demarcmont, who while reconnoitering the breach was cut in two by a cannon ball. No further accounts were received until this morning, when the French mail brought the Toulonnaise and some Paris papers containing a variety of extracts from private letters. It appears that the slaughter was dreadful, the French having been repulsed from the breach four times in succession. At last on the fifth attempt they entered, but then the contest continued during the whole of the 13th. Some brief letters from the successor of Demaremont, sent to General Valee, were published in a number of the Moniteur of Saturday, but the full official details had not then reached the Government. It is said that the French Cabinet have determined upon maintaining the contest.

It is impossible to enter into particulars of the Spanish intelligence, the movements of the scattered corps are so various. In general however it may be stated as certain that for some time past success has been on the side of the constitutionalists. The Carlists have been repeatedly defeated, and the last Bulletin dated from Bayonne on Tuesday last states that Espartero had defeated Don Carlos on the 14th and was pushing him on the 16th.

The estimated amount of the robbery of 3295 $ was paid to those interested.

"On the 26th Colonel Ugarteche was sent with a flag of truce to Tacna to ascertain the force of General Lopez and their disposition in favor of Santa Cruz' government. Having nothing more to do in Arica where the batteries had been destroyed, the gun carriages burnt, and the cannon spiked, it was resolved to disembark at Ishal, where we anchored on the 28th. We found nobody here, the governor of this place having forced the population to leave, by publishing an order in which every body who either saw, heard, or spoke to any Chilenos was threatened with punishment of death. Here it was resolved to disembark the horses at Arana and the troops in Quiles, these ports being considered more convenient for that purpose, and the road from them to Arequipa being better and shorter than from Ishal.

"On the 30th we arrived at Guata, a short distance from Arana, and here the barque Cerano, on board of which were some horses, most of the equipment General Fuente had prepared for the Peruvian division, and all the horseshoes of the cavalry, got on shore. With great trouble the troops, crew and horses were saved, without the loss of a man. Most of the effects on board were also saved though wetted by seawater; the horseshoes, however, and a few cases with muskets were lost.

"On the 1st October the horses were disembarked from the transports with considerable danger and difficulty and seventy horses were lost, partly dead during the passage, partly drowned on disembarking.

"On the 3rd the chaincable of the corvette Libertad snapped, and we sailed in consequence for Quiles, taking on board an inhabitant of Arequipa who had offered to our General in chief to provide a number of mules which he had on the hills.

"On the 5th day at 4 o'clock in the afternoon General Aldunate with 28 mounted carabiers and the battalion Valdivia set out from Quiles. The other troops followed on the following day. The different forces having been united, they moved towards Arequipa, in the suburbs of which they arrived on the 11th, and on the 12th the General commanding in chief took possession of the town to the great joy of it's inhabitants who received our troops as friends. On the 13th the whole army was in Arequipa."

The army of Chile has assumed the denomination of "ejercito restaurador" and General de la Fuente has been elected "supreme chief of the Peruvian Republic."

Thus far no blood has been shed in this war, but it was expected that a decisive engagement would soon take place, and General Santa Cruz was collecting his forces to prepare for it.

THE HORSBURGH MEMORIAL.

TO WILLIAM STANLEY CLARKE ESQ., AND THE MEMBERS OF THE COMMITTEE TO THE HORSBURGH MEMORIAL LONDON.

Canton, 19th January 1838.

Gentlemen,

The active and judicious means you have taken to further the views of the General Committee in raising funds for the purpose of erecting a lasting tribute to the memory of one who toiled through a long life for the benefit of his fellow creatures, meets with the sincere thanks and warmest approbation of your fellow labourers at Canton in so pleasing a task. The only point in which our feelings appear not to be unanimous is respecting the manner in which that tribute should be paid. You propose that it should be a monument erected in St. Pauls or Westminster Abbey,—we, that it should be a Light House on one of those spots through which, surrounded with all its difficulties, he has traced a safe and comparatively easy navigation. It is true that, by placing his monument with those of our illustrious dead, you accord him that place which he held among the living, but there it would end. The chisel of the artist would be admired while the deeds of the man would be passed over in silence and neglect. We have already invited all nations to join us in our undertaking, and we look to America, Holland, and France with the most sanguine hopes. We submit then our opinion to you, whether we should not take into consideration the character of the man who has immortalized himself, and to whose memory we can only add a tribute of esteem; and, if so, would it not be a greater testimony of gratitude to follow a course in unison with the feelings which animated that benevolent being while alive by building a Light House on some spot where ships are constantly going on shore, that he may still be instrumental for the benefit of mankind in saving many a ship from destruction. By this you will perceive it is our wish to adhere to the plan which we originally proposed, but as a proof of our anxiety to co-operate with you, we will originate a subscription for the furtherance of your views in hopes that many of this community will join in it, and, in return, we beg to solicit that you will use your influence to procure subscribers to co-operate with us in the view we have taken. In reply to the apprehension expressed in your letter of not being able to procure sufficient funds for the object we have in view, we venture to call your attention to the extent of the subscription already received and to remind you that even upon your plan of limiting subscriptions from individuals to one guinea, leaving firms and public bodies unlimited, there will be no occasion for supposing that a sufficient sum will not be procured for the erecting of the light house at least. The spot we propose for the first is Pedra Branca, and the list of vessels which have been lost and stranded there in a short space of time, the names of which we subjoin for your information, will, we think, influence you considerably in giving us all the aid you can, and fully explain the motives which guide us.

We have the honor to remain,

Your most obedient Servants.

CORRESPONDENCE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE CANTON PRESS.

Mr. Editor,—I yesterday met three boats about half a mile below our factories evidently manned by men of a distant province, each boat contained 26 horses most comfortably stalked and hard at work at their hay. They were about the size of a good Galloway cob, and I was informed they were a portion of a remount for the Imperial cavalry.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE CANTON PRESS.

A more opportune occasion than the present cannot be well imagined for renewing the question of the Finance establishment at this place and trying at it's removal, so peculiarly calculated as it is for repressing, if not crushing the hopes, which the late accounts from home may otherwise reasonably inspire, of a future healthy state of commerce between the two countries. A temperate, but strong appeal to Government pointing out the inevitable consequences which must result from keeping up unnaturally high prices in the next season, if the Chinese are enabled, by means of British money, to foster their own interests in opposition to those of their purchasers, cannot but awaken the powers at home to a sense of the adverse working of this most vexatious grievance.

I write in no spirit of hostility to the East India Company, still less to their; Agents the former deserve the thanks of the trading world, for the timely accommodation they afforded during the late crisis by renewing the bills due on hypothecated goods; the latter are but doing as all others would do working in their vocation. Seize the occasion. Mr. Eorron, and call the attention of your readers to this momentous subject the tide is happily again on the flood and if the Canton community will so take it, great good may come of it. Omitted, the Chinese will, I fear, have to be but too thankful for their forbearance.

I am,
Your faithful Servant.

Canton, Thursday March, 8th 1838.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE CANTON PRESS.

Dear Sir,

With the revival of commerce many hopes have naturally revived; among them the fulfilment of the plan originated here, (and so ably and zealously supported by yourself and cotemporaries of the Canton Repository and Register,) of raising Light Houses to the memory of Horsburgh. I hope you will all, now and then, continue to keep the subject alive. It was placed in abeyance during the late commercial gloom but has been obscured only I trust, to shine with redoubled light. There is a subscription going the round for the London plan, limited to a guinea, for raising a monument. By joining in it we may confidently hope the original one will also be taken up at home. A few of the able and willing may subscribe largely, but if the many will come down with their mite, we might have the glorious spectacle both for its appearance and great commercial safeguard and utility of an "Illustrated Horsburgh," on most of the principal dangers, described in his immortal work. America will join Europe hand in hand, and, with the aid of the Press, India will take her part in the matter. Ceylon and Madras might of themselves plant a Light House on the Bessess, an object quite worthy of the serious attention of the Governors who have so recently assumed the command there.

I remain,
Your obedient Servant.

OPIUM SALES IN CALCUTTA. The followings a copy of a circular addressed by the Bengal Government to such of the commercial houses there as are connected with the Opium trade.

To Messrs ———

"Gentlemen,—In the course of discussion relative to the management of the Opium monopoly a question has been raised as to whether it might not be expedient and beneficial to apply the measure recently adopted in the Salt Department viz:—that of opening the Public Stores for the sale of the article at a fixed price, in lieu of putting up to Public Auction the provision of each year.

2. Recently the chief native Opium Dealers, in petitioning Government respecting other points connected with that branch of the public revenue, have preferred a suggestion to the above effect viz: that government should declare a fixed rate per chest as the price of the Opium provided for the Opium Investment.

3. Under these circumstances, the Board of Customs, Salt and Opium request to be favored with your sentiments as to the advisableness of adopting such a scheme of sale, as that above adverted to, as also with your opinion regarding the rate per chest at which the opium should be offered for sale? whether it should be fixed for a term of years or annually declared? The best method of selling either before or after the investment reaches Calcutta so as to prevent the existence or appearance of partiality in disposing of the parcels of Opium first applied for? (a matter which it may not be easy to regulate so as to give general satisfaction when there are several opium vessels ready, in the river and desirous of starting first) and respecting any other points which may suggest themselves in connection with the subject of the present address.

I have the honor to be,
Gentlemen,
Your most Obedient Servant,
(Signed) S. G. PALMER.
Acting Secretary.

Board of Customs, Salt and Opium.
The 28th December, 1837.

At first sight the scheme of selling the Opium at a fixed rate, the same as the Government now does salt, appears to hold out some advantages, but we see many obstacles to carrying that plan into effect, which will probably effectually oppose it. That the system as proposed should work well as to sale, we doubt not; in that article the Government has no competition to apprehend, and knows exactly what quantity will be annually consumed, and can therefore regulate its supplies accordingly, and exert what influence it pleases upon the consumers who are altogether under its own control. With Opium the case is widely different; not only has the government to suffer the competition of the Malwa drug, but it has no means of knowing in how far the quantity they may offer in the market will find consumption in the markets of the East, particularly that of China, which, under present circumstances is very uncertain, and the quantity taken off here may be either very considerably reduced by more effective measures against the trade than have hitherto been taken, or the quantity demanded for Chinese consumption may far exceed that of any previous period by the legalizing of the trade. Either of these may happen, though we confess that we are inclined to believe that the trade here will continue to be carried on, as it is at present, for some time to come. These contingencies are nevertheless far from improbable. To fix a price for Opium in Bengal it would be necessary to know at what rate the Malwa drug can be produced, so as effectually to be able to compete with it, and, by selling the Bengal drug at a low price, drive the other out of the market. The government ask what should be the rate per chest, and whether it should be fixed for a term of years, or annually. The many causes that have produced such great fluctuations in the China market within the last two years still exist, and will continue to influence prices which within that time have fallen here fully 50 per cent and have during the last twelve months reaced upon the Calcutta market in the same manner. How then can, with any probability of success, a price be fixed at Calcutta at which Opium is to be sold during a term of years, when it is liable through the various causes that influence its sale to have its value reduced about one half in less than a year, as we have seen lately? Upon what precedent can a price possibly be fixed that will alike give satisfaction to the government, and to the dealers? If the price be high, and to endure unaltered during several years, or one year only, is it not probable that the growers of Opium in Malwa will undersell the Bengal Government and leave them with a large unsold stock on hand? And if so low as to render competition in that quarter impossible, not only will the revenue positively suffer thereby, but the government will not be able to avail itself of any favorable changes that may take place in the Chinese market, and by keeping down prices in Bengal afford to the Chinese the means of obtaining the Opium at a lower rate than they might otherwise be inclined to pay. The speculation which the former plan of selling the Opium kept alive among Calcutta merchants, and which led them to employ their capital at the sales, will no longer existst, and thus far the plan now proposed is likely not to give that satisfaction there as the former method of public sales.

Any alteration which the Bengal Government may think fit to make in the manner of disposing of their opium is, of course, only a question of revenue, and not whether the merchants will thereby be benefitted and considering it as such we do not see that the fixing of any price for a term of longer than a month could benefit the government, or even those that buy the opium from them, and should therefore prefer the old plan with all it's inconveniences to the one proposed in the circular. A good many objections would be removed if the Government were every month to fix a price at which Opium could be had at their warehouses. They would thus be enabled to take advantage of changes in the China market and of competing with the Bengal drug, whilst the native merchants of Calcutta would have as wide a range for speculation as before. To this plan we perceive also many objections, as the Government might, in fixing the price, necessarily be swayed by information either intentionally or unavoidably incorrect, and afford scope to a good deal of jobbing to which government employe's and their friends are notoriously prone, but means might be taken to prevent this in a great degree

A trial might be made of this with the Opium that stands now for disposal at the fourth sale. If that were offered at the Government Godowns at the rate, we will suppose, of the average of the third sale, it would be seen by experience whether this plan was likely to answer. To fix the sale price of Opium at Calcutta for a term of years or even one year only we think under the circumstances of the trade, would be attended with no advantage either to the revenue or to the Opium dealers.

The Rob Roy from Calcutta 14th January has brought news from Europe to the 1st November by way of Bombay, and we give in another column such news of interest as we glean from the Singapore Free Press Extra of 3rd February, and the Englishman of 13th January, which latter paper has been kindly lent to us.

The Rob Roy from Newyork, 2nd November has also arrived, but beings no further intelligence respecting the susquehanna.

Our latest direct arrival from England is the Cordelia from Liverpool 18th October. She brings London papers to the 16th, and we have been kindly favored with the loan of them, but find no intelligence of interest beyond what we have already given from the Singapore and Calcutta papers.

The Horsburgh Memorial. In another column we have copied the letter recently addressed by the Committee for the Horsburgh Memorial here to that in London, in answer to one received by the former from the latter. It will be seen from this letter that the Committee in London differ in opinion from that in Canton as to the manner in which the memory of Horsburgh is to be honored, and that in London it is proposed to erect a monument either in St. Pauls church or Westminster Abbey, whilst here the Committee persist in the wishes expressed at the meeting where the first collections for the memorial were made, viz. of erecting a Light House at Pedra Branca, and, if sufficient funds can be obtained, others at spots equally dangerous to navigators in the straits of Malacca. We have, from the beginning espoused the view of the matter taken not only by the Committee alone but by all the Chinese subscribers in general with but few if any dissentients, nor do we see reason to change our opinion on the subject. We are well aware that few can have stronger claims than Horsburgh, whose life was devoted to the benefit of not only his own country but that of every nation, to have a monument erected to the honor of his memory among the most illustrious of his countrymen, and we think the call of the Committee upon the residents here to give their aid to that purpose will be willingly responded to, but we do not think that, to effect this, the original intention of the subscribers ought to be relinquished, nor do we think can any thing be devised more in consonance with the tenor of the life of the illustrious dead, than to render, though the respect shewn to his memory, even by his death, a lasting and signal benefit to navigation which owes so much to his knowledge and zeal when alive. The Horsburgh light house will recall the memory of the departed hydrographer oftener to the mariner than his stately marble in St. Pauls, and call to his mind the gratitude he owes to a man whose memory even has lessened the dangers of his adventurous calling. Besides the advantages which the plan of the Committee at Canton has over that in London as far as utility is concerned, we may also point out that some additional weight is due to their opinions, as in Canton the project of a Horsburgh memorial was first conceived, and found such favor with the community in general that, though our society is so very limited in numbers, the subscriptions already collected here amount to the respectable sum of $ 4426—a sum alone sufficient to cover a considerable part of the building of a light house on Pedra branca, and much greater, in proportion, we believe, than those collected at any other place.

We have been favored with the loan of some Chilian papers brought by the Dorothea (Amer.) from Valparaiso 2nd November, and give, in another column, a translation of part of them shewing the progress the war between Chile and Peru is making. It appears that jealousy of the power of the President of Bolivia and Peru, Santa Cruz, is the chief cause of this attack upon Peru, and that the Chilians expect cooperation from such of the Peruvians as are discontented with Santa Cruz. La Fuente who accompanied the Chilians in their expedition, and now has assumed the internal government of South Peru at Arequipa, is a Peruvian and enemy to Santa Cruz, having been Vice President of Peru some time since. Should the Chilians not find the expected cooperation from the Peruvians their small army now in Arequipa (much reduced, it is said, by sickness, though our report, as proceeding from government, is silent on that head) will find itself in an awkward position, it hardly counting 2000 men, to whom the Peruvians, it is said, can oppose a force of 15,000. We learn also that a Peruvian ship of war has captured on the coast of Chile three chilean merchant vessels and sent them as prizes into Callao.

Important to American and other (not British) shipping. The following part of a Government Notification, issued by the Secretary to Government in India, and countersigned by the Resident Councillor in Singapore, we copy from the Singapore Free Press of 3d February.

"Foreign Ships belonging to any State or Country in Europe, or in America, so long as such States or Countries respectively remain in amity with Her Majesty, may freely enter the British Sea Ports and Harbours in the East Indies, whether they come directly from their own Country or from any other place, and shall be there hospitably received. And such Ships shall have Liberty to import into such Sea Ports, from their own respective Countries, Goods the produce of their Countries; and to export Goods from such Sea Ports to any Foreign Country whatever, conformably to the Regulations established, or to be established, in such Sea Ports. Provided, that it shall not be lawful for the said Ships, in time of War between the British Government and any State or Power whatsoever, to export from the said British Territories, without the special permission of the British Government, any Military or Naval Stores, Saltpetre, or Grain; nor to receive Goods on board at one British Port of India to be conveyed to another British Port of India on Freight or otherwise; but nevertheless the original inward Cargoes of such Ships may be discharged at different British Ports, and the outward Cargoes of such Ships may be laden at different British Ports, for their Foreign destinations."

By this new regulation former ones on the same subject are rescinded, and American and other foreign ships may now take cargoes from any port in British India to any foreign country whatever. We suppose that by this new law American ships will come in for a share of the Cotton carrying from Bombay to China, and they may now, without any question, being raised about it, clear at Singapore with a cargo of Rice direct for China, instead of being obliged, as heretofore, officially to clear out with a cargo of Betelnut, Rice and Opium for Baltimore or Newyork.

The letter of Pharos we received after having written the foregoing remarks on the Horsburgh memorial, we have consequently anticipated his wishes. We are obliged to Delta for his information.

Our Correspondent T. calls our attention to the still existing Company's Finance Committee, which in spite of the remoustrances from China as well as in London continues it's operations to the disadvantage of the British merchants. The motion made by Mr. Wedding at a meeting at the India house for the discontinuance of the Committee has hitherto had no effect, and the Company continues to interfere with the Canton market to the manifest advantage of the Chinese over the British merchants. The profits which have attended the Finance Committee's operations during the two first seasons have been very great, and the Directors in Leadenhall Street have in consequence been loth to relinquish a source of so much advantage, but we hope that the tardy call they have experienced during this present season for their money at an exchange considerably less advantageous than that from Calcutta direct, will render the government less unwilling to relinquish finally the remnant of their trading operations from which their charter excludes them, but which they have carried on favored by a quibble in the law as to what trade and what does not, constitute trading. A pamphlet entitled "The Chinese Security Merchants in Canton and their debts" published at the Canton Press Office last month, speaks as follows of the Finance Committee.

"The effect of the first of these causes (the E. I. Company's Agency in China) may easily be made apparent. The currency of Canton is confined to the old Spanish Carolus and Ferdinand Dollars, which being no longer coined, are becoming scarce every where. The expedients devised to obviate a restricted currency, occasion about a fifth part only of the mercantile transactions of the place to be exchanged by actual cash payments. The whole foreign exports and imports of Canton, amount together to about sixty millions of dollars, and taking this as the amount of exchangeable property, a fifth, or $ 12,000,000 only, is required for each transaction. But as the same dollar may be made to perform more than one payment in a day, and the absence of banks occasions every one to keep unemployed money in his chest for emergency, we may safely suppose that the average actual circulation amongst the foreign and the Chinese with whom they deal, is not more than five millions of dollars. Nearly two millions, or one third at least of this amount is supposed to have been locked up in the treasury of the E. I. Company's Agents, for several months prior to the few last weeks, and it is now in the act of being poured into circulation by means of their advances upon goods. The public prints which we have lately received from England, teem with complaints against the Bank of England for the sudden expansion or contraction of its issues by half a million or a million sterling upon its own circulation of 16 or 18 millions. What then must be the effect of the sudden expansion or contraction of our circulation, by one third of its whole amount?"

The Hong-merchants have several times addressed the foreign merchants pressing them not to allow any of the Passage boats to come as far as Canton, but we still see three or four daily in front of the Factories, which are seemingly not molested by the authorities nor do we hear that the threats of not allowing the boats to pass the forts at the Bogue on their passage up the river have yet been put in execution.

It is said, whether upon good authority we know not, that an Imperial despatch has been received at Canton and forwarded to the Governor who is now on his tour of inspection through the two provinces, said to contain an intimation that, instead of allowing the Opium-trade to push it's way to Canton, it would be better not to obstruct it too much at Lintin; if this be true we may expect to see it reestablished there on it's old footing.

Another report, on authority similar to the foregoing, states that a member of the Imperial family has from Canton addressed complaints of the Governor's extortion and rapacity to the court, where this officer is said to have many enemies, and that his recall may be shortly looked for.

COMMERCIAL REMARKS.

IMPORTS.

COTTON MANUFACTURES.—The market has been rather inactive for LONGCLOTHS, but for the fine descriptions, both white and grey there is a little more enquiry; the coarser kinds have rather declined. COTTON YARN hangs very heavily on hand, except the best qualities. CHINTZES from the moderate supplies are fetching good prices.

WOOLLENS.—There have been one or two sales during the week of SPANISH STRIPES at lower rates, and there appears little disposition to speculate at even present prices. LONGELLS have also declined, and scarlets would now barely command $ 10½. There have been no sales.

METALS.—LEAD is not so firm IRON without alteration or transactions.

COCHINEAL.—The quotations must be considered quite nominal, there being no sale for it at present

RICE.—The prices remain nearly as last week, but there is a disposition to purchase.

STRAITS PRODUCE.—No alteration.

COTTON.—Our former quotations are supported for all descriptions. The holders of Bombay are asking higher prices but purchasers do not come forward and the market has been rather languid. The only sale reported has been of good Madras at 10.5 @ 10.7.

OPIUM.—The market continues in the same unsatisfactory state, the only deliveries being by foreign boats in the river, and to the westward, as far as we can learn, generally for Malwa and old Opium. The Chinese do not yet freely purchase the new Bengal drug, nor can we yet learn what its real estimation by them is, having heard different accounts from different parties, but both Patna and Benares are short weight.

EXPORTS.

RAW SILK.—There has been no additional supply, and during the past week the market has been almost entirely cleared of all that remained Much of it of very inferior quality at from 430 @ 480, and for one or two parcels the holders are asking $ 500.

TEA.—We have removed from our columns the quotations for several kinds of Tea of which none now remain in the Tea-men's hands. Considerable purchases of Hysons have been made during the week and the price has advanced 2 @ 4 Taels.

EXCHANGES,—as before Some Scotch Bank and Bank United States bills have been offering, but we have heard of no transactions.

Kweitszes Petition.

An original translation from the Chinese.

AFTER CONGRATULATING LE KE THE GUESTS ASSEMBLE IN THE BANQUETING ROOM.

The following, being his natal day, his relations congratulate him,
And seeing the banquet was prepared, were exceeding mirthful.
Kweitze and her brother reverently saluted their parents saying,
"Venerable parents, may you flourish for a hundred years."

"May the Gods pour blessings and felicity on your heads,
"More expansive, than the eastern ocean, solid as the southern mountain"
This concluded the ceremony and the guests retired to the banqueting room,
Which soon echoed the mirthful shouts of the Chaenae* players.

The entertainment over, they took leave and went their way
Leaving, both husband and wife in high spirits;
happy
In themselves and in the possession of such beautiful children.
Their daughter Kweitze was as yet unbetrothed, but this

Depended on the will of heaven and the go-beween's exertions;
Who had not yet discovered a fitting match.
Kweitsze was daily occupied embroidering. Her features.
Resembled those of Changgo the Lady of the moon-her complexion fairer.

In the evening—the husband and wife being alone, conversed
Respecting the betrothal of their children—mutual affection
Sweetened their conversation, and never had husband and wife,
So long after marriage, enjoyed so delightful an evening.

Sleep now began to exert his influence on them,
But we shall not detail the secrets of the bed chamber,
Whither they retired, as the drum announced the third watch.
Chin was visited by heaven with the following
dream.

The moon, she thought, being obscured, a dark cloud
Drew her up, in its embrace, high in the air.
And then cast her down again to the earth.
At this moment she awoke and the dream was dispelled.

A clammy perspiration saturated her night-dress:
She aroused her husband, and on relating her
dream,
His mind misgave him that it portended evil.
"The wind "said he" has wafted misfortune to our door:

"I fear that you well be the first victim:
"It is difficult to interpret things seen in dreams.
"But, as the ancients say, heaven protects the vir-tuous.
"I recommend you not to let this dream prey on your mind.

"Can dreams affect the tenor of a man's life?"
Chin waited till her husband had finished, when she said.
"My lord, this dream, I am convinced, portends our separation."
Le Ke desired his wife not thus to alarm herself,

"For what is there in adream" said he "to frighten you."
While they were thus conversing, time flew on
And as the day dawned, Chin was taken unwell;
But what passed at breakfast we shall not detail.

CHIN IS TAKEN ILL AND DIES.

During the day, Chin complained of head-ache.
And soon after was taken violenty ill
Her bones peeped thro' her skin, her face was stamped with death
Neither physician nor medicine, could stay the distemper.

* A popular drinking game.

Portuguese and Spanish Intercourse with Japan.

From the Chinese Repository for February.

"In 1608, a sad casualty, fraught with the worst consequences, occurred at Macao. The crew of a Japanese junk, in a riotus state, provoked a contest with the military, and twenty-eight of them were killed. The governor, Pessoa, by whose order they were fired on, conducted the annual ship to Japan the following year. The report of his conduct was not slow in following him, carried probably by the Dutch, who arrived there the same year in the first ship sent by their East India Company. The recent liberation of the Hollanders from the tyranny of Philip II., and their vivid recollections of the atrocities of the duke of Alva and his coadjutors, must be allowed to palliate their voluntary information, and their proposal to seize the ship of Pessoa, present her to the seogun, and in future to supply the country with the articles which the Portuguese had hitherto furnished. While the seogun hesitated, a Spanish vessel was wrecked on the coast, having on board the governor of the Philippine Islands on his way to New Spain. The shipwrecked governor was introduced at court, and asked if the Spaniards could supply Japan with silks, &c., if the Portuguese were driven away. The reply was, that Manila could furnish three times as much as Macao. Thus doubly assured, the order was given to seize the ship, behead Pessoa, expel the Jesuits, and give their establishments to the Spanish priests. Pessoa, informed that his ship was threatened, returned to defend her, and on the first attack the Japanese were repulsed. The seogun, in a rage, issued his commands that every Portuguese in Nagasaki should be put to death. But this was unnecessary; on the 9th of January, 1610, the attack was renewed, Pessoa and his crew overpowered, and the ship burned. Thus avenged, the monarch relaxed his fury, and permitted the Portuguese to continue their trade."*

A small vessel built by the Englishman Adams was sold to the shipwrecked Spanish governor, in which he proceeded on his voyage. To pay for this vessel, and to frame a commercial treaty, an envoy was sent from New Spain the following year. The seogun was offended at the importance which the embassador assumed. He required permission to build vessels in the harbors of Japan, which was not refused. But when he denounced the Dutch as rebellious subjects of his master, and demanded that they should be expelled, he was answered, that the Japanese sovereign had nothing to do with the quarrels of Europeans, and that no one should be driven from his dominions who lived there in obedience to the laws. The same answer was made to the envoy's demand that all Spaniards who had no royal license to come to Japan should be given up to him to be conveyed to New Spain.

The papal regulation, that all priests should go to Japan only by way of Macao, was now annulled, very probably by desire of the Jesuits, who saw that of the two flags, the Portuguese was the lower in the seogun's esteem. A new influence was now brought to act against the Catholics by the establishments of an English factory at Firando, in 1613. The Dutch and English made common cause against the Spaniards and Portuguese. The representations of the former party appear to have been admitted; and when the other came to present their memorial, the seogun replied, that were the Dutch devils, they should be well treated so long as they behaved well in conducting their trade.

* The destruction of this vessel is supposed to have given rise to the story of a Spanish ship having been cut off by the Japanese, after her three decks had been blown up in succession by the crew, and a vast number of the assailants destroyed. The chief points of the affair as related by Kæmpfer will be found in the Chinese Repository, vol. iii. page 209.

† It may be necessary to remind the reader, that these extracts are taken from a Roman Catholic Chinese publication; and the notes and illustrations added by the author of the communication. ED.

Superstitions and customs of the chinese.

(From the Indo Chinese Gleaner)

"Those who run races in the dragon boats; or those who go to see plays on the religious festivals of the Heathen—SIN."†

The above festival is observed during the fifth moon, in honor of Keuh-yuen, a virtuous statesman, who drowned himself during the Dynasty Chow, (about 2300 years since,) to avoid the displeasure of his sovereign. As soon as the people heard of his death, the boats flew in every direction in search of his corpse. On this festival there is offered to the dragon (the god of the rivers,) rice, &c. morning and evening. The boats used, on this occasion, are very long, and some will from eight to one hundred oars. It is an holiday at the public offices; and the festival is kept on all the rivers of the empire. After the races, the boats (on account of their length) are buried in the mud, where they remain till the following year. This festival is principally kept up by the different public officers, who frequently stake considerable sums on their boats.—The plays in China are mostly performed on religious occasions, either in honour of their gods, or the anniversary of their temples, as well as on their annual festivals. Before they commence their plays, the musicians go to the temples, where they play one or more tunes, when they bring away with them a small altar, with incense burning, and place it on the stage, which is a temporary building of bamboo; where they again play a few tunes; this is done to invoke their gods to be present during their plays. These plays are generally performed in front of their temples. Once a year plays are performed in the market, when, as before mentioned, they bring their gods from their temples with music. This is highly esteemed by the Chinese, as the gods are supposed to preside over the affairs of the market, and to cause equity and justice in men's dealings. After any calamity, as fire, &c., it is usual for the people in the neighbourhood to raise a sum for the performance of a set of plays, which is done as a mark of gratitude for the late mercies they have experienced. On other occasions, the tradesmen of the different callings, by turns, go from door to door to collect the yearly subscriptions, and decide, and not the priests, on the number of plays to be performed at each festival; as when the temples shall be repaired or ornamented. The duty of the priests is merely to attend to reading prayers, &c. and not to secular concerns. They profess to be superior men, having renounced the world and all prospects of gain—and taken to a life of abstinence. Their appearance, however, often indicates, that they are any thing but SUPERIOR men! being indolent and filthy in the extreme.

A set of plays are held for three or five successive days, during which they perform twice every day. They generally commence about two o'clock and continue till about five. In the evening, at seven, they again commence, when they continue till about eleven. The third rate players, which generally perform at Macao, are allowed one hundred dollars per day, exclusive of food, oil for lamps, &c. A company of players consist of, from forty to fifty men; country players and boys, whose principal performance consists in feats of agility, perform for only forty or fifty dollars per day. The first rate performers do not perform for less than one hundred and fifty dollars per day, exclusive of all expences. There is an office at Canton for registering the different companies; and every company on leaving the city, gives in a notice, intimating to what part they are going, by which means, letters on business, from any part of the province, are immediately attended to.

A list of the number of plays performed annually at Macao, will enable the reader to form some idea of the extent of theatrical performances in a province, throughout the empire.

At the military, (or water-lily temple‡) during the 3d, 5th, and 7th moon, twenty-two plays are performed, which amount (independent of the expences of fitting up the theatres) to	Sp. Drs. 2200
Temple to the god of fire—(lately opened,) six days,	600
Ma ko temple, (or the lady of the celestial chambers) during the 3d moon, eighteen or more plays, according to the manner of European ships that arrive in the inner harbour of Macao. These plays are said to be defrayed by the Linguist,	2000
Tow temple, (to the gods of the land) during the 3d moon, seven days	350
Temple for the universal redemption of orphan spirits, during the 11th moon, five days	800
At the Hoppo office, (in the market place) on the 24th of the 2d moon. On these occasions the government regulation is only twelve dollars per day for the whole company; which is allowed by the Mandarins. The managers frequently receive considerable presents. This national play is observed at all the public offices, on the same day, throughout the empire, four days	100

‡ The Chinese imagine that Macao resembles the leaf of the waterlily, and the isthmus which connects Macao with the interior country, the stem; hence the fanciful name above. The Ma-ko temple commands the inner harbour, and is built at the foot of an extraordinary pile of rock. Half way up, and on its summit, are several little temples. A large Yew-tree shades the temple; at its foot are these words: "We desire that heaven will cause good men to be born. We desire that earth will assist man in acting benevolently."

Plagues of Popularity.

From Colburn's new Monthly Magazine for Sept.

From the popular man, also, all the sly enjoyments of life are torn. He cannot mob it to see a play in the pit, he cannot even venture in an omnibus to the city. He dare not accompany a fair friend to Vauxhall, nor enjoy the luxury of being alone in a crowd. Wherever he thus disappears in public, he will suddenly find himself the centre of a circle, all eyes, and all, directed to his person; and the next morning every newspaper of the town will trumpet forth his "doings" However it may suit his fortunes, he cannot dine at a cheap tavern, and take his glass of "cold without," as a substitute for the costly wines which lighten his pocket and load his stomach. Indeed, it is in this respect of dinners that your popular man is most especially aggrieved. If the dinners placed at his command were equally distributed over the whole year, he never need go to a chop-house at all; but they are usually heaped up thick and threefold upon those exclusive summer months which constitute the winter season of London. At that time, a popular man is overloaded, oppressed, overwhelmed with the numbers of his cards What can he do? Few persons can dine three or four times in one day, like poor Charles Dignum, of song-singing notoriety. Besides, every one now dines at the same hour, and the best digesting stomach in the world cannot be in two places at once. On the other hand, the loss of a dinner is a serious evil per se; to say nothing of the difficulty of selections, and the horror of a positive and indissoluble engagement to a mediocre house, when the long desired card comes in from Lord L——e, or from R——s. There are, to be sure, those who can cut this Gordian knot by cutting the modest Amphitryon who stands in their way, at the risk of being cut in return, once and for ever, by the offended party; but the number thus favoured by the gods is not very great. In general, men who respect no other human ties are faithful to their dinner engagements; though, like Pistol over his leek, they "eat and swear." Whether they carry their Christianity so far as to forgive the innocent causes of these delicate distresses, is more than we will take upon ourselves to affirm.

A popular man is a butt for all the world to shoot at. He is universally applied to in all manner of distresses, by those who do know him, and by those whodonot. There is not a "widow with seven small children," a respectable tradesman "overwhelmed by a concatenation of untoward events," a clergyman whose "expenses have exceeded his income," or an elderly maiden escaped, in her chemise, from "the late calamitous fire," who does not make him acquainted with their respective misfortunes, and look to him for relief. The Duke of Wellington, we dare be sworn, has received more letter from the widows of officers slain at Waterloo, than ever fell in all his campaigns; and there is not a successful actor on the stage who could not furnish his quota of a correspondence with self-dubbed Thespians, dated from half the gaols of England. But if your popularity be literary, there is positively no end of this persecution. Every day brings its epic, or its drama, its novel in three volumes, or its voyage in two, with a modest request to wade through the ill-written MS.—criticise, amend, write a preface, and recommend to a publisher, or to friends for subscription. To say nothing of incessant "double letters from Northamptonshire," or, worse still, large packets from America, like those quoted by Mr. Lockhart in his life of Sir Walter—all for the further promotion of such tyrannical designs against your purse and person. To comply with such requests would be a total surrender of personal freedom; to refuse is to make an enemy who will slander you anonymously in the newspapers and journals for the rest of your life. Nay, even if you comply, and your case is not amended: it is all set down as envy, hatred, and malice, and jealousy of a new rival venturing into the market. But even to criticise is safer than to praise; no mortal ever yet peppered sufficiently high to content the vanity of an author of this intrusive disposition. Upon the subject of postage, also, there is another plague of popularity to mention—the persecutions of the twopenny post. There is a floating capital of envy and of paltry malignity in the word, of which the littleness is only equalled by the intensity. For this fostering anonymous letter-writing is the accustomed vent; so that there are few popular persons—no matter the cause of their popularity—who do not, about once a-week or so get their twopenny-worth, beginning with "You infernal scoundrel," or "You conceited ass," and accusing them of more vices than can be found in the catalogue of a Catholic confessor. If a woman be the object, you may be certain, too, of indecencies unheard of in Broad St Giles's. Now, though this be all despicable enough, it is also painfully disgusting. It gives too close an insight into the meanness and vulgarity of mind, and total unworthiness, abounding in society, makes one sick of one's fellow-creatures, and moreover, it is in the long run rather expensive.

"——————drop into unwilling ears
The saving council, 'keep your piece nine years,'"

COMPARATIVE VIEW OF THE EXTERNAL COMMERCE OF BENGAL FOR 1835-36 AND 1836-37.—

We have been favored by Mr. Bell, with a copy of his valuable work on this important subject, which we proceed to analyse, without delay.

It is most gratifying to add, that though the year 1835-36 was one of unexampled increase in the imports and exports of Bengal, the last official year exhibits a still further increase in both departments. The increase in imports during the year, has amounted to 35,57,725 lakhs; the increase in the exports, to 48,04,947 lakhs of Rupees.

Some may possibly be disposed to attribute the increase in both kinds during the last official year, to a spirit of speculation. But even admitting that this may have had some effect upon the commerce of the port, yet the steady increase of the trade, during the last four years, would lead us to suppose that it arises in a great measure from permanent causes, & will not be greatly affected by the paralysis which has now followed, as it always does follow, an over buoyancy of trade.

It is, however, difficult to ascertain from Mr. Bell's statement, the real nature of this increase in our commercial transactions. At first sight it would appear to be an increase more in figures than in reality. Thus, for example, in the exports we have seventy-six lakhs of Rupees put down for eighteen thousand maunds of silk; whereas, if the price of the exports of this article had been calculated upon that of the preceding year, it would not have appeared to be of more value than fifty-two lakhs. The same may be said of Opium of which 17,606 maunds are rated at a hundred and eighty lakhs of Rupees, which upon the price of the preceding year, would not have exceeded a hundred and sixty one lakhs. In these two items, we have an excess of value over the value of the previous year, of nearly forty-three lakhs of Rupees. The same may be said of the imports, though not, perhaps, to the same extent; and it is not easy therefore, to separate the bona fide augmentation of the trade from the simple increase in official value, without going over every calculation, for which we have not time.

By far the largest item of increase in our imports, is seen in the trade between England and India. It amounts to no less than Rs. 41,81,721; and it is pleasing to observe that this increase is not accidental. The imports from England, in 1834-35 were	Sa. Rs. 1,48,00,000

in 1835-36	Co.'s Rs. 1,82,52,926
in 1836-37	Co.'s Rs. 2,24,04,707

bring an increase of more than fifty per cent. in three years. The imports from Great Britain into India are nearly two-thirds of the entire import trade of the whole country, being in the proportion of 32 to 27. The increase has been chiefly in the articles of twist and cotton piece goods, both white and coloured, the importation of which in the past year, exceeds that of the preceding year, by more than forty lakhs of Rs.

An increase of import trade also appears visible in that from France of 5,33,000; from the Madras Coast of 3,00,000 from the Arabian Gulf, of 2,19,000; from Pegu, of 3,38,000 & from the Mauritius, of 1,89,000.

On the other hand, there has been a decrease in imports from China, of 7,64,000 ; from North America, of 6,75,000 ; from Bourbo . of 3,35,000 ; from South America, of 2,27,000 ; and from Singapore, of nearly two lakhs of Rupees.

The increase of our Exports to Great Britain, has been within a trifle of eighty lakhs of Rupees ; to Singapore of more than seven lakes ; to the Mauritius of six lakhs and a half ; and to the Coromandel Coast of three lakhs and a half. In fact, the increase to twelve places, exceeds a crore of Rupees ; but there has been a falling off in our exports to eight other places, of fifty-five lakhs and a little more. The greatest decrease appears in the trade to China of nearly thirty lakhs ; next in order, to France of seven lakhs, thirty-nine thousand ; and to the Malabar Coast, of about five lakhs of Rupees.

It is, however, clearly visible from Mr Bell's statement, that the trade, both in imports and exports is on the increase ; that though some portion of the apparent augmentation may be traced to the higher value put down to some articles,—other articles on the contrary, being set down at a lower value than that of the preceding year,—a genuine improvement characterizes generally the commercial transactions of the year.

The most striking change in the trade of the year as compared with that of the former year, is visible in the article of wines, beer and spirits

The Wines, from all parts imported in 1835-36, were eight lakhs sixty-one thousand ; in the last year, nine lakhs eighty-seven, thousand.

The Malt liquors in the preceding year imported into Calcutta, were of the value of about three lakhs and forty thousand Rupees ; in the past, he value was nearly five lakhs and ninety thousand.

In the year 1835-36, the amount of ardent spirits imported into Calcutta, amounted in round numbers to six lakhs of Rupees, in the last year, the importation fell to two lakhs. This we cannot, of course, attribute to the influence of our Temperance Societies ; yet it will be gratifying to the members and friends of those most useful Institutions to learn, that the importation, if not the consumption, of ardent spirits, has decreased.

Three articles of export appear this year, for the first time, in the statement, namely, five hundred and fourteen maunds of Canthouc, at the nominal value of 4,112 Rupees ; Seventy-one thousand maunds of Teel Seed, valued at 1,41,998 Rs. ; and ten thousand six hundred and twelve maunds of Teel Seed oil valued at 89,026 Rupees.

But the most gratifying fact with which Mr. Bell's statement furnishes us relates to the complete success which has attended the new system of duties. Before the experiment was tried, it was feared that in relinquishing the entire transit duties of the provinces, Government must submit to a large sacrifice of revenue. It was supposed that no adequate equivalent could be found for them in import and export duties. The reverse has happily turned out to be the case. In the five preceding years, the net annual collection of import and export duties, at the Port of Calcutta, was 7,30,688 Rs. The amount of export duties collected, in the transit of produce throughout the Province was 15,00,000 Rs. making the whole amount of these duties 15,30,688. The net amount of duty collected on imports and exports, in the first year after the abolition of the transit duties, was 22,12,429 Rs. thus exhibiting a nett increase of eight lakhs and sixty thousand Rupees. If to the duties levied at the Port of Calcutta, be added the import and export duties on our Western Frontier, it will appear, that in this first year of the operation of the new act, the public funds have gained by the relief which was granted to commerce, in the extinction of those internal imports which were so well described by a member of the Board of Customs as a curse.' This liberal measure has therefore brought its own reward ; and those who took an active share in it and to whose official exertions its accomplishment is to be traced, have now the unalloyed satisfaction of knowing that they have been enabled to combine in one arrangement, an unexampled boon to the community, and a decided increase of the public revenue.

CORRESPONDENCE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE CANTON PRESS.

Sir,—My attention was attracted by continued screams and cries proceeding from the "Blake" a Liverpool ship, during the greater part of yesterday evening, and, being anxious to ascertain the cause of them, I pulled in my boat close alongside of that vessel, when I discovered a man or boy hanging suspended from the mainstay high up in the air, and crying most bitterly to be released. I was not able to ascend the ships sides, but enquired the cause of the disturbance of a man at the gangway, who told me that there was nothing at all the matter, and I was further desired to mind my own business. Cries of the same description are often heard to proceed from the same vessel, and were supposed to be caused by the punishment of one of the boys.

Doubts exist as to the fitness of corporal punishment by merchant-men in any case, but surely they are not permitted to make use of the cruel torture which I last night witnessed, and to disturb the fleet by the cries of the sufferer.

I am, Sir,
Your obedient Servant,
AN EYE WITNESS.

Whampoa, March 14th, 1838.

CANTON PRESS.

Saturday, 17th March.

A Public Meeting of the creditors of the insolvent Hongs, and of the British merchants generally, is requested by several of their number on Wednesday next at noon, at the hall of the General Chamber of Commerce ; to take into consideration the propriety of memorializing the British Secretary for Foreign affairs upon the subject of the large debts owing by the Chinese Hong merchants, with a hope to engage the aid of the Her Majesty's Government towards obtaining an early payment of present claims, and facilitating, if possible, the settlement of similar burdens in future.

It is our melancholy duty to record the death of Captain J. T. Lancaster, formerly of the Caledonia, Bombay Ship, lately of the Agnes, at the Lintin. From what we hear it appears that the difficulties of a situation in which it devolved on him to keep many and complicated accounts, to which he had been hitherto a stranger, had for some time irritated his mind, and induced him to believe that he could not give satisfaction to his employers. This latter impression, which was not founded on fact, his owners being, on the contrary, perfectly contented with his management, seems to have so much preyed on his mind, that it became unsettled, and a feyer with which he was afflicted during the last three days of his life probably assisted in subverting his reason altogether, and on the 10th of this month he went on shore at Lintin, and went inland, followed by the Tindal of the boat who, from the unusual behaviour of his Captain was afraid to leave him alone, but, when observed, received positive orders to return to the boat, which he dared not disobey; the tindal however, we are told, tried to persuade some of the boats crew to return to the Captain whom he had left in a lonely spot, but without success. The people having wained about at hour for the return of Captain Lancaster, at last became alarmed, and following the Tindal to the spot where he had lately left his Captain, there found his lifeless body ; it appears that putting the pistol to his mouth Captain Lancaster had blown out the roof of the mouth, and the ball had passed through the back of the head, causing instantaneous death. From Captain Lancaster's manner previous to his suicide, is he supposed that he had conceived this fatal purpose about three days before, and on the day he commmitted the rash act, he had been twice to the Island of Lintin, with, as is supposed, the purpose of putting his design in to execution, but irresolution made him return again twice on board of his own ship. This melancholy event is much regretted by every one, and particularly by Captain Lancaster's acquaintance, with whom his agreeable manners and open and cheerful temper had made him an especial favorite.

Caution to travellers. During the lately frequently irregular sailing of the European Passage boats between this and Macao, some people, in order to go to Lintin or Macao, have availed themselves of native fast boats, a mode of conveyance not permitted to foreigners except with a chop or licence. Only very lately the Captain of an American ship on his way down the river in one of these fast-boats, was arrested by the mandarines, taken to Lantao, and released only on paying a very heavy fine. Travelling in these fast-boats, though the accident here related is by no means the first of the kind that has occurred, is more hazardous at present than before, the hope of catching boats smuggling Opium keeping the vegilance of the Mandarins, more than ordenarily, alive.

We request the attention of our readers to the communication from an Eye Witness relating the punishment of an unfortunate boy, he saw inflicted, on board of the Blake at Whampoa. Capt. Elliot some time ago appointed one of the Captains of the British ships at Whampoa to act as Magistrate there, and we should think it was their office to take cognizance of, and to prevent such acts of cruelty; if however their authority does not extend so far, and such acts can be committed without restraint of superior authority, it then becomes the duty of the press to enlist the sympathies of the public in behalf of the oppressed.

The Susquehanna. The arrival of the Chandler Price from Newyork 7th November, has relieved the apprehensions entertained on account of this vessel, since, as we hear, she was spoken to, all well, on her way to Liverpool about 24 hours after the alleged Piracy was supposed to have taken place. It has also been ascertained that the long, low, black, suspicious, schooner seen alongside of her, a was believed, was afishing vessel that supplied with oysters the Britannia, an old packet, bound for the south, which vessel happened to have on her topsails the same distinguishing cross as the Susquehanna, and mistaking the one vessel for the other, and ascribing the dangerous pursuit of piracy to a peaceful fisherman, has been the cause of much uneasiness and apprehension.

Remarks upon the Chinese Government.

In times of danger, the Government employs a militia, in which every able bodied man is obliged to serve. Yet only few attend the summons, and as they are badly paid, it frequently happens, that they disperse as quickly as they were collected. The use of fire arms and, in fact, of every other weapon is prohibited to the people ; when however clans engage in their feuds, it is not an uncommon thing to see whole villages in arms. From this it would appear, that there existed considerable stores of matchlocks, of which the Government is either ignorant or pretends to be so.

The Mantchoos gained the country with their sword. A conquest so easily atchieved, is perhaps not met with in the history of any other country.—The hordes who at first entered China were by no means very numerous and did not exceed 200.000 men. They knew nothing about tactics, their only arms were bows and arrows, and the velocity of their horses their real strength. Yet, with such a handful of men, the largest empire of the world was subdued within a few years! The rulers, well aware that they could not retain possession of their conquests by main force, abandoned the very idea of establishing a military government, and, whilst still keeping up the name, they substituted a most artful policy in accordance with the people over whom they had obtained the sway ; cunning is the very essence of the national Chinese character, and to meet the people upon equal grounds, they made this the basis of their administration. This principle once established, no falsehood could be too gross, no expedient too mean, to which the men in power would not have recourse, if it served their purpose. It cannot be otherwise, the wheels of Government must immediately stop as soon the all moving power—cunning—is no longer put into requisition. To keep up the dignity of the Celestial Dynasty, fair edicts are issued on every occasion, and these either gloss over facts, or represent matters in the most favorable light. This is not only the case in regard to foreign intercourse, but in every department; not only do local officers avail themselves of these advantages, but the emperor himself does not disdain to issue the most unaccountable proclamations. The natives who are accustomed to official hypocrisy, seldom take notice of placards, unless they are immediately interested in their contents. Foreigners have often been deceived by their specious language and formed, from the contents of public documents, their opinion about this country. Hence the high flown descriptions of China with which Europe is inundated.

Though we may find the same evil in other countries, we do not believe that fraud has been so much systematized as in the Government of China. Were we to recount the daily occurrences in some of the public offices, it would be considered incredible, and not one hundredth part is even known. Fouché is a very child compared with the heroes who fill some of the most responsible stations in Peking. They are bred to it, it is their daily study, their very element. The more crafty, the greater the renown of a civilian ; an honest man is a mere simpleton. Let us not be astonished at this, there is no advancement but cunning, it is an indispensable requisite ; and should this propensity not be developed to its utmost extent, if honors and riches can thereby be obtained? A Mandarin is out of his place who does not coincide with the spirit of his fellow officers and would be isolated in his efforts, if he happened to be a straightforward man.

To counteract the hateful consequences of such a crooked system, minute laws were invented. There is a provision made against every possible case, and the meshes of the law are as fine spun as human contrivance could make them There is no escape, they are severe, luminous, and bright at the same-time, and woe unto' him who becomes entangled in them. There is only one proviso made—viz the laws are on record ;— as soon as it suits the interest of the rulers, they are put into requisition, but otherwise they are as harmless as the edicts. In the Celestial language we find continual mention made of the net of the laws, and their execution is compared to the process of catching fish. Now nets may be spread out, or laid by for a time, and again used, and then behold, as soon as the cord is drawn tight, all the fishes are taken ; so much of a metaphor which exactly expresses the administration of the law in China. As Barbarians we consider them as pieces of wax in the hands of the Mandarins, who twist them in every possible shape in order to serve their purpose, whilst the Mandarin is the law himself.

To such a state of things we can perhaps find nowhere a parallel on so large a scale. The whole edifice, which is otherwise a most wonderful fabric and the eighth wonder of the world, is no doubt rotten with all its rafters and beams. Now it has often happened in time of yore, that a sudden blast overthrew the whole, which was then in a similar condition, in a very short time. This is likely again to take place but so long as the tempest is lulled, we need not fear. The master of the house, however, who knows all his household better than we imagine, and has, from knowing the structure of the whole concern, a constant dread that it will tumble upon his head, lives in a state of continual apprehension. He is therefore exce-sively suspicious towards barbarians, whether from the West or East or North, whether in ships or on horsebock, whether redbristled or small eyed, in fact the whole tribe of uncivilized beings, who have never come under the transforming influence of the Celestial Empire, lest they might enter his house and, by bouncing too rudely against the wall, throw the whole into ruins. The memory of the Mongols is still very lively in his imagination, and he knows very well that they had to quit the house as quickly as they had entered it. To be again chased into the desert, and starve there whilst hunting wild beasts, is by no means a comfortable predicament. To prevent such an unlucky event he tries to keep all these untutored beings at a respectable distance, and if they try to force themselves in, he will scold them most severely and threaten them still more.

We shall view the Government by and by in a different light, as soon as we may find leisure.

VARIETIES.

H. E. the Cardinal Odescalchi bishop of Sabine, has given the following notice in the Diario de Roma.

The faithful are informed that by order of His Holiness the hereafter mentioned relics will be exposed to public veneration.

"The arm of St. Francis Xavier in the Church of Jesus.

"As likewise the most celebrated and miraculous images of the holy virgin.

We read in the French papers that when lately the streets and houses of Nantz where first lighted with gaz, the shops that still used oil-lamps looked decidedly rococo.

By a newly invented preparation, by M. Durios, stage scenery in France is proposed to be rendered fire-proof.

It is stated in the Journal of the two Sicilies that the ravages of the Cholera at Palermo have been most frightful. Out of a population of 120,000, 80,000, or one fourth of it, have died. This scourge has not been near as heavy in any other part of Europe. At length the dead were no longer buried, they had become too numerous. The corpses, heaped up in the streets, were left to rot there. During twenty two days this great city has been visited at once by the different scourges, of plague, famine, pillage, and massacre. The excesses committed were however not of any political character.

On the 10th of August already only a few isolated cases of cholera were heard of, and those among people who had, from the interior, fled to Palermo. These people generally die a few days and even a few hours after their arrival, having either brought with them the germ of the malady, or owing to the change of air, which in many instances has proved fatal.

There is lately arrived at Havre an English engineer on his way to Paris to submit to the Government a project which consists in constructing a road between Dover and Calais. The whole town of of Havre went to hear Mr. W. Coppett's (the inventor's name) plan explained. Mr. Coppett only demands one milliard from France and another from England. With this inconsiderable sum he intends to erect cones similar to those at Cherbourg, built some fifty years ago. If his system should not suit the government, he has in his pocket 3 or 4 other plans which lead to the same result. He projects, for example, to have a tunnel under the channel from Calais to Dover, by cementing, end to end, cas tiron pipes of 18 feet diameter. This last plan would not cost, according to Mr. Coppett's calculation, more than one milliard paid between France and England.

Pickwick.

from the London Westminster Review.

The opening of the second chapter is in a style of mock-profundity and mock-epic, which reminds us of Fielding :

"That punctual servant of all work, the sun, had just risen, and begun to strike a light on the morning of the thirteenth of May, one thousand of hundred and twenty-seven, when Mr. Samuel Pickwick burst like another sun from his slumbers : threw open his chamber window, and looked out upon the world beneath. Goswell street was at his feet. Goswell street was on his right hand—as far as the eye could reach. Goswell street extended on his left ; and the opposite side of Goswell street was over the way. 'Such,' thought Mr. Pickwick, 'are the narrow views of those philosophers who, content with examining the things that lie before them, look not to the truths which are hidden beyond. As well might I be content to gaze on Goswell street for ever, without one effort to penetrate to the hidden countries which on every side surround it."

We must not forget to mention, as specimens of our author's philosophy, some remarks which he makes on the ordinary mode of using particular phrases ; and the kind of hidden meaning which is constantly communicated to them by the tone in which they are uttered The vague threat of future revenge implied in the terrible words. " Upon my word, Sir," is pointed out in p. 181, where it is used by Mrs Pott in her quarrel with her unhappy husband. But the philosophy of "Never mind" is even more profoundly marked out :—

" There must be something very comprehensive in this phrase of 'Never mind,' for we do not recollect to have ever witnessed a quarrel in the street, at a theatre, public room, or elsewhere, in which it has not been the standard reply to all belligerent inquiries 'Do you call yourself a gentleman, Sir?' 'Did I offer to say anything to the young woman, Sir?—Never mind, Sir?' Do you want your head knocked up against that wall, Sir?—' Never mind, Sir.' It is observable, too, that there would appear to be some hidden taunt in this universal 'Never mind,' which rouses more indignation in the breast of the individual addressed, than the most lavish abuse could possibly awaken."

COMMERCIAL REMARKS.

IMPORTS.

COTTON MANUFACTURES.—Bleached LONGCLOTHS, are in fair demand, the supplies being moderate;—grey are, on the contrary, heavier of sale

COTTON YARN.—The inferior even more depressed; the good qualities, and No. 26 upwards in fair demand. CHINTZES, for the short supply, are fetching fair rates.

WOOLLENS.—In SPANISH STRIPES, we have heard of no transactions, and the market continues very dull. LONGELLS, have improved, and a few thousand pieces assorted colors, have been sold. during the week. at fully our quotations. CAMLETS, both Dutch and English continue very low, but there is a little more enquiry for the Dutch.

RICE,—has advanced 5 @ 10 cents as there has been no rain, but there is now every appearance of a change.

STRAITS PRODUCE.—BETELNUT; there is none in first hands and it has been raised about ½ of a dollar. PEPPER and TIN, as before—the former rather dull.

COTTON.—The market has been very quiet, the holders requiring higher prices than the dealers are disposed to offer; but if we have no further arrivals soon, prices are rather expected to improve. There is very little good COTTON, of any description, in the market.

OPIUM.—There has been a rather brisk demand for Malwa during the week, but almost entirely for delivery in the foreign boats in the river for the Present-boats proceeding to Peking. There has been also some little demand at Macao for the old Patna, but at very low prices. The Chinese do not readily purchase the new drug, but we have heard no decided objections urged against it. but the short weight. The deliveries to the 8th were, Patna, 174; Benares, 56; Malwa, 178; Total 408 chests.

EXPORTS.

TEA.—We have no observations to offer, the market remaining bare of the finer qualities,

SILK MANUFACTURES.—The raw material continuing very dear, and orders being expected, we hear that higher prices are now asked than before for contract goods.

EXCHANGE.—Some Scotch Bank bills have been sold we understand, at 4s 4d, and Bank of United States bills at 4s 3...

Use of Pagodas in China.

(From the Indo Chinese Gleaner, 1821.)

MACAO—PROPOSAL TO BUILD A PAGODA, to improve the fortunes of the place.—The following is the substance of a card, lately stuck up in public places, to inform the inhabitants.—"The Chinese and foreign merchants have hitherto been prosperous;—their wealth abounding;—and the fate of the place altogether felicitous. —Of late, however, its fortunes have waxed less; and the atmosphere, (or wind and water) unlucky, so that the acquisition of riches has become more variable. Things are greatly altered from what they were formerly. In consequence of this, a proposal has been made to erect a PAGODA, and a PAVILION, in order to renovate and improve the commercial fortunes of the Island. Very luckily, the plan has already met with the approbation of the [Catholic] Christian Magistrate, YUEN, who has offered one hundred dollars to assist in its execution. Mr. LEANG-TA-SUEN, whose skill in geomancy is universally acknowledged, and overwhelmingly attended by incontestible proof, has visited Macao, in order to fix on a spot for the said building.—And declares, that a lofty Pagoda ought to be erected on the seaside, to the right of the temple of the goddess MA-TSOO, near the new village; and a high Pagoda on the eastern arm of the great MEAOU Island—and affirms, that wealth and riches will be the results—that both the Chinese and the foreigners at Macao, will all share in the felicity. He has written a paper on the subject, and drawn out the plan, both of which have been submitted to, and obtained the approbation of, the said Christian magistrate, who has issued orders for opening a subscription. The permission and approbation of the KEUN-MIN-FOO have also been graciously granted. It is, therefore, resolved to hold a meeting on the 8th of the present month, (January, 1821,) in the temple of MA-TSOO, in order to consult on the business, both as to the method of proceeding, and immediately to open a general subscription for the building. Trusting in the lucky influence of these lofty structures to improve the fortunes of the Island, we, the inhabitants of Macao, earnestly entreat a full meeting of all merchants, gentlemen, and strangers, that, with hearts leaping for joy, they may assist in this excellent matter of general concernment."

Gleanings.

A SUBSTITUTE FOR A ROAST. Madam Maintenon, was gay, polite and dignified, and excelled in general conversation. Even deficiencies ought to be remembered when she assigned the auditory.

"Madame," said one of her servants in a whisper one day, "another story to those gentlemen, for we have no roast to day." (James's Celebrated Women.)

ANOTHER MARY'S NEW. Several of our public journals are in raptures at the recent discovery in France that sugar may be manufactured from the juices of the pumpkin. Why, good people, you seem to get information from France upon this subject. Ask your grandmothers! Pumpkin molasses was almost the only sweetening of the American revolution. Our neighbor of the Gazette is among the most joyous at the discovery —albeit a full blown yankee himself. Pray, good sir, where have you been? Have you just awaked from a magnetic slumber? Have you forgotten the glass of black-strap which you drank with Corporal Dolittle, at the little yellow tavern in Dorchester, after your retreat from the battle of Bunker's Hill? We speak experimentally upon the subject, having made a large kettle full of pumpkin mousses ourselves, once on a time, in the sweet vale of the Susquehanna. Truly, most of those new discoveries are very old contrivances. (N. Y. Commercial.)

A BENEVOLENT SINGER. We find the following anecdote in the last number of the Gazette Musicale: The principal singer of the great theatre at Lyons, one day lately observed a poor woman with her four children begging in the street. Her decent and respectable appearance, in the midst of extreme poverty, interested the kind hearted vocalist. He desired the poor woman to follow him into the Place Bellecour, where, placing himself in a corner, with his back to the wall, his head covered with his handkerchief, and his hat at his feet, he began to sing his most favorite opera airs. The beauty of his voice drew a crowd round him; the idea of some unwilling stimulated the generosity of the bystanders, and five francs pieces fell in showers into the hat. When the singer, who had thus in the goodness of his heart, transformed himself into a street minstrel, thought he had got enough, he took up the hat, emptied its contents into the apron of the poor woman, who almost motionless with astonishment and happiness, and disappeared among the crowd. His talent, however, betrayed him, though his face was concealed; the story spread, and the next evening, when he appeared on the stage, shouts of applause from all parts of the house, proved (says the French journalist) that a good action is never thrown away.

TEST OF INTOXICATION. A native of the Emerald Isle was asked the other day how he could tell that a man was drunk. "Faith," answered Pat, "I'd never be after saying that a man was drunk at all without I saw him try to light his pipe at a pump."

Workmen in the arsenal		4,500
Total		20,190men.

The workmen in the arsenal are on a footing of military organization, and would prove very tolerable gunners in case of need. There are also four ships of the line and three frigates of the first rank now on the stocks. Government gives every sailor three cotton suits yearly, one of coarse stuff, for working in, one somewhat finer, for holidays, a capote for winter, two tarbuck, four shirts, four pair of shoes, and a sufficient quantity of soap, for washing. Sailors are divided into four classes, the first receive 30 piastres a-month, the second 28, the third 20, and the fourth 13. This last class consists of recruits. The medrassah was paid in the same proportion. The nation consists of the most suitable and healthy food, and is fully sufficient for two persons. His Highness supports all the male children of the seamen, and, from the moment of their birth, allows them a full ration, and five piastres a month in money. The invalids of the navy are sent back to their respective homes, where they receive a pension of 30 piastres a-month, and are employed in different ways, so that if they are still capable of working, they may join their earnings to their pensions."—(Post.)

An old woman of Vervan on Friday gave notice to the relieving officer, that if he did not supply her with a pair of shoes on or before that day at one night, she would write the Lord of the Admiralty on the subject! —(Cornwall Gazette.)

WATER FOR THE METROPOLIS.—There are in London eight public water companies, namely, the New River, which supplies 73,212 houses with an average daily quantity of 211 gallons, at an annual charge of £1 6s. 8d. per house; the East London, 46,421 houses, with 129 gallons, at £1 2s. 9d.; the Lambeth, 16,812 houses with 124 gallons, at 17s.; the West Middlesex, 16,000 houses, with 185 gallons, at £2 16s. 10d.; the Chelsea, 13,891 houses, with 164 gallons, at £1 13s. 3d.; the South-London, 12,946 houses, with 100 gallons, at 16s. the Grand Junction, 11,140 houses, with 350 gallons, at £2 2s. 6d.; and the Southwark, 7,100 houses with 136 gallons, at £1 1s. 3d. per annum.—(Herald.)

The return of the quarterly weekly average liabilities and assets of the Bank of England from the 27th June to the 19th September, published in the Gazette of last night, compared with the three months ending 22d August, gives the following results. The circulation is £18,811,000 against £18,452,000, being an increase of £362,000, the deposits are £11,093,000 against £11,005, or being an increase of £88,000. The Securities are £26,605,000 against £26,717,000, being a diminution of £112,000, and the bullion is £6,301,000 against £5,744,000, being an increase of £549,000. The surplus on rest is £3,004,000 against 4,004,000, being a decrease of £3,000.—(True Sun.)

Hong-Debts.

At a general meeting of British merchants held on the 21st at the hall of the General Chamber of Commerce, to take into consideration the propriety of memorializing the British Secretary for foreign affairs, upon the subject of the large debts owing by the Chinese Hong merchants, &c.

Robert Inglis, Esq. in the chair

The Chairman, after some preliminary observations, read the draft of a memorial (as following here under) proposed for the occasion, upon which

Mr. Dent, seconded by Mr. Blenkin, moved, that "the memorial read from the chair be adopted, and the Chairman be instructed to forward it to the Foreign Secretary, through H. M. Chief Superintendent."

This resolution was, after the proposal of some amendments, which were negatived, carried with the dissent of one vote only.

It was then resolved and carried unanimously on the motion of Mr. Bell, seconded by Mr. J. Cragg:

"That a copy of the memorial now adopted be sent to the Chairmen of the Chamber of Commerce with a request that he will transmit it to the Chairman of the East India and China Association in London; also copies thereof to the Chairmen of the Chambers of Commerce of Bristol, Dublin, Liverpool, Manchester, and Glasgow, soliciting the support and co-operation of those bodies respectively, towards obtaining the prayer; accompanied by such further information respecting the Co-hong as, in the judgment of the Canton Chamber, is calculated to interest the Home Authorities, in an endeavor to bring about, by negotiation or otherwise, a more safe and satisfactory commercial intercourse than has hitherto existed between the two nations."

Mr Daniell, seconded by Mr. Maclean, moved that an address to the Vice-roy, upon the subject of the Hong-debts, of which he presented a draft to the meeting, (which will be found here under) should be adopted by the meeting. The address, on being read was approved and adopted.

After which, there being noted to the Chairman, the meeting dissolved.

Memorial.

TO THE RIGHT HONORABLE
LORD VISCOUNT PALMERSTON,
PRINCIPAL SECRETARY FOR FOREIGN AFFAIRS
&c. &c. &c.

MY LORD,—We, the undersigned British merchants trading at Canton in China, have the honor to address your Lordship, through the mediation of H. B. M. Chief Superintendent, respecting certain heavy debts owed to us by the Chinese Hong-merchants; and we respectfully but earnestly entreat your Lordship to lay our case before Her Majesty's Council, with a view to obtain the powerful interposition of our own Government, with that under which we at present live, to endeavour to obtain an early payment of our actual claims, and a surer means of recovery of those, which under the existing circumstances of the foreign trade with this country, we must, we fear, inevitably incur in future.

2. Your Lordship is aware, no doubt, that we are limited in our dealings in all the principal staples of the legal foreign trade with China, to about a dozen parties, called Security or Hong-merchants. These merchants trade separately, but they are mutually responsible for the government dues which each may incur, and also for their respective debts to the Foreigners. Your memorialists are allowed no voice in the nomination of these Security merchants, nor have we any means to ascertain their capital, nor other qualifications for their trust; but the Chinese Government, which takes this responsibility upon itself, guarantees the engagements which the Chinese merchants form with us; and the principal of the Hong debts, without interest, has always been paid for the last twenty or thirty years by the whole body or Co-hong, under the authority of government. The period, however, within which the debts should be paid, has been left to be settled between the Security merchants and the Foreigners, and has always been a point of much contention. The former have usually succeeded in fixing a term of years within which the foreign capital in their possession, might double itself almost twice over by compound interest; and the British merchants have been indebted for the attainment of even this term, to the influence of the East India Company's late Factory in China, as well as for the return of remittances through their large transactions with the Hongs; facilities which your memorialists no longer enjoy.

3. Of the thirteen Hong-merchants which existed at the beginning of 1837, three or four are now avowedly insolvent. Their united debts, according to their own report, amount to upwards of 3,000,000 dollars, besides about 750,000 dollars which they owe to the government for duties. One of these Security merchants, named Hing-tae, has been formally declared bankrupt, and his debts to Foreigners proved, by a Committee appointed for the purpose by the Co-hong and Foreigners mutually, at 2,261,189 dollars, exclusive of claims still in dispute. The Vice-roy of Canton has declared in a public document, of which we transmit herewith a translation, together with all the correspondence upon the subject to your Lordship, that the debts shall be paid; but has left the period for payment to be settled, as usual, between the Security merchants and the Foreigners. The former begin by proposing twenty years as the term for liquidation; but have subsequently reduced it, step by step, to nine years. The creditors have refused even the last proposition, on the grounds: First, that it is impolitic to establish the precedent of such a protracted payment, in this first settlement of a debt under the free-trade system, which debt arises entirely out of actual transactions of trade, and so far differs from all former debts; and secondly, because we wish to take this opportunity to procure a settlement of the debts of all the insolvent Hongs, with a view to understand our exact position with them and to endeavour to trade upon some safer system in future.

4. The debts owing by the Co-hong, whether to the government or to Foreigners, have never been paid entirely out of their own resources, but chiefly by means of extra duties levied upon the principal staples of the foreign trade, and the Hong-merchants propose to liquidate the debts, now under consideration, in a similar way. Such duties, once imposed, appear never to be taken off again when the first occasion for them has ceased; but to be still levied under pretext of creating a fund, called the Consoo Fund, to meet future exigencies of the Co-hong, whether occasioned by debts to the Foreigners, or by demands from the Emperor to meet the expenses of his wars, or other extraordinary expenditure of the state. There is no reason to suppose, however, that such a fund has ever really existed, or that the Chinese authorities have ever recognized it; but they have sanctioned the imposition of duties from time to time for the payment of specific debts, and have connived at their continuance to feed, as is supposed, their own exactions. Independent of the extraordinary demands by the Emperor upon the Security merchants, they are exposed to almost daily extortions on the part of the local authorities, chiefly the Hoppo or Collector of Customs and his subordinates, which have always impoverished them, even when they shared in the large certain profits of the East India Company's trade. They have incurred heavy losses in their trading transactions since the expiration of the E I. Company's charter, and seem likely to suffer still more severely since the same parties have now to conduct a more extended business in competition with the intelligence and greater activity of free-traders to which neither their capital, nor mode of conducting commerce, seem adequate Considering these circumstances, your memorialists see reason to apprehend, that any addition to the duties upon the foreign trade, merely sufficient to liquidate the foreign debts, will, without some weighty interposition with the Imperial Government, be mainly diverted to the payment of extraordinary demands by the authorities on the Co-hong, which it is known are now being tryed upon that body, and thereby not only protract the settlement of our claims, but occasion an accumulation of new debts on the part of the Security merchants, which it may require more than remonstrance on the part of the British Government, at some future time, to recover.

5. Your memorialists are aware of the difficulty of changing the institutions and habits of a people like the Chinese, and do not, therefore, ask of Her Majesty's Government, to require any great or sudden changes in the regulations under which we trade with this Empire; but we humbly submit to your Lordship's decision: Whether the Chinese Government, so long as it shall insist upon confining our trade to so small a number of its merchants, is not bound to take care that those merchants have sufficient capital and probity for their trust; and whether, on the transfer of our capital to them, in the shape of the debts in question, which becomes unavoidable in the conducting of an extensive commerce with a monopoly of such limited means, the imperial guarantee does not imply earlier re-payment of such capital, than has been hitherto, or is now, offered, or at all events some compensation for the delay in the shape of interest. Our experience of the Chinese people and their rulers, leads us confidently to infer, that the simple interposition of our own government with the cabinet of Peking, for so just a cause, would facilitate the adjustment of our present claims; and, if Her Majesty's government would further require that any future debts incurred by the Hongs to British subjects, should be paid immediately, or, at all events, within a reasonable and defined time, and that the Hong-merchants should be protected from the extortion of the official subordinates, we feel assured that it would tend to lessen the hazard of our trade materially. It would induce the Emperor of China to enquire into the abuses of the foreign trade at this port, and to correct the most flagrant of them; which are, the exactions of his officers and the inefficiency of the Co-hong, the full knowledge of which we presume to be withheld by the Canton authorities from the Court of Peking; and the latter effect would render no less service to the solvent Security merchants themselves, than to your memorialists and the whole of the foreign residents in Canton.

6. Your memorialists do not think it necessary to trouble your Lordship with further details of our position as merchants in Canton, the peculiarities of which have doubtless reached your Lordship through an official channel, and relying upon your Lordship's attention to the interests of British commerce and British merchants, to bring our request to the favorable notice of Her Majesty's Government,

We have the honor to be
My Lord,
Your Lordship's devoted and most obedt. Servants.

HIS EXCELLENCY THE GOVERNOR OF KWANG-TUNG AND KWANGSZE.

&c. &c. &c.

A Respectful address—

Some of the subscribers, British merchants, addressed your Excellency nearly a year ago, respecting the large debt due to us by Hingtae, and you Excellency has since given repeated orders for its payment; but, up to this time, we have received no part of it. The Hong-merchants have indeed proposed to pay it off in nine years, beginning with next year, which will be ten years for the adjustment of the accounts; but we cannot consent to such a distant payment.

Besides Hingtae, your Excellency is aware that there are other Hongs also indebted to us, and we have urged the Security merchants to arrange for payment of their debts at the same time, that we may know with whom we may trade safely and whom not, and guard, as far as we are able, against loss in future.

We bring our property from a great distance to trade with this Empire, and we are compelled by its laws to place it in the hands of a very few Hong-merchants, nominated by the Emperor. It cannot be that His Majesty intends that they should retain our capital until it has nearly doubled itself by the accumulation of interest, and then pay us back only the principal.

It may be that Hingtae has dissipated our money, but how can we ascertain this? We cannot go to his house or village to ascertain if he have secreted our money, and even your Excellency's order has failed to produce him here for examination.

The Judge and the Treasurer reported (12th inst., 15th day) as a reason to delay payment of these debts, that: "matters are not now as formerly; there was then the trade of the Company which yielded great profits." This is true; but our profits also are not the Company's, and we cannot afford to dispense with our trading capital. The payment of the Hong-merchants debts besides, has never depended entirely upon their profits, but upon extra duties upon the foreign trade imposed for that purpose, and the Hong merchants now propose an additional duty to pay the present debts. Where then is the injustice to them?

It seems to us, as to the Judge and Treasurer, that some other system is required to meet the exigencies of the present trade, but more for our benefit than for the Hong-merchants. As we do not feel competent to discuss this question with your Excellency, we have referred it thro' H M. Chief Superintendent to our own Gracious Sovereign, who will, we humbly hope, communicate upon the subject with your Emperor.

In the meantime we shall gratefully receive any portion of our claims which your Excellency may be pleased to order to be paid, and be prepared to listen to the suggestions which the Hong-merchants may propose.

CORRESPONDENCE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE CANTON PRESS.

Sir.—One of the objects of your well conduced Paper, being to enlighten "outside barbarians" respecting the manners and customs of the Chinese, I presume, anything, however amotely, tending to advance that object, will not prove unacceptable;

Had I the pen of a Fielding, or even of Miss Julia Euphemia Spinks (a maiden aunt aged 65 whose brain is so prolific, and imagination so vivid, that any subject, however trivial, she can work up into a 3 vol. romance;—an Irish girl extracting potatoes from an iron saucepan with a two pronged fork, she immortalized in an historico-melo dramatical Romance-in 3 vols. entitled "Bifurcio, or the Demon of the Potatoe Cauldron" and "Elmorio; or, the Forest Fiend" was composed while some woodcutters were engaged at work, in a wood on her estate) I might often amuse yourself and readers with sketches of the habits and customs of the Chinese. But alas! not even my relationship to Miss. Spinks, will supply the want of brains; which article, strengthened by education, improved by experience, and assisted by imagination, is, I am told, absolutely necessary to an author. I have consulted my stock list and find but a small portion on hand, or rather, in head—which will probably account to any enquiring and studious reader, for the appearance of the followings train of nonsense.

Having received sundry pressing invitations from Dr. Yangpooy, a schoolmaster at Honam, to visit him at his residence in "Heavenly wisdom" street, and not having before seen the Temple, I resolved on Wednesday last to go. At 3 o'clock, accompanied by a friend, I walked down to 'Jackass point' and embarked in a ferry boat

Our cargo was most select; consisting of a travelling cobler and accompaniments, two barbers, five hong coolies, the nephew of Miss. Julia Euphemia Spinks, and the said nephew's friend. A tall stout cooly, with a small portion of cloth round his middle, and rather a liberal supply of mouth, which when opened presented to the view of the astonished barbarian, an apparently unfathomable cavern jutted with a few black and gigantic rocks, amused his fellow passengers with a song—obscene of course—which he yelled out with such alarming vehemence, and so little regard to the music, that my friend begged me to enquire if he were not practicing the war-whoop of his clan.—The good feeling, now existing between our fellow passengers and ourselves, was soon interrupted. My friend happened to discover the gentleman, with the large mouth and small pair of breeches, in the act of purloining his "vipe," which facetious proceeding, although it afforded the most rapturous delight to "the dignified sons of Han," was set down by my friend as a decided infringement of good breeding.

Immediately after landing at Honam, our advance to the temple, was obstructed by a dense crowd, every individual in which seemed endeavoring to explain to himself in a loud voice what ought next to be done. So you can imagine the clamor and din. We elbowed our way into the centre where we found two coolies preparing for a set-to. They first work themselves up, by abusing each other, to proper fighting pitch, which may be known when the man starts back and convulsively grasps his tail, shrieking out "I'll strike! He then proceeds to tie up his tail in a knot at the back of his head, but by some extraordinary agency it always comes untied, which of course delays the combat: he now slowly but securely fastens it, and discovers that he can fight better with his sleeves rolled up: this again causes delay. After various abstruse and curious manœuvres with the legs of his trousers, his tail and the sleeves of his jacket, he advances, a step and nods rather abruptly at his enemy, who also advances and utters the following command "Now Sir, strike me!" the other replies with most alarming emphasis "Strike me!" "Do you intend to strike me, Sir?" retorts the first. "Most assuredly, Sir, if you strike me." Then, Sir, I shall not strike you, till you strike me." At this moment the bystanders rush in and separate them; they utter deep and malignant curses, and their eagerness to fight encreases to a miraculous degree. As the distance between them encreases, their threats become most alarming, and when quite out of each others hearing, they have been known to form the most diabolic resolution of exterminating, not only their adversary, but his whole family.

We now found it too late to visit both the Temple and Dr. Yangpooy, so we postponed the former to a future day. We had some difficulty in finding 'Heavenly wisdom' street, so we engaged a little boy who had been endeavoring to attract our attention, by calling out 'can do lo cumsha," as our guide. He took us to a low dirty building which he said was Dr. Yangpooy's school room; went away perfectly delighted with 20 cash.—Over the door was pasted a long slip of red paper, the characters on which formed a request to the Gods that "The five blessings might descend on all who entered the house." We knocked several times and, finding we were unheeded, determined to enter. On pushing aside the mat which served as a door, the five blessings actually descended on our admiring persons in the form of—soot, dust, cobwebs, spiders and a centipede!

Our ungrateful exclamations of disgust, aroused a child who was lying on the floor in a state of nudity playing with a mangy dog; he no sooner perceived us than he rushed out shrieking "Here are foreign demons—here are foreign demons." Dr. Yangpooy now hurried out to welcome us. He informed us that this was the school house, and that his own residence was situated lower down in the street Thither he accompanied us and we were agreeably surprised to find it really clean and comfortable. He seemed highly gratified at our visit and exerted himself to please. He was apparently well informed on most subjects relating to Europe and America, and spoke high in the praise of Doctor Parker, who, he said, in goodness of heart, equalled Confucius. On our mentioning the battle or rather, symtoms of a battle we had witnessed, and expressing our surprise, that no blow had been struck—he explained to us that politeness forbad either of the combatants depriving even his enemy, of the honor which the first blow was supposed to yield to the striker. "So general" said he "is this feeling, that very few quarrels end in blows."

"The sons of Han," continued he, "govern their actions by fixed and undeviable principles. Reason teaches them to curb their passions, policy to stifle their revenge. The laws are severe, the government just, the people happy. Foreigners from afar, who are notarised by civilization, presuming on the all cherishing goodness of Heaven, and imagining that the backwardness of Chinese to fight, is the fruit of cowardice, are in the habit, I am told, of provoking disturbances, both on shore and on the river, driving the legitimate owners of the soil out of their way, and sometimes even, attacking them with a degree of ferocity, only to be equalled by the devouring tyger. This conduct has caused the government strictly and jealously to watch their movements; their liberty has been curtailed, and the people have learnt to distrust and hate them."

The old gentleman seemed quite exhausted, and it being now dark we took our leaves, not however till he had made us promise to repeat our visit. Thus, Mr. Editor, terminated our visit to Honam, which we shall probably soon repeat, when, should anything worthy of record occur, you shall have it from,

Your obedient Servant.

Original Poetry.

The spectre seeing hour of twelve, with solemn toll,
A neighbouring clock proclaimed. Vibrations deep Long rent the air, and hard the struggle seemed Between the bygone and the present day.
"T is now imagination triumphs: sober sense,
Yielding submits to fancy's cruel freaks.
"T is now, that conscience, from its tiny nook
Leaps forth, and with gigantic sway
Governs the supple passions. Easy, it is, and kind;
Delightful visions of a happier state now float,
With ariel lightness, o'er the enchanted brain;
Sweet innocence entices sleep; the weary frame,
Grateful we trust, unfearing, to our God.—
How fares it now with him who evil knows?
Do peaceful slumbers free him from himself?
No! with few'rish curses and blaspheming ire,
Madly he rushes on, to hell! distorted phantoms,
Join in a dev'lish dance upon his tortured heart.
Wild shrieks of agony he utters; and insanity
Urges him on to suicide. * * *

CANTON PRESS.

Saturday, 24th March.

We give, in another column, the proceedings of a meeting held at the rooms of the General Chamber of Commerce, of Hingtae's and other Hong's creditors, and British merchants in general. It will be seen that a memorial to Lord Palmerston has been agreed on, and received the signatures of most of the creditors, to ask for interference of the British Government with that of China to obtain a speedier settlement of the Hingtae debts and of those of the other embarrassed Hongs, several of which, though still carrying on business, have for some time past been unable to pay debts contracted years ago. These debts, though amounting, we believe, to a considerable sum in the aggregate, are on the whole, pretty equally divided among the individuals of our foreign community. The correspondence published from time to time in this paper, concerning the affairs of the Hingtae hong, must have convinced every reader that, from the interference of the local government of Canton, little assistance could be expected to satisfy the just claims of the creditors, and that, carrying on this negotiation in the same way, much valuable time must be lost to no purpose. This has already been the case, it being now fully a year since Hingtae's insolvency became known, yet the creditors are as far as ever from an adjustment. We can therefore but applaud the step now taken by them of laying their case before Her Majesty's government, and only regret that this has not been done long before. The question involved in the ultimate payment of debts of the Hongs, is one of vital importance to the foreign trade of China, as long as the present system of the Co-hong is continued, since it's result must be the knowledge how far the Chinese Government will acknowledge its liability for the Co-hong, a liability which in justice it cannot refuse, and which hitherto, by permitting extra duties to be levied on the trade for the payment of debts of insolvent hongs, is, thus, in a manner, acknowledged and acted upon. We confidently expect that the London East India and China Association as well as the Chambers of Commerce of Liverpool, Glasgow, Manchester, Bristol, and Dublin, will assist with their influence the views of the British merchants of Canton, it being the interest of the former as far as their trade to Canton is concerned, as much as of the merchants here, to place it on as safe a footing as circumstances will permit, and this can only be done by ascertaining whether the Chinese government will become liable for the debts of the merchants appointed by them, and that, acknowledging such liability, they will settle such claims within a reasonable time. The letter to the Viceroy stating that the British Government has been applied to, may have a salutary effect, as nothing, we believe, is more dreaded by the Canton authorities than direct reference to Peking, the corruption of the officers here being generally suspected to be such as not to allow of any inspection into their affairs, and fear may prompt the Vice-roy to offer more favorable terms.

We have had no arrival during the week, except the Levant, Amer., from Java, and have therefore no foreign news to communicate.

We are obliged to our correspondent P. S. for the relation of his adventures among the Chinese, and shall feel obliged by his imparting to us, from time to time, the experience he gathers among the black haired race of Han.

We have published, in another column, a paper lately circulated from the Chamber of Commerce, proposing to fix a tariff of Commissions to be charged in Canton where no previous agreement has been made. The rate of Commissions recommended is that which has been in general use here, but it is useful to have such usages registered, as will be the case with list now referred to, as soon as the proposal of the Committee meets with the approval of the members of the Chamber in general.

Theatricals in China. The Chinese, though in vain we seek among them after Grecian elegance or Roman virtue, have yet that in common with our, at least intellectual, ancestors, that, to celebrate any auspicious event, or to deprecate the wrath of the deities, they institute public games, which have now degenerated into what in the Canton jargon is generally called Sing Song. This festivity, which generally occurs in the same district or parish annually at about the same time, seems to be a great favorite with the multitude, and the masses that, to witness them, are packed into a necessarily small space, would, if counted, surpass belief. But not only are these festivals held as regular periods annually in honor of their peculiar and favorite saints or deities, but extraordinary theatrical representations are frequently, the result of private piety or gratitude, i. e. in case of preservation from shipwreck or conflagration; or, but that is more rarely the case, if any individual should wish to evince his gratitude for an uninterrupted flow of prosperity to the powers above.

It is well known that thousands of floating companies of actors are to be found in every part of China to obey the frequent calls that are made upon their talents; these companies, at least in this part of the country, live in boats, and their "properties" are contained in a few chests, which when about to perform, they transfer to the temporary bamboo stage erected for them. The stage is screened by a thatched roof from the rain or the rays of the sun, and the same is generally the case with the galleries that might be dignified by the name of boxes, which run in a parallel line from each extreme side of the stage. The space between these, as well as the back ground is left open to the people, who have free entrance, and as may be supposed, that occupied by them, is the fullest part of the "house."

The galleries are generally occupied by that part of the community, whose command of cash certifies their superior respectability. The greatest good humour generally prevails throughout the close-packed audience, except when envy, or a feeling akin to it, prompts the occupiers of the pit to pelt the spectators on the stage, who often crowd it to the manifest inconvenience of the actors, with any thing that chances to come to hand; this always effects the desired discomfiture of the stage in a very few minutes, nor is ever an angry word heard from the pelters, who relinquish their favorable stations without a struggle, but generally manage, a short time after, to reinstate themselves. As to machinery, the Chinese are dreadfully deficient; they have in fact no scenery. Is a party to be held before a beleaguered city, a flimsy cloth partition is held up between two chairs to represent the gates of the town; if an army is required to embark, two or three fellows hold bamboos in a straight line about shoulders' height, and one or about to embark lay hold by them, to show that they are walking over the plank that leads to their ship; if to shew that they depart on horse back, the actors carry a horse-whip in their hand, the grooms goes through the semblance of holding the horse, it's master lifts his leg as if getting into the stirrup, and leaping half round, is supposed to adjust himself in the saddle; then, applying two or three smart cuts to the air behind him, he gallops off on his two legs. But what has always appeared to us the most ridiculous, as well as the hardest condition upon the actors, is that, after being slain, and hundreds always fall during a nights entertainment, and after even their heads have been cut off, and carried about in triumph by the victor, they are obliged to walk off from their dead trance, and run off the stage, no other more decent conveyance being provided them, than their own legs.

COMMERCIAL REMARKS.

IMPORTS.

COTTON MANUFACTURES.—The demand for fine bleached LONGCLOTHS, continues good at an advance of nearly 10 cents per Piece. The Grey are however dull of sale, except for the fine kinds—the importation of American Domestics having lately been very large. CHINTZES, of suitable and new patterns and proper dimensions, are in good demand, the supply being very short. HANDKERCHIEFS are low, and very dull of sale. COTTON YARN, good yarn of the higher numbers, 28 @ 40, and as high as 44, goes off more readily and some has been sold at $ 43 @ 44 per Pecul, the supply being short. The low numbers are not so much in demand, it appears; inferior yarn is almost unsaleable, and stock very heavy.

WOOLLENS.—The market continues very depressed for SPANISH STRIPES, without any appearance of speculation. LONGELLS; from 6 @ 7000 pieces were, we believe, disposed of last week at high prices which have since receded, and the market is very inactive. Resales have been made of some at a loss on 30 @ 40 cents per piece; as, however, the quantity on hand is so very short they are expected again to rally. CAMLETS. English Camlets remain very low, and, we understand, not more than $ 34, duty paid, have been offered for a parcel of good quality and colors. Dutch have been more enquired for, and at about the same rate, one of the principal holders wishing, we understand, to support the market.

METALS.—LEAD, is dull of sale at our quotation of 6¼ @ 6½. IRON, is of ready sale, particularly the small Rod and Hoop, of which the importation has been small. QUICKSILVER, nominal, there being little or none in the market.

RICE.—Although there has been little or no rain, this article does not advance, as was expected, but it is quoted 5 @ 10 cents higher, and cannot well decline during the next two or three months when the new crop comes in.

SANDALWOOD. has declined $ 1 @ 2 per pecul.

STRAITS PRODUCE.—PEPPER, is very dull and declining, and our quotation could hardly be obtained. BETELNUT, from being monopolized, and the stock not heavy, has been raised to $ 3½ @ 4. RATTANS are in fair demand. TIN without much alteration as to demand or price.

COTTON.—Several considerable sales of Bombay Cotton were made in the early part of the week, and with the exception of about 4000 bales Bombay, none of any description remains in the importer's hands, and the Chinese brokers and dealers are holding out for higher prices, and there has in consequence been little doing within these few days—but as the stock of all sorts is so very short, if there are no arrivals, there is little doubt but the advance will be supported. The lower qualities have risen with the finer.

OPIUM.—We have little to add to our last week's report. The arrangement that was expected for the smuggling boats to recommence, is quite broken off, and the only deliveries of any consequence are by the foreign passage boats at Whampoa to the mandarin boats, we understand, principally, and they are going on very briskly; the greater part Malwa. Old Patna has been a little more enquired for at Macao. There is little or no demand for the new Bengal drug, and Turkey is very difficult of sale by a chests or two at a time at very low rates. The reports of the tenor of the Emperor's answer to the Vice-roy are any thing but favorable to any relaxation of the restrictive measures. The Lintin deliveries to the 22d are Patna, old, 369; new, 34; Benares, old, 158; new, 10; Malwa, 652; Total, 1223 Chests.

EXPORTS.

RAW SILK.—Nearly 4000 bales have been shipped off, and the market is almost entirely cleared of it. About 1000 bales more are expected in a few weeks and it is not improbable that the high prices may induce a little more being brought down. Quantity shipped inclusive of the last despatch per Walmer Castle, 2602 Piculs.

SILK MANUFACTURES.—There is more briskness in these, and the shipments to the United States are considerable.

TEA.—Very little has been doing during the week, the prices asked for the old Congous being too high to induce parties to buy under the present scarcity of tonnage, and there being moreover not much tea remaining excepting old Congous and low Souchongs. The few English vessels remaining are engaged, and we hear that the Dorothea is to load for foreign Europe. The quantities of teas shipped during this season, including the last despatch per Walmer Castle are; Congou, 148,527; Caper, [illegible]; Souchong, 6716; Campoi, 217; Ankoi, 297; Hungmuey, 1929; Pekoe, 3367; Orange Pekoe, 2123; Total of black teas, 167,463 Piculs. Hyson, 6335; Young Hyson, 5064; Hyson Skin, 1043; Twankay, 26,684; Gunpowder, 1,880; Imperial, 1,192; Total of Green teas, 42,208 Piculs. Grand Total, 27,956,133 lbs. according to a statement from the Chamber of Commerce.

EXCHANGE.—Bank Un. States bills have been negotiated during the week at 4s 3d @ 4s 3½d Private bills, @ 4s 4d @ 4s 5d.

FREIGHTS.—Tonnage is very scarce, and as high, we hear, as £ 10.10. has been given to Liverpool, but the quantity required is limited, and one or two arrivals would reduce the rates considerably.

Kweitszes Petition.

An original translation from the Chinese.

"My death" said she "was fixed by the fates to happen at this time;
Our separation, my lord, too surely alas! draws nigh."
Le Ke who was now convinced that her complaint was fatal,
The tears rushing down his cheeks, thus addressed her.

"How sincerely, my love, do I pity your sufferings!
Skilful pysicians shall be quickly summoned.
You must not, my dear, talk of leaving me,
For why are you thus early to be snatched from life?

Convulsive sobs here choked his utterance,
The fury of his wife's disease now rapidly encreased.
Addressing Le Ke, she said. "Our peaceful life,
My lord, death will too soon interrupt."

"Our Children are yet of very tender years.
Alas! Alas! my heart is ill at ease respecting them.
I shall die, indeed, unhappy, without your promise.
After my decease, to seek another wife."

"She will both manage your household concerns,
And bring our children up, in the way they should go.
My mind will be at ease and happy shall I die;
My heart will sleep reproachless in the grave.

"A man and wife are like two birds perched upon a tree:
When the sportsman cometh each wings a separate flight.
Let your affections centre in your children;
For your wife will not tend them as if they were his own."

"When I am dead think on my parting words."
Kweitsze weeping bitterly thus addressed her mother:
"Oh mother, mother, why are you going to leave me?
I would sooner tear myself to pieces than see you thus."

Chin heaved a deep sigh and kissed her daughter:
"My little dear, you must take great care of your brother
And guide his steps till he reaches manhood.
Deep are the cares of Parents as the bottomless sea.

The ancients say "nor gold nor silver can bribe death."
The King of Hades will not release his victim"
As she said this the death rattle was heard in her throat.
And her lingering spirit fled away to Hades!

THE TEN THOUSAND RESPONDENT MID-DAY TEA.

LOO SEECHANG.

Solely to cure inward complaints, (resulting from) eating, drinking, or secretions, and outer distempers, such as chills and perspirations, leading to alternate cold and hot fits, headache, aching of the bones, dysentery, vomiting and purging, stoppages in the breast, swellings of the belly, dryness of the mouth, bitterness of the tongue, belly ache, wine damps (effect of hard drinking) taking away the appetite, the body lazy and fatigued, a loathing for meat and drink, all kinds of hill fogs, unwholesome vapours, infectious plagues, fever and ague, bloody flux, disagreeing with the climate, and all manner of like diseases, no matter whether it be male or female, old or young, all partake of the good effects of this Tea, in a way as if divine!

Every time it is taken, the dose should consist of one or two pieces, boiled in pure water, and when taken moderately cool, the patient will immediately feel better. If the cold chills are too great, and the nose distils clear snot, or if you have a feverishness that won't stop, then add two slices of raw ginger, and two heads of raw onions, boil them all together, take the dose hot, cover yourself with your bed-clothes, and when you get a perspiration, you will immediately perceive the good effects of it.

The quantities and taste of this Tea are most even and harmonious, being neither cold nor hot. Whether you remain at home, or go out of doors, it would be proper to carry some about your person, and this being so convenient, is the best plan of all.

In the summer time, boiling this and using it instead of Tea, heat will be dispelled, thirst assuaged, an appetite created, and food admitted.

All noble patrons will please take note, that the shop is opened in the provincial City of Canton, the street of the thirteen hongs (foreign factories) western district, and, as a memento, the signboard is Chinese Extracts.

(From the Indo Chinese Gleaner.)

THE HAPPINESS OF BEING BORN IN CHINA.—"I felicitate myself, that I was born in China," said Teen-ke-shin,—"I constantly think, what if I had been born beyond the seas, in some remote part of the earth, where the cold freezes, or the heat scorches; where the people are clothed with the leaves of plants, eat wood, dwell in the wilderness, lie in holes of the earth; are, far removed from the converting maxims of the ancient sages, and are ignorant of the domestic relations. Though born into this world, I should not have been different from a beast.

"But now happily I have been born in China! I have a house to live in; have drink and food, and elegant furniture. I have clothing and cups, and infinite blessings. Truly the highest felicity is mine!"

6. THE LAST WILL AND TESTAMENT OF THE LATE EMPEROR KEA-KING, said to have been given on September 2, 1820, the day on which he died.—"The great Heaven hath constantly preserved and revolving nature the dominion of the world; hereby announces his will to the empire.

"When I, the Emperor, gratefully received from his late Majesty (Keen-lung, that high, honorable, and pure sovereign,) the Imperial signet, and succeeded to the throne, I continued to receive his personal instruction, in the affairs of government, three years afterwards.

"I have considered that the foundation of a country, and the great principles of social order, consist in venerating heaven: instituting ancestors; being assiduous, in government; and loving the common people.

"Since I entered on my office, I have exercised the strictest caution, and have felt a solemn awe, whilst I daily meditated on the important duties incumbent on me. I have remembered that heaven raises up princes for the sake of the people; and that the duty of feeding the people, and teaching them, is laid upon the one man

"When I first conducted the affairs of government, the rebellious banditti in the provinces Sze-chuen, Shense and Hoo-kwang, were not yet reduced to a state of tranquility; and I had to instruct and to stimulate the great officers, and the grand army; to put them in order, and to direct them for the space of four years; by which efforts the banditti were successively destroyed and subsequently, the terraqueous world enjoyed tranquillity and repose; every hamlet found delight in its proper occupation; whilst I protected, as in my bosom, and heartily regarded the poor people; and thus they and I were blessed with repose and rest.

"But in the eighteenth year of my reign abandoned people again created disturbance, and rushed inside the sacred gate of the palace; the rebels connected themselves with the Taou and Hwa districts, and spread themselves over three provinces. However, happily, by a reliance on high heaven's assistance, the leaders were destroyed, and the remnant exterminated; and in less than two months tranquillity was again restored.

"I have always considered that heterodox opinions are pernicious to the people, and have often issued orders and instructions on this subjects, to render government respected, and to correct men's hearts. I settled order, and enjoined by authority, fundamental principles—the conduct which kind society together—hoping to make the administration of government pure, and the public manners substantially good: these cares I have never for a day dismissed from my breast,

"The Yellow River has, from ancient times till now, been China's grief. Whenever at YUN-TE and KWAN-HEA, the mouth of the river has been, by sand-banks, impeded, it has higher up the stream, created alarm, by overflowing the country; on such occasions I have not spared the Imperial purse to embank the river, and restore the waters to their former channel. Since a former repair of the river was reported to me, six or seven years of tranquility had elapsed; when last year, in the autumn, from the excessive rains, there was an unusual rise of the water, and in Ho-nan province, the river burst the banks at several places, both on the south and north sides, and the stream, Woo CHE, flowing transversely, forced a passage to the sea: the injury done was immense. During the spring of this year, just as those who considered the repair of the banks had reported that the work was finished, the southern banks at E-FUNG, again gave away. Orders have been given to commence the repairs after autumn; and money has been issued for the work, which, it is calculated, may be completed during the winter.

"I have paid particular attention to the lives of my people, and have been anxious to prevent a single individual's being destitute. When excessive rains or drought occurred in any part of the empire, I have remitted the land-tax; and I have conferred grain. As soon as distress was reported, immediate relief was given.

"Last year, on the sixtieth anniversary of my birth, when the public servants and people were presenting their congratulations, I thought what benefit I should confer, and finally proclaimed a remission of all debts for land-tax, to the amount of upwards of twenty millions, with a wish that every family and every individual should enjoy abundance; and all ranks ascend together the heights of general joy.

"This year, during the spring and summer, and onward to autumn, the rains were seasonable, and from every province plenty was announced to me, which afforded real pleasure to my heart.

"In the middle of autumn, I, with a feeling of reverential obedience to the instructions of my ancestors, was proceeding to MUH-LAN, on a hunting excursion; and to avoid the heat stopped at the mountain cottage. I have hitherto enjoyed constant health; and although advanced beyond the sixth decade of my life, I could ascend or descend a hill, or could visit the rivers or the plains without a feeling of weariness. On this occasion, in the course of my journey, the intense heat of the atmosphere affected me, and yesterday, having whipped my horse across the mountain of WIDE BENEVOLENCE, (KWANG-JIN) when I came to the hill cottage, I felt the phlegm rise to suffocation, and apprehended I should not recover. But, in obedience to the law of the departed sages of my family, I had already, in the fourth year of my reign, in the fourth month, on the tenth day, at five o'clock in the morning, previously appointed an heir to the throne, which appointment I myself sealed, and locked it up in a secret box.

"When the rebels, in the eighteenth year, attempted to climb over the palace walls, the Imperial heir, with his own hand, fired, and shot two of them which caused the rest to fall with terror to the ground, and the sacred abode was in consequence preserved in quiet. The merit of this conduct was very great; and as the purpose of making him heir was not to become apparent, I then created him, to be styled "THE WISE," thereby rewarding his singular services.

"The present disease will end my life. The "divine utensil" the throne, is supremely important; and it becomes proper to transfer it to another: I therefore command all the Ministers of the Imperial presence—all the statesmen of the Military Board—all the great officers of the Imperial households, in an assembled body, to open the secret deposit. The Imperial heir is benevolent, dutiful, wise, and valorous, and will be able to sustain the trust committed to him—let him ascend the Imperial throne and succeed to the universal rule!

"The duty of a sovereign prince consists in knowing men's characters, and giving repose to the people. I have long discussed clearly this subject; but to carry these duties into effect is truly difficult. Let them be duly considered—let them be strenously maintained—attach yourself (O! my son) to the good and virtuous—love and feed the black-haired people: and preserve our kindly dominion, over the great patrimony, to myriads of ages.

"The LE-KE classic says, that dutiful sons perpetuate well the designs of their fathers, and illustrate well the affairs of their ancestors—may your strenuous efforts never be intermitted.

"I have arrived at the high honor of being the son of heaven—my years have extended beyond a sexagenary cycle—the happiness I have attained may be denominated great.—I hope my successor will be able to continue my purposes, and will cause the world to enjoy the felicity of general tranquility—and thus my wishes will be gratified.

"When I received the Imperial seal, I had two elder brothers and one younger brother, who at the same time received royal titles. In the spring of this year, the royal brother KING-YAW first departed this life; and only the royal brothers E TSIH and CHING-TSIV remain; these, for offences, were deprived of their emoluments, which punishment is hereby entirely remitted.

"The SHOO-KING relates, that the ancient Emperor, Yu, closed his career on a hunting excursion—my fate has therefore been that of others—and further, this place LWANG-YANG, is one which, according to rule, must be annually blessed by the Imperial presence; and my predecessor, his late Majesty, was born here—why should I be indignant (at dying here?)

"Let the state mourning be agreeable to former usage—and be put off after twenty-seven days. Announce this to the empire, and cause every one to hear it."

The Hong-merchants.

There are two reasons why opulent and respectable men will not come forward and voluntarily undertake the duty of Mandarin hong merchants. First, because the hong merchants are often subjected to insult, extortion, and vexatious at the hoppo's office, by the kingching secretary, the attendants, the clerks, &c. to a degree that it is difficult for the human feelings to bear. Therefore, people are unwilling to become hong merchants. A rich merchant's son has been heard to say,

"Ning wei yih chih low
Puh wei yang shang che show."
I had father be a dog
Than a head hong merchant.

Secondly, according to the old resolutions, when once a man entered the hong, he became a prisoner for life. Although by the toil and labour of many years he had attained affluence, was now old and his strength declining, and owed no one anything, he was not allowed to retire and return home. A hong merchant has said, "I would willingly give eight-tenths of my property to Government if they would allow me to retire, go home, and enjoy the remaining two tenths." This being the case, how can an invitation succeed in bringing any to purchase the hateful responsibility of a hong merchant? —Address from the select commitie to the Vice-Roy, 5th October, 1829.

The merchants with whom we have been allowed to trade have become bankrupts, and owe to foreigners a large sum of money. We demand to have this paid, and to take away our property now in Canton, that we have bought and sold for. When one person owes another money, they are no longer on a footing of equality; mutual intercourse as before is at an end, until the debt is paid. In this situation are foreigners placed with your Excellency's Government, which stands pledged for the liquidation of these debts, and must fulfil its promise. When this is done, and grievances redressed in the manner, we have pointed out, it will be time enough to consider if the legal trade, now almost at an end, can be restored. Foreigners who come to this distant country to sell their goods, and return to their homes with the productions of China (a trade advantageous to both parties) desire, and have a right to expect from any nation, not in a savage state, to meet with justice in their dealings, and to receive the rights of hospitality. In a word, to be treated on a footing of equality with the natives of this country, and not as dogs or barbarians, for whom no consideration is due. We are the subjects of a king as powerful as the Emperor of China—of a king who has vast fleets and armies at his disposal—of a king who loves peace, and wishes to be, as heretofore, in amity with the august Emperor of China, but who, nevertheless, would not see his subjects wronged without seeking to gain redress.—Same, 23d November.

Again, in case of hong merchants being indebted to foreign merchants of various nations, the laws are exceedingly severe. When native merchants and traders incur reciprocally debts in trade and apply to Government, all that is done is to inquire closely into the facts and urge payment. There is no law to take the debtor and punish him. But hong merchants becoming indebted to foreign merchants, so that they stop business and impede the revenue, are subject not only to have their estates seized, but they are also punished severely by transportation.

In all the cases in which hongs have failed, they have never escaped without severe punishment; by which may be seen the favour and compassion shown by the Celestial Empire to foreigners, that it is in a double degree and perfectly complete. How is it that the said chief and others have not knowledge enough to look up and admire this idea? As to what is requested in the document received, that hereafter if any hong merchant disregard the great principle of justice on application being made to government, prosecution must be instituted, &c. Hereafter if any hong merchant commits a fraud, the moment it is pointed out, I, the governor, will assuredly manage the affair according to strict justice; there is no occasion for over anxiety.—Vice-roy's proclamation, 14th December.

Consoo charge, for Hong use, out of the hong.

This charge, more generally known under the name of the consoo fund, was originally established by Pouhequa, about forty years ago. The avowed object of it was to provide a fund to meet the deficiencies in co-hong for debts of bankrupt Hong-merchants and exactions of the government. Pouhequa being at that period supreme and without a rival in the direction of the co-hong, undertook the entire control and management of the consoo fund; and this accounts for the otherwise somewhat curious circumstance, of swollens, callows, and inn being exempted from this charge. These were the articles to which Pouhequa's trade was principally confined, and he had power and influence enough to exempt them from contributing to the fund. On all other principal articles (of which a correct list is subjoined), an ad valorem charge of three per cent., increased in cases of emergency to four, five, and even six per cent., on a fixed price which never varies, is levied. The consoo charge, were it accurately paid, must amount to an enormous sum annually. It is said, however, that this is not the case, but that at the close of the year each merchant is called upon to contribute a portion of the sum for which he is indebted, to meet the exigencies of the co-hong. The tax of three per cent., or upwards, remains, nevertheless, equally a burden on the foreign trade, as, in fixing price, the full amount of the charge for consoo fund is always calculated; and the only difference is, that the merchant would probably style the sum arrears of consoo fund remaining in his hands, instead of direct profit. It is, however, difficult to come at any correct conclusions respecting the mode of levying and appropriating this fund. It is an object of mystery even to those who contribute towards it, none of whom, excepting two or three of the senders, are allowed access to its records. A fund under such a system of management is peculiarly liable to misappropriation; but it is improbable that any remedy will be found for the evil, so long as a co-hong like the present continues.

Notwithstanding the above remarks, there is reason to suppose that the profits derived from the consoo fund are not large; the co-hong having to expend a considerable sum annually in presents and contributions to the revenue. The following, we are informed are the principal items of annual contribution, in round numbers.

Tribute to the emperor	Taels	50,000
For repairs on the Yellow river,	"	30,000
Expenses of an agent at Peking	"	21,000
Birth-day presents to the emperor	"	130,000
Similar presents to the hoppo	"	20,000
Presents to the hoppo's mother or wife	"	20,000
Annual presents to various officers	"	4,0000
Expenditure for compulsory purchase of native ginseng	"	140,000
	Taels	450,000

Some of these charges are not paid by the co-hong, but by individual merchants from their accounts of the consoo fund,—they are also liable to other calls for various objects. In 1832, they subscribed for the purpose of quelling the Leeschow insurrection, about 100,000 taels;—and last year for the relief of the sufferers from the inundation, they paid a compulsory subscription to the amount of 120,000 taels. These things are not, however, mentioned in their defence, as they can have no right to yield to every imposition, in confidence of, being able easily to repay themselves by a tax on the foreign trade.—American Chinese Commercial Guide.

Have you heard that the losses sustained by some individuals during the great fire at Canton were made good by Chinese;—Yes; I have heard so. I do not call to mind having heard from what source that was; at the same time, I can have no doubt from whence the indemnification came. It was from the consoo fund, which fund is formed by a direct tax on the foreign trade; it is a very secret fund; but I have reason to think it is levied more often upon the imports than the exports, consequently the Americans, who brought a large portion of dollars in my time, did not pay their quota to it. There is another peculiarity about the consoo fund, which is, that when once any article is made tributary to it, which will happen to the origin for a particular purpose, it does not follow that when that particular purpose shall be answered, the tax on such article shall be released, consequently it is the most anti-commercial, oppressive, and infamous tax imaginable.

By whom is this tax imposed; by the Hong merchants, or by the Viceroy at Canton?—No doubt by the advice, and certainly with the connivance, of the Hong merchants. I have often discussed it with them, when they perfectly acknowledged the justness of my animadversions upon it. It is the same description of abuse which prevails in other countries if submitted to; and I think there is a good deal of analogy between that and what is so tually taking place at this moment in this country; I allude to the fact of Mr. Pitt, and other ministers of the day, having formerly raised the salaries of all public functionaries on the plea of the great dearness of provisions and other necessaries of life; and now we see how difficult it is to obtain a reduction, although it be quite notorious that £1,000, well husbanded, will go almost as far as £1,500 did formerly in the maintenance of a large family.—Evidence of Mr. W. S. Davidson before the house of Commons. Q. 3054-55.

Damascus.

"I joined in the throng that was passing through the principal gate, and, as I was still in the European dress, attracted an uncomfortable degree of notice.

"I was bewildered with the variety of figures in the crowd; a line of women, enveloped in white sheets, filed slowly towards the burial-ground, where they usually take up their positions as if they were on their return to their graves; their faces hidden with dark-coloured handkerchiefs, or so shrouded within the folds of their linen coverings, that not a feature was to be seen. They seemed all of the same dimensions, and moved with the same gait; their feet, in yellow boots, just appeared below the white drapery, and gave them the air, as they waddled along, of gigantic ducks. Mountebanks and musicians threw themselves in the way; the former mumbling and grimacing before every fresh party that came from the gate, and the latter shrieking and drumming in their ears till they received a few 'paras' for their pains. A perpetual chinking of brass cups announced where cool water was to be bought; and bread and fruit was cried for sale in the name of the prophet, so loud that it was heard above all the other noises. Richly-dressed Turks, upon horses burthened with their finery, pranced along the road, their attendants carrying djerids beside them; while more sober figures, upon white asses or mules, moved deliberately on with their amber-mouthed pipes at their lips. The season is mild, the colours of the men's dresses are various and gay,—pink, white, and sky-blue flaunting in the wind as they gallop. * *

"I rambled all the afternoon among these singular scenes, giving nearly as much amusement to those who had never seen a Frank dress before, as I received from all that was new to me. It is only six months since an European has been able with safety to appear in his own costume, and very few have yet been here to display it. I am to many, therefore a most singular exhibition. I appear so mean a figure in comparison with those of the flowing robes about me, that I am miserably out of conceit of my wardrobe, and have no accession to be flattered with the notice I have attracted. The Turkish women muster 'God is merciful' as I pass them, and seem to call for protection from my ill omened aspect; the Christian women laugh aloud, and chatter with their sweet voices comments far from favourable to my appearance. As I walked in front of a group of these merry dames, I threw my handkerchief from my coat pocket, and naturally enough applied it to wipe the dust off my eyes. I was assailed by such a shout of laughter, that I thought I had committed some frightful indiscretion. I stood in great perplexity, with my handkerchief in my hand, evidently an object of interest, for many women came shuffling from a distance to see the show. This was at length ended by my returning the cause of all the amusement to its place; upon, forgetting their propriety, they clapped their hands, and laughed with double enjoyment.

"It is not a difficult matter to become the wonder of a city; and as yet unconscious of the way in which I had merited to be one, I followed the crowd, as the evening approached, towards the convent. When we had entered the gate, a little boy, struck by the singular shape of a round hat which I wore, clapped his hands and called out, 'Abu-tanjier!' 'Abu-tanjier! 'the father of a cooking-pot!' This was echoed from every side; for the resemblance a hat bears to the common cooking vessel with a rim to it, is too strong to escape, and I was pursued by the shouts of the people till I was nearly out of sight.

"A woman, who had herds the uproar, came to her door, and, as I had outwalked the crowd, she could not resist the chance of gratifying her curiosity, and begged me to show her my hat. I took it off with great gravity, and put it in her hands; I believe she was disappointed to find that it was not a cook-pot in reality; I resumed it from her in time to save it, or it might have been lodged in one of the colleges, as a perpetual puzzle to the learned of the city."—Major Sloane's overland Journey to India.

MEMORIAL TO LORD PALMERSTON.

Captain Elliot in reply.

Sir,—I have the honor to acknowledge your letter of the 24th instant with its enclosures: They shall be transmitted to the Right Honorable the Secretary of state for Foreign affairs in the course of a few days; one copy by the way of Egypt.

I feel warranted in assuring the Memorialists that the urgent importance of their appeal to His Lordship will command His immediate attention.

Independently of the large amount of British Capital actually at stake, (serionaly impressive as that reflexion undoubtedly is) there is a more extensive consideration leading to general conclusions, which will probably occasion Her Majesty's Government far more anxiety upon the whole subject.

It is to be found in the unavoidable inference that the altered manner in which this great trade is conducted upon our side, must render these grave embarrassments more frequent of occurrence than they have even yet been, till some suitable modification has been made upon the part of the Chinese Government. Neither does it seem to be doubtful, that, failing such needful adaptation of system, the difficulties of adjustment will be enhanced at each succeeding crisis; and that the growing general complication of the Hong-merchants affairs, and the utter destruction of confidence in their stability will inflict at no distant date, excessive injury on commercial and financial interests of great moment.

Mindful of the position of British creditors upon the Hong-merchants, I will not proceed to the length of formally calling upon them to decline to accede to any period either yet offered, or likely to be offered, for the complete liquidation of their present claims. But at this earliest conjuncture that the subject has been officially drawn under my notice, I feel it my duty as the Superintendent of the British Trade with this Empire, to record my opinion, that the determination of a just period had better be left open for arrangements between the two Governments.

I shall beg leave to express my own conviction that the Creditors would be taking a sound course both as respects their own, and the permanent interests of the Trade, in steadily declining to have any further concern with these matters, than to receive the whole or such instalments of their claims upon the Chinese Government as the Provincial authorities may think fit to pay.

This view is founded upon the best consideration which it has been in my power to give to the correspondence on the Hing-tae Bankruptcy, and upon the posture into which circumstances have now fallen upon that subject.

I have the honor to remain,
Sir,
Your most Obedient Humble Servt,
(Signed) CHARLES ELLIOT.
Chief Superintendent.

CORRESPONDENCE.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE CANTON PRESS."

Sir,—The thanks of our community are justly due to the gentlemen, who have been laboring of late to throw light on the present condition and liabilities, as well as on the past history and future prospects of the Hong-merchants.

I make my sincere acknowledgments for the information thus afforded me, on a subject in which I have a deep interest. At the same time, I own that, in looking over their contributions, several points have appeared to me not to be treated with sufficient clearness, particularly, for the satisfaction of readers at a distance.

Will you therefore permit me to ask a fuller explanation on the following points—all involved in the general question.

1st. Is it expected that the settlement of the claims on the Hing-tae Hong, when completed, will or will not include the $ 477,329 lopped off by the Committee of Examination?

2d. Did the Examining Committee discover any dealings in prohibited articles, or sums loaned on interest, or whence did the necessity arise for such reduction? Or did the Committee find that a considerable propor ion of the claims are represented by individuals, now lying under sentence of expulsion from China, and that the Vice-roy was really disposed to "mix up" the opium question with that of the hong-settlement, so as to injure the claims exhibited?

3d. Did the Committee find that there were any laws existing, forbidding loans to Hong-merchants, or prescribing the amounts beyond which they shall not be trusted by foreigners except at their own risk, or defining a period after which outstanding balances against them shall be reported to the local government on pain of forfeiture?

4th. Did any regulations on these or like points come in to affect the admission of some claims and the rejection of others?

5th. What proportions of the $ 2,261,430 are due to British claimants, and to men of other nations, and what ratios do these bear to their respective national imports and exports?

6th. Is it proposed that the claims be distinguished nationally, and a sum equivalent to the claims of each state be levied on its trade, or that the gross sum be collected indiscriminately?

7th. Is it expected that that the levy will be made on imports and exports, or—as would appear to have been the case in 1779—on exports solely?

8th. In this last case, how would the ends of private and public justice be secured, in the collection and distribution, for instance 1st: If an individual claiming 100,000 tales under a 5 years settlement, ship on his own account, for the same period, 20,000 picul of teas per annum, and pay the extra duty thereon of 1 tale per picul, how much of his loss will he probably regain, it being well understood that new taxes fall temporarily on the immediate holders of and dealers in, the taxed article, but ultimately on the consumer, and the open market being his only place and mode of recovery? 2nd: What is his exact position as an agent when instrumental in procuring the imposition of a new tax, leviable, for instance, on orders for teas in hand, and applicable to the satisfaction of debts due on prior sales of goods for account of other constituents? 3rd: In a public or national sense, if a state to whose citizens 200,000 tales are owing, actually pay on its trade the new levy to the amount of 400,000, is this equivalent or not, to taxing the citizens of one country for the benefit of another? The present ground of complaint and petition being that the claims on Hingtae "constitute a transfer of capital" from the foreigner to the Chinese, how can the object, a rightful recovery and restoration, be best secured, by a national, or an indiscriminate and equally unjust, collection, so as to guard against a second "transfer of capital."

9th. Have the national representatives of the claimants on the Hingtae and other Hongs, already adjusted these points, particularly the ratios of the debt, and taxation, so as to satisfy the just and probable expectations of the governments and now attentive public of these respective countries?

10th. Are the foreign residents prepared to make up, at the close of the present season, through a confidential committee of the Chamber of Commerce, a full statement of all balances due to and from the Hong-merchants, renewable annually or semi-annually, so that their whole position or liabilities may be mutually understood, in order to the application of some regular and effectual check to their further involvement?

Perhaps explanations have already been afforded on some of these points, which I have not, from inattention, met with, and there may be many others equally worthy of and requiring elucidation. A simple and distinct resumen of what has been proved and determined on, as well as of what can be shewn, of the whole case, would lay me, and others doubtless, under great obligations.

Very truly,
C. C. C.

CANTON PRESS.

Saturday, 31st March.

The Consoo fund. We have, in another column, given such extracts relating to this subject, as we find bearing upon it in the evidence given on Chinese affairs before a Committee of the House of Commons in 1830. It is somewhat singular that a fund which ought to be of such paramount importance to the foreign trade should have attracted so little attention, that even in the evidence alluded to, it is only incidentally mentioned, and then by witnesses, allowed to have possessed a thorough knowledge of the trade of China, as if its existence were only known to them by hearsay, and that all circumstances about it were so secret that little better than nothing was known about it. Under these circumstances, the conclusion that the fund has in reality no existence, or that at least its application is not for the discharge of debts of insolvent hongs is the most naturally arrived at, and is in fact borne out by the statement we have recopied from Mr. J. R. Morrison's Chinese Commercial Guide, from which it appears that a duty, under the name of Consoo-fund, is levied among the Hong-merchants on the amount of their respective annual trade, to supply the ordinary and extraordinary presents to, and extortions of, their own Government, though, at the same time, whenever insolvent hong-debts are to be discharged by the Co-hong, the contributions towards their payment are levied in the same manner, by raising it's rate. The first mention we find made of a Consoo-fund is from the year 1781, when the Chinese became unable to pay large debts contracted with British merchants, and the Indian Government then interfered by sending Capt. Panton in the Sea-horse man of war to demand payment for claims amounting to upwards of 4 millions of dollars, and the result was a partial payment of the debts, which, as will be seen from the following extract from the Consultations of the Company's managing Committee, was chiefly owing to this interference

"In allusion to the settlement of the debts, we find the following remark, which is worthy of attention.* "It seems to be an established maxim amongst the mandarines at this place, to discourage as much as possible, all applications to the Emperor, both as they may prove dangerous to their persons and derogatory to their consequence; except in circumstances that cannot be concealed, as in the case of captain Panton, without whose interference, we are well assured, no representation from the creditors or any other body of men, could ever have reached the court. Much less can we expect the assistance of the Hoppo, through whom it must necessarily pass in the first instance."

This payment was made by levying a duty upon the export of tea and raw silk, in the same way as is now projected by the Hong-merchants. Subsequent debts were at different periods paid in a similar manner, on both imports and exports in one instance within the year, and in others by annual instalments of 10, 12 or 15 per cent of the Capital, no interest being allowed.

The present debts of the Hing-tae Hong the Security merchants have offered to liquidate in 9 years, to which the creditors very justly object, as affording them for that time merely the customary interest for the capital, which, after its expiration, would be totally lost, and we cannot but approve their endeavours to obtain the most favorable terms, which, we hope, their late memorial to Her Majesty's Government will assist them in enforcing, it having been seen that it's interference on a former occasion had a most salutary effect.

We have been accused, with what reason we are at a loss to detect, with having deserted principles so often avowed, in now soliciting the interference of the British Government, for the recovery of debts owing by the Hong-merchants, and with adopting principles formerly held forth in a memorial to the British Government, to many parts of which we have objected and still object. The protection of the British Government seems to us to be much more legitimately afforded to their subjects, for the recovery of property actually their own, and detained by the Chinese as now solicited, than, for the attainment, as was done in the former petition, of privileges, never before possessed by the British trading to China, to threaten the Chinese with a naval armament, or even to go so far, as recommended by the Glasgow Chamber of Commerce and the East India and China Association of London, to ask the Emperor of China politely, but backed by the same naval force to be so good as to give up, for the convenience of our trade, one of the Islands belonging to the Emperor on the coasts of his country. If Louis Philippe were to prefer the modest request of the Isle of Wight to be given up to his jurisdiction, we fancy that the Queen's Government would treat such pretension with becoming ridicule. Yet British merchants have gravely speculated on the possibility of a similar concession, nor have they, as far as we can find, ever contemplated what return was to be made by them for such a gift. It will therefore be seen that the object of the application now made to Her Majesty's Government is much more rational, nor does it necessarily follow that such intervention can only be successful through threats. The reason why we chiefly consider an interference of the Government in this case as just and necessary is, that repeated applications to the local authorities having during the period of a year, produced no satisfactory result, other means to bring about a settlement must be tried, and those means can only be found with the British Government, since, not only are we denied redress in the courts of law of the country, but the debts contracted by the Hong-merchants differ very materially, from those of mere private individuals. The Hong-merchants are appointed by the Government to transact exclusively all foreign trade, we must, whether we consider them trustworthy or not, by the order of the Government under which we live, confide our property to them, on an understanding that this body of merchants is mutually liable for each other. We accordingly put them in possession of our cargoes, and must do so without having any means of obtaining security for them beforehand, knowing them to be involved in debts far surpassing their means forced to do so by the orders of the Chinese Government, which thereby contracts a liability for debts which the Co-hong may be either unable or unwilling to pay, and as far as Hingtaes debts are concerned, we have the unequivocal assurance of the Governor, "that they shall be paid to the uttermost mite" which assurance seems to convey an acknowledgment of the ultimate liability of the Government.

It would be giving a very bad precedent indeed, were the Creditors of Hing-tae to accede to the offers of the Co-hong to pay in 9 years, particularly under the circumstances in which many of the hongs find themselves at this time, and the easy terms obtained in this instance would challenge immediate imitation. We have seen, in the case of Hing-tae, a young man, ignorant of the business he was about to undertake, and probably deficient in the monied means necessary for so large a commercial establishment, accumulate in about 4 years debts to the amount of upwards of 2½ millions of dollars to foreigners and Chinese, after which he escapes, leaving no assets, and his accounts in the greatest confusion, and successfully eludes the real or affected search after his person by the Chinese Government, under a suspicion that part of the immense sums owing by him have accompanied him, or served to render his flight successful. Others, in similar circumstances, will probably find the same means to evade the laws of their country, and thus render the property of foreigners in their hands very unsafe. The whole system of the Cohong is so very faulty that transactions like the one just described cannot fail to happen from time to time. Men of real wealth hardly ever enter the Co-hong, but frequently mere adventurers, who by some means or other have collected sufficient money for the payment of the enormous fees, the repayment of which, with high interest, becomes their first duty so soon as property from either Chinese or foreigners is confided to their Hong. The knowledge, that, even if their affairs should become prosperous, they will not be allowed, by retiring from business, to enjoy the fruits of their industry, no rich Hong-merchant being ever permitted to disengage himself from business, must naturally render them callous to the ultimate success of their trade; the command of money which their business naturally gives them, serves to encourage an expensive mode of life, and even enables them to secure themselves against want in case of failure, and against the punishment incurred by the law of their country, from the known venality of it's officers. Such are the natural causes of a vicious system, which have been hitherto partly kept out of sight by the enjoyment of the regular Company's trade, which secured to the Hong-merchants a constant and profitable business, but even under the monopoly, many of the Hongs were ever on the brink of bankruptcy, only upheld by the Company, and a great number have successively failed. Under the free trade the difficulties of the Hong-merchants have materially increased, and their poverty has urged them to transact business at a profit or commission less than requisite to cover their expenses, and to submit to considerable sacrifices to obtain the money necessary for the completion of their contracts or for the upholding of their establishments.

On making these remarks we mean them to apply merely to the system, not to individuals, being aware that among the Hong-merchants of the present day, that still transact foreign business, there are several whose activity and integrity has combated successfully against the disadvantages of their station, and that others, whose hongs are in difficulties owe them to adverse circumstances rather than to their own faults and follies, nor have they, by their inability to pay, lost the esteem and friendship of their creditors.

Many other causes, besides those adverted to already exist, to render the present Co-hong system fraught with danger to both the security merchants and foreigners, which we shall not at present enlarge on, seeing the length to which our observations have already run.

Several considerable seizures of Opium from Chinese boats are said to have been made on the river during the week, and one of 80 chests is mentioned from a teahost close to Canton.

The many questions of our Correspondent C. C. C. we are not at this moment prepared to answer, but hope that our neighbours will, by their contributions, put us in possession of the necessary information.

We have had no arrivals beyond the Southerner from Java and the Sarah Barry, from N. S. Wales and Lombock, in which latter Island business had come to a stand-still owing to hostilities between some of the Rajahs. We have no foreign news to communicate. We hear that the Vice-roy is expected to return to town almost immediately, to confer with the Foo-yuen, who, having been appointed to the presidency of the board of punishments at Peking, is about to leave Canton.

It will be seen from the letter of H. M. Chief Superintendent to the Chairman of the late meeting of British merchants here, that the contents of the memorial to Lord Palmerston on the state of the Hongs has his approbation and that he will support it with his Government at home.

A sum of from $ 5 @ 600 is also usually required by the Hong-merchant, for securing a Cargo-ship, to defray fees and charges usually incurred by him. On French and other Foreign vessels the charges are slightly varied. The several fees paid to the Hoppo &c. on Rice laden ships amounting to $ 939 50., by a decision of the General Chamber of Commerce, are to be considered a charge on the vessel, as also the sum of $ 250—paid to the Linguist—making the whole charge on Rice-ship, $ 1189.50.—besides Pilotage inwards and outwards.

COMMERCIAL REMARKS.

IMPORTS.

Cotton Manufactures.—For both bleached and grey fine Longcloths, there is a good demand at rather enhanced rates. Chintzes, of good patterns wanted. There are several parcels of inferior and unsuitable patterns and dimensions almost unsaleable at $ 3 @ 3½. Cotton Yarn, of good quality enquired for, whereas 30 @ 33 cannot be obtained for some inferior parcels.

Woollens.—Spanish Stripes, without alteration in pride or demand. Longells, are again firmer at an improvement of 20 @ 30 cents. English Camblets, are without alteration. The Dutch are held at higher prices, all now, we believe, remaining being in one hand.

Rice,—has been quieter during the week, with an inclination to decline rather in consequence of a moderate fall of rain.

Straits Produce.—Rattans and Pepper, are both firmer. Betel-nut and Tin, without transactions or alterations.

Cotton.—Prices are generally well supported, but we have heard of no sale at any advance on our quotations. The clearances in the last month were,

Bombay,	Bengal,	Madras,	Total.
15.320,	3.166,	1,656,	20,222 bales,

and the remaining stock is estimated at

25,000,	5,000,	4,000,	34,000.

Opium.—There is no change whatever in the Opium-market, except that Malwa is a little firmer, the quantity of good being much reduced, and the new not yet arrived. There is also a little enquiry for the new Bengal drug, but as the deliveries continue almost entirely by the foreign boats in the river, prices generally are nearly nominal.

EXPORTS.

Raw Silk.—We have not heard of any further supply having actually arrived, but upwards of 1000 bales are known to be close at hand.

Tea.—The market continues quiet, very few transactions having lately taken place.

Smuggling in China.

THE PROPOSED AMERICAN CONSULATE IN CHINA.

From the Chinese Repository for March.

A little investigation will show the consul, that the evasions of the Chinese fiscal laws differ considerably in character, and of course demand different treatment. The most frequent forms are the illicit storage and transhipment of goods at Lintin, evasion of duties by collusion with the provincial officers of some grade or other, and the smuggling by professed smugglers. These modes of evasion do not form a complete catalogue, but they are enough for all the purposes of illustration.

The first of these departures from Chinese regulations, the storage and transhipment business, though now lying under repeated interdicts, is the least objectionable. It is chargeable in great part to the Chinese ignorance of any debenture or bonding system, or, if such be known to them, to their refusal to adopt either the one or the other. In explanation of this prohibited business, it is to be said, that the commodities carried from China to countries west of the Cape of Good Hope, being much more bulky than those brought to it from the same quarter, it naturally occurs that many ships arrive in the Chinese waters with little or no cargo. Moreover the infrequency of direct opportunities leads to the shipment via China of goods destined to Manila, and which must be transhipped for that place on the vessel's arrival in the Chinese waters. The necessity which thus arises would be met, in any commercial country, by the provisions of a transit entry. And again, the great distance of the countries trading with China, the fluctuation of prices, or the misconception of what is suitable to a people of quite different tastes and habits, often result in the shipment of goods to Canton which are afterwards found unsaleable there, and must be reshipped to some other market, or returned to the place of production or manufacture. A further inducement to extensive transhipments exists in the regulation which admits vessels with rice cargoes under a port charge of $ 200, while vessels bringing other merchandise, or even coming empty, pay $ 3000 to $ 6000. It is, therefore, the interest of vessels bringing but few goods, to tranship them, take in rice, and escape the higher port charge, which in the present day is paid on as few vessels as can carry up the river the merchandise imported. This motive to transhipment may be regarded as a weak one, but the case is much stronger as respects goods which have been actually landed in Canton, and which it is afterwards found necessary again to reship. These not only do not get the benefit of a drawback, but they are loaded with an export duty, seldom lighter, and usually much heavier, than that paid on importation. Possibly the Chinese may not understand the working of the outside transhipments, as connected with the grace to rice vessels, or their edicts against the receiving of opium, directed against them chiefly as depots for opium, but they cannot be blind to the injustice which catches, as in a trap, the unfortunate importer of unsaitable goods, nor wonder if he compare their port to the cave in the fable, whose entrance bore many marks of the ingress of unwary visitants, but none of their egress.* In one view, the authorities which enforce such a regulation, in regard to foreign commerce, are, to say the least, quite as culpable, as the stranger who evades them; and when we call him a smuggler, we do not mean to assert that he is in the least degree criminal, but merely that he eludes a part of the fiscal system of the country. But the whole business is a grievance and a scandal, and therefore calls for the attention of a government careful of the interests of its citizens and of its own honor. The consul should use an early opportunity to bring before the provincial authorities the foreign estimate of the subject, explain the usages prevailing in all commercial countries on this point, the just and equitable grounds on which they rest, and suggest a remedy for the evils hitherto felt in China. The exchange of the cumshaw and measurement, or port charge referred to, for an equivalent duty on goods, would remove a part of the evil. The introduction of a bonding or debenture system would be a far more effectual remedy, and it is easy to apply it, under such checks as would render it on the Chinese part a perfectly safe concession. So long as their regulations detain ships twenty-four hours or more outside, waiting for a pilot, they are bound to designate some safe anchorage. This anchorage (which should be Kumsing Moon) affords an unobjectionable opportunity to effect any necessary transhipment, or to bond goods destined to other ports, or which it is desirable should not be introduced immediately. Indeed, the whole bonding system might be carried out here under the eye of Chinese officers, and entry for Canton, be considered an entry for consumption. Or, it may be required, that the entry for Canton be made within a given time, and the bonding or debenture be arranged afterwards through the hong merchants. The right of search not being claimed by the Chinese in ordinary cases, it is not desirable that it be conceded, until proper checks can be obtained against its injurious operation. It is within the power of the Chinese to dissociate the storage of lawful merchandise from the storage of prohibited goods, and since they have long permitted a transhipment of teas at Whampoa, whenever vessels have been overladen by mistake, it is only becoming that they concede to constantly recurring cases of equity, what they never refuse to accidental necessity. If the local authorities refuse all consent to these changes, the appeal is open to Peking, and in any event, the American resident will have the satisfaction of knowing, that he pursues his interest in these matters under the nominal protection, or that he sacrifices it in obedience to the claims of nominal honor.

The evasion of duties by collusion with the revenue officers goes on, at Whampoa, through the agency of the hoppo's boats, or tide waiters, appointed to guard each ship, and at Canton, by arrangements made between the linguists, hong clerks, and the custom-house examiners. In the former case, a hoppo-man agrees to land certain goods from on board the ship, at one half or one third of the provincial duty, or to buy them at a price so much above the market value. In this case the collusion does not probably extend beyond the very lowest grade of revenue officers employed on the river, and no money reaches the imperial treasury. In the Canton moral code, which is rather that of Paley than of Dymond, this is considered smuggling, while the second mode of evasion, through the linguist, is we believe, regarded as a fair introduction. It has its advantages and its disadvantages. It certainly carries the goods entered through all the forms of a legal introduction, and breaks down only at the not unimportant point, that of payment into the treasury. To take an instance; four small bales of cotton goods, say each containing 25 pieces, are strapped together at Manchester, that they may pay one half-crown instead of four to the Liverpool shipping merchant, and are delivered, in the same state, over the ship's side at Whampoa, into the chop-boat or lighter. They are noted on the chop list as one package, and when landed at Canton, if an honest set of examiners are present, duty is paid on the 100 pieces. But when so good a chance presents, it is quite as usual to make one small bale do homage to the emperor for the whole four, and the duty on the remaining three is divided between the foreign merchant, the linguist, and some dozen more of his Chinese associates. When the settlement of duties on the ship's cargo comes to be made, the smuggled goods are suppressed, and the duties on those really entered are paid to the hong merchant directly, or sometimes, if the linguist be a responsible man, through the linguist. The foreigner, in the case, goes through the usual form of entry, and he treats with the persons expressly appointed by the government to explain to him what the duties are and to collect them from him; he does not cause the revenue to be defrauded, only he is privy to and shares the spoils of the collusive entry. Some years ago, these arrangements were made so extensively, that we believe we are right in saying, that the general estimate of duties was the rate at which the linguist would introduce goods, and no one pretended to know what the real duty was, or what the linguist's arrangement was, but merely made the best bargain he could for the article to be entered. Afterwards, when the local officers began to examine and levy more carefully, the partial effect was as if the import duty had been increased 20, 30 or 40 per cent., and parties who had always refused to introduce goods by smuggling boats, or through the hoppo-men, were tempted to do so, in order to save themselves from severe losses on articles thus suddenly subjected to an unexpected imposition. Now it will be admitted, on all hands, that the foreign merchant, kept in the dark as to the real tariff, subjected to numerous exactions, is strongly tempted to take his interest or his exasperation for his guide, and to seek in the corruptibility of the lower officers, a refuge from the cupidity of the higher. It is not always between interest and duty, but between two duties, that he is distracted,—between his duty to the government, and his obligation to his absent principal and employer. Comparing himself to a man who has fallen among thieves, he maintains that he has a full right to save a little of his property, by agreeing with the bandit especially commissioned to strip him, to go halves with him and conceal from the rest of the gang that he ever had any. Certain of nothing, that he is made to pay much more than he ought, he comes to look on the sums extracted from him in times past, as a fund on which he may draw for plenary indulgence as to all present and future sins fiscal.

But whatever personal exculpations may be put forth in these cases, it is manifest that the whole system has a most unfavorable effect on the Chinese estimate of the foreign character. These evasions cannot but be known extensively, not can they do less, wherever known, than awaken suspicion of the foreigner on the score of probity. Even the local officers, who share the spoils, cannot think very well of their associates, and if we suppose that any loftier spirits among them, ever rise to stations of influence, they must carry with them no good recollections of the strangers, from whose crafty evasions, it was their early exercise to defend the revenues of their imperial master. The foreign government which consents to bear the weight of such injurious impressions, to slumber over a system so unhappy, that the only parties that can be very intent in its continuance, urge that it be broken up, consents, not to say deserves, 'to suffer as an evil-doer.'

These reasons are enough: the consul must be instructed to demand a tariff and a copy of the custom-saws, under no less a sanction than the vermillion pencil itself, and if the provincial officers, to whom this 'glorious uncertainty' is worth perhaps $ 1,000,000 per annum, refuse to forward such a request, the United States will relieve it of that unwelcome office, and meanwhile register all sums paid by American citizens for duties, to be recovered back, if found to exceed the imperial standard. His declaration, that the United States would have all their citizens abroad bear an unimpeachable character, his disavowal of all sanction on their part of individual illegalities, must satisfy the supreme government, and if any injurious regulation now evaded, is revived against the merchant, it is a fair subject for further negotiation.

The last form of evasion which we have alluded to, is the running of goods in smuggling boats, or outright smuggling. This was extensively practiced not long ago, before 'fast crabs and scrambling dragons' were destroyed by the exertions of the present governor. This mode of illicit importation may be less objectionable than the last, as to its influence in corrupting the native officers, or rather, as it makes the foreigner a less direct instrument in offering the temptation. But on the other hand, it raises up and maintains a desperate class of men in the bosom of the community, whose outlawed condition removes them from social restraint, exposes them to extraordinary temptation, and doubtless sinks them, in a multitude of instances, in crime and ruin. So long as their collusion with the officers of the preventive service is perfect, these final evils do not show themselves, but it is probable that neither here nor anywhere else can such a system prevail long, without involving collision and bloodshed. Our conclusion, therefore, is, upon full consideration, and we doubt not that the consul will arrive at the same, that no time should be lost in clearing the American community from all connection with this practice, to treating all such offences against the Chinese laws as offences against the American interest and character.

* The Chinese prohibit the exportation of forcing metals, except three tenths of the silver brought in any one vessel. In this fondness for metallic imports, and in the care with which they guard their native mines, they imitate the Japanese or perhaps the national prejudice in both cases comes from the same origin.

Versailles.

This magnificent monument of the splendour of Louis XiV, which has been hitherto renowned only as an illustration of his reign, has acquired a higher claim to the admiration of France. His present Majesty has destined this sumptuous building to a nobler use, by converting it into a Grand Historical and National Museum.

Those strangers who visited Versailles last summer—after crossing the Place d'armes, where stands the bronze statue of General Hoche,—must remember the equestrian statue of Louis XiV placed at the point of view where terminate the three avenues from Paris, St. Cloud and Sceaux; by a recent order of the King, his royal effigy is to be surrounded by the twelve colossal statues of the great men who illustrated his age, which are now being removed from the Pont de la Concorde. On quitting this court and turning to the right, facing the Rue des Reservoirs, we enter the closed vestibule, which leads into celebrated chapel where are placed the kneeling figures of Louis XIII and Louis XiV beside the altar, and harmonize so well with the spot. Returning through the vestibule, where formerly hung the large medallion representing Alexander and Diogenes, now replaced by a Louis XiV victorious—we traverse the Galleries de Pierre pavel with marble and filled with statues and busts extending to the remotest period of French history. This gallery leads into the Salle de l'Opera, which at present remains unchanged.

The whole of the private apartments looking on the gardens have been converted into saloo a of vast dimensions; those on the ground and first floor contain the whole of the great pictures which the King has been able to collect illustrative of the early glories of France. Behind these saloons, towards the Rue des Reservoirs, a new pavilion has been built, called after Louis Philippe. The upper floors looking over the park have been filled with portraits on canvas, copper, and wood, of all the celebrated personages of France that could be collected; they amount to the extraordinary number of four thousand!

Pursuing our way through this immense labyrinth of halls and staircases, where Europe has deposited the tribute of all her marbles and minerals, we cross the Salon d'Hercule, and on or that part of the palace situated before the principal terrace. The lower part, on the garden-side, is named after Louis XIII. in which are inscribed, in frames, the names of all the Marshals, Admirals, and Constables of France. From the vestibule of Louis XIII, and other magnificent saloons, splendid bird's-eye views are obtained over the whole of the water-works in the park, and at the foot of the grand marble stair-case we behold a vast collection of the busts of all the great literary men of France; Bourdaloue and Moliere, La Fontaine, Racine, Corneille, and a host beside. The first floor of this part of the palace has been left nearly in the state in which it has usually been shown; the most interesting apartments of the historian and the artist are the bed-chamberi of Louis XiV, and drawing-rooms of Louis XIII, in their original state, as if in readines for the petit-lever of the Grand Monarque.

Of the two small wings thrown forward on the principal court, that built by Napoleon has experienced no alteration; but that built by Louis XVIII and Charles the X, on the side of the chapel, has been entirely pulled down, and a vast stair-case is now being constructed, which is intended to form the principal entrance into the upper range of apartments. The great southern wing, above the Orangery, has been entirely changed. The whole of the former arrangements has been superseded by beautiful halls and wide galleries. As a pendant to the Salon d'Hercule on the other side of the Palace, we have here the hall of the Quatre-vingt-douze, a magnificent museum of painting in itself, dedicated to the rising glory of the Republic. Then follows a long succession of saloons, terminated by that of Marengo, each offering glorious pa es of the Imperial history in the years 1805, 1806, 1807, &c.

Quitting the Saloon of Marengo, near which, on the little terrace above the Orangery of the King of Rome, is the Imperial statue of Napoleon; we turn towards the garden, and enter the admirable Hall of July, consecrated to the indissoluble union of the July of 1789 with that of 1830. To this succeeds the long Galerie des Batteilles, which with the Salle de Juillet, occupies the whole Fa ade of the southern wing.

On the opposition side of the Salons of Marengo are the Galeries de Pierre, adorned with the busts and statues of the Republican and Imperial Generals; and at the further extremity we recognise the statue of the Pacificator of La Vendée, in a sitting posture, which formerly was placed in one of the squares of the town.

This is a brief and necessarily an imperfect description of the immense undertaking, for which the nation is indebted to the King. It is a monument worthy, say the French, of the best days of Greece or Rome. English paper.

VARIETIES.

Joseph Gillon, writer to the signet, was an early friend of Sir Walter Scott, and a man of genuine humour. Calling on him one day in his writing office, Scott said, "Why, Joseph, this place is as hot as an oven." "Well," quoth Gillon, "and is it not here that I make my bread?"—Lockhart's Life of Scott.

In a cause respecting a will at the Derby assizes, evidence was given to prove the testatrix (an apothecary's wife) a lunatic, and amongst other things, it was deposed that she had swept a quantity of pots, lotions, potions, &c., into the street as rubbish. "I doubt," said the Judge, "whether sweeping physic into the street be any proof of insanity." "True, my Lord," replied the counsel, "but sweeping the pots away certainly was."

Novel Four-post Bedstead.—"Will you allow me to inquire ve you make up your bed under that 'ere deal table?" said Sam. "Cause I vos always used to a four-posted afore I came here, and I find the legs of the table answer just as well," replied the cobbler.—Pickwick.

A looker on at a public house on fire was anxious that the engines should play on a particular part were there seemed no danger,—his perseverance induced a fireman to ask the reason. "I have a long score on the wainscot," was the reply.

Foreign Orders.—A great traveller boasted that he had the honour of receiving "orders" from almost every crowned head in Europe. "Yes," said Rogers, (aside) "orders to quit their dominions."

Sydney Smith, preaching a charity sermon, frequently repeated the assertion, that, of all nations, Englishmen were most distinguished for generosity and the love of their species. The collection happened to be inferior to his expectations, and he said that he had evidently made a great mistake, and that his expression should have been, that they were distinguished for the love of their specie.—Blackwood's Magazine.

At the late assizes for Donegal, an Irish schoolmaster under examination by Mr. Doherty, gave the following characteristic definition of nothing: "Nothing," says he "is a footless stocking without a leg."

A capital shot.—A person boasted once, in the presence of Lord Norbury, that he had shot a dozen hares at one discharge. "Then," replied his Lordship, "I suppose you must have shot at a wig."

The Sultan Mahmoud has lately issued a decree, whereby, after stating that the custom of the Turks to remain through the day idly reclining on ottomans, instead of taking salutary exercise, renders them weaker than the Franks, ordains that henceforth their apartments shall be furnished with chairs and sofas, an that the latter shall be used only for repose at night.

Expeditious Travelling.—An architect of Clifton has invented an "Aeronaut" upon a novel principle, having the advantage of horizontal perpulsion, which gives a velocity of fifty or sixty miles per hour! The invention has been submitted to government for military purposes, and might be eminently useful for many other objects. Its form is simple and imposing, the dimensions rather exceeding the Great Nassau Balloon. The appearance altogether is grand and beautiful—the estimated cost about £1200.—Bristol Mirror.

Accident gave us a glimpse the other day of one of the drollest specimens of ingenious absurdity we ever remember to have seen. It was no less than a model of a railway to take an invalid up to bed. A moveable railway is laid up the stairs with a curve at the top, the inventor saith not of what radius, and a suitable carriage provided on which the invalid is to be placed. He is then drawn up secundem regulam by a servant, with the aid of a system of pulleys to the first landing. Being quietly deposited in one corner, there he must wait while the servant carries up and places the rails on the next flight of stairs. Another pulley-hauling gets him to the second landing. The rails have to be again removed, and the invalid proceeds on to the third stage; and so on to his last lift. How he is to get into bed when he has arrived up stairs we are not informed.—Railway Magazine.

CORRESPONDENCE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE CANTON PRESS.

Sir,—Seeing myself pointed at in the Canton Register of the 3d Instant, as one of the Editors of your Journal, I applied to the Editor of the Register to learn his authority for the false assertion, and received an answer of which the following is an extract:

"I beg to assure you that it is to myself alone "that you are to attribute the paragraph in ques- "tion, and it was occasioned by the remark of the "Canton Press, beginning with, "We have been "accused" &c. I was and still am at a loss to "understand the use of the plural pronoun "we" "in this instance, if it not only covers the author "of the pamphlet, but even all the memorialists "for it is only to the author of the pamphlet and "the memorialists, that any allusion is made in the "Canton Register of the 27th March. Nothing is "said of the Editor of the C. P. or of that paper, "beyond the quotation. For the rest, I must "think you have drawn a very sharp conclusion, "when you term what is little more than a doubt, "a surmise—"a false assertion"

Now I am very willing to believe that I may have mistaken the Editor's peculiar phraseology and mode of reasoning, and accused him of a "false assertion" where he only made "false surmise," nor should I have cared to notice the charge at all, but for the same peculiarity of reasoning which mixes up the Editorship of your paper very unnecessarily, not only with my pamphlet, but also with the memorial, which is a public document.

Whilst I am upon this subject, however, I think it well to notice two other surmises of the Editor contained in the last paragraph of the same article which calls me your confessor. The Paragraph is as follows,

"On reviewing the whole question, we think there is serious cause to regret the want, of union on any and every point connected with the future conduct and protection of the trade. And seeing in the Memorial a document framed by creditors against debtors, it is singular that not only the signatures do not represent the greatest share of the trade of the port, but they do not represent even the largest amount of claims against the greatest defaulter—Hing-tae. As we have remarked before, this very circumstance will make lord Palmerston pause before he proposes any measures in accordance with the requisitions of the memorial."

Now the memorial is signed by all the British Firms who subscribe to the General Chamber of Commerce (the only dissentient at the Public meeting having signed since) except Messrs. Jardine Matheson & Co., and Messrs Ilbery & Co.

The first of these firms is undoubtedly the largest creditor of Hing-tae; and may possibly be of the other Hongs alluded to in the memorial as avowedly insolvent; but it will not surely be disputed that it behoves the rest of the mercantile community not merely to get their debts paid, but to know the total amount of them, and get them disposed of, with a view to security in future dealings with the Hongs.

None of the subscribers to the memorial will probably care to boast of possessing "the greatest share of the trade," who have experienced the vicissitudes of commerce, and who remember that two years ago, the unfortunate Hing-tae was flattered as the "greatest sharer in the trade" of the C hong.

I am

Sir,

Your obedient Servant,

The author of the

CHINESE SECURITY MERCHANTS & THEIR DEBTS.

CANTON PRESS.

Saturday, 7th April.

THE HING-TAE DEBT.—To our readers at a distance, who are not interested in the discussion of this subject, our frequent recurrence to it, will, we fear, be anything but welcome, but we must ask their indulgence, on the plea of the great importance this question has, not only through the great amount of the debt itself, but also as its settlement may affect that of other insolvent Hongs, besides we owe to our Correspondent of last week, C. C. C., answers to the questions he then put, and we shall proceed with them in his own order.

"1st. Is it expected that the settlement of the claims on the Hing-tae Hong, when completed, will or will not include the $ 477,329 lopped off by the Committee of Examination?"

Some of the parties whose claims have been reduced by the Committee, have, we believe, not submitted to its decision, and they are of course free to take such steps as appear to them the most advisable to recover.

"2d. Did the Examining Committee discover any dealings in prohibited articles, or sums loaned on interest, or whence did the necessity arise for such reduction? Or did the Committee find that a considerable proportion of the claims are represented by individuals, now lying under sentence of expulsion from China, and that the Vice-roy was really disposed to "mix up" the opium question with that of the hong-settlement, so as to injure the claims exhibited?"

We understand that the accounts were adjusted upon the principles generally recognized in strictly commercial accounts, had the Committee to decide on any political principles, neither was it their business to defend the fiscal regulations of China by punishing those under suspicion of having violated them.

3d. Did the Committee find that there were any laws existing, forbidding loans to Hong-merchants, or prescribing the amounts beyond which they shall not be trusted by foreigners, except at their own risk, or defining a period after which outstanding balances against them shall be reported to the local government on pain of forfeiture?

"4th. Did any regulation on these or like points come in to affect the admission of some claims and the rejection of others?"

Our Correspondent, as a resident in China, must be aware that frequent orders have been issued by the Chinese Government that no foreigners should lend money to Hong-merchants, and that these latter are in fact by their own laws, required to settle and pay off their accounts once a year. But the enforcing of this law has ever been impracticable, nor has it yet been referred to in the adjustment of any insolvent Hong-debts. There is an old law that a Hong-merchant should not, at any one time, owe more than 100,000 Tales to foreigners, but this is equally obsolete in practice with the just mentioned regulation. The Committee cannot therefore have acted upon it.

5th. What proportions of the $ 2,961,439 are due to British claimants, and to men of other nations, and what ratios do these bear to their respective national imports and exports?

The claims of British merchants are for $ 2,184,831,84 of American for $ 70,694,40 of Parsees $ 240099, and of other nations $ 3,415 50

6th. Is it proposed that the claims be distinguished nationally, and a sum equivalent to the claims of each state be levied on its trade, or that the gross sum be collected indiscriminately?

The mode of settlement rests with the Chinese Government and the Hong-merchants. If they think fit to levy a duty on either Imports or Exports, we do not see that any one has a right to interfere. It is the prerogative of the government of a country to levy its revenue in the manner they think fit.

7th. Is it expected that the levy will be made on imports and exports, or—as would appear to have been the case in 1779—on exports solely?

The tax at present proposed by the Hong-merchants is, we believe, 7 mace on each picul of tea exported, and we have not yet been able to learn how much on each picul of silk beyond the one hitherto levied. The consoo charge on imports, as at present levied, falls principally on articles the production of India and the Straits, the principal imports from Europe having been exempted when the tax was first instituted levied by the influence of the then Chief Hong-merchant. Puankehqua. We are aware that the proposal of levying the necessary fund for the payment of the Hing-tae debt by a duty exclusively on the export trade, will eventually transfer the payment to the consumers of the Chinese goods, particularly to those of tea, in which the Chinese have not to fear any competition, and the price at which they allow foreigners to export it, must be repaid to them by the consumer abroad. This will be the case in a less degree with silk and silk piece goods and other articles which are equally the produce or manufacture of other countries, and it follows, that if the Chinese goods under a higher export duty, still compete with those from other countries, their growers and manufacturers must content themselves with a less rate of profit, and in this case the Chinese themselves would, in part at least, be the payers of the debt. If on the other hand a greater proportion of the tax, than seems at present contemplated, be levied on the imports, then the Chinese, as their consumers would bear the greatest burden, though it is much to be feared, that if taxes on imports are increased, their consumption will decrease, as enabling the Chinese manufactures to compete more effectually with the British and American which latter have of late begun to be imported in large quantities.

The 8th question is in part answered by the above observations; and, as we have before observed, it rests with the Chinese Government how to raise the funds for the payment of the debts of the Hong-merchants. That this will be effected so as to do justice, and give satisfaction to all parties, we doubt much, but we hope that the merchants of the different nations here will use their influence with the Hong-merchants so as to procure the most equitable arrangement that under the circumstances is practicable.

9th. Have the national representatives of the claimants on the Hingtae and other Hongs, already adjusted these points, particularly the ratios of the debt, and taxation, so as to satisfy the just and probable expectations of the government and now attentive public of these respective countries?

Before the term of payment is agreed on, it would be lost labour for the representatives of the different nations to interfere at all; and after such agreement their interference would, under the existing political relations of this country, be equally useless.

10th. Are the foreign residents prepared to make up, at the close of the present season, through a confidential committee of the Chamber of Commerce, a full statement of all balances due to and from the Hong merchants, renewable annually or semi-annually, so that their whole position or liabilities may be mutually understood, in order to the application of some regular and effectual check to their further involvement?

The tenth and last question of our correspondent we will undertake to reply to in the negative. Such interference with the private affairs of each commercial establishment is subject to too many objections to allow it to take place, though if submitted to, perhaps some general good might be derived from it.

Piracies.

We gave in our shipping report last week a short extract from a letter from Appenam dated 6th January, stating the Dutch Schooner Maria Friedrika to have been taken by Pirates near the Island of Lombock. We believe this vessel left Lombock early in October and was taken two days after. We have since seen the log book of the British ship Mary Dugdale, Capt. Harrison, which vessel, on her passage from Bombay to China, was attacked by Pirates near Lombock, probably by the same who took the Maria Friedrika, and whom their former success must have emboldened again to attempt square rigged vessels. The reception they met with from Capt. Harrison will probably lower their courage, and much praise is due to that officer for the intrepid defence of his vessel. We are astonished that the Dutch, in the immediate vicinity of their possessions, do not keep a better look out after these robbers of the sea, particularly as that Government keeps up numerous small armed vessels avowedly for the purpose of suppressing piracy. The following is the extract from the log of the Mary Dugdale.

"January 5th 1837. Light airs and hazy weather. At 2. p. m. we discovered three proahs to the eastward under sail; they soon after took in sail and began to ply their sweeps, and shewed their intentions by yelling in a most hideous manner, at the same time displaying their weapons, and with menacing gestures dropped within pistolshot on our starboard beam, all the time yelling their war cry and displaying their naked swords &c. Two of them had each a large brass piece out aboft, about 18 pounders; the small proah seeming to have the best supply of small arms. At 3 o'clock they commenced firing a volley of small arms, and a large piece of stone, about 8 inches in diameter, passed through the spanker, damaging the mast, and tearing the sail, and a few shot went through the bulwarks in the waist. At 3. 30 p. m., the ship having no more than steerage way, the firing was kept up, on the part of the pirates by the large guns and musketry, and on our part by our large guns, while we could get them to bear, supported by the swivels and rifles. Finding that they intended coming up under the stern, they having the advantage of about 18 sweeps on either side, we got the two heavy guns over on the larboard side, wore round on the larboard tack, and discharged the two guns and swivels full into them. To appearances, only the swivels took effect; one of the proahs being raked fore and aft, caused their crews to yell most fearfully and to row to a greater distance. The firing was then kept up at intervals on both sides—they ceased rowing, and, a breeze springing up from the south-eastward, they made sail and parted company, all three steering in for the Island of Lombock. We got clear of them about 5 p. m., Lombock peak bearing S. by W. ½ W., and the north-east end of Lombock Island, S. S. E. None of the ship's company were killed or wounded, though some had, to all appearance, a very narrow escape, there being a great number of shots through the bulwarks, sails, and into the mizen-mast. The manœuvres of these proahs seemed to be directed by a chief on board the small proah, she rowing very swift; the whole three were covered in to protect the rowers, and the armed men on the fighting deck carried long pieces of sheet-iron as shields, dancing and brandishing their weapons under cover of them."

THE MEMORIAL TO LORD PALMERSTON.—Among many remarks which the Canton Register makes in his last number against this memorial, we select the following.

"On reviewing the whole question, we think there is serious cause to regret the want of union on any and every point connected with the future conduct and protection of the trade. And seeing in the Memorial a document framed by creditors against debtors, it is singular that not only the signatures do not represent the greatest share of the trade of the port, but they do not represent even the largest amount of claims against the greatest defaulter—Hing-tae. As we have remarked before, this very circumstance will make lord Palmerston pause before he proposes any measures in accordance with the requisitions of the memorial."

We likewise regret that there should have been any difference of opinion, and that two British houses have not signed the memorial, but the Register's assertion "that the signatures do not represent the greatest share of the trade of the port" is altogether unsupported by fact. Among the British Agency houses here we find only two names wanting, but our neighbour of the Register does, in making the above remark, not mean to say that the signatures of all the other houses, 19 in number, does not equal that of these two? The Register must not have known what number of signatures the memorial had received, since we will not believe that the Editor, merely with the wish to injure the success of the application to the British Government, should have wilfully misrepresented so important a fact. After we published the memorial, two weeks ago, five more signatures were added, and very little trouble would have put the Register in possession of this fact. All Hing-tae's creditors have signed the memorial, with one single exception, and every one, without exception, present at the meeting of British merchants where the memorial was adopted, has signed it. It will therefore be seen that the memorial has met with as much popularity as can fall to the share of such documents, and we fear not being gainsaid by stating that its signatures represent by far the greatest share of the British trade at this port.

After writing the above we received the letter from the author of the pamphlet, "The Chinese Hong-merchants and their debts." We should not, without this have noticed the remarks of the Register, which paper has been in the habit of making similar allegations, which we have on several occasions contradicted. The Editor of this paper has its sole management and control, and to him alone therefore blame or credit is due for whatever appears in it. We do not understand why the Register should continue with taxing us with having editorial assistance, a suspicion we never felt or expressed with regard to the productions of our cotemporary.

The Hongmerchants have, we understand, addressed Hing tae's creditors, again offering to pay in 9 years, any shorter term, they say, it is impossible for them to comply with.

The Hoppo has again issued a threatening edict against the foreign passage boats engaged in smuggling, as likewise one against the Hospital Ship, which he complains has now been detained at Whampoa nearly a year beyond the time customary for ships to remain there, and which obliges him to an extraordinary expense, already exceeding 50 Tales, besides keeping open accounts that ought long since to have been closed.

The Governor returned to Canton yesterday from his tour of inspection.

The arrival of the Sylph, has put us in possession of Calcutta papers containing English news by the overland despatch, to the 5th December, of which we give extracts below. The 9d Opium sale averaged as follows, for Patna 710 and Benares 611 Rupees.

Though the letter and papers her Panama from New-york have not yet arrived, we hear that the elections for the state of New-york have been very unfavorable to the Loco-focos, or President Van Buren's party.

English News.

The Bombay Mail just arrived has brought us London News via Marseilles to 8th Dec. the heads of which we subjoin. We shall give another and fuller Precis of news to-morrow from our London Correspondent, with extracts from our files which we expect hourly.

A series of private trade tea sales comprising 65,000 packages, have just gone off well at an advance of 2d. to 4d on low priced teas compared with September prices. The rapid and steady advance in teas has greatly benefitted the merchants, and mainly aided in enabling Marseilles banks and Ferrers to satisfy all claims in full and resume operations.

On the 4th instant, the Queen was grossly insulted by a respectably dressed man named Goode, whilst riding in her carriage near the Palace. The offender who is insane has been taken into custody.

10th.—Yesterday being Lord Mayor's day the Queen's visit to the city for which immense preparations had been made, took place. The weather was unfavorable, but nevertheless the streets from Buckingham palace to Guildhall were one mass of spectators from the pavement to the house-tops. The Queen was enthusiastically cheered as the splendid procession advanced in the following order: 4 carriages with Royal Dukes and Duchesses, 6 of the Queen's carriages, the Queen in the state carriage, the foreign Ambassadors, Ministers, Noblemen, &c. The banquet at Guildhall was not surpassed by that of 1814 to the allied Sovereigns. The Queen was much gratified by her reception. The line of road was splendidly illuminated in the evening.

Previously to the Queen's visit to the city, an old German, Charles Stuber, deranged in his intellect, who had threatened to shoot the Queen on the 9th was taken into custody, and confined to a madhouse.

13th.—The account from Lisbon to the 8th mention the Treasury to be in great want of money and that efforts were making to realize some by large sales of national property. Trade was dull. The Guerilla Bands had received a check in Lower Beira and a force had been sent against Renichide in the south.

16th.—Parliaments was yesterday opened by commission when the Right Hon'ble J. Abercrombie was unanimously re-elected speaker of the House of Commons; the remainder of the week will be devoted to the swearing in of Members.

21st.—Yesterday Her Majesty attended the House of Lords in state, and read the opening speech, the principal points in which were that of the settlement of the Civil List, the measures to be introduced by ministers for the better regulation of Corporation Reform in Ireland, the Irish Poor Laws and the settlement of the Tithe Question. The address was moved by the Duke of Sussex and seconded by Lord Portman and carried unanimously; that in the House of Commons, after notices of several motions had been given, moved by Lord Lefevre and seconded by Mr. G. Grieg. Some discussion arose by Mr. Wakley proposing three amendments the first of which was lost by a majority of 309 to 90 and the remaining two negatived without a division. This evening has been occupied by notices of motions being given. A deputation from the House of Lords waited on Her Majesty with the address this day.

In Spain things assume a gloomy appearance. The last accounts state Cabrera to be within a league of Valencia with a large force and that his troops were plundering the villages of the Huerta. The most sanguine hopes of his success are entertained by the Carlists as Valencia is badly provided with the means of defence. Don Carlos was at Amurrio.

SPAIN.—The Queen Regent accompanied by her infant daughter opened the Cortes on the 19th ult. but were not received by the troops with that enthusiastic feeling which has hitherto prevailed. Things are growing worse every day and from their present state, the ministery, it is expected, will not be able much longer to hold the reins of government. Col Iriarte and D. P. Barriest, the leaders of the Mutineers at Pamplona were shot on the 16th ulto. Don Carlos had gone to Orduna and almost all his generals are under arrest; report states Bilboa to be in a state of siege and also that the Carlists had raised that of Pupeeda.

PORTUGAL.—Is little better than Spain, being in a continual commotion. The Chartistes are again about to take the field. A ministry had been at last formed with the Viscount de Sandeira at the head.

The Duke of Richmond and Lord Brougham presented Petitions complaining of the high rate of Postage and praying the adoption of Mr. Hill's plan of reduction.

A recent import of Galanga Root of good quality, in public sale, was taken in at 40s. the article is wanted, and at something under this price moderate quantities would be saleable.

Rather extensive imports of Manilla Hemp, partly from America, have been received, which have not yet been brought to sale, and prices lately have been rather nominal at £30 a £31. some small parcels having been sold at these rates: 70 Bales, however, of good quality, direct from Manila, offered at auction yesterday, realized from £32, 12s a £33, according to which our present quotations are regulated.

The public sales of Free Trade Tea, announced to be brought forward on the 18th proximo, will comprise about 190,000 Packages; the market meanwhile continues rather dull, the only kind in demand being common Congou of the East India Company's import.

There has been an active demand for Silk this week, and the former prices are fully maintained: of Eastern, the better qualities of China are chiefly in request, and to this description the sales are mostly confined.

Died.

On board the Jane at Lintin, on Saturday the 31st of March, ELIZABETH, wife of CHARLES FRANCIS Esq., aged 25 years, sincerely and deservedly regretted.

COMMERCIAL REMARKS.

IMPORTS.

COTTON MANUFACTURES.—White and grey LONGCLOTHS of good quality are in active demand, at an advance in price, the former particlarly. COTTON YARN, continues in fair demand for the better kinds, but low qualities are unsaleable, and a large importation from Bengal has still further affected this description unfavorably.

WOOLLENS.—Nearly the whole of the SPANISH STRIPES, have been bought up by the Cloth merchants during the week, they being induced to speculate on a rise from the non arrival of further supplies, and expecting favorable accounts from the interior. They are now held at an advance of 10 @ 15 cents per yard, but this price is at present nominal. The price of LONGELLS, is fully supported from the same cause. English Camblets are as depressed as ever.

METALS.—LEAD, is rather firmer at our quotation of 6½ @ 6½. ROD IRON, has declined The other kinds without much alteration.

RICE.—From the want of rain prices have advanced from 5 @ 10 cents.

COCHINEAL.—There has been a good deal of enquiry during the week for good quality, which has advanced, and sales, we hear, have been effected as high as $ 215—inferior kinds have not improved.

STRAITS PRODUCE.—Without any alteration.

COTTON.—There has been no arrival during the week, but the advance in price notwithstanding the short stocks of all kinds checked both purchases andit clearances, and Bambay have rather declined. The export to China from Bengal, it would appear, is likely to be short this season, the crop being unfavorable. The Bombay one however is reported abundant. There is no fine Tinnevelly or Bombay in first hands.

OPIUM.—There has been nothing particular to remark in the Opium-trade during the week. Old Patna and Benares have rather declined and Malwa was a little firmer from the comparatively short quantity of good. New Patna has been hitherto very little in demand, and of new Benares the quantity imported has been very short. The accounts received yerterday of the Calcutta sale must tend to depress still more, the average being fully 60 rupees under the first sale, and the whole consisting of 2255 chests only. The only deliveries of any consequence are in the river by the foreign passage boats. A strong edict against them is, it is said, to be issued immediately, but whether it will be enforced is doubtful. For deliveries and stock see above.

EXPORTS.

RAW SILK.—About 600 bales have arrived and as many more are said to be close at hand. The holders are asking high prices, and in consequence of the favorable accounts received by the overland mail, they are likely to obtain them for a portion at least. We have heard of the sale of two or three parcels, indifferent quality at 470, and fair to good and fine at 490 @ 510 $.

TEA.—We have no transactions to report in this article.

We are indebted to a private source for the following Statements of the sale of the Opium Farms in Java for the years 1837 and 1838, from which it will be seen that the proceeds for the present year exceed those of the last by f.966,100. The Government also must have a profit of nearly one dollar a catty, or the Opium at the prices at which the farmers are obliged to receive their supplies from them, so that the revenue from the Farms alone cannot amount to less 800,000 Spanish dollars for the present year. We expect to be favored with a statement of the result of the other Government Farms on Java for 1837 and 1838 very shortly.

Rock in the Straits of Sunda.

New York Daily Express, 17th November.

To Mariners.—The following extract from a journal kept by the first officer of the ship Claudius, Captain Isaac Winsor, on her late passage from Manilla to Boston, is interesting and important, as the existence of the rock to which it refers, in the direct passage through the straits of Sunda, has been doubted by many navigators.—"May 15th, at meridian, the Button bore SSW, distance 7 miles, strong SW and WSW current, from 4 to 5 knots. At 1½ P. M., felt the ship strike her fore foot, and again underneath the fore hatch. Clapped the helm hard up, and hove aback—boxed the ship off, and cleared; hove the lead over instantly, but got no soundings at 30 fathoms—saw the false keel come up astern. The Button bore S by E, distance 1½ miles. Thwart the way, SW, distance about 6 miles." The Claudius drew 19 feet water, and had on board a cargo of Manilla sugar and hemp, 900 tons and freight. What is very remarkable is, that this ship, after being discharged at Boston, was hauled upon the ways for repairs, when it was ascertained that her fore foot was wrenched off, a large piece of copper and plank under her larboard bow (garboard) was parted off, as with a drawing knife; further, as it was found, a point of rock of the bigness of a man's head, which had worked its way through the plank and became fastened between the timbers, filling up the hole it had made. In this condition the ship completed her passage from the straits of Sunda to Boston, over 12,000 miles of ocean, without leaking materially or any other damage.

Mechanical Power of Electro-Magnetism.

(From the Mining Journal.)

The following letter from New York will show that considerable progress is being made in America, in the application of electro-magnetism as a motive power. The results obtained, although on a small scale, are very interesting, and we do not see any reason to believe but what the experiment may be equally successful when brought into operation on a more extensive one. The field thus opened is vast, and we shall be glad to hear of greater attention being directed to the subject in our own country, than has hitherto been the case.

"Having seen the electro-magnetic machines of Mr Davenport, I am free to confess that I cannot discover any good reason why the power may not be obtained and employed in sufficient abundance for any machinery —why it should not supersede steam, to which it is infinitely preferable on the score of expense, and safety, and simplicity. I do not very clearly understand the principle (something about changing the poles from positive to negative, or from north to south, and electricity, in rapid succession; but this is of little consequence, as I shall be able to send you, probably by the next packet, a pamphlet containing a full exposition, with illustrative engravings. Mr Cook, who is associated with Mr. Davenport in the patent, is now engaged in preparing this pamphlet, and he has promised me the first copy that is printed. They have patented their invention in France and England.

"Before I saw the machines, I had two doubts as to the more extended application of the power. One of these I stated in my last, viz., whether the enlargement of the apparatus would be attended by any very great increase of the power; the other was founded upon what I supposed to be a necessity in the construction of the machine. I had understood that the revolving wheel was formed of iron bars, upon which the coated wire was wrapped or wound, in order to form the communication with the galvanic batteries, or cylinders of alternate zinc and copper; and that this wheel revolved within the periphery of a fixed circle, also magnetized, and that, in order to secure the requisite degree of which the points or poles of attraction and repulsion were established. Some how or other I had formed the idea that the space between the outer surface of the revolving wheel, and the inner surface of the fixed circle, was of necessity exceedingly small, in fact in fact they did all but touch; and I conceived that it would be impossible to construct large machinery, with such nicety of adjustment as to effect and retain that close proximity, without the danger of coming into actual contact. But I find that the space between is ample to allow of any reasonable play even in the small machines, with the comparative trifling degree of power employed. It is not a quarter of an inch; and with the increase of power it may doubtless be enlarged.

"The last machine constructed by Mr. Davenport occupies a surface of about eighteen inches square—that is, eighteen inches on each side, and consists simply of six platforms, having upon it an iron circular frame, with an arch extending from side to side above it, a spindle in the centre playing in this arch at top, and in a socket below, and on this spindle an horizontal wheel, formed by two cross pieces of iron, with segments of a circle at the four extremities. It is to fleet a wheel with four breaks in its periphery. Some hundreds of feet of insulated, or coated, copper wire are wound around the cross pieces, and also around the fixed circular frame; the connection with the galvanic batteries, which are three small cylinders, each consisting of six concentric tubes of zinc and copper, the outer one scarcely larger than a quart pot, is, as usual, by small rods of copper. The revolving wheel is six pounds. Attached to the upright spindle is a small cog-wheel, which may be made to work in other wheels, with a view to the purpose of showing how great a weight can be raised from the ground.

"With the three batteries acting on it, the revolution of the wheel was 1000 times in a minute; and these 1000 revolutions raised a weight of 200 lbs. one foot. The first machine made by Mr. Davenport which is much smaller and has but one battery, raised but 24 lbs. He is confident that with a number of batteries, or one very large one—say as big as a barrel—there would be power enough to drive the largest machinery; while the cost of construction would be reduced to a fifth, or perhaps a tenth, and that of attendance, fuel, &c., now forming as nearly an item in the expenses of steam power, would be almost done away with. Half a barrel of oil of vitriol and a hogshead or two of water would send a ship from New York to Liverpool; and all accident could possibly happen, beyond the breaking of some part of the machinery, which is so simple that any damage could be repaired in half a day. Surely it is a great and vastly important discovery and the wildest imagination can hardly grasp the wonders in achieving which it may, and doubtless will, become the instrument."—Englishman.

Hing-tae Affairs.

From the Hong-merchants to the Creditors of the Hing-tae Hong.

Dated 4th April 1838.

A respectful communication.

The foreign debts of the Hing-tae-hong we before resolved to pay in nine years by instalments, but to this arrangement you, Gentlemen, have not yet assented. Yet the period of nine years seems to us even too short, and we are not without fear that we shall be unable to repay the whole in the time stipulated. We call to mind that, of public claims upon us, the amount from year to year is not less than 300,000 Taels, consisting in tribute, charges for the military expenses of the new territory (in Tartary), subsidies for repairs of ports, and purchases of ginseng. We have also to pay up the public claims on Fat-qua's hong, amounting to more than 300,000 Taels, and those on the Hing-tae hong to the amount of 100,000 Taels and upwards. Moreover, each Hong has foreign debts of its own to discharge. Thus, in every direction, we have payments to make. And besides all this, King-qua's hong is now in arrear of the public claims on it to the extent of 300,000 Taels, while the foreign claims against it exceed a million. This hong, although, we are thankful to observe, it is your wish to keep it from bankruptcy, yet will not, we are disposed to think, be able to sustain these payments, and it will be requisite for us to make other arrangements therefor.

Of the profit, gleaned by us in the course of a year or two, though it yield, after payment of the various public claims, a small remainder, yet some thing is absolutely requisite for hire of labor, repairs, salaries and other expenses; add, with your perfect understanding of matters, and good sense, you must perceive, gentlemen, as a careful consideration of the subject, that if the time stipulated for payment of Hing-tae debts is too brief it will be impossible for us to adhere to it. Should such, beyond our power to adhere to it. Should we be able to pay the debts of another, then our own debts must remain unpaid, and we must all in consequence, successively be ruined and fail. With your known intelligence it would be difficult herein to deceive you

Even for the duties that are in arrear, and which are not on the same footing with private debts, we have been compelled to solicit the imperial favor to extend the limited period of payments to three years, and suffer us to pay them by instalments. How much rather then should the individual debts which we are discharging for others be so dealt with! We still entreat you, gentlemen, to assent to the period of nine years, that we may put forth our energies to sustain the payment, and to discharge the claim within the allotted period. Thus all may remain at ease, and we enjoy your highly prized friendship. For this purpose we write, and with compliments remain &c. Signed by Howqua, Mowqua, Ponkeequa, Kingqua Goqua, Mingqua, Saiqua, Punhoyqua, Sanqua, Kwanqua, Takqua.

CORRESPONDENCE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE CANTON PRESS.

Sir.—The kindness with which you have admitted into your columns my inquiries of 14th instant, and the trouble you have taken to give them a reply, induces me to trespass once more on your indulgence. The Hingtae debt, I still may be interesting only to the creditors, but there are, connected with its discussion and settlement, as the chief superintendent lately said, "more extensive considerations leading to general conclusion," which as most fail to engage the attention and fasten the curiosity of all your subscribers, wherever scattered. Had this claim been treated as a private affair, and brought to a settlement by the creditors themselves, I should not have felt at liberty to press one query in reference to it. But its complicated details, its vast aggregate, its bearing as a precedent, have all been forced on my attention so often and so h , that I really feel at last a kind of desperate determination to comprehend the mysterious subject. For a long time I waited for some luminous report on the case from our Chamber of Commerce, but it has not yet been forthcoming. Meantime the claimants have repeatedly brought the case into your columns and those of your contemporary, and have at length carried up an appeal to a powerful foreign government. A private claim or mass of private claims is thus converted into a public and national question, and the most valuable interests of our whole community are staked, perhaps, on its decision. More than this, the merchant has involved the politician, he has made choice of the ambassador and the admiral as his attorneys, and we cannot be sure but that peace or war, life or death to multitudes may not now be the pending alternatives. We may remember that, not three years ago, two of the greatest and most enlightened nations of Christendom, old allies, were within a hairsbreadth of a bloody quarrel, over a money claim hardly exceeding in amount the debts now due from the Co-hong to British merchants. Those of us therefore, Mr. Editor, who are friends of peace, and peaceful commerce, may well feel anxious when these debts are handed over to the strongest of naval powers for collection, and we hear its able representative in China recommend that the creditors take what is offered them, but leave terms to be dictated or settled by his government. It was under these anxious feelings, that I drew up my queries, well knowing that it became me to use, as your contemporary well says, "the most modest of all forms, that of interrogatories."

Your replies to my first four inquiries confirmed my previous impression, that the paper adjustment of the claim on Hingtae, had been made "on strictly commercial principles," i. e. without reference to their legality or illegality. It was this impression, which had made me marvel, that the claimants should be willing to forsake the ground which had so indulgently admitted their commercial account, and place themselves within the jurisdiction of a legal or political tribunal. As you suppose, Mr. Editor, I was aware that these existed or were said to exist, laws expressly forbidding loans to the Hongs, as well as restricting the accumulation of long standing and vast claims against them, on pain of forfeiture. I had certainly remarked before, and the author of they amphlet on the "security merchants" had brought it to my recollect n again, that there had been instances of such forfeiture. I had been used to regard the asserted settlements of hong debts, from 1780 to 1834, as so many waivers of legal right on the part of the Chinese or, perhaps as so many evidences, that the local government was perfectly aware, that their satisfaction by means of taxes on the foreign trade was a mere farce, a purchase of a character for benevolence for nothing.

These views may have been unsound, but I do not find anything in the replies with which you have favored me, to prove them so, and I therefore again inquire, what are those grounds, strong or doubtful, on which the claimants refuse the quiet, secret, commercial settlement, and demand, at the hazard of stoppage of trade, hostilities &c., a public investigation, and a legal award by political, national arbiters. Considering that the claims in question are chiefly represented by individuals lying under edicts of expulsion from China for their connexion with the contraband Opium trade, and that the legal terms for their recovery have not been generally complied with, the uninformed and the distant observer would rather incline to the opinion, that "the foreign merchants had inducements to consent to" even "a protracted payment of his dues," or at all events, to prefer not to reopen the question to settle it sub rosa, and not sub hasta.

You will see, Mr. Editor, that I have been stumbled, though a resident, by the course of the claimants, and you must correct me, if I have made a wrong inference from your replies, that the claims have been passed or rejected by the Committee, on quite other grounds, than the question will take, when it comes before two imperial courts, and is discussed on premises of political right, and legal necessity. There the statesman may waive his rights, and the master of laws may suspend or soften their execution, but solemn considerations interpose ere the other party can proceed to enforce either a waiver or a abrogation. Politicians may see their way clear through these paths, but I confess that they seem to me intricate and dangerous. I should be glad to know how far we can enumerate ourselves from embarrassing regulations and precedents as in the settlements of our claims on the hongs, by pleading that "we have no longer the inducement to go out to them." I have never yet been obliged to present such a claim, but I feel, that under the increasing difficulties of our commercial position, I cannot much longer maintain an exemption. Coming from a country where no exemption law can be constitutionally passed, I am extremely desirous to know how far any hong claims are incurred under binding laws and precedents, lest, on calling in national aid, I learn too late that no retracting money bill can be passed in my favor. The five next queries, I put to you, Mr. Editor, respected the manner of collecting and distributing the amount involved in the claims in question. I was aware that in former cases, the claimants, no matter of what nation, put themselves under the wing of the old cock of the walk in Canton, the E. I. Company, just as they seem now inclined to follow in the future footprints of Queen Victoria. But no considerations of this kind affect at all the grand end to be secured in this collection and distribution. The claims on the Hongs "are a bonafide transfer," so long as they continue unpaid, of so many millions of dollars, from the foreigners to the Chinese. The object then is to recover an equal number of millions from the Chinese for the use and behoof of the said foreigners. This end is not gained if the sum in question be taken from a new set of foreigners. As little is it gained if the foreigner be himself taxed to his own debt, and what is put into one of his pockets, have just been extracted from the other. These are now "transfers of capital," bona-fide in one sense, but mala fide in every other. The object is, to take the money from the wrongful possessor, and restore it to the rightful owner. To take an instance; goods from the looms of Manchester or the mines of Wales, are sold to a Hongmerchant, perhaps at a just value. The Hong pays some old debt with the purchase, and losing its little remaining credit, fails to find elsewhere an equivalent for the amount, and is declared insolvent. In this exigence the law, or the government, replaces the individual, recovers his assets and meets his dues, under certain statutes and precedents. It has received the benefit of his security for the collection of the revenue and the good behaviour of the barbarians, and it comes in, by its creature, the Cousoo, to supply the minus of its failing servant. Now the question is, whence shall the deficit be supplied? shall the Cohoist pay the foreigner? or shall the foreigner pay himself, or one foreigner pay another foreigner? Here, Mr. Editor, I find fault with the answer you gave me. You said in reply to my query, whether the claims would be distinguished nationally; "the mode of settlement rests with the Chinese government and the Hong-merchants. If they think fit to levy a duty on either Imports or Exports, we do not see that any one has a right to interfere. It is the prerogative of the government of a country to levy its revenue in the manner they think fit." Now this reply does not content me.

If the claimants can interfere with "the government of the country" to modify the term of payment, they can also interpose to point at the proper mode of the levy. If it be worth their while to petition the Queen that the claims be recovered in six rather than nine years, they can surely request that the Chinese be not suffered to evade payment altogether, by throwing the whole sums on the foreigner. It is certainly as important that the tax be laid on the right person, as that it be collected within the fitting period. You agree that beyond "the common charge at present levied," it is proposed to meet the claims in question, "by a tax which will eventually transfer the payment to the consumers of Chinese goods abroad;" yes, you repeat, "that it rests with the Chinese government how to raise the funder for the payment of the debts of the hong-merchants." Now, as to the Cousoo charge at present levied, it seems to me that there is no great mystery all the trades in Canton have their Cousoos and Cousoo charges. A Chinese conversing on this subject a few days ago, expressed himself thus, "there is not a paper umbrella sold, that does not pay its Cousoo duty." Nor is this strange; we ourselves, Mr. Editor, when we send in our annual subscription to the Chamber of Commerce, we pay our cousoo duty. It is to be granted that, to the ordinary good expenses, there are added, in the case of the Hong-merchants, various forced contributions to the government. But this simply shows that the Chinese government, instead of taxing windows, and plate, and commercial papers, taxes privileged corporations! Beyond the sums necessary to satisfy these dues, the cousoo charges have not been levied, no money has been collected from the foreign trade, since the last Hong debt was extinguished, and of course there is no fund applicable to the pending claims in existence. It is merely blinding the eyes of correspondents, to tell them that a fund exists, levied out of the foreign trade in years past, and which is therefore maladministered if not applied to the settlement now in progress. The collection is still to be made, every cent of it, and the question—whence shall it be drawn? is at least of as much interest as—when shall it be distributed? For the creditors to petition for the latter, not the former, to press, urge, appeal, for payment, prompt payment, but to be silent as to who are to be the payers, is to lay themselves open to grave suspicions in high quarters. And now, having appealed, they have brought themselves, and their claims under judicial usage, and the calling of witnesses, the production of evidences, in short, the whole proceedings must be de novo. The commercial arbitration is rejected, and the whole case awaits a legal decision.

But the public bearings of the subject are much more important than the private ones. That a Canton merchant should adjust a "transfer of capital" to a Chinese "by a new transfer" in his ledger, is of little importance, compared to inflicting national injustice, and bringing great states into collision with each other. To satisfy ourselves that there is ground to apprehend difficulty of this kind, let us look at the operation of the new transfer.

You suppose that the tax will be 7 mace per pecul on teas exported, and some as yet unsettled rate on raw silk—say 3 tales per pecul. Taking these as the rates actually to be levied, how will they fall on the two great divisions of the foreign commerce, the British and American trade? Thus to Great Britain.

7 m. p. pl. on 300,000 pl. Teas T. 210,000
3 t. „ „ „ 16,000 „ Silk	48,000
To the ros.	258,000
7 m. p. pl. on 120,000 pl. teas	84,000
T. 342,000	$ 475,000

So that the levy would amount in 4½ years to $ 2 256,250, or very near the amount of the admitted claims: now, of these claims—but $ 70,690, are due to, or will accrue to American citizens, while the amount levied on their trade within the same period, would be, $ 554,166,—exceeding their receipts by $ 483,472.

Mr. Editor, a settlement like this will not give satisfaction on the American side. Beside the common dissatisfaction which the British and American governments must feel, when it is seen that the Chinese pay no part of the insolvent debts they guarantee, there will be another thorn planted in the side of the latter, when half a million of the property of its citizens is "transferred" from the banks of the Hudson and the Ohio, to those of the Mersey and the Thames.

Now, it seems to me of vast importance that these two great states should move together in the East. By union and concert, their moral power, not their physical energy merely will be greatly increased, whether such union is most likely to be attained by new "transfers" of each other's property, shrouded in the darkness of mystification, and defended under the "prerogative," of the Chinese government, is a question I now refer again to your kind decision.

I will not, Mr. Editor, trespass further on your patience. I have simply introduced a question which other and abler men should discuss. The British representative will doubtless be, ere long, clothed with special powers, in reference to this subject, and an American commodore and agent will shortly be at Canton. A great deal of light may meanwhile be thrown on their future path, and it is our duty, as well as interest, to impart whatever we possess, Commending it to your further attention,

I am,
very truly your's.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE CANTON PRESS,

Punishment by Strangulation.

Dear Mr Editor.—While taking my usual walk this evening about five o'clock, I saw a large mob of Celestials together with some Foreigners, assembled, outside the wall of this town, near the St. Antonio gate, and was informed that a Chinese was about to be strangled for having been a dealer in Opium. Desirous of witnessing this scene, I approached the mob and in the course of a quarter of an hour the Tso-tang of Macao arrived, and with him from fifty to sixty police runners. A few minutes afterwards the Yew foo military officer from Casa Branca, the Heang-Shan-Heen district magistrate of Heun-Shan, and the Keun-min-foo of Casa Branca, came in rotation, followed by the unfortunate culprit in a bamboo cage borne by the two executioners and guarded by about one hundred of the Imperial infantry who were armed with boarding pikes and other formidable weapons of war.

There were two matted bamboo sheds built up for this occasion, the distance between them being from thirty five to forty yards: one of these sheds was furnished with chairs and tables, where the Mandarins seated themselves after having exchanged the customary civilities one with another: the other was the place for the execution, and was consequently fitted in a less tasty and expensive style, containing merely a slight wooden cross, about six feet in height with a hole in the upper part immediately above the horizontal cross piece.

Three guns were fired as a signal to prepare for the execution of the culprit. With his arms and legs heavily loaded with shackles of iron, he was literally shaken out of the cage, a most pitiable looking object, covered with filth, and so emaciated from an existence of about four months in a Chinese prison, as to seem more dead than alive. He was dragged to the place of execution and placed standing upon a piece of brick touching the cross with his back. The executioners commenced by lashing a rope round the legs, under the arms, and then through the hole in the upper part of the cross, after which it was passed several times round his neck and again through the hole. They then made use of a stick, resembling a long arrow, about five feet in length, which was passed through the loops of the cord and twisted round several times for the purpose of tightening the rope in order to effect strangulation. No apparent signal, other than the removal of the piece of brick from under the feet, was given for the fatal turning of the stick. The expression of the man's countenance did not change, nor was he perceived to make any struggle. The manner in which his arms and legs were shackled and tied to the cross must account for the latter circumstance. When the man had been dead about ten minutes, the mandarins departed under a salute of three guns: and shortly afterwards the executioners followed, but not until they had fully assured themselves, by examination of his eyes and mouth that he was dead. They left him still fastened to the cross, but removed from his hands and feet the shackles with which, up to this time, they had been bound. It was to continue hanging on the cross for three days as a spectacle and a warning to all dealers in opium, and others, after which period his friends would have permission to remove the body upon paying for the same.

The name of this unfortunate man was Kwok-Pung. He kept a small shop for twenty years at Shale-tow a village on the eastern side of the Inner Harbour, in the neighbourhood of the place of execution. He bore an excellent character among all those who had had any dealings with him: and was seized for having sold only a few balls or cakes of opium on account of another party. In the exaggerated report, made by the Viceroy to the Emperor, these balls or cakes of opium were multiplied into as many scores of chests, and he was represented as being one of the largest dealers in the drug, and as residing for the sake of security in the secluded village above named.

Kwok-Pung was about forty five years of age, and has left three wives and several children and a numerous circle of connexions to lament his untimely end.——by strangulation.

CANTON PRESS.

Saturday, 14th April.

We have again been favored with a letter from our Correspondent C. C. C. on the subject of the settlement of the Hong-claims, and agree with him that it is one of sufficient importance, and the clear understanding of which, as it may deserve the interference of the Government, is much to be desired We therefore open our columns to all discussions concerning these debts, and are obliged to C C C. for chosing ours as a medium to communicate his views on this matter, though on many points it seems that his opinions differ from ours as to how a settlement is to be brought about. In our reply to him we are assisted by the letter addressed by the Hong-merchants to Hingtae's creditors, of which a translation will be found in another column; the merchants again declare their inability to pay in less than nine years, and even that period is so inadequate to their means that they will probably have to ask for further indulgence of time before the debt is paid. We therefore are informed that the payment of Hingtae's debt alone will stretch their abilities to the utmost, and yet they say that, beyond that, the King-qua Hong owes upwards of 1,300,000 Taels to Government and foreign creditors, and that they are besides indebted to the Government 400,000 taels for duties owing by Fat-qua and Hing-tae, thus making the whole amount of their liabilities, beyond their own individual engagements, amount to the enormous sum of about $ 4 600,000. How then is this mass of debts to be liquidated? Do the Hong-merchants intend to pay Hing-taes debts during the first nine years, and begin with those of King-qua after that time? To such an arrangement the creditors of the latter Houg would not like to submit, nor is there any reason why such preference should be given to the Hing-tae claims. But the Co-hong have declared their inability to pay more per annum than 11 per cent of one half only of the debts of the insolvent Hongs, what measures then can be taken to secure payment for the other half also? Besides we beg to point out to our readers the evident injustice there is in the intentions of the Co-hong in the preference they intend to give to the claims of their own government, which, they say, amount to rather more than a million of dollars, and for which they have petitioned the Emperor to grant them an extension of time of three years, which, it is clear, if the Emperor grants, places his government upon much better terms than the other creditors. We see no reason why it should be thus, and this evident partiality, from whatever motives it may arise, should not be allowed.

After these preliminary remarks we shall proceed to answer some of the objections and remarks of our Correspondent, who asks again "what are those grounds on which the claimants refuse the quiet, secret, commercial settlement, and demand, at the hazard of stoppages of trade, hostilities, &c. a public investigation and a legal award by political, national arbiters?" The chief grounds are, the not only suspected, but, by them avowed, inability of the Hong-merchants to pay the debts of their insolvent members; the knowledge of the fact that great part of the substance of these merchants is annually, to the detriment of the rightful claimants, diverted to the purposes of government, and that the government, by confining the trade of foreigners to these merchants alone, and forcing the former, by the denial of allowing them warehouses of their own, to place their property in the hands of men whom they, without considering the Government ultimately liable for their engagements, would certainly not have trusted, and that under these circumstances they consider the Chinese Government as their ultimate debtor, they failing, as is the case now, to obtain just payment for their debts from the original contractors. We cannot follow our correspondent in his reasoning that because some of the creditors of Hing-tae "lay under edicts of expulsion" they should therefore be inclined to waive their claim to a speedy and just settlement of accounts. Our correspondent surely does not mean to intimate, that because a man has been ordered to leave a country, his property in that country is less his own than before such order had been given! We cannot see that the circumstance of many of the claimants of the Hing-tae hong having been ordered away, has any thing whatever to do with the speedier or more protracted payment of their debts, and if it is allowed to have any effect at all, it ought to be in favor of a speedier settlement if the Government is at all inclined to act upon their order of expulsion, which, it is well known, was successfully resisted by those concerned, on the very grounds of their claims on the Hong-merchants not having been paid. We believe moreover that none of the claims on Hing-tae have arisen from transactions in Opium, but all of them from lawful trade, and from loans in money, but the latter to a limited extent only.

Our correspondent makes, we believe, a wrong inference where he says "you must correct me if I have made a wrong inference from your replies—that the claims have been passed or rejected by the Committee on quite other grounds than the question will take when it comes before the imperial courts;"

We have before stated that the principles which guided the Committee when revising the accounts of Hing-tae's creditors, were those generally acknowledged in commercial affairs, nor was there, probably, any claim upon the Hong for value of prohibited articles. The tribunal before which the accounts were adjusted was as little likely to be biassed by unjust influence, as possible, or supposing that such influence could have existed, it was more likely to have been exercised by the Hong-merchants, the Committee being formed of three of these, one British, and two American Gentlemen. It will therefore be seen that the English interest, though nearly equal in importance to that which the Hong-merchants defended, was represented as one to three, nor is it likely therefore that any unjust claims should have been allowed to pass. The accounts therefore, such as they have been passed by the Committee, must be allowed, we think, to remain intact, as having been agreed to, with not only the sanction, but the express orders from the Chinese government to regulate them, by the Hong-merchants, a body of men with whom, in every case of difficulty and dispute, foreigners have been directed to consult, and to whom is their decision. The amount of the Hing-tae debt has therefore been legally, and we are convinced, equitably settled; its correctness ought not again to become a question to which the English government ought to submit, for, if they did, there would probably be no end to quibbles and evasions on the part of the Chinese. It is true, as our correspondent says, that there have been on a former occasion (in 1780) many claims disallowed, but they were ill substantiated, nor is it possible, at this distant time, to find sufficient evidence, so well to understand the bearings of the case as to allow it to stand as a precedent. The later settlements however, chiefly made within the last 25 years, of debts of insolvent Hongs, were agreed to without reduction, and paid by annual instalments, though it is well known that great part of the debts originated in loans of money on interest, which, to judge from Imperial edicts, are disallowed by the government. Those successive payments of such accounts have therefore established the precedent of the validity of such claims, though we are by not means prepared to say that in the Hing-tae case much, or any part of the claims, arises from money lent. Nor has the long standing of debts in former settlements affected their validity, the absurdity of the order for the Hong-merchants, at the end of every year, to pay off all debts owing to foreigners, being too well understood to allow of its ever having had any weight in transactions between foreigners and Chinese.

Our correspondent complains of the apparent injustice to allow the Co-hong to pay the debts of its involved members by a tax levied on the trade, and that such tax should be imposed chiefly on articles of export, whereby the Chinese will escape payment altogether, whilst the burthen of the tax would be unequally and unjustly divided among exporters of Chinese produce. We will not deny the justice of these remarks, but fear that if a payment of the debts is at all effected by the Co-hong, this injustice must be submitted to, foreigners having neither the means nor the right to interfere, as we said before, in the fiscal regulations of the Chinese, and they must be left to agree on the means to raise the necessary funds as they best may, and the only thing left to us is to influence them in the choice of those means as far as the weight of our influence will avail. The injustice of levying the tax on exports rather than imports we have no hesitation to acknowledge, but that injustice, leaving questions between nations aside, must be born by every tea-drinker for the next ten years to come, who, though he had no share in running the Hong-merchants into debt, will, if he consumes 4 lbs of tea per annum, be taxed to the extent of a penny half penny every year.

By the [illegible] of South America (Amer.) from the West coast of South America, we have received a file of [illegible] Sandwich Islanders, from which we find however nothing to extract. We noticed some time since that two Catholic missionaries arriving there had been ordered out of the country, and see now in these papers that the anti-catholic measures are being followed up by the king, he having published a prohibition to all Catholic teachers to reside on the Island; if any should arrive, they are not allowed to land, or, if their health should render this absolutely necessary, they must be provided with a passport from the King. If contrary to these orders such missionaries should be landed, the ship will be forfeited, and the Captain be liable to a fine of 10,000 $! It also provides that if any foreigners or natives should assist each other in the tenets of the Catholic religion they are to be fined 100 $ each. Nor is this all, this royal proclamation is so worded that not only Catholic teachers, but teachers of other of the Christian sects may equally be amenable to this law. It is very evident from this proclamation that the missionaries have gained the ear of the king, and are the temporal rulers as well as spiritual guides of their flock. Throughout this document the Christian Catholic religion is only styled the religion of the Pope, as if it had no kindred with that of the Protestants. We are very sorry to see religious fanaticism again raise its head, and that teachers of Christianity should, for the purpose of persecution, abuse the ignorance of the rulers of that remote corner of the world. But the power, it seems, is theirs, and

"Man dressed in a little brief authority,

Chile and Peru.—A friend of ours has favored us with the following accounts received from Valparaiso per the Factor, which left in December. The two Republics of Peru and Chile were not yet at peace; business was very dull, and, indeed, in Chile in a state of complete stagnation. Reports from the Chilian army, which previous advices (Canton Press, 10 March.) left at Arequipa, are to the following effect: The Peruvian Dictator, General Santa Cruz, had assembled an army of ten thousand men, and invited the officers commanding the Chilian troops to be present at a review of them; they accordingly witnessed it, after which Santa Cruz proposed to them either to fight or to agree to an honorable treaty, they to retire with their arms, to be paid for their horses &c, &c, and Chile to pay the debt due to Peru. The latter alternative, viz the treaty, was accepted by the Chilean commanders, Blanco and La Fuente, but the Government of Chile refused to ratify it, a month being allowed them to consider. After the expiration of this term the Chilian Government sent their fleet to Callao, to convey their refusal, with orders to capture and cut out of harbour any Peruvian vessels, and in fact to recommence the war. The bad faith with which the Chilian Government has treated the generous proposal of Santa Cruz, at whose mercy their small army at Arequipa was altogether, cannot fail to waken their cause; meanwhile their foolishness and treachery prolong a war in which neither of the two countries can possibly gain anything, yet which must be ruinous to them both.

We are obliged to our correspondent "D." for the account he gives of the execution of a dealer in Opium at Macao, and marvel much at the same time that the Chinese should have chosen the Portuguese territory for such an exhibition. It is well known that the municipal government of Macao permits the free traffick in Opium, and chests of this drug may be daily seen to traverse the streets. This anomaly of seeing a trade tolerated, carried on by chests, which is punished by death when in retail, requires some explanation, and we are astonished at the apathy of the government of Macao to allow such disproportionate punishment to be inflicted for an offence which, by them, is tolerated and encouraged. We understand that this poor man suffered upon the representations of the Canton Government, by express orders of the Imperial council, to whom he had been represented as a man very influential in that line of trade, and whose being made an example of, would have a salutary influence upon others. The truth is, the man was a poor retail dealer, whose chief sin, poverty, could only be expiated by strangulation.

Another edict from the Vice-Roy against the Hospital ship has, we understand, appeared. In it it is threatened to drive the ship away by force, if she still continues disobedient, and to have the Hong-merchant, linguist and comprador delivered over to the Heun-magistrate for exemplary punishment.

Through the kindness of Mr. Morrison we are enabled to lay before our readers the Governor's reply to the address from the British merchants we published three weeks ago, and to two private memorials addressed to him on the subject of the Hing-tae debt by two English houses.

(Translation.)

Tang, Governor of Kwang-tung and Kwang-se, &c., &c., to the Senior Hong-merchants, for their full information.

On the 8th of April I received from Dent and others, [creditors of Hing-tae,] an address, as submitted,—and also like addresses from Jardine and Turner.

[Here follow the three addresses—in full.]

These coming before me, the Governor, I have fully investigated the subject. You Keehang and his associates, merchants of the Hing-tae Hong, having managed their affairs badly, and fallen in debt to the foreign merchants, these, seeing their difficult position and urgent necessities, and the impossibility of their at once paying off their old debts, conceived the idea of taking advantage of these circumstances to scrape and peel them, and spelling give them goods at an enhanced price, after the them to receive the same. Another debts reached the large amount of two millions of money. It is thus certain, that these merchants brought on their trouble themselves,—and also that the origin of the whole is to be found in the secret plundering exercised by the foreign merchants and their large, risking speculations. I, the Governor, in humble deference to the extreme goodness cherished by the great Emperor, and his tenderness towards foreigners, made no inquiry into the conduct of these foreign merchants, but simply directed Yen Kechang and his associates to be apprehended and tried, and their property placed in secure keeping. I, at the same time, commanded the two bodies of merchants, the Hong-merchants and the foreigners, to examine and ascertain in concert the real amount of the debts; and I laid my injunctions on the Hong-merchants to determine in what portions, and within what period, they would pay off the whole on behalf of Yen Keehang, and his fellows. Thus I arranged that the money should certainly be recovered. Afterwards, on all the foreign merchants representing that the period of fifteen years was too protracted a one, I granted permission to reduce it to twelve years, within which period the whole of the debts should be discharged. In this indeed I have gone to the utmost degree of kindness, and the extreme verge of justice. The foreign merchants, though they have been born and have grown up out of the pale of civilization,—yet are all provided with innate consciousness of good. How greatly ought they to be roused by gratitude, to rest in a dutiful and implicit obedience! Yet hardly was the former decision declared, when now again these foreign merchants Dent and others, and Jardine, and Turner, scheming to gain a speedy settlement, oppose my decision, and bring their addresses separately before me. Such ill-considered and unreasonable expressions as are here found—whence can they have emanated, unless from persons of hearts and feelings alien from those of the rest of mankind!

As an instance of this,—I take the consoo charge, of which one address speaks. This is a charge which should go to reward the toil of the Hong-merchant. I, the Governor, before made examination regarding it, and found that it had not been kept to accumulate from year to year. The Hong-merchants however themselves addressed me, with a proposal for the future to pay the consoo charge, as on former occasions into the general chest, to enable them to meet the stipulated instalment of former debts. This cannot be called ought else than the utmost degree of honorableness. If it be said that the consoo charge was instituted for the discharge of debts, let the foreign merchants ask themselves, if, while trading in the celestial Empire, they would wish to regard the profits which they enjoy as profits obtained merely for the purpose of payment of debts?

In regard to the consumption of goods, (referred to in Mr. Turner's address) in nothing is it more difficult to determine the amount. How can a comparison be instituted in this respect of one year with another? And amid the revolutions of trade, how shall it be ascertained that the prosperity which has preceded is not, in itself, the evidence of an approaching declension of trade?

In the note, a copy of which Jardine has presented, I observe, however, the statement, that the Hong-merchants have agreed to pay off the debt by instalments in nine years. If this be indeed the case, it is an act of liberality on the part of the merchants, affording a more ready recovery of the money, to which there is no reason,—my desire being to show kindness to the far-travelled,—why I, the governor, should not vouchsafe my sanction. I will therefore direct the financial and judicial commissioners to assemble the Hong-merchants, and, on ascertaining if this is true or false to determine once more upon a secure arrangement, and report for my investigation.

Besides so doing, I issue also this order, upon its reaching the said Senior Hong merchants, let then faithfully examine the subject, and at once report in answer. And, at the same time, let them enjoin my orders on the said foreign merchants, requiring their obdience thereof.

I, the Governor, have the rule over, and administration of, these provinces, and have to keep in tranquility and subjection those both within and from without; yet do I not refuse to the trivial and insignificant foreign debts a full and perfect administration of justice, and a complete settlement of them. But the foreign merchants, Dent and those with him, utterly dead to a sense of my goodness, presume in their address to represent, that they have requested their government to move the present sovereign of their nation to send an officer from afar to discuss the matter,—endeavoring thus to drive me to adoptmeasures. What perversity can exceed this mad and absurd barking! Let Dent and his fellows be most severely rebuked, and let them be commanded to imprint the laws upon their hearts, constantly to adhere to them. The severity of the Celestial Empire, represented by the sword of the executioner, is awful! Beware not again rashly to adventure a trial of it!—Oppose not these commands!

COMMERCIAL REMARKS.

IMPORTS.

COTTON MANUFACTURES.—LONGCLOTHS continue in good demand, and white of fine quality particularly are much wanted, and the price has advanced. There are very few in importer's hands. Chintzes of good patterns and in moderate quantities would sell readily. COTTON YARN, is much neglected and all but of good quality nearly unsaleable.

WOOLLENS.—The demand has not been so brisk within these few days, and our quotations, which are the same as last week's, could with difficulty be obtained LONGELLS are firmer, and both scarlet and assorted colors have advanced a little; none, we believe remain in first hands. CAMLETS without improvement in price or demand.

METALS.—LEAD, may be quoted a little higher than last week. IRON has also advanced.

RICE.—There has been a considerable fall of rain during the past week, and prices have consequently declined 5 @ 10 cents.

STRAITS PRODUCE.—A small lot of PEPPER recently imported of good quality, has been disposed of at 8¾. In BETELNUT, RATTANS, and TIN, we hear of no alteration.

SANDALWOOD.—An importation of Timor Sandalwood is reported as sold at Macao at $ 16 per Pecul.

COTTON.—In the absence of any arrivals, and the stock of all kinds being so very short, the speculators are demanding higher prices, and to which purchasers must submit, but the clearances are very small.

OPIUM.—We have heard of small sales of new Patna at 410, and most holders would, no doubt, gladly realize at that price, and even under. The demand for Malwa has been very brisk and as high, we hear, as 440 has been given for good quality, of which little remains The deliveries have been very large at Whampoa, particularly of Malwa. The deliveries at Lintin to the 8th were; Patna, old 84; new 180; Benares, old 60; new 29; Malwa, 99; Total 571 chests.

EXPORTS.

RAW SILK.—About 1100 bales have altogether lately arrived, and purchases were largely made in the beginning of the week at from 470 @ 510, but the market is a little quieter, a further quantity being expected down, and there being a difficulty in getting it Shipped off.

TEA.—With the exception of a few transactions for the American market; there is nothing doing.

FREIGHTS.—There is no available tonage here for England, but, as so many vessels are daily expected from England, freights must decline.

GENERAL CHAMBER OF COMMERCE,

Law Report.

The following law report, copied from the New-york Journal of Commerce, of a trial regarding Opium is one bearing so fully on the trade of this past season that we believe it will prove generally very interesting and useful.

SUPERIOR COURT, oct. 11th.

JUDGE OAKLEY, presiding.

Oliver G. Gordon vs. Edwin W. Benjamin.

This was an action to recover the balance of an account. From the evidence adduced, it appeared that in the Spring of 1833, the defendant shipped 43 cases of Opium from this port for Canton in China, consigned to Mr. Gordon, with instructions to remit the proceeds in tea and silk. The opium arrived at China in September, 1833, and on the 26th of that month Mr. Gordon sold it to John R. Latimer, who purchased it ostensibly for himself, but in reality for the firm of Jardine, Matthesons & Co. who were then endeavoring to get a monopoly of all the opium at Canton.

Opium being an article which loses considerably in weight by being opened, this is never done at Canton until it is sold to the Chinese dealers, and as the introduction of it into China is prohibited by the government, the European merchants who reside at Canton, have it stored in ships at Lintin, about forty miles from Canton, where it remains until delivered to the Chinese purchasers, who smuggle it into the country.

Mr. Gordon sold the opium in question for $ 609 the picul, at four months credit, subject to inspection when being delivered to the Chinese purchasers; or if any of it remained unsold at the commencement of the Chinese new year, 1st of February, it was then to be weighed and settled for, and on these conditions the opium was delivered to Mr. Latimer, on board a store ship at Lintin.

In the month of January following, the opium was examined, and part of it alleged to be of very inferior quality, and Mr. Gordon was asked to make a proportionate allowance on the price he sold it at.

There being no civil tribunal in China which takes cognizance of transactions between foreigners, when disagreements arise between them, they are referred to arbitration, and in cases like the present, the matter is referred to the masters of the store ships, whose award is always considered binding on both parties. On the present occasion the examination of the opium was referred to four masters of store ships who pronounced part of it bad, and made an award in favor of the purchaser, which was allowed him by Mr. Gordon.

In the mean time, before the bad quality of the opium was discovered, Mr. Gordon had sent the defendant by different shipments, teas and silks to the amount of $ 27,674, in anticipation of the proceeds of the opium, and after it was examined, and he was obliged to refund part of its cost, a balance remained due to him by the defendant, to the amount of $ 1553, to recover which, he instituted the present action. The hand writing of three of the four ship masters who signed the award, was proved in evidence.

For the defence it was alleged that when the defendant consigned the Opium to Mr. Gordon, he instructed him to sell it, and send China goods to the amount of it, and no more; that Mr. Gordon was bound to adhere strictly to these instructions, and that if he sent goods to a greater amount than the proceeds of the opium, he was liable to suffer the loss. It was also objected that there was not sufficient proof of the award, or test to have been properly made; as neither Mr. Gordon nor any agent of his was present when the opium was examined. A question of law was also raised, as to whether an award made in China was binding on a party here, who had never been consulted in relation to it, or given his consent to such a reference. And in order to lay ground for the inference that the award had been improperly made as regarded the bad quality of the opium, an offer was made to produce evidence that the opium was in good order and of good quality when shipped here, and that opium is not likely to deteriorate in its quality by a voyage from this to China.

The evidence so offered was objected to on the part of the plaintiff, and the objection sustained by the Court, which decided that evidence of the of the quality of the opium when leaving New York would be of no importance whatever, as if the award had been made according to the usual practice of China, it was a matter of no moment what the quality of the article was when shipped.

Counsel of both sides then summed up and

The Court charged the jury. That this was an action to recover the balance of an account, and the plaintiff had a right to recover, if his agency had been correct. There was no evidence to show the quality of the opium, and the Court had thought proper to exclude evidence of its state when leaving this country; for if the award had been made according to the usual practice of China, it must bind the parties, even though the Captains had made an error as to its value. And this the Jury were not to enquire into. The case stood upon the same footing as any dispute here, in which the parties agree to refer it to Mr. A and Mr. B, who make an award according to usage and law, and no matter what mistake may have been made, as the parties have attested their own tribunal, they must be bound by it.

The question for the Jury was, whether the reference was made according to the usage of foreign merchants at Canton. If they believed that the dispute had been mutually referred by the parties to persons who had a right to determine it,—that they did settle it,—and that Mr Gordon paid their award,—the Court can see no reason why he should not be paid it back.

Verdict for the plaintiff for the amount claimed, with interest, being $ 2000, 53.

For the plaintiff, Mr. Lord.

For the defendant, Mr. Cutting

Gleanings.

A POOR FELLOW.—Now lately we are brought to the acquaintance and another species of fellow, he with the poor fellow—another, and yet another. A worn-out good fellow makes a poor fellow. A poor fellow is a kind of waste but for superfluous pity, and the dregs of sympathy: compassion is not kindly administered, but carelessly thrown at him. His name is mentioned at tables where once he sat gaily and glorious; and there starts up at the sound of it a vision of a thread-bare coat of doubtful color, of a napless hat with a crown that flaps up and down in the wind and with a flabby brim that will never flap up again—a vision of leaky shoes, of greasy trowsers, of lantern jaws, and long gray hair; and the guests say, "Poor fellow"—then they drink their wine to drown the thought of him—thus laying the ghost in a red sea. A poor fellow is like a drone in autumn—there is something passing melancholy in the slowness of its gait, and there is in its form and aspect that which tells of a by-gone summer—of an evanescent brightness—a temporary flutter and gaiety; but cold winds are come, and heavy, and the poor shivering drone is creeping to as warm a death as it can find. The pity with which men look upon a poor fellow, is as different from the compassion with which they regard a poor man, as the praise which they bestow on a good fellow differs from the respect with which they treat a good man. There is something painful in the familiarity of pity, and the pertness of a half humorous sympathy. Even the truly generous feel some repugnance in administering to a poor man. A poor fellow reminds you of pay days; and there is a thought, not to be surmounted, that some moral obliquities have assisted to form the downward slope into the valley of adversity; while the poor fellow himself feels more deeply than all, the contrast of the present with the past; he knows that the past will never be present again, therefore he wishes the present to be past as soon as possible.—Poor fellow! Drop the curtain—Drop the curtain.—London Pretentious.

POOR DEBTORS.—In the Pickwick papers we find the following affecting description of the situation of the poor debtors, in the Fleet prison in London. It is disgraceful no civilization that man should be thus allowed in this boasted age of philanthropy to tyrannize over and oppress even unto death his fellow man:—

"The poor side of a debtor's prison is, as its name imports, that in which the most miserable and abject class of debtors are confined. A prisoner having declared upon the poor side, pays neither rent nor chummage. His fees, upon entering and leaving the jail, are reduced in amount, and he becomes entitled to a share of some small proportion of food, to provide which the charitable persons have, from time to time, left trifling legacies in their wills. Most of our readers will remember, that until within a very few year past, there was a kind of iron cage in the wall of the Fleet Prison, within which was posted some man of hungryl ooks who, from time, to time rattled a money box, and exclaimed, in a mournful voice, "Pray, remember the poor debtors; pray remember the debtors." The receipts of this box, when there were any, were divided among the poor prisoners, and the men on the poor side relieved each other in this degrading office.

Although this custom has been abolished, and the cage is now boarded up, the miserable and destitute condition of these unhappy persons remain the same. We no longer suffer them to appeal at the gates to the charity and compassion of the passers by; but we still leave unblotted in the leaves of our statute book, for the reverence and admiration of succeeding ages, the just and wholesome law which declares that the sturdy felon shall be fed and clothed, and that the penniless debtor shall be left to die of starvation and nakedness. This is no fiction. Not a week passes over our heads, but in every one of our prisons for debt, some of these men must inevitably expire in the slow agonies of want if they were not relieved by their fellow prisoners."

"WHAT'S IN A NAME?"—We find in a New York paper the following marriage announced:

At Norfolk Va., Ollenbockenoffenoffengraphensteiner, Dutch Consul to the United States, to widow Mary Slamslute.

Expensive. A Frenchman in one of our city hacks having observed that the coach in which he travelled had passed another, exclaimed to his friend, "Bear! se coash, vich was before, hine by, is now behind, peesenly, very."—Amer. Paper.

Hing-tae Affairs.

When last week we published the Governor's reply to the several letters addressed to him by the creditors of the Hongs, we omitted to give the two letters from two commercial houses, which we now recopy from the Register.

TO HIS EXCELLENCY THE VICE-ROY.

It is with extreme reluctance we again trouble your excellency with the affairs of the Hing-tae hong; but having waited in vain for upwards of two months in expectation of a reasonable proposal from the Hong merchants, for the liquidation of said debts, in pursuance of the order issued by your excellency on the 6th day of January last—11th day, 12th moon—we can no longer delay bringing to your excellency's notice that on the 20th day of January last, we received an assurance from the senior Hong-merchants, Howqua and others, that our claims should have their particular attention in course of the first month of the Chinese year; but up to this hour nothing has been done

On the 26th day of this moon we addressed the enclosed letter to Howqua and the other merchants of the Co-hong, from which and his reply it appears that the foreign merchants have in the last four years paid upward of $1,500,000 to the Hongyune fund, without claiming from the said fund one dollar; now, when the Hing-tae hong, by an act of swindling, retains foreign property to upwards of two millions of dollars, they, the Co-hong, propose paying the sum back without interest in nine years!

This proposal is so manifestly unjust, that we bring it once more to your excellency's notice, in full confidence that orders for a more equitable settlement will emanate from your excellency's sense of justice; and save yourself and us the trouble of further appeal. With this view we address your excellency, and remain &c.

(Signed.) JARDINE MATHESON & Co.

Canton, April 8th.

Enclosure referred to in the above address. Letter from Mr. Jardine to Howqua, and the other members of the Co-hong. Dated 21st March.

Dear Sir,—I was favored on the 13th ulto. with your letter of the 12th, proposing to liquidate the debts of the Hingtae hong by instalments in nine years, and requesting me to communicate the same to the other creditors.

This communication was made accordingly and their unanimous refusal to accept such unreasonable and unjust terms was made known to you by Mr Turner and myself early in this month; but having heard nothing from you or the Consoo since, I shall now reply to your letter in writing.

The creditors have attentively examined, and duly weighed, the arguments, advanced by the Cohong; and I beg leave to trouble you with a few observations thereon.

Your statement of the debts due by the two hongs of Guewqua and Ponqua,—1,400,000 Taels,—or $1,944,444,—paid in ten years, from the limited foreign trade of the period, is liberal in the extreme, when compared with your offer to pay the claims against the Hing-tae hong, $2,261,439, in nine years from a trade of nearly double the amount.

In the course of six years the debts of Manhop and Chunqua were paid from the proceeds of Teas out of the Company's treasury, between the years 1829 a 1834, amounting to $1,095,300; when the quantity of that article annually sent to England was only 30 millions of pounds; and the same contributions which enabled the Co-hong to pay annually 837,431 for the three last years, have been paid by the foreign merchants to the Consoo fund, or Hongyune (for the use of the hongs), ever since: that is for four years on upwards of 40 millions per annum, without one dollar having been claimed by them from the said fund. And still the Co-hong propose paying the claims now made in 9 years, after having already received more than three fifths of the whole sum claimed:—$1,513,136.

Is this reasonable or just?

It is well known that the foreign claims have on all occasions, and at all times, been paid by this Hongyune tax on the foreign trade; a tax instituted for the express purpose; and which ought to have ceased being levied the moment there were no foreign debts to be paid off. In fact, the Co-hong must have gained rather than lost by the payment of the foreign claims from means so abundantly ample.

I remain &c.

(Signed.) WILLIAM JARDINE.

Address from Messrs. Turner & Co. Dated April 8.

To His Excellency,

The Governor of the two Kwang Provinces.

A Respectful Address.

We received, so long ago as the 8th January, your Excellency's reply to our former petition, and should have considered it necessary to answer it much earlier, but for the solemn pledge made to us by the senior hongmerchant, that a satisfactory settlement with Hingtae's Creditors should be come to in course of the 1st moon of the present year. Resting upon this pledge being faithfully redeemed, we were in hopes that there would no longer be any necessity for troubling your Excellency.

It is therefore with extreme regret that we now find the necessity returned upon us of appealing to your Excellency, and that, too, with feelings of the keenest disappointment to complain, not only of the pledge so solemnly given not having been redeemed, but of the day seeming to be as far distant as ever for settling our very heavy and long pending claims.

Your Excellency, in replying to our last petition, states, that the hongmerchants had of themselves proposed to liquidate the debts of the Hingtae hong in fifteen years; but that your Excellency, considering that period too long, had directed them to reduce it to twelve years.

Upon this we beg to remark, that, had your Excellency's reduction of three years brought the time of payment within seven years from the period of the hong's stopping, we should have felt disposed to accede to it; but when the magnitude of the amount is considered, and how greatly the want of so large a portion of their capital must cramp the trade of the several creditors, and also what heavy pecuniary loss they are suffering by no interest whatever being allowed them; when this combination of evils is considered, your Excellency will not be surprised to learn, that our determination is not to cease appealing to your Excellency's sense of justice, until a more equitable period be named.

And, as the hongmerchants have of themselves recently proposed to reduce your Excellency's period of twelve to ten years, your Excellency cannot but perceive in such a proposition, an admission on their part of the unreasonableness of their first offer, and that they only wait the further commands of your excellency to agree to a more just settlement.

To convince your excellency of the unanswerable reasonableness of our proposal, we have only to lay before you the following facts:

First. That from the year 1829 to the year 1834, the Co-hong paid the following amount of debts owing by insolvent hongs, viz.

Debts to Foreigners	$ 2,226,767
Duties	„ 488,619
Making in all	$ 2,715,315

paid in the space of five years, being at the rate of $540,077 per annum, being more than sufficient to pay off in a much shorter period the amount due from Hing-tae, supposing no interest to be paid thereon.

Secondly. That from the early part of 1834 until the present date, no claim whatever has been made by foreigners upon the Cohong, though the foreign trade has regularly contributed the regular Hong Yung tax for the purpose of liquidating foreign debts. And Thirdly. (To which we particularly beg to call your Excellency's attention) the trade of the Port, both of imports and exports, has increased fully one third, and that too on articles the Consoo duties on which press most heavily. An illustration of this most important fact, we beg to refer your Excellency to the statement at foot.

With such an accumulation of facts in our favor, what reasonable objection can the Cohong raise to our most equitable, and, for our own welfare, far too indulgent, proposal? Your Excellency will surely not allow poverty to be pleaded, when so large sums have been levied within these four years for the Consoo Fund—a Fund established expressly for paying the debts of bankrupt hongs, and upon which no claim whatever has been made by foreigners during the whole of that period! Your Excellency is besides well aware, that we look not to the Hong-merchants for satisfaction of these claims, but to the imperial government itself. It is the fixed notorious law of the Empire, and upon the good faith of which the British nation has for so long a period traded with it, that the imperial government holds itself responsible for the just debts of its subjects.—We cannot but regret the annoyance your Excellency complains of from these our frequent remonstrances, and earnestly entreat your Excellency at once to put an end to them by an early settlement of our just demands.

We have &c.

CANTON PRESS.

Saturday, 21st April.

A Correspondent of the Register, under the signature of M, complains in the last number of that paper of the remarks we made last week on the respective claims of creditors of the Hing-tae and the Kingqua hongs, he wishing so make it appear that the creditors of the former have a right, as to payment from the Co-hong, to precedence over the latter, and the only grounds upon which he rests his position are that Hing-tae has been declared insolvent by the Government, while Kingqua still carries on business, and that the creditors of the former are on the eve of a settlement with the Co-hong to pay in 9 years, which settlement has not been equally demanded by those of the latter. As to Kingqua's insolvency there can be no doubt, since we have it black on white from the Hong-merchants, signed by them and King qua himself among them. They say in their letter to Hingtae's creditors dated 4th April (vide Canton Press 14th) "Thus in every direction we have payments to make. And besides all this King-qua's hong is now in arrear of the public claims on it to the extent of 300,000 Taels, whilst the foreign claims against it exceed million. This hong, although we are thankful to observe, it is your wish to keep it from bankrupcy, yet will not, we are disposed to think, be able to sustain these payments, and it will be requisite for us to make other arrangements therefor."

This, signed by the insolvent Hong-merchant himself, seems to us equal to an avowed bankrupt; nor does the Hong-merchants address to the creditors "thanking them to observe that it is their wish to keep it from bankruptcy" invalidate this evidence, since the remark seems to have been elicited in answer to a letter, from one or more of the creditors, to the Co-hong, silently passing over however the condition on which such indulgence was offered which was, that they were to be treated the same as the creditors of Hing-tae. Though we do not think it conducive to the general interests of the trade here to allow hongs, avowedly bankrupt, to continue doing business under an accumulating load of debt, being convinced that, without credit, they will find it impossible to carry on a remunerating trade and only get more deeply involved, yet the question, whether the Hong is to be closed or not, rests entirely with the Governor, who has hitherto forborne to take active measures for the recovery of the duties owing by King-qua, which we have seen to amount to 300,000 Taels, and if, after the Co hong shall have agreed to pay the King-qua debts, that Hong is allowed to continue in business, King qua's situation will be similar to that of a bankrupt in England after he has obtained his certificate.

It is well known that King-qua's embarrassments are of long standing, and that consideration for his great age and respectability as well as of friendship for one of his partners have hitherto induced most of the creditors to abstain from asking for the interference of the Government; and not only did the creditors agree to wait, but they even, merely with a view to help him through his difficulties, assisted him with loans of money, and these now form part of the debts owing by him. Instead however of this indulgence enabling him to retrieve his affairs, the Hong has become more deeply involved than before, nor do the same considerations for saving it exist now in the same degree as before, old King-qua having been dead some time. If therefore the Cohong should start any difficulties against placing the creditors of this hong on the same footing with those of Hing-tae, and that they will do this we much doubt, the only resource of the claimants will be to demand the interference of the local Government, when, as a natural consequence, that Hong must also be shut up, and the creditors come upon the Consoo tax in the same manner as those of Hingtae.

M. in conclusion says:

"Once allow this principle (of amalgamation) to be established, and who would be willing to delay pressing his claims on any other delinquent hong, for settlement by the Cohong, let the cause of delinquency be what it might? It would, in fact, be constituting all the hongmerchants copartners for every private as well as public purpose, and render all liable for the engagements of each, let these engagements be ever so injudicious or unfair.

"It appears, therefore, to be both the right and interest of the creditors of Hingtae firmly to resist every attempt to blend their claims with those on Kinqua, which would not only be unjust, but embarrass and delay the settlement of all."

The "principle of amalgamation" already exists, and it is well understood, at least it has been frequently acted upon, that the Hong-merchants are "Copartners for every private as well as public purpose," for on this principle do the Hingtae claimants demand payment by means of the Consoo tax, and upon this principle have the debts of Manhop, Chun-qua, and many others been ultimately paid.

We should be sorry to see the creditors of Hingtae, as M. threatens, resist the equal settlement of the debts of King-qua, as such resistance would probably only still more protract a final agreement without a prospect of the least advantage to the former, whose pretensions, if they share them in common with M., are evidently too unjust to be allowed.

We give in, another part, the statement of the Chamber of Commerce of the combined British and American trade in the season 1836-1837. They differ in no respect from the separate statements of the respective trades published by us last year.

A military officer poisoned himself by taking Opium on Sunday last, in one of the foreign Factories, in consequence of losses at gambling. When Doctor Cox was apprized of it, he immediately went to offer his assistance, but came too late.

We publish in another column the regulations for the next boat race of the Canton Regatta Club for the information of amateurs.

The Hong-merchants have addressed, we hear, another letter to Hing-tae's creditors, explanatory of the reasons why they cannot promise, in less than ten years, to pay off the debts of Hingtae. The document having appeared only yesterday, we are not enabled to lay a translation of it before our readers.

The arrival of the Emily Jane, and the politeness of some of our friends has put us in possession of Calcutta papers to the 18th February, but they contain nothing but of local interest, and are chiefly filled with the accounts of the honors shewn to Sir C. Metcalfe on his return to Europe. The famine in the upper provinces is represented as being still unrelieved, and the sufferings of the population are said to be dreadful. Calcutta merchants suffered from a great scarcity of cash, aggravated, to judge from the reports of the papers, by Government refusing to make any more advances upon produce shipped to Europe.

We have seen only one Singapore paper as yet, and that of the 8th March, which only gives the news, already well known, of the December overland mail.

COMMERCIAL REMARKS.

IMPORTS.

COTTON MANUFACTURES.—White LONGCLOTHS, continue to be much wanted and our quotations for the first moderate supplies will be readily obtained. Gray are also in good demand COTTON YARN, of inferior quantity is very depressed with a large stock; good water twist would sell at $ 40 @ 44. CHINTZES, The supply of Chintzes of good patterns and quality has been moderate, and our highest quotation will be obtained for the first arrival.

WOOLLENS.—SPANISH STRIPES, have rather declined, the reports just received of the northern markets not being so favorable as had been expected, but we have heard of no sales during the week; there are very few in importers hands. LONGELLS, maintain their price, but the purchases are very limited at present rates. CAMLETS. English are almost unsaleable at our present ruinous quotation. Dutch are on the advance rather, all being bought up.

METALS.—Iron is enquired for at our prices.

LEAD,—has declined, a large supply of native lead having come to market.

RICE,—is without alteration—the weather continues tolerably favorable.

STRAITS PRODUCE,—without change, there being no importations. TIN is a little firmer.

COTTON,—the whole stock on hand is not more than about 20,000 bales —Bombay 14,000. Bengal 4000, Madras 2000, which accounts for our high quotations, and which cannot be sustained on further importations.

OPIUM.—The deliveries continue very active at Whampoa from the foreign passage boats in the face of the threats of the mandarins. The supply of good Malwa is very short, and the price for a day or two was run up to nearly 500 $—but this was nominal, and it as rapidly receded to 440 @ 450, at which it goes off readily. The demand for the new Bengal drug is not so active and the arrival of the Emily Jane will tend to lower prices still more. Turkey is almost unsaleable at our quotation. The Lintin clearances to the 15th, and which include those at Whampoa, consisted of Patna, old 98; new 402; Benares, old 93; new 61; Malwa, 467; Total 1121 Chests.

EXPORTS.

NANKING SILK.—There have been further arrivals which, with the 1100 reported last week are estimated at about 2000 bales, nearly all Tsatlee, and of these fully one half have been purchased at from 475 @ 530—and we find the demand is still brisk. The export was about 4000 bales up to the 10th, and from 700 @ 1000 have been since shipped or are in the course of shipment.

TEA.—We have no transactions to report, and prices remain as before. The exports to Great Britain to this date consist of Black lbs 24,370,133.

Green .. 6,847,200.

Total ..31,218,133.

and there are only two ships loading, which will not make the export more than 32,200 000 lbs up to the 30th inst, against 38,177,200 lbs last season.

THE THREE PAGODAS

Singapore Free Press 22nd March.

It is a general opinion amongst the few, who ever have heard of the passage into Siam, called the Three Pagodas, that this must be a stupendous pass through mountains many thousand feet high, fathomless precipices on the right and left, rivulets winding their silver streams in a most picturesque manner through every fissure, cataracts thundering over enormous rocks, &c, in fact a Claude Lorraine "tableau en gros."

To this point at least were my expectations raised by accounts received in Maulmain from connoisseurs who said that they were amazed and delighted with the alpine grandeur of the scenery The accounts of one gentleman who visited the place, I suppose the last, were so deviating from the other descriptions, that I thought he must have been on the spot in the time of heavy fogs. thick mists, and moist vapours, so that he lost all that magnificence of the scenery, when rocks and mountains, abysses and silver streams disappeared. I was much more convinced of the prosaic turn of his mind, and want of susceptibility to admire the beauties of nature, because the accounts of the Burmese which I gathered were equally more or less wonderful.

Many days before our caravan arrived there, the Three Pagodas were the topic of general conversation, and I was amused with the never ending stories of the wars between the Burmese and Siamese in these parts, in which the latter were always the victors. for it was impossible to penetrate through this mountain pass; the Siamese had nothing to do but to await quietly the arrival of their foes, after having loosened rocks and mountains, and when they arrived to throw them upon their heads, by which, on the last occasion, 3000 at once were smashed to pieces, whose bleached bones, they pretend, are disseminated to this hour through this terrible passage.

Since this time the three Pagodas have attained a kind of awful celebrity amongst the people. To these fables, or at least very much improved truths, must be added that, indeed, scarcely any body ventured to visit the place before the British took possession of the country, for the sly Siamese, preserving always a kind of superiority in the mountains, caught many who were so bold as to approach these wonderful regions, and carried them away into slavery. Some hunters, however, attracted by the numbers of elephuts, or by mysterious accounts, or because some men have a natural bent to brave danger, frequented annually the place, but, to use their own expression. always "with a stick in their mouth" to keep silence.

Nothing is so much a proof of the utter change which these provinces have undergone during the last ten years, as the complete confidence, which all the inhabitants have of the inviolability of their persons, and to this day it seems to them extraordinary, that they can wander, not only to the Three Pagodas, but every where, without fear of meeting a plundering party, or even a single lurking Siamese to disturb them. The consciousness of the faith and power of their present rulers is also one of the best means to insure their submission and attachment.

The historical origin of the Three Pagodas I do not know, nor what may be the reason, that in old and very incorrect European maps, this name is a substitute for mountain and rivers to fill the empty space. All I could hear is, that a long time ago, there was a great war between the Siamese and the Burmese, which finished as all wars do, with peace making, but not content with a simple cessation of hostilities, it was agreed that there should be also an everlasting friendship between the two nations, and to celebrate that "holy alliance" they met on the frontier. The Burmese built one Pagoda on their ground, and the Siamese another on their ground, and between these a third was built half by the Siamese and half by the Burmese together on the neutral territory.

These Three Pagodas are now only three heaps of stones, each about ten feet high, and small pieces of brick, scantily dispersed, prove only that they are the remains of some building. They are situated in a sloping plain of calcareous rocks. The surrounding scenery is sombre and desolate; the vegetation is scanty, and the trees around stormbesten and stunted. In vain will the traveller seek the "alpine magnificence." From the level of the Zamee-Khyoung (a part of the Attaran) he will ascend gradually in a valley, sometimes of several miles width, generally fertile, and often qualified for improved cultivation, now covered chiefly with forests, and after two days march he will unexpectedly find himself before the three insignificent heaps of stone, and to his astonishment he will then perceive, that he had left already all the passes, abysses, and other terrors, behind him without knowing it.

From the Three Pagodas it is impossible to get a view of the country, but to the N. by W. is a solitary limestone mountain which repays amply the great trouble of ascending it. The whole unknown region towards the east lies spread wide open before the wandering eye. It is an indeterminate succession of mountain ridges, the last certainly upwards of 8,000 feet high, at a probable distance of from 80 to 100 miles. As far as the spy-glass can discern, all is one uninterrupted dense mass of forest, without a single cleared spot, to designate the existance of man, the wild elephants alone swarming in great numbers in this solitude, manifests their presence from time to time by a sudden cracking of bamboos and underwood through which they pass.

To draw the line of demarcating of the frontier round the Three Pagodas, would be a very difficult task, for it is not, as supposed, a chain of mountains running from north to south, but a high table land intersected by differently extended ridges. If the highest chain of mountains, from which the rivers run into the Bay of Bengal, were to be taken as the natural frontier, then must the British territory occupy some 80 or 100 miles breadth more to the eastward, for the true source of the Attaran and its tributaries is to be sought far beyond the Three Pagodas. The imaginary frontier is now a great vacuum drawn ad libitum, and much time will probably elapse, before these uninhabited parts will become a matter of dispute or mere discussion.

Maulmain.

Maulmain Chronicle, January 20.

We hear that the raising of a Talien corps is proceeding very successfully. About a hundred substantial looking fellows, may already be seen morning and evening, on the parade ground, undergoing the drilling process, and when the corps is filled up, as it will no doubt shortly be, it will make a very respectable appearance and form a portion of military defence or attack, of which no commander need be ashamed. Whether its prowess will soon be tried or not is a question involved in some doubt at present, for it is now said that the King of Burmah is most peacefully inclined—that his visions of extended acquisitions are departed from him, and that he desires nothing more than to live on good terms with his English friends—so much so, that he is ready to sign the treaty of Yandaboo, and admit a British Resident at his Court. We should, however, be glad to have some confirmation of the truth of this report, as it is so much at variance with some of his previous declarations that we are not prepared to give it entire credence. But be that as it may, of a military force stationed here, a Talien corps will form an important part, and in due time might become a substitute for the Madras Sepahis. Had the Government, since its occupation of these provinces, studied its own interest, it would have raised long ago a regiment or two of Taliens. They are all the natural enemies of the Burmese, and physically quite their equals. They are in their native country and amongst their friends and relatives, and so far as these considerations act as stimulants on the mind of the soldier, they will have their effect on the mind of the local levies which may be made here. The transport of native troops from Madras to this place, is attended with very considerable expence to the Government, for the sepahi is not only brought here, but the additional expense of furnishing a supply of such articles of food, as his cast permits him to eat, must be incurred. By substituting, therefore, the Taliens for them, the item of expenditure for transport vessels will be greatly diminished, and to this consideration may be added that of the uniform cheapness of all articles of consumption, and the fact that the natives are not in the least degree fastidious as to the kind or quality of the food, or where they happen to find it. That they are stronger and more athletic than the natives on the other side of the Bay is too well known to admit of dispute; consequently they may be expected to endure labour with less fatigue, and particularly in times of active service to last longer. Should there ever be another occasion for sending a military force into Burmah, it might be supposed, for several reasons, that a Talien corps would be a most useful adjunct. Their habits of life and their acquaintance with the language, people, and country, would enable them to perform many services in aid of a march, with ease and despatch, which might be difficult for foreigners to accomplish.

How the Taliens will behave, when transformed into regular, disciplined soldiers, and brought into the open field, remains yet to be proved; but there is no reason to doubt that, they will be quite equal to any Asiatic enemies with whom it may be their fortune to contend.

We are curious to know what effect the news of training and arming the Taliens will have on the Court of Ava. As hundreds will be magnified into thousands by the time the report reaches the king's ears, it is not improbable that the oilgeibrium of the royal mind may be a little disturbed.—Singapore Free Press 15th March.

Chinese trade in Singapore.

We have been kindly furnished by the local authorities, with a tabular statement of all the Junks and Topes that have visited this port, from China, Cochin-China, and Siam, since the commencement of the present year, with their separate tonnage, and the number of the crew and passengers on board of each, which we publish in an after column. The total number of passengers is 2,069 all from China, with a very trifling exception; and it is observable that it is only from ports in the province of Fuk-keen, or Hokien, that there are numerous emigrants, the Junks from the province of Canton and Seanghai, bringing comparatively few. The total amount of tonnage exhibited by the table is 9,854 tons, and the number of Junks 65, which divides itself between the three countries in the following proportions.—

From China.....	Junks.....	28	Tons 5965
" Cochin-China	Do. and Topes	27	" 1829
" Siam	Do. and Do	10	" 2060
		65	9854

The two last mentioned items by no means represent however the amount of the native trade or tonnage either from Cochin-China or Siam, during the period included in the statement, as from both these countries, square-rigged vessels, under native management, have at the same time imported valuable cargoes. The number of Junks from China is thus rear considerable; and many of them having as usual had on board a portion of their cargo for Java, the tidings of the new Import Tariff at Batavia was heard with some dismay, as it subjects their importations to double duty by having touched at this port.

It is not to be understood that the whole of the above large number of passengers landing from the Chinese Junks make an addition of any permanent nature to the population of this Settlement, the major part of them very soon dispersing themselves among the neighbouring countries.—Ibid.

Female Infanticide.

(From the Indo Chinese Gleaner.)

"Ho lun-yuen in his ode on the drowning of females says.—"The nature of the tiger is most cruel, yet it knows the relation betwixt parent and off spring.

"Man is the spiritual part of all things; shall he be inferior to the tiger? In bearing a boy or a girl, conception and bringing forth are the same with respect to both.

"I have heard that when female children are killed, the state of suffering is beyond comparison—whilst yet in its blood unable to speak, it cries in the tub of water—long suffering ere it dies—O alas! the heart of parents that can endure this!

"I would advise my people not to kill their daughters. All that is required for their head pins, and raiment will not impoverish you. The disposition of daughters is most tender. They love their parents better than sons do. Many sons go from home; daughters cleave to their parents. Many sons are disobedient to their parents; daughters are obedient. Many sons wander to a distance; daughters keep at home. Sons have little feeling; daughters always weep for their parents. Daughters love their virtuous husbands, and in many cases increase the honor of their parents.

"Do you not observe how Te-so (whose name occurs in ancient story) prevented the punishment of her father? Don't you remember how the female Tang-heang opposed a tyger and rescued her father?

"The female Shan at the age of 18, knew how to conduct the funeral rites of her father. The virtuous and dutiful females of ancient times were very numerous. It is impossible to mention them all.

"The magistrates sometimes wrote tablets in their praise. The Emperor also graciously conferred presents on them. Some were made ladies of the palace—some wives of the nobility. If you preserve the lives of your daughters, a happy recompence will be the consequence."

Trade of Great Britain to the United States.

From a paper read by Mr. Porter to the British Association at their meeting at Liverpool,

The tonnage of vessels which entered the ports of the United States from foreign countries, in each year, from 1821 to 1836, distinguishing American and British from other shipping, was as follows:—

Years ending 30th Sept.	American.	British.	Other Foreign Vessels.	Total.	Centesimal Proportion of Brit. to American Tonnage.

These figures do not in any way justify the complaints of those persons who can see nothing but ruin to the shipping interest of this country from the relaxation of our navigation laws, introduced by the late Mr. Huskisson, and adopted and carried out by his successors in office. The most interesting part by far of our trade with America consists in our exports of manufactured goods. The extent on the shipments in 1815 is evidently the result of the renewal of commercial intercourse after the war, but the years 1805, 1806, and 1807, 1835 and 1836, followed long periods of friendly intercourse. The serious falling off that occurred in 1808 and 1809 arose, as already stated, be attributed to the effect of our celebrated orders in council, issued in retaliation for Napoleon's Milan and Berlin decrees. Nearly one-third of our foreign export trade in 1805, 1806, and 1807, was carried on with the United States. Our trade with the continental nations was destroyed so far as the powers of France could destroy it, and under these circumstances it was of peculiar importance that we should preserve, as far as possible, a branch of trade which gave so much and such constant employment to our merchants and manufacturers. It is difficult to account for the blindness and infatuation of the government, which could adopt a course by which, what was so important to the nation, both commercially and politically, was put to hazard. The great political advantage of this trade may be thus explained. The merchants of the United States were accustomed to send American produce to the continent of Europe, to a much greater value than the goods they took in return. In their dealings with this country, their practice was directly the contrary; their purchases from us being always much greater than the American produce taken off by the English markets. The means for liquidating the balance thus raised against the American merchants were found in the circumstances of their trade with the remaining portion of Europe. The fund which these merchants had provided them in excess, furnished what was wanting to pay for the balance of their purchases from us, and a safe and most convenient mode of transmitting the funds for this purpose was offered in bills on the English treasury; the specie wherewith these were purchased being applied to pay subsidies and military charges on the Continent, for which this government was answerable, and for which it was difficult otherwise to provide. It cannot be necessary in this place to dwell upon the failure which so signally attended the retaliatory orders in council of the English government. Our enemy had shut up every channel within his power through which our commerce could flow, and we, instead of looking out for new channels, or making the most of those which were beyond the control of our enemy, most unwisely added him to his scheme, by putting a stop to all trade that was not conducted through those old accustomed channels. As might have been expected, the regulations of the belligerents were met such as the government of the United States would adopt for the prosecution of their trade with Europe. Finding that their flag was excluded from the ports of the Continent, except upon terms which they considered degrading, all commercial intercourse with either of the belligerents was interdicted; and the result, as it affected our manufactures, is apparent in the diminished amount of our exports. This system of non-intercourse was followed, as will be remembered, by a declaration of war against this country on the part of America, affording, it is to be hoped, the last instance in which two powerful countries, whose interests are so nearly identical in every position that can increase the happiness and advance the true dignity of human nature, will suffer themselves to be dragged into hostility for the gratification of mistaken ideas of honour. The high degree of importance to each country of the trade which it carries on with the other, need no further exemplification than is offered by the tables appended to this memoir.* The proportion which that trade bears to the entire foreign trade of each country are there given. In this point of view, it would appear as if the intercourse were of more importance to America than it is to this country, inasmuch as the trade with the United Kingdom bears a larger proportion to the whole trade of the United States than our trade with those States bears to the whole foreign trade of this country. But, on the other hand, it may be truly said, that this densely peopled country is necessarily more dependent for prosperity upon its trade than America, and would suffer more from the loss of the smaller proportional amount of its commerce, which is involved in the intercourse we have been considering, than the United States would suffer from the loss of the much larger proportional amount of its trade which depends upon England.

N. B.

"In the foregoing pages, all remarks upon the state of convulsion into which this most important branch of our foreign trade has lately been thrown have been avoided, partly because its occurrence is too recent to allow of a sufficiently calm estimate being made of the cause or causes which led to the catastrophe, but chiefly because it would be difficult, if not impossible, to enter upon the subject without departing from that line of strict statistical search which it is to desirable to preserve in the proceedings of this Section of the British Association. It is with much satisfaction that I venture, in conclusion, to offer one remark, which, however, falls sufficiently within the limit thus drawn. The shipments of British produce and manufactures, in the year 1836 amounted, according to the value declared by the exporters, to 53,368,571£., of which sum, America took 12,425,405£., or 23.28 per cent. The total shipments in 1835 amounted to 47,372,270£.; of which America took 10,568,485£., or 22.31 per cent; the difference between the two years being, on the total shipments, 5,996,301£., and on the shipments to America, 1,857,130£. Without admitting or denying that these figures give evidence of over-trading, I would venture to call your attention to the circumstances of the two people—namely, that the means of obtaining the comforts of life are enjoyed by a larger proportion of them, than is the case with any other people; that the habits and predilections of the citizens of the United States lead them to give a preference to British goods; that ours is the cheapest market in which they can procure many articles necessary to them; and that we are, out of all proportion, the best customers for the raw produce of their soil; and

* Several interesting Tables are given in the Report of the Section, confirmatory of the statements contained in it, which were found impracticable to be given here for which we must refer our readers to the Report itself. —Liverpool Gazette.

I would then ask whether, if the trade of the two countries were put upon a proper fotoing, and conducted upon enlightened principles, that amount of traffic should be considered excessive which gives annually to every citizen of the United States articles of British growth and manufacture to the value of sixteen shillings and sinepence three farthings!"

From Sir. A. Johnston's, annual report of the proceedins of the Asiatic Society.

On the subject of the third division, the following circumstances were related, and possess much commercial interest.

"The first, that of the frontiers of the British possessions in India having been recently extended, partly by conquest, partly by acquisitions obtained by treaties, to the neighbourhood of the province of Yunnan, the western province of China. The second, that of the discovery which has recently been made, that the tea-plant is growing in a tract of country extending 300 milles within the British territories. The third, that of British traders having been enabled, in consequence of the opening of the trade with China to all British subjects, to visit parts of that empire which were never visited before by British subjects, and to become better acquainted than they formerly were with the produce of the different islands in the Eastern Archipelago, and with the various wants of their inhabitants. With a view to these circumstances, the committee have taken measures for procuring all the valuable information which is preserved in the archives of the Jesuits, at Naples, Rome Genoa, Venice, Paris, Madrid, and Lisbon, respecting Upper and Lower Assam, Munipore, Bong, the north east parts of the Burmese empire, Laos, Cambodia, Cochin-China, and all the western provinces of China; for calling the attention of the British public to the moral, political, and commercial importance of the Anglo-Chinese college, established at Malacca by the late Dr. Morrison, and so liberally supported by Sir George Staunton; for encouraging the Rev. Mr. Gutzlaff to proceed in his very interesting inquiries relative to the history, literature, and science of China, to the practice of medicine in that country, and to the different idioms which are spoken by the people of Japan, who inhabit the coasts of that empire for acquiring a knowledge of the island of Quelport, which, from its local situation, is of as much importance to those who wish carry on a trade with Japan and Corea, as the island of Singapore is to those is to those who wish to carry on a trade with Siam and Cochin-China on the one side, and all the islands of the Eastern Archipelago on the other; for having translations made from the Dutch into English of all the papers in the Dutch records of Ceylon, Cochin, Negapatnam, and Malacca, which throw any light upon the history of the islands in the Eastern Archipelago, and upon the trade which was, and is still, carried on between the Dutch settlements and those islands; and for obtaining from Mr. Earl,—a gentleman whose observations as to these islands, and the policy which the British government ought to observe with respect to their inhabitants, are of so much value,—the information which he collected during the recent voyages which he made to Borneo, and many of the islands in the Eastern Archipelago."—*Lit. Hingtae Affairs.

FROM THE HONG MERCHANTS TO THE CREDITORS OF HINGTAE.

A respectful Communication.—Some time since we took under consideration the debts of the Hingtae hong, and decided that we would pay them in nine annual instalments. Of this, we sent you information, by letter. But, though a long time has elapsed, we have not yet received any reply from you.

We have now reconsidered the subject of these debts owing from the Hingtae hong to you, and also your opinion, frequently expressed to us severally, that, if, from the fixed sum of five taels for commissions and charges on the tea, we deduct in every instance one tael for repayment of the debts, the whole may certainly be paid out of the probable transactions of your trade, and need not fall at all upon us. Though, in this view of the subject, it would at first sight appear that we shall not be taxed to exert ourselves; yet, on carefully weighing the matter, and estimating its real bearings, we are convinced, that such an arrangement would be attended with great hardship to us. For, at the present time, the sum of five taels for commissions and various charges exists only in name, and not in reality.

This will be seen to be the case, if we consider the impracticability of prescribing fixed rules as to the manner of conducting the tea trade. Sometimes, teas are contracted for at certain prices, and the market price afterwards rises above or falls below the sum stipulated. So that, it is impossible to ensure even the return of expended capital. And whence, then, shall the sum of five tael's be drawn? At other times, the tea is purchased as opportunities offer, or is prepared directly for us upon the farms where it is grown. As we cannot foreknow wether the prices we shall receive will be high or low, it is impossible, in such cases, to calculate whether we shall not be losers. And how, then, can we ensure the receipt of this sum of five taels? Again, after contracts are arranged by us, it sometimes happens, from sudden changes in the condition of our affairs, that the tea-men, pretending that the tea is not according to muster, withdraw from the contracts. And whence then shall the five taels be derived? If it be said, as soon as you purchase sell again,—we answer, that this may occasionally be done, but not oftener than twice or thrice in every ten cases. Such an arrangement can certainly not be effected at all times.

To small and insignificant branches of trade, no fixed rules can be prescribed. How much less is the large trade in a staple commodity such as tea! We cannot, because any of you, gentlemen, should select a first class of tea, proceed to purchase for you, at that particular moment, and at any specified price, the chops of tea that you select. For should we deduct the five taels from such specified price, and pay the remainder to the tea-merchants, how do we know that these will sell to us upon such terms? Moreover, gentlemen, it is commonly the case, that we make previous contracts with you, stipulating the price and the quantity to be furnished. And consequently we must make early contracts for, or early purchases of, a large number of chops of tea, to enable us to meet the amount stipulated. And, after all this, the tea inspectors often do not agree in their opinions of the tea: and there is much good tea, that is declared not good. It will happen, too, that, in consequence of your home prices having fallen, some will withdraw from the amount of their contracts, on the ground of the tea being not good, or being unsuitable. From these causes the tea that we have purchased before hand and kept so long on hand, is in very many cases unsaleable. And it frequently occurs, that the tea so kept on hand is, from a decline in the market prices, sold at a loss of from three or four to upwards of ten taels per pecul. All this is well known to you, gentlemen, from your own observation; and is not ungrounded assertion on our part. And when we thus lose, how can we assure ourselves of the before mentioned sum of five taels;

As to these five taels, too there are several items to be paid out of them. For various duties and fees upon the tea there have to be deducted three taels. Interest on the bargain money, and charges for receipt of goods, for surplus of goods, &c. consume a fourth tael. And for the hire of work and necessary expenses of our establisments, we have to depend upon the chance of receiving the remaining tael. These five taels barely suffice, then, do defray the expenses of the year. And when to this consideration are added the facts, that we cannot always realize this sum, and that it is now proposed to us, out of this sum to make a further payment of one tael, we find ourselves inthe midst of difficulties.

Formerly, before the dissolution of the company, we trusted to our shares of the tea-trade, for an annual profit, which amounted often to 500,000 taels, and even more.

As to the Consoo Fund, it has always existed only in name, and has not been a fund of realized money. Every year after payment of public claims on us, whatever remained was applied to defray the necessary expences of our establishments, arising from salaries, wages, &c., and to repair such losses as we might have incurred. Whenever any hong failed, we then agreed, with a view to the payment of the public and foreign claims upon it, to form, temporarily, a fund modelled on the Consoo charge for general affairs, and to pay the annual instalments out of it, in proportion to the amount of the commercial transactions of each. When at any time the profit on our shares of the tea trade, joined to the Consoo charge, did not suffice for the payment of the instalment of foreign debts, then due, and of the public claims of the current year, we had to reduce the expenses of our establishments, in salaries, &c., to the extent often of 50,000 or 60,000 taels a year. The stable hongs could meet this emergency and sustain themselves. But to the infirm hongs the result was loss, which amounted in the course of a few years to some hundreds of thousands. Their capital being small, and their original means thus gradually diminished, they were led to buy dear and sell cheap, to keep their money in circulation and patch up appearances, till their difficulties increasing from day to day, the final result was their failure. And each failure involved the whole body in difficulty; and thus one followed in the footsteps of another.

This was the case even before the company had been dissolved. And now, since the dissolution of the company, the hongs Wanyuen (Fatqua) and Hingtae have both failed, leaving debts unpaid to the amount of 2,900,000 dollars. The existing hongs have also reported their outstanding debts to amount to 2,900,000 dollars newly incurred, besides 100,000 dollars of an old date. In addition to these, the annual public calls upon us require an expenditure of several hundred thousands. And the expenses of our various establishments do not fall short of 500,000 or 600,000 dollars. Since the dissolution of the company, we have had from our proportion of teas no profit whereupon we can depend. The duties and charges on tea at present are also irregular, and are not conformed to one standard, so that we cannot calculate beforehand our probable gain or loss. Hence it is impossible for us to adopt a brief period for settling the claims that are to be paid.

The foundations of the trade also have been injured by the precedent set by the Hing-tae Hong: (That Hong) received, as duties and fees on cotton, only eight mace and upwards, amounting at the most to eleven mace, and on tea, two taels and upwards, amounting at the most to something above three taels.* These two staple commodities are considered the chief ones in the foreign trade, and if they yield no profit, but on the other hand cause loss of capital, what can we do? You say, that of late years the various imports and exports have been increased several fold. But, under these circumstances, the more they are increased, the more we are involved. Losing year after year, and paying interest on the top of interest, so that in a few years we have become liable for the heavy amount of two millions and upwards, what remnant can we have of a Consoo fund? This state of affairs is the result of the change in the times. At this time the trade of every hong is carried on with difficulty and want of substantiality; and we have besides been heavily involved by Hingtae. If we are able still to carry on a large commerce, it is only by strenuous efforts, and by watchful devices to repair every breach. While we have thus to look to our own standing, without rest or cessation, how can it be possible for us at the same time to make speedy payments on behalf of others?

For the reasons that we have thus pointed out, we have repeatedly met together to consult, and to form some plan, however difficult, of repairing these breaches and saving ourselves. We have now resolved, that each hongmerchant shall set aside in the public treasury of the Consoo house, but under his own charge, the profits of his transactions, whether in exports or imports, as also the receipts under the name of Consoo charge for general affairs; and that at the close of the year the whole shall be disbursed. We have resolved that the foreign debts of the Hingtae hong shall be repaid in nine annual instalments; that the old debts and the public claims shall be paid off in the times fixed; that the public claims of each ensuing year shall be paid up as they fall due; and if there be any overplus, it will be required for the necessary expenses of the several hongs, to pay the salaries, &c., due from them. Only, with regard to the Teenpaou hong (Kingqua), a little more must be added, to enable him to discharge the foreign and the public claims upon him. The Hingtae account is however so large, that we are not without fear, that our resolution to pay it within the period of nine years, can hardly be kept. For the foreign debts and the public dues of each hong merchant will at the same time be a heavy weight an him, and will cause much embarrassment. Should we make the period yet more brief it would be really impossible for us to meet our engagements. We take now the facts of the case, and set them before you, gentlemen, praying you to give them your attentive consideration, and also to communicate them to all the gentlemen. For this purpose we write, &c.

* The full charges on these two articles amount to from thirteen to fifteen mace on cotton, and to between four and five taels on tea. By the Hing-tae Hong lowering these charges, and so underselling the other merchants, these were forced to follow his self-injurious precedent.

CANTON PRESS.

Saturday, 28th April.

Our readers will find, in another column, Mr. Morrison's translation of the Hong-merchants letter to the Creditors of Hingtae, the receipt of which we mentioned last week. The whole burthen of the long document is that the Co-hong refuses to pay Hingtae's debts in less than nine years without even pledging themselves to liquidate the whole within that period. The reasons they assign for their inability to pay sooner are, their own poverty and the difficulty they experience in levying the extra duty required to produce the necessary funds. Much of their reasoning is childish, f. i. that of the impossibility of accommodating their sale-prices to the new duty—it surely is not more difficult to lay 6 than 5 taels on a given price, or to deduct them; nor is it impossible, as they alledge, to determine, with some degree of approximation at least, how much the duty of 10 much per picul is likely to yield upon the year's trade, the annual exports of tea being pretty well ascertained. The Hong-merchants were, it seems, in want of a good argument to defend their conduct and, not finding one, took up with the first that suggested itself without caring apparently what degree of weight it would have. In their case however, we much fear, that indifferent reasoning will be as useful as the very best logic, since they seem determined, happen what will, not to pay in less than nine years; nor seem they to be at all anxious to conciliate the good will of their creditors, since their accusations of them, of not fulfilling their contracts whenever circumstances makes their refusal desirable, and of refusing teas on the plea of their not being of the quality agreed on, are not at all called for in the argument in question, and, if the truth were told, it would, we believe, be found that the Hong-merchants have much more frequently failed to fulfil their contracts, than foreigners, and the complaint is not uncommonly heard of Hongmerchants, to whom advances for next season's teas have been made, selling, after receiving them, the best chops for cash, and obliging the contractors to receive those of inferior quality in order to cover the advance under which they are.

We are well aware that the situation of Hongmerchants it by no means enviable; they are on the one side exposed to all kinds of extortion by the Government officers, and on the other made to suffer from the misconduct of those of their own body; but at same time it cannot be denied that part of the difficulties under which they now are have been brought about by their own supineness and apparent in difference as to the affairs of the Cohong. Had they been active, and taken proper measures for the preservation of their interest, they ought never to have allowed individuals of their body to carry on as they have done, and, since they are responsible for each other, we cannot suppose that they were not able to control, in a manner at least, their own members, so as to render it impossible for one to ruin the whole. The indifference shewn by them may probably be occasioned by the slight personal interest Hong-merchants have in the well-being of their corporation, since, if success attends their commercial enterprizes, they, by never being allowed to retire, can consequently never enjoy the fruits of their industry. The whole constitution of the Cohong requires remodelling, and we are astonished that no attempt of the sort has been made by the Hong-merchants since Hing-tae's failure, as that event must, more than any other, have made them aware of the danger of their situation. Their avowed determination of paying into the Consoo fund the Consoo charge, as soon as due, is but a feeble step towards ameliorating their condition, nor do we think is it likely to be often acted on, the same determination having previously often been come to, and as often set aside. We do not, for the sake of the foreign trade in general, regret that the state of the Co-hong should be constituted as it is, and that consequently the merchants are continually in hot water, as it were, since it prevents the Chinese to monopolise or control it effectually to the disadvantage of foreigners, and as the repeated difficulties of the security merchants must eventually cause that body to be dissolved, or as least established on a different plan from what it is at present, and cause the trade probably to be thrown into the hands of a greater number of Chinese.

The hong-merchants will with difficulty extricate themselves from their present engagements or make good their proposal to pay Hingtae's debts in nine years, seeing that they will, besides, have to pay King-qua's debts (which, in spite of the not very clear arguments of our cotemporary to the contrary, we continue to consider to be entitled to just as much consideration as Hingtae's). Their statement that the newly incurred debts of the different hongs is2,900,000 Dollars, and the old amounts only to 100,000 $, is an evident misrepresentation, at least as to the old debts, nor do we exactly understand what is meant by saying "only, with regard to King-qua, a little more must be added, to enable him to discharge the foreign and the public claims upon him." Do the Hong-merchants thereby mean to insinuate that the deficit of the King-qua hong is so small that very little assistance will enable him to pay off his debts? This cannot have been their meaning, or they have forgotten that in their letter to Hing-tae's creditors, dated 4th April, (Canton Press 14th) they expressly state the arrears of this hong to the government to exceed 300,000 Taels, and his debts to foreigners to amount to one million and more? We discover therefore in this letter from the Co-hong an attempt at mystification, trying to represent, as of no account, or at least of no importance, the debts owing by King-qua. The Register also attempts to prove that the debts of Hing-tae were more legitimately incurred than the others, because the former were simple contract debts, whilst part of the latter arose from money lent; an argument so totally void of support that we are surprised our cotemporary could not exert his brains with better success, in finding some other specious argument that had at least the semblance of reason to misguide. Every one engaged in trade in China is aware, or ought to be, that strictly to follow the several enactments of the Chinese government concerning the foreign trade is impossible, nor has there hitherto, in the settlement of debts of insolvent Hongs, any distinction been made as to debts arising whether from loans of money or from sales of goods, nor whether the debts were recently incurred or of longer standing. That the debts had been really and truly contracted was considered a sufficient claim for their being paid. We must therefore in these cases beguided by precedent, and it is the interest of every foreign trader to have such precedent acknowledged and continued to be acted upon. It is an unhappy argument for the Register to say of the creditors of King-qua, "they have broken the laws of China and are not therefore entitled to be paid—my friends have not done so—ergo, their's is the preference"—but what if they have been equally regardless of the laws of the celestial empire? if, though they should not have lent money to Hing-tae, a concession we are not disposed to allow, they had allowed years to pass on without obtaining payment from him for debts contracted, would the law of China, our cotemporary has thought proper to bring into play, not likewise invalidate their claims?

We reluctantly enter on such discussion, but we could not allow it to pass without remark, the observations of the Register which, if attended to, have a tendency to place foreigners on a still less favorable footing than before, whilst they ought to unite to defend "old establi-hed custom" wherever this has prevailed in their favor against the oppressive regulations of the Chinese Government. It does not sit well, in our opinion, on foreigners, for a momentary private advantage, to attempt to upset practices which have hitherto been advantageous to the foreign trade generally; they ought, in all cases where the general welfare of the community is at stake, to make common cause for its protection, and not quote Chinese law one against the other.

The only arrival during the week has been that of the Sultanay from Calcutta and Singapore, without however adding anything of interest to our very slender stock of news. Not less than seven vessels are expected direct from England, but their non-arrival has nearly stretched our silent impatience to the utmost, whilst our neighbours are wondering what can have become of them; we can only suppose that they are baffled by calms or contrary winds in the China sea, and our surmises are borne out by the long passage the Sultanay had from Singapore. Since the invention of steam-navigation, "coming events" in these distant regions "cast their shadows before" much longer than was their wont, and we now frequently hear, by way of Bombay, of vessels having sailed from England months before they make their appearance here; the consequence is that almost every boat leaving Lintin for Canton sees some vessel standing in, at too great a distance to make her out; this is reported in Canton, and conjecture is busy to guess at what she may be; one supposes her to be such or such a vessel, when another, standing by, hearing the name mentioned, turns conjecture into certainty, and presently it is known all over the place that the——has arrived, but the next boat soon undeceives us and a returning East-coast trader, has probably been the innocent cause of the delusion. These rumors are very frequent, and extremely tantalizing to those who still believe in them; the best rule is never to give credit to such reports until you receive your letters and bills of lading.

The local Government continues to issue frequent edicts against the foreign passage boats, as they are still called, though their occupation in that way is nearly gone, and, accordingly, another mode of its appearance on Monday last from the Governor in which he again expresses his concern at the want of obedience to his reiterated commands still evinced by the passage boats, which continue to linger on the river. He threatens as usual to drive them away, but their obedience to his threats keeps pace with his sincerity, for we will not for one moment suppose the Government officers really solicitous to send these boats away, through means of which they must derive very handsome emoluments, and which would, of course, cease with their absence from Whampoa, where, it appears, the greatest part of the smuggling on the river is now concentrated, their appearance in front of the Factories being much more rare now than some months ago. If the Governor wished to drive these boats away, nothing could be easier, by merely preventing them to pass the bogue; but no such attempt has been made, and the officers of Government act pretty much like a venal M. P. who, to gratify his constituents, makes a blustering speech against a measure, whilst he silently votes with Ministers. No where, we believe, has any government attained to the perfection of the Chinese in making practice differ from theory, and whilst from the latter the uninitiated have at times been tempted to hold up the Chinese and their Government as the very paragons of moral excellence, worthy of every body's imitation, those who have an opportunity of seeing how that theory is disregarded in practice, have come to a very different, but, probably, the more correct, conclusion, that the rank weeds of mendacity, deception, and venality find in China the richest soil to prosper, and have by their luxuriant growth, made the moral condition of the whole nation one impenetrable jungle.

NOTICE. — Is hereby given that the Honorable Company's Agents are ready to receive bonafide Tenders for Advances on Bills of Exchange, secured by Consignments to England of Tea and Nanking Raw Silk, in the manner prescribed in a paper entitled, "Terms and Conditions for making Advances in China," at the rate of Four Shillings and Six pence (4s. 6d.) per Spanish Dollar.

Until further Notice, Fifty per Cent of the same will be made in cash, and the residue in Bills on the Supreme Government of India, at the rate of Two hundred and ten (210) Company's Rupees per One hundred (100) Spanish Dollars, payable thirty days after Sight —

COMMERCIAL REMARKS.

IMPORTS.

COTTON MANUFACTURES.—The stock is very short with an active demand for bleached and grey Longcloths, and chintzes, as also for COTTON YARN of good quality; but the inferior is almost unsaleable,

WOOLLENS.—The dealers, we hear, find a difficulty in disposing of their late purchases of SPANISH SERIPES at former rates; but the stock is not lorge. LONGELLS, assorted colors, have rather improved, the advance being principally on the black and purple. Scarlets without alteration. No favorable change in CAMBLETS.

STRAITS PRODUCE.—There have been no arrivals.

RICE.—The weather continues favorable for the next crop.

COTTON.—The holders are standing out for higher prices, but the clearances are, in consequence, very short. The Sulimany's cargo is the only accession to our small stock.

OPIUM.—Another edict has been issued against the foreign passage-boats, but no active measures appear to be adopted to enforce it, as the deliveries continue very brisk at Whampoa. Malwa has again advanced from the non-arrival of the Bombay ships. New Patna has also been in better demand, and considerable sales were made during the week at 395 up to 415. New Benares has been selling at 385 @ 390. The deliveries to the 22d were. Patna, old 114, new 599; Benares, old 115, new 69; Malwa, 646; Total 1543 Chests.

EXPORTS.

RAW SILK.—There are about 1000 bales still unsold, and as there is no opportunity of shipping it off the demand has rather slackened; the finer Chops are still held at 500 @ 515, but the generality of the silk is but of midding quality.

TEA.—There have been enquiries for and, we bear, some purchases of old Congous, beyond this nothing is doing. The exports up to this day are

Black teas	24,799,200 lbs.
Green ,,	6,948,800 ,,

COMMERCIAL REMARKS.

IMPORTS.

COTTON MANUFACTURES.—The stock is very short with an active demand for bleached and grey Longcloths, and chintzes, as also for COTTON YARN of good quality; but the inferior is almost unsaleable,

WOOLLENS.—The dealers, we hear, find a difficulty in disposing of their late purchases of SPANISH STRIPES at former rates; but the stock is not large. LONGELLS, assorted colors, have rather improved, the advance being principally on the black and purple. Scarlets without alteration. No favorable change in CAMBLETS.

STRAITS PRODUCE.—There have been no arrivals.

RICE.—The weather continues favorable for the next crop.

COTTON.—The holders are standing out for higher prices, but the clearances are, in consequence, very short. The Sulimany's cargo is the only accession to our small stock.

OPIUM.—Another edict has been issued against the foreign passage-boats, but no active measures appear to be adopted to enforce it, as the deliveries continue very brisk at Whampoa. Malwa has again advanced from the non-arrival of the Bombay ships. New Patna has also been in better demand, and considerable sales were made during the week at 395 up to 415. New Benares has been selling at 385 @ 390. The deliveries to the 22d were. Patna, old 114, new 599; Benares, old 115, new 69; Malwa, 646; Total 1542 Chests.

EXPORTS.

RAW SILK.—There are about 1000 bales still unsold, and as there is no opportunity of shipping it off the demand has rather slackened; the finer Chops are still held at 500 @ 515, but the generality of the silk is but of midding quality.

TEA.—There have been enquiries for and, we hear, some purchases of old Congous, beyond this nothing is doing. The exports up to this day are

Black teas	24,799,200	lbs.
Green ,,	6,948,800	,,
Total	31,748,000	lbs.

Religion of the Chinese.

From a Correspondent.

We have often heard the question proposed, what religion have the Chinese? This subject, though often discussed, is perhaps not as clearly understood as it deserves to be. Having read of religions of state, Budhism and Taoism, as the prevailing superstition of the Empire, we began to enquire, how far it could be said with justice, that these were the principal sects. As far as the state religion is concerned, few people, and even mandarins, do scarcely know what it is.

From all we have been able to learn, it appears that Heaven's son, being the mediating power between heaven and earth, and the representation of all living creatures, has also thought it fit to establish a religion of his own of which he is very naturally the high priest. The worthies he has canonized are also worshipped in various degrees, with this proviso however, that he can raise and degrade an idol according to his deserts. The catalogue of these beings has during successive ages very much been swelled, so that it now presents a list appalling to every ordinary mind. The leading feature in this worship is pantheism; heaven and earth are the greatest objects of adoration, and the imperial ancestors with the orient sages share in the homage; —then follow rivers, mountains, the sea, etc—with —then follow rivers, mountains, the sea, etc—with sundry spirits presiding over them. The religion itself is a mere ceremonial without any additional quality to affect the hearts of the votaries. Budhism is the creed which has the most followers, but it is the mere religion of the priesthood, the common people themselves do not profess to belong to it exclusively. Taoism has been much curtailed by this foreign superstition, and its priests have been obliged, in many instances, to conform themselves to its usages, but it is not an article of faith to which lay men subscribe, and thus confined to cloisters and temples. We have therefore still to answer: what is the religion of the mass of the people? A Chinaman, as may be found upon very slight observation, is not very accessible to religious impressions, nor does he care much about an invisible world. In this particular he widely differs from the Japanese and the inhabitants of India, and in fact, from almost all the Asiatic nations, who are generally bigots to their superstition. Neither government nor the priesthood have provided the people with religious instruction, it is nowhere communicated but in temples to boys who wish to join the fraternity. Nor do magistrates enjoin adherence to any creed, their commands being only of a negative nature—not to follow any heresy—or false doctrine; the grand question, what is orthodoxy remaining unanswered.

According to Kanghe's idea of the subject, the duty towards parents—mandarins, and every other relation of life—is to be religion. Yet, notwithstanding this total indifference, old custom—this powerful tyrant—has given rise to a system of national religion to which few China-men will refuse assent. The ancestors are the highest object of adoration, and he must be a very degraded being who does not keep a tablet or a stick of incense for his progenitors. The very beggars and criminals worship these; in the meanest hovels and smallest boats we find a place allotted for their shrines—; he who neglects this religious duty is not a Chinese. Of a supreme being the nation has a very faint and confused idea, the most solemn appeal is made to heaven and earth, and whenever they wish to talk gravely about religious matters—it is the never varying—heaven and earth.

Every craft and occupation have moreover their respective presiding idols, which get a little incense and gilt, or rather tinned, paper for their share, or perhaps even a candle, a cup of tea, and sweetmeats A China-man does not pray, and it is only on solemn occasions, when he is about consulting his good or bad luck, or makes a vow, that he knocks head before the idol which he wishes to propitiate. National festivals there are but two—the new year and the feast of the tombs; these are kept by every one without distinction; the others, though very numerous, are celebrated by only a very few. Their observance consists in good eating and drinking and gambling. Without making the least distinction about Taoism or Budhism, the Chinese crowd in considerable numbers to the temples, bring their sacrifices, and, having given a share to the priest, feast with great glee upon the rest. There is nothing wasted upon the idols, nor any more but a bare subsistence given to the priest. When the craving appetite is satisfied, the temples become a scene of riot, and, both to please the dumb idols as well as to attract the attention of the people, a play is there performed. When this is finished, the religious ceremonies are also at an end, nobody cares any more for the idols. Temples are thus built as public places of amusement, and are as much maintained by the community. The whole of the religious observances consists therefore in rioting and a stale ritual. Such is the creed of the most numerous nation on the globe, which is too rational to be addicted to idolatry, and too ignorant and irreligious to worship the Almighty Creator of heaven and earth, and the saviour of mankind.

Japan.

From "Brief sketch of the Dutch intercourse with Japan from its commencement in A. D. 1600, to the present time. Chinese Repository for April.

The discussions which took place in 1744, resulted in a determination on the part of the Dutch, not to abandon the Japan trade. Some improvement probably took place in the mode of conducting the business, under which it partially revived. But the Dutch East India Company, which had made dividends to the amount of thirty millions of guilders, in the first twenty years of its existence, and had been continued by successive renewals of its charter, was now on the decline. Its profits were exhausted in military establishments, and its difficulties increasing, the states-general assisted it in 1581 with a loan. Thus embarrassed, the Company seems to have been tasked enough to continue the Japan trade, on the old footing, with two annual vessels, carrying ill assorted cargoes, averaging hardly ƒ300,000 per annum. In 1782, no ship arrived at Nagasaki, to the great surprise of the Japanese. In 1796, the Company's dividends were suspended in consequence of the occupation of Holland by the French troops, when all commercial calculation and credit were necessarily destroyed. In 1798, the Dutch made use of an English vessel, but having no American pass, to carry on the business of that year, and this vessel was admitted to Nagasaki, but probably not under the American flag. Holland, again falling under French domination, the Javan islands were taken possession of by Great Britain in 1811, and the Dutch factors at Desima had been more than three years without communication with Europe, when the expedition planned by sir Stanford Raffles arrived at Nagasaki, in 1813. We may be allowed to quote a paragraph from the recollections of M. Doeff, the then president, expressive of his feelings during this long seclusion; 'No one,' says he, but a resident of this period at the factory can form a conception of our state of mind. Separated from all intercourse, close prisoners in a spot which ships scarcely ever pass, much less touch at, knowing nothing, guessing nothing of events in the remainder of the globe; uncertain whether for the next ten or twenty years, or to the end of our lives, a ship of our country would ever greet our sight; living under the constant inspection of a suspicious nation, which, treating us it is true with kindness, and allowing us to want for nothing they could supply could yet never consider us as entirely men; this was a sad lot and sadder prospect.' This picture of his distresses is heightened by the description of his various shifts to better his lot, by making Schiedam from juniper, and spirit from corn, which yet, in despite of the assistance of the good natured Japanesse, would have a pitiery flavor; and how he made long breeches of an old carpet, and shoes of Japanese straw slippers inlaid with leather; and to this must be added his complaints of the perishable nature of the 'whitish liquor, with, something of the flavor of the white beer of Harlime, but which would not keep above four days.' These afflictions were, however, obviated on the arrival of the above expedition, but the upperhoufd would not admit toe claims of the English to trade with Japan, in virtue of their possession of Java, and pertinaciously kept his office. On the restoration of the Dutch East India colonies at the peace in1815, the trade with Japan was revived, and M. Doeff was relieved by the arrival of a legitimate successor in 1817, after having resided in Desima more than ten years. Since that time the trade has been carried on quietly, under the direction of the Dutch government, with the exception of the years 1828 and 1829.

The two vessels which are now annually sent to Japan are chartered, and the principal articles of their cargoes laden by the government, which receives and employs, chiefly in the Batavian coinage, the copper that constitutes the chief return from Japan. The minor articles sent in those ships are put on board by private merchants, who purchase at auction their permits to take this part in the trade. We have no lists of cargoes later than that of 1806, given in Raffles' History of Java, and which consisted of sugar, tin, woollen cloths, chintzes, pepper, spices, sapan wood, &c., valued at ƒ 175,000; the returns for which were in copper, and camphor, The balance in favor of the voyage is set down at ƒ 175,000. But in this account, the copper is assumed by the mint at ƒ 53 per pecul, a rate considerably above the market price.

In 1820, it is understood that some relaxation of the trade as to annual amount took place, but, whatever may be the changes for the better in the spirit or measures of the Japanese government, it is not probable that the Dutch monopolists will willingly permit any tempting disclosures to be made. If report be true, the profits now derived are not considerable, the expenses of the establishment at Nagasaki consuming the share accruing to the Dutch government, though something is made by those who transact the private trade. This view of the case is confirmed by the fact, that, when the busines was handed over to the new E I. Company in 1827, they preferred to resign it again to government, after an experience of two years. It should not, however, be forgotten that a Company which can command the bayonets of a colonial despotism, to aid it in settling prices for the produce of an Archipelago, may not think it worth its while to carry on a branch of business sufficiently profitable for moderate men.

We close our present summary of Dutch intercourse with Japan by adding, that, six or seven years ago, one of the gentlemen of the factory at Desima, made an arrangement with the prince of Satzuma, to deliver him a cargo at some outport of his principality, but the Batavian authorities took effectual measures to frustrate a plan which might have placed the position of their servants at Nagasaki, as well as the profits on the adventures of that year. Against this last consideration, this fear of diminishing profits already paltry, what promise of general benefit, what hope of a new era, could be expected to weigh!

Latest English News.

From the Sing. Free Press of 7th and 12th April.

Of the intelligence which has arrived since Sunday last from canada, we may pronounce generally, that it is of a favorable nature, in as much as there is no appearance of the rebels having anywhere met with success, or indeed shown themselves in arms against the cess, or indeed shown themselves in arms against the crown of Her Majesty. There is not throughout any of the official dispatches which have yet transpired any symptom of alarm on the part of Sir J. Colborne at the progress or occurrences of the insurrection, or of anxiety for its probable result. If indeed, (of which as yet there appears do doubt); that gallant officer, with the small force under orders, shall succeed in holding Quebec and Montreal during winter, it is morally certain that the powerful reinforcements already prepared to join him at the earliest opening of the St. Lawrence will remove all reasonable apprehension here, and all sanguine anticipation in unfriendly quarters, as to the ultimate consequences of this wild outbreak on the part of the French Canadians. The assemblage however in Lower Canada during the next spring and summer of a about well disciplined and well commanded corps of 10 000 Englishmen, may produce advantages in our relative position towards other parties, as well as the dupes of M. Papineau, which will amply repay the cost and trouble of these transports thither and of their future maintenance and operations. A spirit of undue encroachment upon British territory, in other provinces than that of Lower Canada, founded perhaps upon a knowledge of the turbulence prevalent throughout the latter province, and on a presumption of our consequent weakness there, may encounter a seasonable and wholesome rebuke, upon finding that the effective force of England in North America will have been trebled at the very first moment when the elements cease to obstruct it. On these grounds we approve of and rejoice at, the amount of the reinforcement now under orders of readiness for embarcation. But how small a portion of this perplexing subject is disposed of by the success, however signal and decided, of the British arms! How many important and anxious questions are left floating after the Sovereignty of England shall have been fully vindicated, and the power of her laws at least tacitly recognised, by the cessation of all open resistance! Have we yet—have the most far sighted of our statesmen bethought themselves how to make profit of that victory which now, we suppose, will venture to dispute that there is at least a fair prospect of achieving? Has any of our statesmen yet pondered upon the means of improving dispersed and broken rebels into contented and loyal subjects of Queen Victoria's crown? Are the French Canadians to be continued in possession of privileges which they have so obdurately turned against the hand that bestowed them? On the other side, stripping away their privileges, can we hope or trust, as vassals, those on whom, as freemen, we have been forced from a regard to our own security to triumph? Shall we leave at the mercy of a majority of voters elected to the provincial parliament by an illiterate and prejudiced rabble, detesting the name of England, the old revenues of the crown, constituting the only fund upon which we can reckon with the least reliance for the support of civil government within the colony? Again, would it be a convenient measure, would it be a safe one, to employ the Englishman as a keeper over the Canadian, should the latter prove intractable, or continue disaffected? These are, one and all, momentous questions. They are now but slightly thought of or dimly looked at, but they are more pregnant with durable danger and embarrassment than any question the solution of which touches merely the defeat or triumph of some 3,000 or 4,000 soldiers.—Times, January 3.

THE KING OF HANOVER.

(From the Courier, December 23.)

Matters seem coming to a crisis with Prince Ernest. His military force has been obliged to interfere at Gottingen, to repress the manifestations of the students in favor of the exiled Professors. To get rid of them, he has again violated the laws of the land, and has sentenced seven respectable gentlemen to banishment without inquiry or trial. What will become of that once famous University, which cannot flourish if Professors dare not or will not teach what is liberal and what is true, is not difficult to predict; and the celebrated Georgia Augusta, the proudest memorial of the wisdom of George II., and of his minister, Munchausen, will soon, like many other former Universities in Germany, spoken of as a thing that was

The following may be taken as a pretty correct enumeration of the force intended to be embarked for Canada, which is to proceed to Halifax as soon as the means of transport in ships of war can be provided:

1 Regiment of Cavalry, augmented to,	450
93d Highlanders, augmented strength.	900
Brigade of Guards, say.	2,000
65th from West Indies, augmented strength.	600
23d Fusileers and 71st Lt. Inf. augmented strength.	1,200
Augmentation of 100 rank and file to all Regiments in Canada, Nova Scotia, and New Brunswick—namely, 1st Royals, 15th, 24th, 32d, 34th, 43d, 66th, 83d, and 85th.	900
Total.	5,750

The 11th and 73d, ordered home from the Mediterranean, are to land at Gibraltar, there to await instructions in case their services should also be required in Canada. The Inconstant, which has proceeded to Cork, will take on board there 25 of the 93d Highlanders; the remainder will follow as other vessels arrive. Two companies of Artillery are also, it is said, under orders for the same destination.—(Globe.)

EAST INDIA HOUSE.

(From the Atlas, December 24.)

On Wednesday a general meeting of the proprietors of stock was held. The court was made special to consider a resolution for the abolition of the Company's agency at Canton, and on other matters; Sir J. R. Carnac, Bart. in the chair. The minutes of the last general and special courts were read. The chairman acquainted the court that the resolution of the Court of Proprietors granting the sum of £20,000 had received the confirmation of the Board of Control. Mr. Wordsworth then rose to bring forward the motion of which he had given notice for the abolition of the Company's agency at Canton. He expressed his regret that the directors had not, seeing the facilities of obtaining remittances from India by other means, abolished this agency. As, however, that had not been the case, he now asked the Court of Directors and of Proprietors to put an end to it. As there were, no doubt, many gentlemen present who were not aware of the nature of this agency, he would state that the gentlemen composing that body drew bills in Canton on the Bengal Government which were either purchased with money or bills payable in England, on condition that goods were placed in the hands of the Company, the bills being drawn for one-third less of the value of such goods, which were hypothecated to the East India Company, with power of sale in the event of the bills not being duly paid. The effect of these operations was to render the exchange very changeable and injurious to commercial transactions and many parties considered that they were illegal, they were against the spirit of the law by which the commercial operations of the exist India Company were abolished. That hon. proprietor concluded by moving:—That it is expedient to discontinue the East India Company's finance agency at Canton, inasmuch as it deranges the operations of commerce between Great Britain and China, to the great injury and loss of the British merchant, manufacturer, producer, and consumer, while it is not indispensable as a means of enabling the Company to place sufficient funds in this country to meet the territorial payments of India.—Mr. J. G. Whiteman seconded the resolution.—Mr. Marriott said that if there had been any violation of the contract made between the Court of Directors and the Government, the latter would take the proper steps to keep them to that contract. The chairman said he should oppose the motion. He certainly was, he confessed, a little surprised to hear in that court gentlemen rising and advocating the interests of the trader, and agent and the manufacturer; in fact every interest but that of the East India Company. The whole of the dividend just made depended upon the realization of their remittances. After some further speeches, the chairman put the resolution, which was negatived by a very considerable majority.

SATURDAY, 9th DECEMBER.—The last sale of the East India Company's Tea finished yesterday afternoon when considerable feeling was exhibited at the closing of the intercourse which had hitherto subsisted exclusively between the Trade and the Company, the last Lot a single chest, became an anxious object of competition, as a curious memento of the closing scene, and was finally purchased by Mr. Gibbs, a gentleman whose good taste in wines is generally known, at about 5s. above its intrinsic value.

Canada.

The alleged grievances complained of in Canada by the Papineau party may be summed up in six articles, which we shall comment upon, in the order in which they appear in an address of the House of Assembly to his late Majesty William IV., dated February 28, 1837, reiterated in an address of the same party to the Governor-in-Chief, dated 3rd October in the same year. The first grievance is substantially to the following effect:—

1. That the Members of the Legislative Council or branch of the Provincial Legislature, answering to the House of Peers in the mother country, are appointed by the Crown for life; whereas the Canadians contend for the right of electing the Upper Chamber by popular suffrage, and for a limited time.

This is the master grievance of the Papineau party —a grievance which England cannot redress in the manner pointed out without giving up the colony altogether. The Legislative Council forms the only constitutional link that secures the British settlers in Lower Canada the protection guaranteed to them by the mother country; and we hold it impossible to render it popularly the elective without granting to the Canadians the power of choosing, when it may be most convenient for them to abrogate every vestige of the sovereignty obtained by England under the triple, right of conquest, treaty and possession. That the Supreme Government has wantonly and insultingly abused the prerogative enjoyed by it of nominating members to seats in the Legislative Council we most readily admit; but this evil might be corrected without having recourse to an extreme measure, calculated and seemingly intended to destroy the influence of the Crown in directing the Colonial administration. We are but too well aware that the Canadians had cause for just exasperation when they beheld the Chief Governor raise to the dignity of Legislative Councillors, clerks in subordinate Government offices—British settlers of no local influence and having neither provincial knowledge, provincial sympathies, nor provincial attachments—pensioners of the Crown—and even emigrants from the United States, while the claims of the most distinguished subjects of French origin to such a mark of royal favour and confidence, were contemptuously set aside. But even in this fatal policy the Government was more influenced by the necessities of its position than by any predilection in favor of British settlers; as those Canadians whom it appointed Legislative Councillors were sure to be marked out by the House of Assembly for objects of especial obloquy if they coincided with the views of the Chief Governor. As an instance we may mention that in a series of resolutions passed by the House of Assembly on 21st Feb. 1834, Antoine Caspar Couillard is named in the 34th resolution as the only Legislative Councillor "of French origin who stooped to concur in an address from that body to the Throne dated 1st April 1833" and the resolution then goes on to denounce Couillard as a man who had rendered himself dependent upon the Executive "by soliciting a paltry and subordinate place of profit." In the face of such invidious opposition as this, it could not be expected that the Crown would expose by a shew of confidence its faithful Canadian subjects to the hatred and scorn of their fellow countrymen. Now, of this first grievance the Canadians, in their address to the Crown, protest that they will accept no remedy but such as they have pointed out; and this England cannot concede without giving up the province altogether. One or other must yield now that the sword has been drawn to decide the question.

2. That the Executive Council is responsible only to the Crown, whereas it should be made responsible to the House of Assembly.

No such concession as is here demanded can be made without previously declaring the Canadas an integral portion of the United Kingdom. The Imperial Legislature can alone claim the right of impeaching the Ministers of the Crown. The exercise of the power thus sought is incompatible with colonial dependence, and is moreover obtained to all just intents and purposes by petition—the only form in which we feel disposed to see it entrusted to the control of the House of Assembly.

3. That the Crown is possessed of the means of raising a large revenue in Lower Canada independently of the House of Assembly, whereas the House of Assembly claims the sole and unrestricted management of all the revenue raised in that province, from whatever source derived, as the only means of effectually controuling the acts of the Executive.

The Crown Lands in Lower Canada are held in trust for the people of this country by whose blood and treasure they were purchased; and until the Canadians can lay a stronger claim to them than what they derive from their being employed in enabling them to live without paying taxes, we do not believe that the Imperial Parliament will advise the Crown to part with them. But to quiet the minds of the Candians, as well as to convince them that we have their best interest at heart, we would gladly support a measure for devoting the whole of the revenues raised by the Crown, from sources not under the controul of the Colonial Legislature, to the agricultural, commercial and moral improvement of the Province—under the management of a Board appointed by the Crown and presided over by the Chief Governor for the time being. More than this the Canadians cannot reasonably ask. When they complain of the influence which the Crown derives from the possession of the wild lands they forget to add that we have no security against the worst abuse of such a trust by the House of Assembly.

4. The repeal of the 'Tenures' (4 Geo. 4, cnap. 50.) This Act, was passed to remedy the abuses of the the old French Law of Tenure, which it directs should be replaced, at the desire of the holders of lands in the Lower Province by the right of free soccage—the tenure by which rented property is generally held in this country. The hostility of the Canadians to this Act is, that it affords enterprising British settlers facilities of purchasing large tracts of cultivated ground by the simple process of application to the immediate occupier. Under the French law, purchases to such an extent could not take place without extreme difficulty. We are however prepared to admit, that the Act in question has operated grievously, inasmuch as it has led to the appointment of a host of escheators and other officers of a like nature having a direct interest in promoting litigation. We will not undertake to say that the Act ought to be unconditionally repealed; sure we are that the abuses in its operation are calculated to excite the indignation of the Colonists.

5. The simple and unconditional repeal of the Land Company's Act.

The repeal of this Act would inflict "a heavy blow and a great discouragement" upon British emigration to the Canadas: and would besides entail ruin upon thousands in this country who are deeply interested in preserving inviolate the faith of a Parliamentary arrangement. The real complaint against the Company is, not so much that it a uses the power with which the imperial Legislature has entrusted it, as that it exercises that power independently of the will of the House of Assembly. It is not so much the right of the Canadians that are invaded as that their pride is wounded—their sense of independence lessened. Of course the loss of a large source of revenue, though they were too indolent ever to avail themselves of it, forms an item in the calculation of Mr. Papineau and his friends. And here again we would gladly see any concession made to the Canadians not incompatible with a regard to British interests, and the rights of British settlers. Were the House of Assembly to guarantee the protection of British interests already in force under this Act, we do not think that the House of Commons would object to its repeal. But no such concession can with justice be made unconditionally.

6. That the Colony swarms with placemen and pensioners; whereas all sinecures should be abolished and the expense of the Executive limited to the wants of the people. This is a real grievance and ought to be redressed without delay. We have now exhausted the list of grievences, and we appeal to our friends the Radicals, whether they consider them of so much importance as to warrant having recourse to the exterminating process of civil war? Compare them with the real grievances of Ireland—not a province but an integral portion of the British Empire—and then tell us whether any man who is not ready to advocate the lawfulness of rebellion in Ireland can honestly defend the Canadian insurrection? Such being the real state of the question we, who acknowledging as we have always done the right of relief—of particular & extensive relief—to Canada, hesitate not to denounce as criminal in a high degree the attempt now made to fling off the authority of the mother country.

Spectator.

The English in France.—The following official return of the number of resident English in this country, as presented by Monsieur le Prefet de Police de Paris to his Excellency the Minister of the Interior, up to the 1st instant, is rather interesting, as it is one third more than this time last year, viz.: Paris, 24,000 to 25,000; Versailles, St. Cloud, St. Germain, &c. &c., 3,000; Havre de Grace, Caen, &c., 4,000; Dieppe, Rouen, and environs, 3,000; Tours, Orleans, Fontainebleau &c., 2,00; Bordeaux, Toulouse, Bayonne, Barreges, Pau, Montpellier, Marseilles Toulon, Hieres, Aix, Avignon, and Lyons 6,000; St Quentin, Cambrin, Valenciennes, Douai, and Lille, 1,000; St. Omer, Mont Cassel, &c., 1,500 to 1,800; Dunkerque, Bergues, Bourbourg, &c., 1,000 to 1,200; Calais, Boulogne, St. Pierre, Coulogne, and Guines, 5,000 to 6,020; and in Boulogne and its environs there are from 5,000 to 7,000 actual residents, exclusive of the thousands who only pass through it, or remain but for short time. Admitting that each person spends on an average five francs per diem, the annual sum expended in this country by the domiciled English alone would be 109,500,000 francs, which, at the exchange of 25f. amounts to about £ 4,580,000 ster.

A New Tax.—The Duke of Saxe Altenhörgh has invented a new tax! From the 1st of January, 1828, a tax of five dollars is to be imposed upon every singing bird kept in a cage! The object is to discourage the cruel practices of the bird-catchers.

Use of the Birch.—A writer on school discipline says, "Without a liberal use of the rod, it is impossible to make boys smart."

Dining Alone.—The author of "The Parson's Daughter," when surprised one evening in his arch-chair two or three hours after dinner, is reported to have apologised, by saying, "When one is alone the bottle does come round so often." It was Sir Hercules Langrishe, we believe, who, being asked on a similar occasion.—"Have you finished all that port (three bottles) without assistance?" answered, "No, not quite that, I had the assistance of a bottle of Madeira."—Lady Blessington.

LONDON MARKET.

London 25th December.

TEA.—Of the Free Trade Tea Sales, which commenced on the 18th instant, about 55 000 Packages have passed the sale including yesterday; Importers have shewn great firmness, and fully two-thirds have been bought in. Canton Bohea have been purchased by the trade with much spirit: of the Fokien only one hreak of duty paid as yet come on, but those subject to 2s. 1d. duty have sold briskly at the annexed quotation. Congous have rather declined as the sale proceded; a considerable quantity of good common quality has been sold at 1s. 6½d. to 1 8½d., but of the blackish leaf and finer description a very large proportion has been bought in, and the prices realised are rather under the October sale. Twankays of common quality commenced briskly at 1s. 10¾d. to 1s. 11d. but yesterday there was less disposition to purchase, and some were bought in at 1s. 9½d. Hysons, Young Hysons, Imperials, and Gunpowders, are very heavy, and a considerable quantity has been bought in 3d. to 6d. per lb. under former rates. In others sorts there is no alteration worthy of notice.

CANTON PRESS.

Saturday, 5th May.

Though at all times reluctant to obtrude our own affairs upon our readers, we find it necessary to say a few words now, having been attacked by the Register of the 1st of this month in so coarse and unexampled a manner, that people indifferent about the argument at issue between us, might possibly think that the abuse with which our neighbour bespatters us, must be in some manner deserved, or it would never have been given. The only object of the Editor of the Register in thus transgressing the bounds of civility must have been the wish to provoke a personal quarrel; if so, he will not obtain it; personally we are unacquainted with him, and in transcribing from the Register the attack spoken of, with our justification chiefly taken from the Register itself, we must leave it to the public to judge whether or not that paper was justified in speaking of us at it has done.

In the last Register it Our only answer to this is said "The Press has, is, that when we put the most falsely, put an argu- lines here objected to bement in our mouth which tween inverted commas, we have never used; and it was the more clearly has most gratuitously, to shew what argument placed this falsehood be- had been used by the tween inverted commas, Register, not that we had by those means giving the any wish to make it appear public to understand, that that we quoted his own it has quoted, not only our words; and a proof of this sentiments but our very may be found in our havwords. E. G. "It is an ing used the singular case unhappy argument for the instead of the editorial Register to say of the cre- "we." We merely condditors of Kingqua," "they cluded into a few words have broken the laws of what has been said in China, and are not there- many more by the Register fore entitled to be paid— and that we did so faithmy friends have not done fully every one, we have no so,—ergo, their's is the doubt, will allow after pref.rence." This is sim- reading the following ply a base and baseless extract from that paper piece of sheer, insolent dated 24th April.— falsehood, paltry and low, "Now this last statement We now repeat what we of the Press, *(as to kingdid say,—the cohong can- qua's creditors having as*not legally agree to pay sisted him with loans of off Kingqua's debts and money) is an harsh and place his creditors on the unjust, as the conclusion same footing as those of may appear, is a strong con-Hingtae, until Kingqua firmation of the justice of is made a bankrupt; this Mr's argument in our last was Mr's argument: and number. Hingtae has been such has ever been the made a bankrupt; and his custom of the port." accounts and the claims of his foreign creditors submitted to a joint committee of hong merchants and foreigners; and the claims appear every where to be balances of actual transactions of trade: and consequently are strictly legal, but neither the loans of money to Kinqcua from his creditors, nor the interest accruing on those loans, are legal; therefore the Co-hong can no more legally agree to pay off his debts, than they could make a legal condition with one or more creditors that they should be treated the same as the creditors of Hingtae.

The Register further says:

"And what is meant by this petty, dirty allusion to "my friends"? We know not, except from common report, who are the creditors of Hingtae, and we know not, even by that channel, who are King-qua's creditors Neither do we know the name of our correspondent M.

To this we answer, that the word "friends" we made use of, and which has produced such an unaccountable ebullition of rage, was by us meant to design the party, i. e. Hing-tae's creditors, whose interests, above those of the creditors of King-qua the Register advocated. We had no intention to make any personal allusion, nor do we see how our words could be thus misinterpreted.

The Register further says:

"Why is this second insidious attempt made to injure the Editor of this paper in public estimation; and place him in an inimical position as to King-qua's creditors, by falsely representing him as inimical to the settlement of their claims? as the first attempt was intended to produce the same effect on the signers of the memorial, by conveying, — through the means of an affected disbelief that the "Editor merely with the wish to injure the success of the application to the British government, should have wilfully misrepresented so important a fact"—a warped and crooked construction of the use we had made of all the fac s then in our knowledge And what fact did we then misrepresent, either wilfully or in inadvertently?

This "insidious attempt to injure the Canton Register" has been explained, we think fully, by the extract we have given above, of what the Register said concerning King-qua's creditors—we merely, as has already been shewn, quoted, if not the words, certainly nothing but the sentiments expressed by him. As to its being our second attempt of the kind, we must recall to the recollection of our readers that the Register drew comparisons as to the amount of trade in the hands of the signers and the non-signers of the memorial, upon incorrect data, and afterwards excused this by saying that at the time of making his remarks he had none other. We should think, that when arguing a matter, the facts ought first to be ascertained; this the Register might, on application, have done with little trouble; his not doing it made him come to wrong conclusions; was this our fault?

It is not our province to answer this.

"But will the hints, and opinions, belief or disbelief of the Press on these subjects, have a feather's weight with the public of Canton"?

"In continuation the Register says:

"This Press, which says it is unacquainted with, and never uses personalities as a weapon, will scarcely be able to explain away its personalities towards ourselves, as quoted above, or the following towards others — "but what if they have been equally regardless of the laws of the celestial empire? if, though they should not have lent money to Hing-tae, a concession we are not disposed to allow, they had allowed years to pass on without obtaining payment from him for debts contracted, would the law of China, our contemporary has thought proper to bring into play, not likewise ,invalidate their claims"? — To which pretty piece of abstractedness, the following extract is a reply." (here the Register quotes from a pamphlet lately printed at the office of the Canton Press.)

The above explains in what way we have given personal offence to the Register, and we hope justifies whatever we have said—that there are any personalities in this extract he makes from our columns, we deny, & we may safely leave it to the judgment of our readers whether or not every word of that extract is not borne out by truth, assured that their answer will be in the affirmative. It must however be remembered that only part of an argument is here given, in which the validity of the claims on Hing-tae was in no manner attacked.

We must apologize to our readers for the length of our justification, promising them that we shall not again recur to this subject.

Three Opium Clippers have arrived during the week namely, the Sir E. Hyde, the Ann, and the Ariel all from Bengal, where the January overland mail had arrived, bringing dates to the 5th January. We have by this opportunity received the Singapore Free Press of 29th March and 5th, 7th and 12th April, the two latter containing a precis of the Europe news, extracts from which will be found in another column. The news from Canada, though not altogether unexpected, are of a most startling nature. Not only have hostilities broken out in Lower Canada, where some bloody skirmishes have taken place, but the rebellion has also spread to Upper Canada which was supposed to have been well affected. We learn from the Singapore papers that the seat of Government there Toronto was said to have been for some hours in the possession of the rebels, who were however soon dislodged by the Royalish troops. Great preparations are making in England to send a sufficient military force to the Canadas, but before that can arrive, and before winter, during which no great military movements can be made, shall have passed away, several months must elapse in which the Canadians will have good time to strengthen their insurrection. We should not be surprized at the result of the war being ultimately to add another Republic to those already existing in America. The following items of news we glean fom the papers.

Mr. Kidd, formerly a professor at Malacca has been appointed professor of the Chinese language at the University College. Mr. D'Israeli, author of Vivian Grey etc, is reported to have made the very worst speech in Parliament, and to have been put down by shouts from all sides of the house. Ministers have carried by a large majority the motion of referring the pension list to a select Committee in order to enquire which ought to be retained with a due regard to the rights of the parties and to economy. The Marquess of Queensberry died on the 9th December. Some important news had been received from Belgium. It was said that under protection of the Prussian troops, the King of Holland had commenced cutting down the forest of Groenenwald. The greatest excitement prevailed at Brussels. The income of the Duchess of Kent has been fixed at 30,000 £ per annum. Lords Melbourne and Brougham have had an angry discussion in the house of Lords. Don Carlos was mustering a strong force again to descend into Catalonia. Another attempt has been made on the life on the King of the French.

It will be seen from one of our extracts that Mr. Weeding, at a general meeting of the proprietors of East India stock, at the India house, moved a resolution for the abolition of the Company's Finance Agency in Canton. This motion was seconded by Mr. J. C. Whiteman, but lost by a great majority. In an assembly constituted like this meeting the proposal could not be otherwise treated; the proprietors of stock will never be willing to relinquish advantages which render that stock more valuable, as the Finance Committee here has certainly been the means of considerable pecuniary profit to the Company. The only means left to the merchants to remove this obnoxious agency are to petition Government against its continuance.

By the Ariel, which left the Pilot on the 26th March we learn that the price of Opium had risen considerably at Calcutta, on a supposition, we hear, that the China market was in reality not so bad as had been represented. Patna is quoted at 780 and Benares 680 Rs. In Bombay also the holders of Opium were firm, asking 800 Rs. Private letters inform us that it was supposed that not half the present crop would leave Malwa this year. Passes granted up to 24th February only 5,256 against 16,648 last year. Imports 4,765 against 14,883 last year, and Exports to that day 1,223 against 8,437 at same date last year, which shews the wealth of the Marwarries.

In a late Calcutta, paper (the Englishman) of which however we have not been able to obtain a sight, there is a paragraph quoted from a Bombay paper of 9th March, stating that the new Admiral with a part of the Indian squadron would proceed to China shortly, and that he was the bearer of despatches from the Admiralty, which were not to be opened until his arrival in China. We know not whether this report can be relied on, and though it appears to us improbable, yet it is possible that such an expedition be really contemplated. Sir Thomas Maitland, the new Admiral of the Indian Station, left England for Bombay in the middle of October last, and was to touch at Rio de Janeiro and the Cape. He will therefore probably not reach Bombay so very soon.

We are much obliged to our Correspondent for the very interesting account he has sent us of the religious observances of the Chinese, a subject with which we know him to be so well acquainted.

At last then this incubus on the China trade, the stock of tea held by the Company, has been removed, as will be seen on referring to another column, for the account of the sale of the last chest of tea belonging to the Company. Henceforth the Free trade will be unfettered, and may hope to find a fair market, unoppressed by the Company's monopoly, though it still tries in vain to shake off the Finance Committee, whose dealings are as pernicious to the Free-trader's interests here, as the old stock of the Company has been to him in the home markets.

Another edict from the treasurer to the Hong-merchants against the foreign Opium smuggling boats appeared yesterday. It is a somewhat lengthy document recapitulating the arguments and threats used about a hundred times before—threatening the Hong-merchants with punishment if this trade be not put a stop to, and saying that no decked boats ought to presume to come up the river, without having obtained regular passes at the Bogue and other custom house stations on their way up. On the whole this document is but a repetition of many similar ones gone and disregarded before, nor do we think it at all likely that a bit of paper will frighten away the foreign Opium smugglers, seeing that the Government's ill traits have never yet been followed up by active measures.

COMMERCIAL REMARKS.

IMPORTS.

COTTON MANUFACTURES.—The market is nearly bare of white LONGCLOTH, and the first arrivals of them and of fine grey cloths will sell well' Of the inferior grey and domestics the stock is heavy. CHINTZES, the supply of good patterns has been short this season, and they have readily commanded our quotations. HANDKERCHIEFS.—There is very little demand at present, and the stock is heavy, but holders appear firm. COTTON YARN, very little of good quality in the market, which is enquired for; of the inferior the stock both in importers and the dealers hands is heavy, and for some parcels not an offer can be obtained. There are nearly 1000 bales of Calcutta Yarn in the market, which is nearly unsaleable.

WOOLLENS. We have heard of no transactions in SPANISH STRIPES, and but very few, if any, remain in first hands; the market is not quite so firm. CAMLETS. English continue very depressed, and they would barely fetch our quotation. The Dutch have advanced a little being all in one hand. LONGELLS, with a very small stock, do not advance higher, and are only purchased for immediate wants. The purple, yellow, and black have materially advanced, particularly the two former, which enables us to quote assorted colors so high.

METALS.—IRON, is in good demand and the small rod and hoop wanted. LEAD, is rather firmer. SPELTER, has declined a little, the market having been well supplied with the native metal.

STRAITS PRODUCE.—TIN, has improved, and fully one quarter dollar per picul advance could be obtained. Good RATTANS, are wanted and would sell readily at $3½ @ 3½. We understand a considerable supply has just arrived from Singapore by an American vessel. PEPPER, is rather dull of sale.

RICE.—There has been a most abundant supply of rain, and the price has consequently declined a few cents per Pecul.

COTTON.—The market has continued very quiet during the week, and we do not believe a single bale has been sold buyers availing of the arrival of the Sulimany and Sir Charles Malcolm to endeavor to lower the rates, which are only supported from the stocks being so very reduced; exclusive of the two cargos they cannot be more than Bombay, 13,300; Bengal 3,500; Madras 1,500; Total 18,000 bales.

OPIUM.—The state of the trade remains unaltered, but deliveries are proceeding very briskly at Whampoa and we hear also on the coast and the Malwa and new Patna and Benares had been taken off so freely that the prices advanced to 440 for new Patna and 420; and even higher, for new Benares. The arrival however of the Sir E. Ryan, Ann, and Ariel, has reduced the rates, and we believe there are sellers but no buyers at our quotations—but we have heard of no actual transactions since. Malwa from the very small stock of good is supported, but there is a supply close at hand. Old Patna and Benares did not partake of the improvement. Turkey sells only in very small quantities and at very low price.

We cannot give the deliveries at Lintin of the last month and remaining stock, owing the temporary absence of one of the store-ship.

EXPORTS.

RAW SILK.—Up to this date the actual shipments appear only 4860 bales, in addition to which there must be about 200 purchased, and not shipped off, and about 1000 still for sale—there is none of it fine quality, and from the want of tonnage the dealers seem inclined to submit to orther lower rates.

TEA.—There has been enquiry for several kinds of teas during the week, but the chief business has been we believe for America in low descriptions of Skin, Hyson, and Souchong

From the Chinese Repository for April.

Singapore.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE SINGAPORE FREE PRESS.

Sir,—The following paragraph, from an admirable pamphlet entitled "Russia" by a Manchester Manufacturer, is perhaps worthy of insertion in your paper, as demonstrative of the absurd ideas entertained in Britain as to the power and lust of extended dominion of Russia. I cannot do better than recommend to the perusal of all your commercial readers the Manchester Manufacturer's two pamphlets—"Russia" & "Russia, Ireland, & America" His tolerant and enlightened views of politics, his strenuous advocacy of Free Trade, and non-interference in the disputes of neighbouring nations, cannot fail to do good in the present excited state of political feeling in Britain.

Yours, &c.
S.

Singapore, 3rd April, 1838.

"It has been well observed, by a very sound authority, (the Spectator newspaper) that China affords the best answer to those who argue that Russia meditates hostile views towards our Indian possessions. China is separated from Russia by an imaginary boundary only; and that country is universally supposed to contain a vast deposit of riches, well worthy of the spoiler's notice. Besides, it has not enjoyed the benefit of being civilized by English or other Christian conquerors—an additional reason for expecting to find a wealthy pagan community, awaiting, like unwrought mines, the labours of sound Russian Warren Hastings. Why, then, does not the Czar invade the Chinese empire, * which is his next neighbour, and contains an unravaged soil, rather than contemplate, as the alarmist writers and speakers predict he does, marching three thousand miles over regions of burning deserts and ranges of snowy mountains, to Hindostan where he would find that Clive and Wellesley had preceded him? The reason for such forbearance is, at the present day, the same as was when that splendid but immoral genius, Catherine, grumbled in vain at the late very expedition—that there is not in Russia sufficient available wealth to transport across its own surface an army large enough to subjugate the Chinese. How, then, will they reach India through enemies territories, and in spite of the power and influence of England? To warrant the attempt, the Czar ought to possess, at least, the command of one hundred millions sterling. Last year, he required but one million and a quarter; for which he was compelled to solicit the aid of the capitalists of Western Europe, and found great difficulty, even after pledges of peace and protestation of good behaviour, in obtaining the necessary loan!

Statistics of Matrimony in England—Some sore old bachelor has published the following return concerning matrimony, but neglectes to give any guarantee for its accuracy;—Wives eloped from their husbands 1352; husbands from their wives, 2361; married pairs in a state of separation 4,120; in war under the same roof, 191,020; in a state of inward hatred concealed from the world, 162,315; in a state of coldness and indifference, 510,182; reported happy by the world, 1,102; absolutely and entirely happy, nine.

Statistics of Bachelorism.—Am arried lady has favoured us with the following report—Bachelors henpecked by their housekeepers, 3,185, pestered by legacy-hunting relatives, 1,796; devoured by cares and selfish cares, 2,064; troubled and tormented by nephews and nieces (so called) 1883; crabbed, crusty grim & desolate in life's decline, 5384; happy, none.

* Unless his Muscovite Majesty should adopt this suggestion quickly, there appears every chance that England may be before him at Pekin. We perceive that some of our writers are anxious that we should send some ships of war to compel the Chinese government to open other ports to our vessels, besides Canton, and to dictate certain other regulations for carrying on trade with us, which they are good enough to suggest to his celestial majesty. Could not our ships of war call in on the way, and compel the French people to transfer the trade of Marseilles to Havre, and thus save us the carriage of their wines and maidens through the Straits of Gibraltar? Why should not they force the Americans to restrict the export of their cotton to New York, rather than to suffer the growth of Savannah and Mobile? Well may the Chinese proclaim us "outside barbarians," for, verily this is outside barbarous morality!

We received information yesterday of a most barbarous act of piracy and murder committed on the crew of a small boat consisting of four Chinese, all mere lads, on their way from Rhio to this settlement. At the entrance of the Straits of Rhio, in the vicinity of the Pan Shoal she was set upon by a sampan containing six Malays who boarded her, and butchered in cold blood, three of the poor Chinese, apparently with no other object than to gratify their diabolical cruelty, as there was nothing for them to plunder,—the other was left on board cruelly mangled, and weltering in blood, and probably owes the preservation of his life to the belief of the savages that he was also dead. He was three days in the most deplorable condition, suffering from his wounds, and subsisting on the leaves of trees growing on the beach, towards which he had contrived to paddle his boat—when he was fortunately fallen in with by a sampan pukat, and brought to this place, where his wounds have been attended to. We have seldom or never heard of an act of more cold-blooded and wanton atrocity, even among the savage marauders by whom these seas are infested. —Sing. Free Press, 5th April.

From the Albany Argus.

Later from Canada.

By the Northern mail of last evening we have a slip from St. Albans, Vt., of the first instant, and Montreal papers as late as the 30 ult. The entire regular forces under Col. Wetherall, it will be seen, have been drawn off from Rouville, via Chambly and St. Johns, to Montreal, leaving the insurgents in possession of St. Charles and the neighbouring country. In other respects the tenor of the intelligence is any thing but favorable to the government. The slip from St Albans, comes to us with this endorsement on the envelope: "Hurra for Papineau and Liberty."

FRANKLIN JOURNAL—EXTRA.
St. Albans, Vt. Dec. 1.

To-day we have intelligence from the north in regard to the situation of two parties which may be relied upon. A gentleman who left St. Johns, yesterday morning tells us that the British troops had returned to St. Johns and were that morning leaving for Montreal. There were, it is said, about 600, which included the force under Col. Wetherall and 200 sent out from Montreal on Tuesday to reinforce him; Sir John Colborne had issued orders to concentrate all the regular troops in Montreal. A small force was left at Chambly.

We give below the account of the engagement at St. Charles as published in the tory papers of Montreal. The account which our informant obtained at St. Johns while the troops were there, differs from it in some particulars.

The loss of the British was said at St. Johns to be 16 killed and 15 severely wounded—the loss of the patriots was estimated at 325 killed. The soldiers said that the French fough like tigers. Many of them plunged into the river and drowned themselves rather than be taken.—The defeat of the patriots was easier on account of their being unable to use their cannon—these they had placed on logs on the side upon which they expected the attack, but the royalists having reconnoitered the works made their attack from a different position.

The report of the patriots is very different. They say that there were only about 200 men in the works who had muskets, that the chief part of the patriot forces was at St. Denis, that their own loss is only about 30 killed, and the loss of the British much greater than is reported by them.

On the whole we think the result favorable to the Reformers. The fact that the British should have abandoned St. Charles and withdrawn almost their whole force to Montreal while a large body of patriots is collected at St. Denis, while none of the principal reformers are as yet taken, and while the country between Longueuil, Cambly, Sorel, and east of the Sorel, is in the actual possession of the patriots, shows clearly that they feel themselves unable to keep possession of the country. They have probably concluded, to fortify Montreal and wait till next summer before resuming operations. One thing is certain, the Canadian population thus far have displayed an energy and a bravery which surprises all—and which it is mere affectation in the Tory papers of Montreal to despise.

It is believed that the affair of St. Denis on Thursday of last week was much more fatal to the Royalists than they admit. Their number of killed was between 40 and 50. The retreat to Sorel was most disgraceful; when the troops arrived there they were in a most miserable plight. Forty seven stand of British arms were picked up at St. Denis.

An attempt was made at Ronvile to intercept the retreat of the royalists to Chambly. The patriots now occupy St. Charles.

From the Montreal Gazette, Nov. 30.

We stated in our last, that after the taking of St Charles, Col. Wetherall, with the whole troops under his command, had retired upon St. Hilaire de Rouville.—From thence he proceeded on Monday, towards, Chambly; but not without being occasionally fired upon during his march from the opposite side of the Richelieu. On approaching Point Oliver, he found a large body of rebels drawn up in front, with a view no doubt, of intercepting the march if possible. But, after a little skirmishing, they soon became convinced of the folly of their undertaking, and fled to the woods without being pursued by the troops, who suffered no loss whatever from the firing of the rebels, although the latter are said to have lost several men before they betook themselves to flight. Thus Col. Wetherall was able to bring his troops back in safety to Chambly, from which place he set out to attack St. Charles. It has been asked why Col. Wetherall, after his success at St. Charles, and the discomfiture and dispersion of the rebels at the place, did not penetrate to St. Denis, and accomplish what the troops of Col. Gore were not enabled to effect, from the state of the weather and the want of provisions and ammunition. But it was probable he had no orders to this effect; and we are informed that the rebels of St. Denis had no sooner heard of the fate of their friends at St. Charles, then they dispersed of their own accord, leaving their leaders to make the best of their way into exile or concealment.

At 11 o'clock this forenoon, the whole of the troops under Lieut. Col. Wetherall, including two companies of the 32d, and a party of the Montreal cavalry, were landed in town by the steamboat Victoria, from Laprairie. They had about 30 prisoners, taken at St. Charles, along with them; and a poorer or more wretched set of rebels never took arms up against lawful authority. They also carried along with them the pole and cap of liberty which had been raised at St. Charles; and, upon landing, were heartily and enthusiastically cheered by the people on the wharf, and as they proceeded along the streets with their prisoners.

Three companies of the 32d regiment, including the two flank companies, one of the 83d, and detachment of artillery and of the valuable cavalry, all under the command of the Hon. Col. Gore, proceeded to-day, in the Varennes and John Bull steamers, to Sorel, supposed to be on their way to St. Denis.

It is stated in the Halifax papers, that the 1st division of the 85th regiment, under Lieut. Col. Maunseil, had arrived at New Brunswick from Halifax. The 43d regiment were to march by the post route for Canada, as soon as the necessary preparations were made. The 34th are said to have arrived at Motis, in this province. This is stated in the Mercury, on the authority of private letters from below, but we have not been able to discover from the Halifax papers that the 34th regiment had left that place.

Mr Lahalnondiere, 83d regt. returned last evening via Boston, from Halifax, where, it will be recollected, he carried despatches relative to the movement of the troops in this province.

From the Montreal Courier, of Nov. 29.

The reports which come in from day to day, relative to Lieut. Weir, we regret to say, all agree as to the fact of his having been put to death. The time, place and manner, of the event, are very variously stated. One account says that the was shot in an attempt to escape; others, and for the honor of humanity we regret to say the majority of the reports ascribe the most revolting and unprovoked barbarity to his murderers. On this point we are unable to form an opinion. We fear the general statement of his death is too true.

Four prisoners were brought into town yesterday morning and we believe fully committed on charges of treason. Their names are Dr. A. Lacroix, of this city, Mr. A. Eusebe Bardy, a notary public, of St. Athanase, and brother to P. M. Bardy, M. P. P. for Rouville, a brother-inlaw of Bardy the notary, named Dufort, and one Dominique L. Vallee, both of the same place. We understand that they were caught within the limits of St. Armand, by a party of Col. Jones volunteers, in full retreat to the States.

Dr. Lacroix left Montreal, we believe, about 15 days since, and in company with E. E. Rodier, M. P. P.—Boston paper 7th December.

"It would be a strange thing,' remarked King Cumberland to the Captain commanding the steam-vessel in which his Majesty last proceeded to the continent, 'if I were to be drowned on my passage?' 'Sire,' replied the skipper in the innocence of sea phraseology, 'such an event is impossible.' Cumberland ruminated on the inference to be drawn from such a reply, with a marked uneasiness about the neck.

A SMALL FAMILY.—On Wednesday night six hundred and forty-seven persons slept in the Astor house, and by the bye, were not crowded. How many villages are there in our country, that make considerable show, that do not contain more than this number.—N. Y. Express.

THE VERY LAST.—The Nantucket Inquirer gives the last case of absent-mindi-m. A lodger in a hotel, after washing himself in the morning, wiped his face with a newspaper, and sat down to peruse the napkin; he did not discover his error until he attempted to tear off a corner wherewith to light his cigar.

CANTON PRESS.

Saturday, 12th May.

An order from the Governor is posted at the wall of Minqua's factory prohibiting six of the principal outside merchants, viz. Mak-heng, Yek-tuen, Fung-lam, Fung-cheung-fuk, Leong-neng, and Chan-kuen, from in future dealing, as they have been accustomed to do, in articles comprized in the Hong-merchants' monopoly, such as Tea, Rawsilk, Rhubarb &c., and all articles of import. It seems that the Tea and Silk-merchants, owing to the greater promptitude with which payment was made by the outside-men, preferred selling their produce to them to going to the Hong-merchants, and foreigners, with money in hand, found it likewise to their advantage, the outside men acting as brokers for a very moderate remuneration, whilst, owing to the poverty of several of the hongs, they found no difficulty to obtain the connivance of the latter at this illegal practice, for the shipping of the goods to Whampoa. This practice, as may be supposed has considerably affected the interests of the Co-hong, and it is at the instance of the Hong-merchants that the above order has been issued. It's appearance has been so timed as very little to affect the outside-men, the shipping season being now over, and they tell us that probably at the commencement of the next, this order will be already forgotten. If the Hong-merchants themselves are willing to prevent effectually dealings of the outside-men in articles of their monopoly, they need not to be assisted by new orders from the local Government against a trade which has long been prohibited. It is in the Hong-merchant's power to put a stop to it whenever they like, but their necessities, as well as connexions in trade with the outside-men, will probably make them connive at it as much hereafter as heretofore.

We had but little space last week to comment on the rumour which has found its way into one of the Bombay papers, of the Admiral of the India Station having orders from the Admiralty to sail with a squadron to the China sea, and, when there, to open his despatches to ascertain his ultimate destination. We were not aware last week that the new Admiral, Sir Thomas Maitland, had already arrived at Trincomalee, and that there had been sufficient time, between the arrival of the January overland despatches and the date of the rumour alluded to, for communications to have been exchanged between Bombay and Trincomalee, a circumstance which is in favor of the possibility of the truth of the report.

Supposing then that the squadron is on it's way to China, we naturally ask, what can be it's object? If the despatches are not to be opened till the Admiral's arrival in the China sea, it is not probable that his destination is to Canton, but more likely that he will proceed to the northern ports, perhaps to Tien-sing the port nearest to Peking. This then being his destination, has he orders to confer with the Chinese authorities? or does he carry any communication from the English Court to that of Peking? is he to insist on our commercial position here being imporved? None of these, can, we believe, under existing circumstances, be the object of the Government in sending out such an expedition. If a merely complimentary visit is to be made to Peking, nothing but supercilious arrogance will in their official documents be displayed by the Chinese, as an acknowledgement for the honor done them.

If it is really intended that the squadron should visit the northern coast of China, we would suppose that this was be done merely with the view of becoming better acquainted with the coast, surveying, etc. and to prove to the Chinese, by the display of a considerable naval force that the English Government does extend it's care to it's subjects in distant lands, and that it can afford them effectual protection, should this be necessary. The expedition, therefore, under this point of view, will probably have salutary consequences, and may perhaps render His Excellency, the Governor of Canton, a little more willing to assist in the settlement of the Co-hong debts, and otherwise to lower his official tone toward foreign barbarians. We believe that occasional visits of a few men of war on the coast of China would be of great use to British interests, and we therefore entertain the sanguine wish that the Bombay report be true, and all this community would we doubt not, wish to see such visits repeated.

That the Admiral on this occasion will be willing to interfere in favor of the British claims on the Co-hong, we doubt very much, as he cannot possibly have any instructions regarding them, but, should no settlement have been made, he may perhaps become the means of causing the complaints of the Creditors to be heard by the Peking Government.

We copy in another column, a letter we find in the Sing. Free Press of 5th April, giving an extract from a pamphlet on Russia, by a Manchester manufacturer, chiefly on account of the note, which is perfectly in unison with our view of the question. We do not agree with the Manchester manufacturer, however, as to the greater facility Russia would find in invading China, than the British Indian Territories. The Russian influence in Persia is very great, and its military power has for some years been concentrated near the Caspian, from whence the distance to India through partly civilized and fertile countries is not so very great—whilst that from Russia proper to the Chinese frontier, through deserts and thinly populated regions, is immense—Besides if the Russians reach Chinese Tartary, they may overrum it, and kill or drive off its few inhabitants, but between that country and China proper there is an immense desert, which to cross with an army would be a most arduous enterprize, at immense expense, and probably at the cost of a great loss of life, a circumstance of paramount consequence to an invading army which may yet have an hundred battles to fight.

By the Oneida from Newyork, whose arrival we noticed last week, we have received American papers to the 8th December, and give in another place some details we find concerning affairs in Canada. The President's message was delivered on the 4th December; Mr van Buren professes to be determined to follow up his previous line of conduct with regard to the currency. This is the only very important topic noticed by the President; Texas and Canada are not alluded to.

The Snipe, a small schooner, formerly a pleasure yacht at Singapore, of about 32 Tons, sailed from that port, bound for China, on the 29th March, and arrived here safe a few days ago, after a passage of near a month and a half. She was commanded by Mr. Ravenshill, and the crew consisted of the Captain, two English sailors, and four Malays. We understand that she experienced no less than three heavy gales on her passage, and the chief cause of its having been so long a one was her being becalmed during eight days close under the land near to the port.

On the 4th of last month, being the birthday of Dona Maria Queen of Portugal, the Governor of Macao gave a handsome entertainment at his residence, at which many of the foreign residents were present. In the evening most of the houses were illuminated.

A correspondence has passed between the Hospital committee and the governor, which has resulted in H. E. issuing orders to Captain Elliot to apply for a "red chop," to come up to Canton, and either send "Baker's ships" away, or order her to be broken up. It is needless to say that Captain Elliot has proved contumacious on his occasion. Canton Register 8th May.

Our arrivals during the week have been limited to two vessels from Liverpool and one from Manila, though, to judge from the weather here, the southerly monsoon has set in, and though several vessels from Bombay are over-due. The Elizabeth from that port, had passed Singapore some time before the clippers whose arrival we noticed last week, and the Ariel, saw her off Pulo Aor, we believe. The vessels from England, the Alexander and Vanguard, have both made rather long passages, and whatever news of public interest they might have brought has been fore-stalled by the overland mail by way of Bombay and Calcutta. The arrival of the Elizabeth is the more anxiously expected, she being said to have on board the January overland packet for China. We are also impatient to know whether any thing new has transpired respecting the naval expedition from Bombay to China. Here every thing is quiet, nor has this week, as far as we can learn, even produced any edicts from the Government with which to fill our columns, though the Opium trade at Whampoa is as brisk as ever, and likely so to continue as long as nothing but paper is sent out to restrain them.

We take the following extract from the Chinese Repository for last month, being part of a memorial addressed to the Emperor on the abuses of the Government officers in Kwan-tung Province. The imperial reply to it was embodied in an edict from the Hoppo to the Hong-merchants, in October last. Bating a few exaggerations and misstatements, our extract will show in what light the foreign trade appears to the Chinese, and what their sentiments are on the subject.

"That the department of the customs in Kwan-tung may continue to flourish, it is essential that the hong merchants should be opulent and substantial, faithful, trust-worthy, and having mutual confidence in each other; that the foreigners should observe the laws, and act consistently with the general weal,—that they should not fall into evil and hurtful practices. Of late, the opulent merchants have by degrees been brought into embarrassed circumstances, and the new merchants have rarely been found fitting men. Hence the dues to the government have not been correctly paid up, and large debts have been incurred to foreigners; who have been led to combine with native scoundrels, for evil purposes, smuggling to evade the duties, and trafficking in contraband articles; thus yearly conveying outward to sea not less than thirty millions of taels of pure silver. Whether to cast away altogether the million or so of money annually paid as duties from the custom-house of Kwang-tung, is a point not worthy of a moment's painful consideration. And the foreign ships that repair to Canton, import merely woollen cloth, camlets, clocks, and watches, which it is a matter of indifference whether we possess or not; while their exports are silk, cotton-cloth, tea, and rhubarb—things that their country cannot do without. To which party then is the trade important—to which indifferent? And what difficulty would there be in putting a stop to their coming? But our sacred dynasty is kind to those from afar, and cherishes towards them feelings of tenderness. Our sovereign's grace, which extends over the vast sea, cannot—when it is considered that the aim of the foreigners is to supply themselves with food and raiment,—cannot, I say, bear to cut off their efforts to gain a livelihood. How diligently ought the officers of the province to reflect on, and embody, the imperial purposes! And how earnestly should they remove every disgraceful mal-practice!

In the year 1814, Le Ayaou, a traitorous Chinese, combined with the foreigners, and led them into the commission of violent wrong. He was apprehended, and his offences punished; and all became again peaceful. In 1831, the English foreigners brought up guns, and introduced foreign females into Canton, having the presumption to retain them there, in the foreign factories. They clandestinely built a stone pier and quay. And, when going out and in, they had the extravagance to sit in large sedan chairs. The lieut.-governor, your ministers, Choo Kweiching, went personally to examine into these matters; he compelled the instant demolition of the quay, and drove the foreign females back to Macao. Again, in the year 1835 [1834], vessels of war of the same nation presumed to enter the inner waters. The governor, Loo Kwan stopped up the channel of navigation, and displayed to view the military terrors; and repentance and fear speedily overtook them. From these instances it may be seen, that, when the laws are kept in force, the foreigners may always be awed into subjection.

In regard to the irregularities of contraband traffic and conveyance of silver outward, unless most faithful observation be maintained, these evils cannot be brought to light and destroyed. Within a recent period, the foreigners have made and established upwards of a hundred receiving ships off the island Lantao, adjoining the Lintin sea, to the outward of the port of Macao; and there they remain, having stored on board of them, opium, and various foreign commodities. At Canton, there are depraved foreigners— * * , * * * * * * * * , and * * —who combine with depraved natives to dispose of this opium and these commodities, exchanging them for the pure silver. There are other native scoundrels who make for themselves 'fast-crab boats,' on board which they live, their head quarters being the neighborhood of Tungho kow, Seaheih keo, and Haechoo sze. These have the monopoly of the contraband goods, of which they are the smugglers, the soldiery of the passes being bribed to let them go freely to and from Lantao, the place of their contraband traffic. Here they form as it were a village. And the naval officers, receiving rich gifts make connivance at their doings a matter of profit to themselves. Yea, there are even worthless under-officers and soldiery, who go out to sea, apparently as cruisers, but secretly to bring in the contraband articles for the depraved people. Such harboring of crime and smothering of conscience is worthy of most bitter detestation. There are besides, mean people, solicitous of gain, who, by heavy bribes, obtain from the sub-prefect of Macao licenses to act as compradores to the foreigners. Further, there are police-men sent by the magistrate of the district Heangshan to remain at Macao, who make their official character a covering for various irregularities."

COMMERCIAL REMARKS.

IMPORTS.

COTTON MANUFACTURES.—During the week the Alexander and Fenguard have both arrived from Liverpool, the latter nearly full of Cotton Piece goods and COTTON-YARN. The LONGCLOTHS of good quality will sell readily, being in demand, but there is a large stock on hand of American domestics. Chintzes are also in good demand for good patterns. COTTON-YARN is however very depressed, and none but really good quality is saleable at saving prices.

WOOLLENS.—These two vessels have, we learn, brought only a few hundred pieces of either BROADCLOTH or LONGELLS, and the market is firm, both for the finer descriptions as well as SPANISH STRIPES. LONGELLS go off slowly at the present high prices.

METALS.—IRON is wanted, but as there is a considerable supply in the two arrivals and more reported, the price may be expected to decline. A heavy lot of LEAD was sold lately @ 6½, but, we believe, the purchaser cannot resell at more than 6½.

STRAITS PRODUCE.—Without importation or alteration in price.

RICE.—Has declined again, with every appearance of a good crop.

COTTON.—Nothing whatever doing in the Cotton-market, purchasers holding back, and we doubt if at present even our quotations could be realized for any quantity.

OPIUM.—We are still without a Bombay arrival, although the Elizabeth, Pearl, Ardaseer, and Bombay Castle, must be close at hand. The price of Malwa is therefore nominal, but it will be eagerly purchased on arrival for the Junks. The new Patna and Benares have taken a most extraordinary start of upwards of $ 100 per Chest in one or two days, sales having been, made it is said, as high as $ 600. The Stock here is not large, and is in few hands, but the general impression appears to be that the sudden rise has been caused by several parties having oversold. Old Patna and Benares have likewise advanced, but the demand for them is more limited. For Turkey there appears to be little increased enquiry. It is said that the Mandarins are beginning again to cause interruption to the Whampoa trade in foreign boats. The deliveries at Lintin to the 8th were, Patna old, 31; new, 483; Benares old, 32; new, 164; Malwa 191; Total 901 Chests.

EXPORTS.

RAW SILK.—The price of NANKIN SILK, is rather declining, the holders taking alarm at the want of means to ship it off, and which prevents purchases. There is none fine that we hear of in the market just now. The CANTON SILK, may be shortly expected to market—we have not been able to obtain any exact account of the quality or quantity of this first crop.

TEA.—We have no transactions to report.

As Malta four days, at Alexandria thirteen days, and at Beyrout two days, are allowed to return answers by the following Mail.

Instead of the Packet remaining six days at Alexandria on her return from Beyrout, it is probable that she will be ordered to be dispatched immediately, should a Mail arrive there from India before the expiration of that period.

By the new arrangements for the French Government Steam Packet service, commencing the 1st of December 1837, the communication from Alexandria to Marseilles is kept up as follows.

Another Steamer (in prospect) will depart from Alexandria for Marseilles on the 10th of each month.	Will arrive at Malta from Alexandria on the undermentioned days of each month. The Military in Kwangtung.

From "A memorial to the Emperor shewing the daily encrease of enevation and degeneracy in the Province Kwang-tung &c." Chinese Repository for April.

Fourthly. In the army and navy, it is most important that the number of the soldiers should in no way be defective, and that their discipline and exercise should be maintained, to provide efficiently for the defence of the laws, and the prevention of illicit traffic

In the province of Kwangtung, the peaceful condition of the people, the abundance of commodities, the prosperous state of the revenue, and the advancement of commerce, by which the province has been characterized, have resulted from the effectiveness of the customs department, and of those whose duty it is to cruise about and search out evils. The troubles that of late years have sometimes appeared in the province are all attributable to inattention and indolence on the part of the military and naval officers, and to their readiness to receive bribes for connivance. In the year 1832, the great minister commissioned by the court to take charge of the military operations at Leenchow reported, that the military body in Kwangtung was weak and ineffective, unable to snatch a victory, or to press onward in battle It is plain that all the officers both naval and military fail to use faithful diligence in the instruction and exercise of their soldiery, and that their only care is, by schemes and contrivances, to obtain good appointments and to reduce the actual number of the soldiery below the number registered, misemploying the military stores so useful to the nation, to pander to the exhaustless cravings of their own desires Under these circumstances, what hope can there still be entertained that they will give their whole souls to the discipline and exercise of their soldiers, and to render truly effective every one registered as under arms.

At the successive seaward stations of the Boera Tigris, Keangmun, and Macao—posts of great importance—there are forts and military stations; there are also cruisers, both inward, on the river, and outward, on the seas,—each entrusted to officers of various ranks, with soldiers under their command, and well-furnished with guns, powder, and every military equipment, the sole and special object of their establishment being, to cruise about for defense, for the prevention of smuggling, and for the apprehension of pirates. But all employed in these cruisers aim only to draw from the whole face of the country disgraceful fees. Whenever depraved people are found going seaward for the prosecution of illicit traffic, a bribe will secure them a free passage. Or, when on the rivers any case of plunder occurs, as soon as it is heard of, each officer begins to excuse himself: and the plundered property waits in vain to be recovered. While appointed for the apprehension of the lawless, they become in truth the safegard of thieves. On the governor and lieut.-governor rests no doubt the responsible task of the general direction of the soldiery Yet the stations and divisions of the forces are so numerous, that it cannot but be difficult for their attention and observation to be directed to all. The commanders-in-chief and the generals and admirals of divisions are high officers whose only duties are those of war. Were they carefully to ascertain, as easily they may, the characters of their subordinate officers, and the degree of conformity of the regimental rolls with the actual numbers of the soldiery, and were they strictly and intelligently to regulate their forces, assuredly we should not find such irregularities, as connivance at smuggling and illicit traffic, or conveyance of the pure silver to seaward.

It behoves that a declaration of the imperial pleasure be solicited, requiring the governor, and lieut-governor, the commanders-in-chief, and the generals and admirals of divisions, to command all the subordinate military and naval officers, that they faithfully exercise and instruct the soldiery, and have all their men vigorous and well-disciplined; that they must not, to fill up the numbers and draw the rations, place in the ranks men unfitted, by aged infirmity, or youthful delicacy, for the right performance of their duties. With regard to the seaward passges upon the coast, namely the Bocca Tigris, Keangmun, and Macao Roads, there is no overland communication from thence, and the vessels, whether native or foreign, that pass in and out, can by no possibility fly by those places unobserved The civil and naval authorities of those districts should, therefore, be made responsible for keeping up a good preventive guard, for the suppression of illicit traffic. If this be done it is certain that such a traffic will soon be entirely brought to an end.

In consequence of the robberies that so often occur upon the rivers, the merchants people of Chaouchow, Hainan, and other places on the seacoast, who bring silver to the metropolis to purchase the commodities they require, come mostly by sea, thus seeking a more direct and speedy route. On these occasions, it is said, they are often taken by the cruisers at sea, no careful distinction being made between peaceful traders, and clandestine traffickers; and the superior officers of those by whom they are thus irregularly taken, seeking to gain approbation, incorrectly report the circumstances as though sycee silver had been seized while being conveyed outward. In this matter, it is important that an early interruption should be put to such proceedings, and that preventive measures should be adopted while the thing is yet in its commencement. The prefects and magistrates should receive directions to issue orders throughout their departments and districts, that whenever the merchants are sending silver to Canton, they shall send it by the inland navigation; or if in any case it is necessary to pass out to sea, that they shall obtain from the custom-houses through which they pass, manifests of the goods reported and paid for by them; and the cruising officers having compared their cargoes with the manifests, shall not have it in their power, to make irregular seizures, at their own pleasure. When any robberies occur, the local officers, civil and military, shall be required to take measures conjointly for the apprehension of the parties, and it should be imperative on them to seize the thieves and to recover the lost property. By such measures it may be hoped to reform the military discipline, to extirpate robbery and contraband traffic, and to enable the people joyfully to pursue their occupations

Miscellaneous.

REVIVAL OF TRADE WITH THE RHINE.—A deputation from the merchants of Cologne waited upon the Lord Mayor on Wednesday, at the Mansion-house, with the address unanimously agreed to by them upon taking advantage of the opportunity which presented itself of reviving the intercourse between this country and the upper provinces of the Rhine, which had been closed against trade for upwards of 300 years. The address, the tone of which is extremely pleasing, was accompanied by a present of some Rhenish wine of a very rare quality. The following, are passages in the address:—

In the flourishing days of the Hanse, the citizens of Cologne were wont to feel at home in London, in Guildhall, and Steel-yard, their ships mooring in the Thames. In later times the power of incidents has loosened the ties which united the two cities. London rose and grew the gigantic emporium for the commerce of the world, while the 30 years' war annihilated the commercial life of all our German markets. The barriers of the Netherlands obstructed the Rhine, and no longer was our flag seen on our once frequented seas. The realm of Charlemagne, the realm of 1,000 years, sunk, and the dismembered German states strove in contest with France until that glorious day when the eagles of our fatherland, united with the lions of Great Britain, crushed the head of tyranny at Waterloo. At present a new life is awake on the Rhine, and after the lapse of three centuries, the flag of Cologne reappears in London in a vessel adapted for the navigation both of rivers and of the sea, destined to reanimate a direct intercourse. As a token of our personal esteem, and in remembrance of the glorious days of the Hanse, we beg leave to present to your lordship, by the owner of our first ship, a choice produce of German wine. May it please your lordship to devote, in our name, a cup of this wine to the weal of the city of London; and, at the same time, to think of our city, so long befriended by you, and which, for eighteen centuries, has been held by the hand of the Almighty above the ebbing course of time.

The Lord Mayor expressed the sense he entertained of the flattering attentions of the Cologne merchants, and promised the deputation that he would make an early experiment upon the wine they had been pleased to send to him.

AN AMERICAN MADAME LAVALETTE!

The abused, betrayed, but still devoted wife of Clark (says an Albany paper), who is under sentence in the State Prison, went to the goal this forenoon to take leave of her convict husband, who was to start for Sing Sing. She was admitted to his cell, and after an hour's interview retired, apparently overwhelmed with grief. With her face buried in her kerchief, to "hide the tears she did not shed," she passed out unquestioned, and the key was turned upon the culprit. Some half hour afterwards, upon a closer examination, the turnkey found that Clark in the wardrobe of his wife had fled, leaving her in the cell as his hostage! The whole posse of sheriff and constables were mustered and are in full cry after the fugitive.—(Globe)

An advertisement appeared in the Liverpool journals, announcing the intention of a Samuel Patchett to perform one of the most daring feats (yesterday, Monday), which a reckless adventurer ever attempted. Patchett declared his intention to leap from a height of 193 feet into the Victoria Dock. On the first leap he engaged to change his dress while under water, on the second, to turn a summerset in the act of descent, and to fire off a pistol. By many the advertisement was regarded as a hoax. In spite of their surmises, and notwithstanding the inclement state of the weather, at the appointed hour (twelve o' clock) the wharfs of the Victoria Dock were lined with upwards of twelve thousand people. At one time fears were entertained that some of the ships, overloaded by the heavi top weight of the mass of people suspended in the rigging, would capsize. A few minutes after twelve o' clock, the adventurer appeared, He ascended the mainshrouds of the Dalhousie Castle, and, after having reached the Royal mast track (at a distance of at least 150 feet from the water), he dared the leap, succeeded in clearing the sides of the vessel, plunged into the dock dressed as a man, and in a few minutes rose to the surface attired as a woman. A few minutes after two he again appeared to risk the chance of his second leap. On this occasion he engaged to fire off a pistol. and to fling a summerset while descending. A severe gale and heavy shower appeared to thwart his purpose. After a careful adjustment of his balance, the man sprang from the mast; his descent at first was rapid and direct; before he had reached the lower yards his position was horizontal. At this moment the crowd was breathless. It was feared that it he did not recover his perpendicular inclination, he would be severely lacerated in striking the water. In a moment suspense was at an end. He fired off the pistol; and, aware on his danger, contrived to break the force of his fall projecting his elbows. He grazed the water with his shoulder-blade, neither his head nor feet being immersed. So slightly was he enveloped, that he rowed ashore the boat which was awaiting him. This feat, we believe, is without precedent. Patchett is a native of London.—(LiverpoolStandard.)

Extract from the Barque Sir's Log Book, Thursday, April 5th, 1838.

At 2 A. M. squally, with rain, at 2. 30 A. M. calm—the look-out on the Poon-castle, reported a boat about pulling across the bow, at this time fine close weather, boat to, quarters, and got up the Company's arms and ammunition, hailed the boat in Malay, English and Hindoostanee, but received no answer, perceived two more boats ahead, the one on the starboard bow pulling as if she intended to board us on the bow, fired a volley of muskets into her when she pulled round and remained on the starboard quarter, perceived another boat close to us astern hailed her, but she not answering, fired into her; we then saw another on the larboard quarter, making in all five, but when they received our fire in the boat astern they gradually pulled away and disappeared. Rowed and sailed round day light when it became squally with heavy rain, saw a boat under sail standing to the westward.

We received all possible assistance from the officers and men of the 5th M. N. I., and I cannot help taking this opportunity of returning them my hearty thanks, and have no doubt, had the boats boarded us, that they would have got a warm reception.

N. B. At sunset, on the 5th, we saw three Prows to the Eastward of us, I have no doubt but they were the same we fired into during the night,—we had Pulo Pera bearing about W. S. W. distance 50 miles.

J. M. MORRIS,
Commander Barque Sir

Singapore, 16th April 1838.

From the Singapore Free Press, April 19.

The new Admiral has, we hear on good authority, been ordered by the Admiralty to proceed to China immediately after his arrival in this Country, and has brought with him sealed orders not to be opened till he reaches that destination. We hope these orders enable him to put strong measures in force in regard to the Chinese, particularly as it is also stated he has been told to take round several other vessels of war to the station. If this be the case, the British flag is at length aroused from his lethargy, and we may expect to see such steps taken as in the present posture of our affairs in Canton, are consistent with the dignity of the British nation, and the interests of our commerce. We sincerely hope that something will be done to place our relations with China on a permanent footing, and that all danger of future interruptions to our trade will be obviated.—Bombay Gazette, 9th March 1838.

The Ship Red Rover which lately passed this Port on her voyage from London to Cochin China, has on board for the Ruler of that country, a small Iron Steam-boat, unpacked, worked by a high pressure engine of four horse power. They hold in its present state, without engine or machinery which are packed away in boxes, looks not unlike a donkey or small cargo boat, being of about the same dimensions and proportions. The gunwales have hereafter to be raised about 8 or 9 inches by the addition of plank. The boat is too small to be decked over. About one-third of her length from the bow is for the accommodation of 8 or 9 passengers; about a third of her entire length, in the centre, is occupied by the machinery, engine and boiler; and the remaining third aft to the stern, is occupied by fuel, the engineer, steersman, &c.

Altogether she is a very pretty plaything for his Majesty, and may, by the means hereafter of bringing Steam boats into common use in Cochin China. But a person of Steam boats. Might not the Court of Directors, if strongly solicited by the Local Government, send out a small flotilla of Iron Steam-boats (say half a dozen) to serve in the Straits in place of the present Gun-boats? Each boat might be manned by one European to be Captain and Engineer, and Chinese Assistant, two firemen, and 16 Malays to work a swivel gun and oars. It would be matter of no very difficult calculation for the Local Government to ascertain the cost and expense of such a flotilla as compared with the present Gun-boats. Little doubt can exist of their greater efficiency both for maintaining intercourse for Government purposes between the different Straits settlements, and for the prevention of piracy. It will be time to talk of the suppression of piracy when few generation hence, when the feudal system among the Malays is more completely broken up, and their moral condition bettered by Education. Mean time it is the opinion of all who have resided for any time in the Straits of Malacca, that Steam vessels are better calculated than any other sort of craft, for the prevention and check of Malayan freebooters on the waters.

Manilla.

The last accounts from Rangoon are down to the 16th. Nothing of any consequence seemed to be stirring there, though numerous conjectures appear to have been about relative to the real object of the appointment of the new Governor, and the summary displacement of the late Governor. Some surprise seems to have been excited at seeing a few hundreds of Karen recruits now seen in the train of the new Governor. This is, we believe, something unusual, and we cannot imagine the hill and jungle men to be much pleased with such service.

Two men were executed at Rangoon on the evening of the 14th—one for stealing three handkerchiefs, and the other a small bundle of putshos. This, no doubt, was designed to instil a salutary terror into the Rangoonese and to impress them with the strict regard to justice of their new rulers, though with all due deference to His Excellency's ideas of justice, we rather think a man's life is worth more than a few pieces of cloth. It is not long, however, since our own country used to be disgraced by executions for equally trivial offences, and we should not be the first to condemn such practices, in less civilized countries. It remains, however, to see whether the due execution of the law, or the mere arbitrary caprice of an individual, has been at work in these instances.

We understand that two officers have been appointed by the Viceroy to proceed to Martaban in order to institute an investigation into the late outrages on this frontier, and that they may very shortly be expected in our neighbourhood. We are not aware of any of the details of the measure, or what is the opinion as to the probable efficacy of the investigation. Judging from all that we have ever heard on the subject of these outrages, we anticipate no good result from such an investigation, as we have always considered the offence to emanate from the same authority which appoints the judges. We may be wrong, however, and we shall be very glad to find ourselves wrong. If this enquiry end in the detection and punishment, not only of the actual offenders, but of those who have urged them on, these officers will be deserving of our warmest thanks.

We understand that Government have determined on reinforcing the troops on this station, and that an additional European Regiment may be expected from Madras in the course of the ensuing month. The 63d is said to be the Regiment coming over, and preparations are now being made for providing them with accommodation on their arrival. The site fixed on for them is on the ground East of Tavoyzoo and North of the Chinese Burial-ground. What the object of this reinforcement may be we have not heard, but it will, at all events, have one effect—that of keeping our immediate neighbours on their good behaviour, and impressing them with a sense of the danger of exciting our resentment for any underhand injuries they may attempt to inflict on us similar to those that have already taken place. We hear also, that Maulmain is to be frequently visited by Men-of-War during the ensuing rainy season, and this, we think, a very wise and politic measure, for we are in a great degree isolated during that season, and have, comparatively, very little communication with the rest of India. We have not heard that any person has been nominated to succeed Col. Burney, who appears to have quitted India at the close of last month, nor are we aware that it is intended to appoint a successo to him for the present. Perhaps, when the report reaches Bengal, that this new Viceroy has been sent down to Rangoon to receive any communication we may be desirous of making—in other words, to obviate the necessity of our having a Resident at the Court of Ava, our Government may feel inclined to resent such an arrangement. A quiet man will put up with much, and so will a quiet Government, but when once your quiet people are roused, they are not so easily settled down again.—Pinang Gazette and Straits Chronicle, March 24.

Medical Missionary Society.

The following short report of a meeting of this Society has been kindly drawn up for us by a friend, our not being aware of the meeting taking place having prevented our being present, and the Secretary's absence from town the obtaining the minutes from him.

1st. It was proposed by Wm. Jardine, Esq., seconded by J. C. Green, Esq., and resolved unanimously.—that the Corresponding Secretary be requested to forward a copy of the Regulations of the Society, the Address, and other documents, to various gentlemen in England and America (as per list) desiring them to adopt such measures as they may deem expedient to procure funds in it's behalf;—also that he address the Editors of various Medical Journals (as per list) requesting them to favor the society with their works, and to state that the society will be happy to forward them, in return, the Reports of it's Hospitals, and accounts of remarkable cases.

2d. Moved by Wm. Blenkin, Esq., and seconded by W. F. Gray, Esq.—that a subscription paper be opened in each of the principal Agency Offices in Canton, on board the receiving ships at Hong-Kong, and by Doctor Anderson and others, at his discretion, at Macao, for the purpose of procuring funds for the furnishing the Hospital at Macao, and for defraying the current expenses of the operations of the Society.

3d. On the motion of J. C. Green, Esq seconded by the Revd. E. C. Bridgman, it was unanimously resolved, that the presiding Physician, Wm. CANTON PRESS.

Saturday, 19th May.

"We do not think there is much chance of the trade in Opium being done away with. The baneful drug is as much a necessary with the Chinese as tea is to the English, and should any formal negotiations take place between China and Britain, the object of which shall be to place the commerce of both nationson an intelligible footing, we think it more than probable that the Mandarins have influence enough at the Court of Pekin to obtain the insertion of Opium as an admissible article under a moderate duty. We see no reason therefore to expect that the pompous edicts addressed to the barbarian merchants will be put into full operation. There may be in the mean time a good deal of vapouring about driving the Ships out of the sea and all that sort of thing, but so universal is the use of opium, that in our opinion an insurrection would be the almost inevitable consequence of the people being deprived of their favorite enjoyment by any act of Government.

Should we be right in our conjecture that the trade in this now prohibited article, will be established on a permanent basis altogether or suffered to continue subject to it's present inconveniences, we strongly advise the relinquishment of the monopoly, and the substitution of an export duty. Such a revenue will have the best chance of permanency; the fluctuations of the market will be borne by the trading community, while the public income will be unaffected."

The above observations are from the Bombay Gazette, and, agreeing as we do with that paper, that there is not much chance of the Opium trade in China being done away with, yet it is a mistake to suppose, that if ever any commercial treaty were entered into between England and China, that the Mandarins would use their influence in obtaining the toleration of that trade. Judging from the Imperial edicts issued every now and then against the importation of Opium, and from the circumstance of the bribes by which this trade exists going exclusively into the pockets of the officers of Kwangtung province and other maritime provinces, we suppose the Imperial Government to be in earnest it its threats against the drug, seeing that the welfare of its people is concerned in its suppression, whilst their own pecuniary interests are not thereby affected. It is therefore very possible that, in the negotiations of a treaty of commerce between the two nations, the Peking Government would insist on the English no longer introducing any Opium into the country; we do not know whether the British government would submit to such a condition, but certain it is that the mandarines of Canton would not oppose this clause, since they, if they are possessed of common sense, must presume that the Opium trade will be carried on as heretofore, and it is only whilst it remains illicit that they can gain by it. The consequence of the English officially renouncing the traffic in Opium, would probably be that, instead of it's being now cultivated in the British possessions in India, it would then be grown in greater quantities in the independent principalities of that country, and its transport to China would be effected under the American, Portuguese or any other flag the speculator may fancy, without affecting the trade itself, as far as China is concerned, in the slightest degree. Whether a clause in a treaty with China, precluding the British from participation in the Opium trade, would be binding on British subjects at all is another question; we believe they would not be obliged to take notice of it without an act of Parliament to that effect.

Our readers will find, in another column, the report of a meeting of the members of the Medical Missionary Society. It appears that recent unavoidable and large expenses (the purchase of the very convenient premises, now the Society's Hospital at Macao) have rendered another appeal to the public necessary, in order to raise the requisite funds for the furnishing of the Hospital. Every one of our readers in China is well aware of the benefit conferred on the Chinese sick by Doctor Parker of the Ophthalmic Hospital, and it is certain that the enlarged plans of the M. M. Society into which the Ophthalmic Hospital has merged, will afford relief to a much greater number of sufferers, than has been hitherto the case. We are confident therefore that our appeal to the public here will be responded to by subscriptions and donations, and hope that the same will be the case in Europe and America.

PIRACY. The Shipping in the Straits seems again to be as unprotected as ever. It will be seen from an extract from the log of the barque Star, on her way from Madras to Singapore, that she was threatened in the straits of Malacca by five proahs, which could only be prevented from boarding, by firing into them. Luckily this vessel had a detachment of troops on board, and was thus unusually well armed, but had this not been the case the probable result of an attack from the proahs would have been the capture of the vessel, and the massacre of all on board. It is really shameful that the British Government or that of India will not permanently protect the trade of their subjects in the straits, this highroad of British commerce with Asia and China. It is true that some two years ago some energetic measures scared the pirates away for some time, and no doubt the governments now bask in the sunshine of the praise that was then bestowed on them and their servants for their exertions, and, thinking that they have done enough, have relapsed into that apathy which has been their reproach for years. It is true they sent a steamboat to Singapore, as a make-believe that they still intended to pursue the pirates, but no sooner is that boat arrived, no sooner has she made a few trips between Singapore, Malacca and Pinang, to carry hither and thither some of the officers of Government, than she is ordered to Maulmain, and the protection of the Straits is again left to a few very small gunboats, which are totally inadequate to the proper protection of the shipping.

The consequences begin already to show themselves; the pirates are leaving their haunts, one after the other, and, stimulated by success, will probably, in a very short time, commit much more havoc than they ever did before. What signifies the giving premiums and prizemoney as the crews of H. M. Cruizers, before the evil, for the suppression of which they receive rewards, is cured; of what good is it to present the commanding officer with a sword, if that sword is to remain in the scabbard, and the enemy may again safely venture on his former depredations? We hope that some permanent protection will be afforded; and some system be adopted to annihilate the pirates.

Occasional expeditions against them will be of only momentary advantage; for one boat destroyed, two others will be launched as soon as the coast is clear, and the lives of innocent traders and their property more than ever be exposed to the vengeance and cupidity of the Malay Pirates.

We have reprinted from the Bombay Gazette of 2nd February a table of the arrival and sailing of the English and French Steam boats between Alexandria and Syria to England and France, which, we doubt not, will be of service to our readers.

CHILE AND PERU.—About a month ago we informed our readers that the Chilean Corps of Invasion had evacuated the Peruvian territory under certain conditions, which were not however ratified by the Chilean Government, though it was owing altogether to Santa Cruz' moderation that the Chilean troops were not annihilated. The treacherous conduct of the Chilean authorities has again been manifested, for we learn that the news brought from Peru by the Richard Alsop are to the following effect: The Peruvian sloop of war Federacion, of 22 guns, having General Valdivian, governor of Lima, on board, was proceeding along the coast when she fell in with the Chilean frigate Libertad of 36 guns. General Valdivian, aware of the treaty under which the Chilean troops had evacuated Peru, and supposing peace to have been restored between the two Republics, went on board the Libertad on a visit, where he was informed that the treaty had not been ratified, and that the war consequently continued. On hearing this the General wished to take his leave to return to the Peruvian ship, but was retained as a prisoner of war. After some demonstration of hostility, though without fighting, the Federacion struck her colours, and became the prize of the Chileans, who, it must be said, have, by similar acts of treachery, succeeded in capturing almost every ship belonging to Peru. The British Consul General's exertions to bring about a reconciliation have hitherto been without effect, but it was said that a British Admiral would soon appear on that station, with instructions, if it could not be done by friendly means, to compel the two republics to keep the peace towards each other. It is likely that the people of either country will secretly rejoice at such interference in the same manner as a pair of semi-reluctant duellists are glad of the arrival of constables, to prevent the bloody conflict, whilst enough has been done by them to prove that they are "men of pluck."

The third meeting of the Canton Regatta Club will take place on Thursday and Friday next, the first of these days being likewise the birth day of the Queen of England, on which she completes her 19 th year.

We are afraid that either the Canton community have made a bad bargain in the clock they have bought of the Hon. E. I. Company, or that it is not properly attended to, since we observe that every now and then it ceases to perform it's functions, to the great annoyance and confusion of those who enter the English Hong on purpose to set their watches by the clock. We believe it is the business of the Chamber of Commerce, as the contracting parties, to look after the irregularities of our public chronometer.

THE BRITISH SAILORS' HOSPITAL AT WHAMPOA. We have, on several occasions, called the attention of our readers to this subject, and have informed them of the official correspondence the Committee of that institution have had with the local authorities. Our readers must therefore be aware that the ship in question has remained at Whampoa in spite of the reiterated threats and of the orders from the Government to leave her anchorage.

These orders have been continually disregarded, but this is nothing strange; few of the Government edicts are intended to be acted on, and we should be among the last to blame the Committee in this respect, were we assured that the benefits conferred by the Hospital being stationary at Whampoa were at all equal to the evils that may result to some persons by a disregard of the governmental orders. We believe we are not misinformed in stating that the number of sick on board the hulk at any time has been some-what less than five, and generally the so called Hospital is without any sick inmates whatever. It is not to be wondered at therefore that the Chinese do not consider the said Hospital in any other light than that of a vessel placed at Whampoa to facilitate smuggling. We know not, nor do we wish to believe, that the Chinese are right in this respect, but seeing the Opium smuggling boats crowding round the Hospital, which is their continual practice, and the commanders of the different boats mussing on board of that Ship, it is not to be wondered at that the Chinese should take it into their heads that the Hospital ship is concerned in smuggling. Among European sailors at Whampoa the vessel is called the "Opium hulk," probably from it's vicinity to the smuggling boats. We do not, however, believe that the vessel actually serves for a "cache" as Canadian hunters would call it, but its reputation has become somewhat tainted. But the question is whether it is worth while, for the very little benefit derived from her as a Hospital ship, to expose the limbs and lives of poor unfortunate Lingalees to the wrath of the Canton authorities, and that they will have to suffer, though perfectly innocent, in either or both, there seems to be but too good reason to fear.

OFFICIAL NOTICE TO HER BRITANNIC MAJESTY'S SUBJECTS.

Macao, 3rd May, 1838.

AT the Instance of His Excellency the Governor of Macao the subjoined translation of certain regulations, to take effect from the 20th Instant, is published for the general information of Her Britannic Majesty's subjects visiting this Port.

1st. That every Schooner and Boat, or other vessel of whatsoever description, which navigates between this and Canton, and other places near this settlement, and which enters and leaves the Inner Harbour of this Port, shall be subject to the registration and other existing regulations in respect to the Lorchas, which are of Portuguese property.

2nd. That the entrance or departure of every vessel which has not received it's permit, nor conformed to the other regulations, which will be issued from the Office of this Government, is prohibited from the twentieth Instant.

3rd. That the Cutter, attached to Her Britannic Majesty's Establishment in China, is exempted from the foregoing regulations, and shall continue to enjoy the same privileges and advantages, that it has hitherto enjoyed.

And for the information of all parties interested, this order shall be printed, and posted in public places.

something unusual, and we cannot imagine the hill and jungle men to be much pleased with such service.

Two men were executed at Rangoon on the evening of the 14th—one for stealing three handkerchiefs, and the other a small bundle of potshos. This, no doubt, was designed to instil a salutary terror into the Rangoonese and to impress them with the strict regard to justice of their new ruler, though with all due deference to His Excellency's ideas of justice, we rather think a man's life is worth more than a few pieces of cloth. It is not long, however, since our own country used to be disgraced by executions for equally trivial offences, and we should not be the first to condemn such practices, in less civilized countries. It remains, however, to see whether the due execution of the law, or the mere arbitrary caprice of an individual, has been at work in these instances.

We understand that two officers have been appointed by the Viceroy to proceed to Martaban in order to institute an investigation into the late outrages on that frontier, and that they may very shortly be expected in our neighbourhood. We are not aware of any of the details of the measure, or what is the opinion as to the probable efficacy of the investigation. Judging from all that we have ever heard on the subject of these outrages, we anticipate no good result from such an investigation, as we have always considered the offence to emanate from the same authority which appoints the judges. We may be wrong, however, and we shall be very glad to find ourselves wrong. If this enquiry end in the detection and punishment, not only of the actual offenders, but of those who have urged them on, these officers will be deserving of our warmest thanks.

We understand that Government have determined on reinforcing the troops on this station, and that an additional European Regiment may be expected from Madras in the course of the ensuing month. The 63d is said to be the Regiment coming over, and preparations are now being made for providing them with accommodation on their arrival. The site fixed on for them is on the ground East of Tavoyxon and North of the Chinese Burial-ground. What the object of this reinforcement may be we have not heard, but it will, at all events, have one effect—that of keeping our immediate neighbours on their good behaviour, and impressing them with a sense of the danger of exciting our resentment for any underhand injuries they may attempt to inflict on us similar to those that have already taken place. We hear also, that Maulmain is to be frequently visited by Men-of-War during the ensuing rainy season, and this, we think, a very wise and politic measure, for we are in a great degree isolated during that season, and have, comparatively, very little communication with the rest of India. We have not heard that any person has been nominated to succeed Col. Burney, who appears to have quitted India at the close of last month, nor are we aware that it is intended to appoint a successor to him for the present. Perhaps, when the report reaches Bengal, that this new Viceroy has been sent down to Rangoon to receive any communication we may be desirous of making—in other words, to obviate the necessity of our having a Resident at the Court of Ava, our Government may feel inclined to resent such an arrangement. A quiet man will put up with much, and so will a quiet Government, but when once your quiet people are roused, they are not so easily settled down again.—Pinang Gazette and Straits Chronicle, March 24.

Medical Missionary Society.

The following short report of a meeting of this Society has been kindly drawn up for us by a friend, our not being aware of the meeting taking place having prevented our being present, and the Secretary's absence from town the obtaining the minutes from him.

"At a general meeting of the Medical Missionary Society in China, held at the rooms of the Chamber of Commerce, May 15th 1838

1st. It was proposed by Wm. Jardine, Esq., seconded by J. C. Green, Esq., and resolved unanimously,—that the Corresponding Secretary be requested to forward a copy of the Regulations of the Society, the Address, and other documents, to various gentlemen in England and America (as per list) desiring them to adopt such measures as they may deem expedient to procure funds in it's behalf:—also that he address the Editors of various Medical Journals (as per list) requesting them to favor the society with their works, and to state that the society will be happy to forward them, in return, the Reports of it's Hospitals, and accounts of remarkable cases.

2d. Moved by Wm. Blenkin, Esq., and seconded by W. F. Gray, Esq.—that a subscription paper be opened in each of the principal Agency Offices in Canton, on board the receiving ships at Hong-Kong, and by Doctor Anderson and others, at his discretion, at Macao, for the purpose of procuring funds for the furnishing the Hospital at Macao, and for defraying the current expenses of the operations of the Society.

3d. On the motion of J. C. Green, Esq seconded by the Revd. E. C. Bridgman, it was unanimously resolved, that the presiding Physician, Wm. Jardine Esq., and Doctor Anderson be a committee to ascertain the probable expenses of furnishing, in the Hospital at Macao, a room for medicines, and receiving patients, six wards for males, and six for females, and a room for the superintending physician, and report at a subsequent meeting of the Society.

4th. The report of the Committee on byelaws was read, and, after a free discussion of several points, the whole was recommitted, to be disposed of at a future meeting of the Society."

CANTON PRESS.

Saturday, 19th May.

"We do not think there is much chance of the trade in Opium being done away with. The beatific drug is as much a necessary with the Chinese as tea is to the English, and should any formal negotiations take place between China and Britain, the object of which shall be to place the commerce of both nationson an intelligible footing, we think it more than probable that the Mandarins have influence enough at the Court of Pekin to obtain the insertion of Opium as an admissible article under a moderate duty. We see no reason therefore to expect that the pompous edicts addressed to the barbarian merchants will be put into full operation. There may be in the mean time a good deal of vapouring about driving the Ships out of the sea and all that sort of thing, but so universal is the use of opium, that in our opinion an insurrection would be the almost inevitable consequence of the people being deprived of their favorite enjoyment by any act of Government.

Should we be right in our conjecture that the trade in this now prohibited article, will be established on a permanent basis altogether or suffered to continue subject to it's present inconveniences, we strongly advise the relinquishment of the monopoly, and the substitution of an export duty. Such a revenue will have the best chance of permanency; the fluctuations of the market will be borne by the trading community, while the public income will be unaffected."

The above observations are from the Bombay Gazette, and, agreeing as we do with that paper, that there is not much chance of the Opium trade in China being done away with, yet it is a mistake to suppose, that if ever any commercial treaty were entered into between England and China, that the Mandarins would use their influence in obtaining the toleration of that trade. Judging from the Imperial edicts issued every now and then against the importation of Opium, and from the circumstance of the bribes by which this trade exists going exclusively into the pockets of the officers of Kwangtung province and other maritime provinces, we suppose the Imperial Government to be in earnest in its threats against the drug, seeing that the welfare of its people is concerned in its suppression, whilst their own pecuniary interests are not thereby affected. It is therefore very possible that, in the negotiations of a treaty of commerce between the two nations, the Peking Government would insist on the English no longer introducing any Opium into the country; we do not know whether the British government would submit to such a condition, but certain it is that the mandarines of Canton would not oppose this clause, since they, if they are possessed of common sense, must presume that the Opium trade will be carried on as heretofore, and it is only whilst it remains illicit that they can gain by it. The consequence of the English officially renouncing the traffic in Opium, would probably be that, instead of it's being now cultivated in the British possessions in India, it would then be grown in greater quantities in the independent principalities of that country, and its transport to China would be effected under the American, Portuguese or any other flag the speculator may fancy, without affecting the trade itself, as far as China is concerned, in the slightest degree. Whether a clause in a treaty with China, precluding the British from participation in the Opium trade, would be binding on British subjects at all is another question we believe they would not be obliged to take notice of it without an act of Parliament to that effect.

Our readers will find, in another column, the report of a meeting of the members of the Medical Missionary Society. It appears that recent unavoidable and large expenses (the purchase of the very convenient premises, now the Society's Hospital at Macao) have rendered another appeal to the public necessary, in order to raise the requisite funds for the furnishing of the Hospital. Every one of our readers in China is well aware of the benefit conferred on the Chinese sick by Doctor Parker of the Ophthalmic Hospital, and it is certain that the enlarged plans of the M. M. Society into which the Ophthalmic Hospital has merged, will afford relief to a much greater number of sufferers, than has been hitherto the case. We are confident therefore that our appeal to the public here will be responded to by subscriptions and donations, and hope that the same will be the case in Europe and America.

Piracy The Shipping in the Straits seems again to be as unprotected as ever. It will be seen from an extract from the log of the barque Star, on her way from Madras to Singapore, that she was threatened in the straits of Malacca by five proahs, which could only be prevented from boarding, by firing into them. Luckily this vessel had a detachment of troops on board, and was thus unusually well armed, but had this not been the case the probable result of an attack from the proahs would have been the capture of the vessel, and the massacre of all on board. It is really shameful that the British Government or that of India will not permanently protect the trade of their subjects in the straits, this highroad of British commerce with Asia and China. It is true that some two years ago some energetic measures scared the pirates away for some time, and no doubt the governments now basking in the sunshine of the praise that was then bestowed on them and their servants for their exertions, and, thinking that they have done enough, have relapsed into that apathy which has been their reproach for years. It is true they sent a steamboat to Singapore, as a make-believe that they still intended to pursue the pirates, but no sooner is that boat arrived, no sooner has she made a few trips between Singapore, Malacca and Pinang, to carry hither and thither some of the officers of Government, than she is ordered to Maulmain, and the protection of the Straits is again left to a few very small gunboats, which are totally inadequate to the proper protection of the shipping.

The consequences begin already to show themselves; the pirates are leaving their hiding place a one after the other, and, stimulated by revenge, will probably, in a very short time, commit much more havoc than they ever did before. What signifies the giving premiums and prizemoney to the crews of H. M. Cruizers, before the evil, for the suppression of which they receive rewards, is cured; of what good is it to present the commanding officer with a sword, if that sword is to remain in the scabbard, and the enemy may again safely venture on his former depredations? We hope that some permanent protection will be afforded; and some system be adopted to annihilate the pirates.

Occasional expeditions against them will be of only momentary advantage; for one boat destroyed, two others will be launched as soon as the coast is clear, and the lives of innocent traders and their property more than ever be exposed to the vengeance and cupidity of the Malay Pirates.

We have reprinted from the Bombay Gazette of 2nd February a table of the arrival and sailing of the English and French Steam boats between Alexandria and Syria to England and France, which, we doubt not, will be of service to our readers.

Chile and Peru —About a month ago we informed our readers that the Chilean Corps of invasion had evacuated the Peruvian territory under certain conditions, which were not however ratified by the Chilean Government, though it was owing altogether to Santa Cruz' moderation that the Chilean troops were not annihilated. The treacherous conduct of the Chilean authorities has again been manifested, for we learn that the news brought from Peru by the Richard Alsop are to the following effect: The Peruvian sloop of war Federacion, of 22 guns, having General Valdivian, governor of Lima, on board, was proceeding along the coast when she fell in with the Chilean frigate Libertad of 36 guns. General Valdivian, aware of the treaty under which the Chilean troops had evacuated Peru, and supposing peace to have been restored between the two Republics, went on board the Libertad on a visit, where he was informed that the treaty had not been ratified, and that the war consequently continued. On hearing this the General wished to take his leave to return to the Peruvian ship, but was retained as a prisoner of war. After some demonstration of hostility, though without fighting, the Federacion struck her colours, and became the prize of the Chileans, who, it must be said, have, by similar acts of treachery, succeeded in capturing almost every ship belonging to Peru. The British Consul General's exertions to bring about a reconciliation have hitherto been without effect, but it was said that a British Admiral would soon appear on that station, with instructions, if it could not be done by friendly means, to compel the two republics to keep the peace towards each other. It is likely that the people of either country will secretly rejoice at such interference in the same manner as a pair of semi-reluctant duellists are glad of the arrival of constables, to prevent the bloody conflict, whilst enough has been done by them to prove that they are "men of pluck."

The third meeting of the Canton Regatta Club will take place on Thursday and Friday next, the first of these days being likewise the birth day of the Queen of England, on which she completes her 19 th year.

We are afraid that either the Canton community have made a bad bargain in the clock they have bought of the Hon. E. I. Company, or that it is not properly attended to, since we observe that every now and then it ceases to perform it's functions, to the great annoyance and confusion of those who enter the English Hong on purpose to set their watches by the clock. We believe it is the business of the Chamber of Commerce, as the contracting parties, to look after the irregularities of our public chronometer.

The British Sailors Hospital at Whampoa. We have, on several occasions, called the attention of our readers to this subject, and have informed them of the official correspondence the Committee of that institution have had with the local authorities. Our readers must therefore be aware that the ship in question has remained at Whampoa in spite of the reiterated threats and of the orders from the Government to leave her anchorage.

These orders have been continually disregarded, but this is nothing strange; few of the Government edicts are intended to be acted on, and we should be among the last to blame the Committee in this respect, were we assured that the benefits conferred by the Hospital being stationary at Whampoa were at all equal to the evils that may result to some persons by a disregard of the governmental orders. We believe we are not misinformed in stating that the number of sick on board the hulk at any time has been some-what less than five, and generally the so called Hospital is without any sick inmates whatever. It is not to be wondered at therefore that the Chinese do not consider the said Hospital in any other light than that of a vessel placed at Whampoa to facilitate smuggling. We know not, nor do we wish to believe, that the Chinese are right in this respect, but seeing the Opium smuggling boats crowding round the Hospital, which is their continual practice, and the commanders of the different boats messing on board of that Ship, it is not to be wondered at that the Chinese should take it into their heads that the Hospital ship is concerned in smuggling. Among European sailors at Whampoa the vessel is called the "Opium hulk," probably from it's vecinity to the smuggling boats. We do not, however, believe that the vessel actually serves for a "cache" as Canadian hunters would call it, but its reputation has become somewhat tainted. But the question is whether it is worth while, for the very little benefit derived from her as a Hospital ship, to expose the limbs and lives of poor unfortunate Linguists to the wrath of the Canton authorities, and that they will have to suffer, though perfectly innocent, in either or both, there seems to be but too good reason to fear.

2nd. That the entrance or departure of every vessel which has not received it's permit, nor conformed to the other regulations, which will be issued from the Office of this Government, is prohibited from the twentieth Instant.

COMMERCIAL REMARKS.

IMPORTS.

We have made no alterations in our quotations for either COTTON or WOOLLEN MANUFACTURES, not hearing of any transactions during the week, but the market is quieter for all descriptions, both on account of the recent importations, and from the interruption of dealings with the outside merchants. Some new system is said also to be coming into operation for additional contributions for general purposes, and to meet the Hong expenses, the particulars of which have not yet reached us, and we cannot, therefore, judge how the different articles are likely to be affected by it.

METALS.—as last quoted, but no sales reported.

STRAITS PRODUCE.—The Corsair arrived during the week with PEPPER and TIN, from Singapore, but prices have not been affected by this moderate supply.

RICE,—has declined to almost as low rates as ruled during any part of the last season, the weather being most favorable for the coming crop.

COTTON.—We have not a single transaction to report, and, notwithstanding the small stock, prices have declined.

OPIUM.—The fever in the market which prevailed during last week, has since a good deal subsided, and resales of purchases have been made of new Patna as low, we hear, as 560, but as the principal holders are firm, and the quantity, now here, small, we anticipate a gradual advance until fresh supplies arrive. The Elizabeth and Pearl are both in, bringing about 1000 Chests Malwa, which is held at 600, at which it must be purchased for the Junks proceeding to the northward, unless we have further importations, which may be daily expected. The Whampoa trade is going on without annoyance, we understand. The deliveries to the 15th were: Patna, old 53; new 553; Benares, old 81; new 162; Malwa, 246; Total 1100 chests.

EXPORTS.

RAW SILK.—There are about 800 bales of Nankin Silk unsor'd. but none of it of first quality, more is shortly expected, and the price is rather declining. The first crop of the Canton Silk is beginning to arrive; the crop is an average one, the color is bad. We do not hear of any purchases, but our quotations are what it is held at.

FREIGHTS.—The Vanguard and Alexander are both reported to be chartered for London—the rates 9 Guineas to 10 £.

EXCHANGES.—H. M. Superintendents bills on the Treasury for £7,000 30d. st. were sold @ 4s. 2d. per Sp. Dr. In the absence of other means of remittance the export of Spanish and Mexican dollars has been considerable by the late vessels to Calcutta.

Of the Tea Sect.

Translated from the Peking Gazette.

This Sect in called in Chinese Tsing cha mun keaou, i. e. pure tea Sect. The name probably arose from the circumstance of their making offerings to the gods of fine tea. The following paper contains an account of the examination and punishment of one of the heads of the Sect; and also the only account of its principles and practices which we have yet seen

TRANSLATION, { Peking the 21st year of Kea-king, 5 Moon, 21 day, (June 1816.)

"Tsing-chang, of the Imperial blood and general in command of the city Shing, together with Yung Tsoo holding the office of She-lung, kneel down and report.—Profoundly honouring the Imperial mandate to assemble and rigorously investigate, and determine on punishments proper to be inflicted, we respectfully present this document, praying that it may please His Majesty to examine it.

We * have examined the case of the criminal Wang-yung-tae, that is Wang-san-hoo, the leader of the Sect, and also the case of Wang-chu-urh, Wang-kin-tseung and Wang-too-peh, to be banished on this account. We immediately took the sum of their testimony, and in a former statement reported it. At the same time, we commanded Wang-king-yu the Tung-che, of Sin-min-tin, to proceed quickly to the district of Ee, and, with Poh-sung-o, the military Commandant of the Town, to investigate with rigour and secrecy, whether Wang-yung-tae had delivered his doctrines and made proselytes there or not. We also ordered them to call Chow-hing and Kwoh-choo-hing, the masters of the Inn in which Wang-yung-tae resided, together with Heang and Poon, superiors of the people, to appear and give evidence.—Shortly after this the officers whom we thus ordered, reported, saying " we have secretly searched and found out that Wang-yung-tae fled from the border, and came to the country of Ee, where, after remaining for six days, he was taken up.—We still more minutely examined, and found that the said criminal had not, after his return to Ee, either delivered doctrines or made disciples.—This is a true investigation."

In the present year, the fourth Moon, the twenty third day, while engaged in Judging of this affair, an official document was sent to us from one of the Imperial Counsellors, noticing that he had received the Sovereign decree, stating His Majesty's pleasure which was to this effect.—"We have seen the statements of Tsing-chang and his constituents, reporting their examination of a criminal called Wang-yung-tae, the principal leader of a corrupt Sect in San-chow, and reporting also the sum of the evidence obtained in the examination of three other criminals, his accessories.—Moreover, in course of examination they had discovered that there were yet remaining in the province of Hoo-peh, two criminals, disciples of Wang-yung-tae.

We have already sent down an intimation of our will to Ma-hwi-yu, requiring him and his constituents to take and examine with rigour these persons.

As it appears from the examination of the criminal Wang-yung-tae by Tsing-chang and others, that he has really made proselytes in Hoo-peh, the testimony of the three others agreeing thereto.

It appears also that the said criminal, on returning from Hoo-peh to Shih-fah-kow heard that the unauthorized Sectaries were bringing to trial, was afraid, and fled to Ee, and other places where he concealed himself only for a few days; and moreover that he did not deliver his doctrines in Ee. Also, that Wang-dhu-urh and the other two criminals have not themselves been guilty of practising the rites of the Sect or of making disciples (but they are involved in consequence of being related to him.)

Wang-yung-tae is ordered to be executed, and his body to be cut into small pieces. Wang-chu-urh and the other two are ordered to be dealt with as the Law directs, in cases where persons are involved by the crimes of others. Take this Edict and make it known. Respect this."

"In obedience to the Imperial Mandate, it was immediately forwarded to us. Teh-kih-tsin-tae the governor of Ee, sent forward to us Chow hing and the other, masters of the Inn. We again assembled in Court, called, and strictly examined them. From the examination it appeared, that this Wang-yung-tae—otherwise called Wang-san-hoo, belongs to the Village Shih-juh-kow, in the district of Lan, in the province of Chek-lee; and is the descendant of Wang-kwan-sang. But that he removed to the Village Guan-kea-low in the district of Loo-lang.

That his ancestor had delivered down the dogmas of the Sect, called Tsing-che-mun.

That on the First, and fifteenth of every Moon, the votaries of this Sect burn incense; make offerings of fine tea; bow down and worship the Heavens, the Earth, the Sun, the Moon, the Fire, the Water, and their (deceased) parents. They also worship Fuh; and the Founder of their own Sect.

In receiving proselytes, they use Chok-hwan (i. e. bamboo chop-sticks) and with them touch the eyes, ears, mouth, and nose, of those that join their Sect, commanding them to observe the † Three-reverrings and the ‡ five precepts. They lyingly and presumptuously affirm that the first progenitor of the Clan of Wang resides in Heaven.

The world is governed by three Fuhs in rotation. The reign of Yew-tang-Fuh, (otherwise called O me ta Fuh) is past.—Shuh-kea-Fuh now reigns and the reign of Me-lih-Fuh is yet to come. These sectaries affirm that Me-tih-Fuh will descend and be born in their Family; and carry all that enter the Sect, after death, into the regions of the WEST, to the Palace of the Immortal Séey, where they will be safe from the dangers of war, of water, and of fire.

"Because of these sayings they deceive the simple people, tempt them to enter the Sect, and cheat them out of their money. Those who join them are all called "YAY." § That the criminal had two brothers, now dead, who formerly promoted the Sect in Hoo-pey and in Shen-see. That in the 6th Moon of the 15th year of Kea-king, the criminal being poor and finding it difficult to live, went to Han-kow in the province of Hoo-peh, where he resided for a time, telling the people the advantages of entering the Sect; hoping to gain proselytes and cheat them out of their money. Accordingly Sze-chaou-kw, Fang-wan-ping and others, of that place, honoured him as their leader, expecting to receive the doctrines of his ancestors. Every person that joined him gave money, of the current coin, from several times ten to upwards of ten thousand Wan's ‖

After enumerating various circumstances relative to the apprehension of Wang-yung-tae the report concludes by stating that in obedience to the Imperial order, he was to be cut in small pieces, and his head publicly exposed on a pole, as a warning to the people. That his nephew Wang chu-urh should be delivered over to the Mahomedans as a slave in their city. His other two relatives, Wang-king-tseang, and Wang too-peh were to be delivered over to the Viceroy of Chek-lee to be banished where he ever he should deem proper. The other members of his family were to become slaves to Government, and his property to be confiscated.—Indo Chinese Gleaner.

The Salt-Merchants in Kwangtung.

From "A memorial to the Emperor shewing the daily encrease of enervation and degeneracy in the Province of Kwangtung, etc."—Chinese Repository for April, 1838.

"Fifthly. The salt affairs should be thoroughly revised, to prevent all unlicensed traffic, and so to benefit the people, and enrich the revenue.

"In the salt department of Kwangtung, the governmental charge is first paid, and then the sale of the salt is permitted. The metropolis, and Chaouchow, are the places where the salt is collected, and from thence it is conveyed, for consumption, over the provinces Kwangtung and Kwangse, and to Nankin in Keangse, Tingchow in Fuhkien, and Hangchow in Hoonan. The merchants of the metropolis are opulent, and the governmental receipts are abundant: in general, the transactions of each year have been settled within the year; and when a merchant has occasionally been unstable and deficient in commercial matters, there have always been dealers ready to come forward to offer themselves as candidates to conduct his business. But at Chaouchow, the trade is transient, and the merchants impoverished. The condition of things is so fast retrograding, that we find sale, and no merchants to conduct the sale of it,—or it may be, merchant, without capital to carry on their business. In 1825, the revenue arising from the salt-sale of Chaouchow was in arrear. The governor of the province, in consequence, represented that the assistant-commissioner of salt, Yan Shaoting, should be degraded, still being required to find means to pay up the arrears. His successor, Chin Taintin, was unable to restore to order the business of his office, and was similarly punished. And, in the past year, it became necessary to advance funds from the public treasury, and to send officers to superintend the disposal of the salt. These have also been involved. It is seen for the causes of this state of things, they are really these,—that privately-manufactured salt is everywhere to be found, the sale of which hinders the governmental salt from finding a market among the people; and that the course by which the salt is transported is impeded by shallows, which circumstance adds to the weight pressing upon the merchants' capital, and increases the difficulty of disposing of the salt received from government.

"The salt brought to the metropolis is procured in the districts of Tachow, Pomow, Teenmow, Kenpih, and Taoshuy. That conveyed to Chaouchow is prepared in the districts of Tungkeu, Seesoutsing, Lingtsing, and Chaouchow. If we consider the number of persons employed as sailors on board the vessels that convey the salt, as carriers and shippers, driers, and packers, of it, as well as in other ways, at the places where it is prepared, and also the number of retail dealers in the places where it is sold for consumption, we shall find that those who make their livelihood by this trade are not fewer than several hundred thousands, or a million, of men. While the prices are at one time high and at another low, never being constantly at the same rate, the charges on the manufacture of salt for the government remain always the same. When the merchants, owing to these circumstances, lose extensively, there is no doubt that privately manufactured salt is carried away together with that pertaining to the government. And the common people, whose sole aim is their personal advantage, cannot be supposed to reject the lower-priced in order to consume the dearer article. The necessary result, then, is the increase in the quantity of salt that is privately manufactured, and entire hindrance of the consumption of that prepared for the government. Hence we perceive, why the licensed merchants are impoverished, and why the revenue drawn from the salt is in arrear.

"The salt brought to the metropolis finds a wide channel for its conveyance to other places, and large quantities are disposed of. But that taken to Chaouchow is thence conveyanced of Keangse and to Fuhkien, by narrow channels, interrupted by rocks and dangerous eddies. And, of late years, the passage along by Seangtsekeaou and Sanhopa, outside the city of Chaouchow, has become shallow from accumulation of sand. The vessels carrying salt have their passage delayed thereby for weeks and months; while clandestine dealers near the coast, forming bands of tens and hundreds, carry off their salt in every direction by land. The soldiery of the government are remiss and negligent—nay, are even afraid lest the clandestine dealers, trusting to their own numbers, should seek to carry their object by violence. And there is cause to apprehend, that strong and unbelieving country people, being without understanding, are seduced by the unlicensed dealers to combine with them, and to form bands for their mutual support. This is a subject of great importance, both as regards the national means, and as respects the livelihood of the people.

"It is therefore fitting that a declaration of the imperial pleasure should be solicited, requiring the governor of Kwangtung to give strict injunctions to all officers in charge of the salt manufacture, that, whenever any salt is about to be transported, they are to present such as is of private manufacture being carried away under shelter of that prepared for the government; and that they are to relinquish or redeem their unlicensed fees, and to remove from the merchants every plea of excuse. It should also be imperative on them to examine, from time to time, the state of the rivers by which the salt is transported, and to preserve a clear channel for passage of the vessels to and fro. Measures should be adopted for lessening the present accumulation of the licensed supplies of salt. And the arrears of debts to government should be thoroughly investigated and cleared off. Old debts should not be suffered to augment the place of new duties, and thus to remain in point of fact unpaid. General orders should also be given to all the police and military to apprehend unlicensed dealers. And every offender should be punished. The expenses of police should not be lavished to no end, and remissness should not be suffered to continue as it has done. In this way it may be hoped radically to reform the department. And, thus, not only will the revenue be enriched, the merchants compassionated, unlicensed traffic stopped, and the disposal of the supplies that pertain to government facilitated, but also, by the employment given to laborers and to retail dealers, the people will be supplied with employment, and prevented from falling into lawless habits and practices."

On the evil of forming illegal associations.

Extracted from a new Prize Essay, at Canton.

"In the reign of his present Majesty, the celestial powers overshadow and nourish—the sun and moon cast forth their radiance—the universe is regulated in peace—and the tribes of men are also universally tranquil. Of the people who live in this age, the scholar discourses of propriety, and enforces the importance of the ancient rules; while the illiterate cultivate their fields, and dig their wells, without attending to extraneous affairs all their lives long; enjoying soft and luxurious ease, in peace and tranquility. Truly we know not why it is that the people, wrought upon by foreign means, have been induced to fall into the net of delusion—but constantly weighing into the matter we find, that the generality of disobedient and lawless persons, are at first nothing more than worthless characters without any dependence—being poor, and having no fixed object of pursuit, they sedulously establish some corrupt dogmas, in order to obtain a livelihood. The stupid, they move by hopes of happiness and fears of misery—the vicious, they blind by charms and spells—the strong and vigorous, they teach gymnastic feats—the weak, they subdue by blustering strength—and the poor, they temot by bribes of money, until their disciples and followers become numerous—then in their excursions, they plunder; and in their assemblies, they gamble—they flock into the markets to drink, and roar and brawl in the open fields;—the lesser among them entice dogs and chuck fowls, (in order to steal them), and the more practised in villainy drive away oxen, and rob the graves; so that honest and virtuous families in the villages cannot but fear them, and cannot avoid relying on them. These pernicious evils are what the names of sects engender, and are produced by the influence of illegal associations.

"To the south of the mountain Sin, a common belief in ghosts and demons prevails, and conjurors and necromancers are encouraged; the spirit of the people is hardened and insubordinate, and they are pleased with frothy and self-complacent things. Also on the coast, the foreign merchants of the ocean carry on their trade: and, as to the Portuguese Roman Catholic Religion, who can insure that it will not roil on, and spread by degrees, till it enter China? We also hear that on the north west of the province, which is a very mountainous district, there are continually poor people who having no possessions come from a distant part, and bringing their instruments of husbandry with them, cultivate the waste crown lands: some of them erect cottages by the banks of rivers, and form habitations in the sides of the mountains, where they harbour banditti; these banditti go forth, by day to plunder and return in the evening; and although the civil magistrates and military officers have united in order to apprehend them, yet the woods being deep, and the jungle thick, when they pursue them on the west they fly to the east: there are some haunts probably which have not come to the knowledge of the magistrates, but the observation of the people is more certain and real. It therefore rests with you, people, strictly to distinguish between corrupt and correct doctrines, and seriously to consider the misery or happiness attending them. Do not covet a bully's fame; be not moved by strange and new sayings; thirst not for present gain, and do not remove future calamities from your sight. Awaken the stupid—reject the disorderly—suppress the boisterous—assist the weak—pity the poor; and then your persons and families will obtain uninterrupted tranquility, and villainy and corruption will have no means of access among you. If you do not act thus, then corrupt teachers will deceive the people, notwithstanding the enlightened instructions of the sages, and the multitudes will be turned aside into devious paths, notwithstanding the express injunctions of the laws.

"Examine now in succession former generations, and you will find that those persons who have substituted by a stick of incense and a measure of rice, have without exception come to an ill end, and their adherents and descendants have been exterminated: for instance, formerly, in the provinces of Szechiuen, and Hoo-kwang, the plundering sect of the water-lily over-spread three provinces and were confessedly numerous; but when the great army arrived, they were all put to the sword. And lately, another instances occurred in the case of the rebel Lin-tsing, who had formed a band and excited insurrection: long before the appointed time for commencing their operations arrived, the principal ring leader was cut into small pieces, and the rest of the conspirators were slain. Also Choo-maou-le, of Yu kan, in the province of Keangse, and Fang-yung-shing, of Ho-chow, in the province of Gan-hway, having rebelled, before the affair was wrought to any head, their villainy was instantly defeated. You inhabitants of Canton province, have also been frequently injured by these disorders; for not long ago, the plunderers of the Brotherhood Society, having collected together a multitude of persons, excited an insurrection at Yang-she-shan, in Poh lo; but those who associated with and followed them, were all of them instantly put to death; many of you peaceable people were on account of them, obliged to leave your families and indeed the whole neighbourhood was disturbed. I would only ask, with respect to Chine-lan-heh-ze* (the leader of this band) where is he now? Last year also, the ragabonds who collected bands and formed confederacies, with a design to plunder and rob, have all been apprehended and punished. Hence we may see, that this kind of plundering banditti, certainly cannot by any lucky chance escape, and whoever it is that excites insurrection and rebellion, the powers above will not suffer him to escape. Even those who in common convene meetings and collect money, with a design to obtain a paltry livelihood, when once information of it is obtained, will be punished either with sword or saw, or be bound with ropes and cords; their accomplices also will be banished to some distant part, where they will not be able to cherish their aged parents, to take care of their wives and families, or to overlook their houses and fields;—their regrets may be poignant, but their is no deliverance, alas! alas! is not this dreadful!"—Indo Chinese Gleaner.

BRAZILIAN PEBBLES.—An account has been received from Brazil of the appearance of a metor of extraordinary brightness, as large as the balloons used by the aeronauts. It was seen for more than sixty leagues in the province of Ceara; and over the village of Macao, at the entrance of the Rio Assu; it burst with a noise like thunder, and an immense quantity of stones fell from it, in a line extending more than ten leagues. The largest portion fell at the entrance of the dwellings, and buried themselves several feet in the sand. No human life was lost, but many oxen were killed, and others severely hurt. The weight of those taken from the sand varied from one to eighty pounds.—Liverpool Chronicel.

NEW SOUTH WALES.—The following are the results of the last census, (1836,) abridged from the Colonist, a very able paper, published at Sydney. In the year 1829, the number of souls in the territory of New South Wales was 21,200; in 1821, it was 29,783; in 1828, it was 36,598; in 1833, it was 60,794; and in 1836, it was 77,096. The increase of the entire population in the first eight years, was 15,398; in the second eight years it was 40,498, being an increase considerably more than double that of the previous period. The gross increase, in the whole sixteen years, was 55,986. The population is extended over the counties in the following proportion:—

Latest Europe News.

Contrary to our anticipations, for we placed our reliance on the better knowledge in these matters of some of our friends, who told us that the 29th or 30th was the earlist period at which her arrival could be expected, the Hugh Lindsay entered the harbour at an early hour this morning. We have received by her London papers to the 24th January, Paris papers to the 27th and the Malta Government Gazette to the 31st of the same mouth. Our Galignani's Messenger of the 27th puts us in possession of the price of British funds to the 28th. Dr Mc. Lennan and Lieut. Powell I. N. were the only passengers. Bombay Courier 24th March.

The Earl of Durham is to proceed to Canada as Governor General, and Lower and Upper Canada. Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Cape Breton and Prince Edward's Island will be comprised within his Lordship's Jurisdiction. Major General Sir John Colborne will command in Canada. Major General Sir Colin Campbell in Nova Scotia and Major General Sir John Harvey in New Brunswick. The Earl of Gosford and Sir Francis Head are immediately to return home.

By the accounts of the Quarter's Revenue a decrease has taken upon place the year from the 5th January 1837 to the 5th January 1838 of £1,900,350.

The Earl of Eldon died on the 13 January ata very advanced age being in his 87th year.

It will be seen by one of our Extracts that the Royal Exchange has been burnt down. This disaster occurred on the 10th of January. and the City Authorities in consequence of it have appropriated the Guildhall for the purposes of the public business. On the 15th Jauuary the Italian Opera house at Paris was destroyed by fire.

There appear to have been disturbances among the Cotton Weavers at Glasgow, and some of them having been convicted at Edinburgh have been sentenced to 7 years transportation.

The situation of affairs in Spain appears to be but little changed since the date of our last advices. Don Carlos was organising a fresh force with which to descend again upon the Ebro, and Espartero, in anticipation of such a movement on the part of the Carlists, had quitted Madrid. On the whole we think that the cause of the Queen is improving.

According to a letter of the 29th of December from St. Petersbung, the accounts from Circassia were unfavourable; the mountain tribes were continually harrassing the Russian posts, and a sanguinary action had been fought near Derbent, to the disadvantage of the Russians.

The outbreak in Syria appears a serious one and much activity was apparent at Alexandria in despatching fresh forces and materiel to the scene of conflict, Some of the Pacha's officers are stated to have gone over to the Sultan.

We find in the United States Papers several letters from the Secretary of State at Washington to the Governors of Vermont, Michigan, and New York, and to several district attornies, as well as a proclamation from the Governor of the State of New York, having for their object the preservation of the strictest neutrality in this unhappy contest. The whole proceedings of the Government of the United States on this occasion have evinced the most friendly disposition towards her Majesty's Government.—Courier, Jan. 24.

Whilst the ashes of the Royal Exchange were still smoking, news arrived of conflagrations whereby the public buildings of other countries have suffered. The winter palace of the Emperor Nicholas, at St. Petersburgh, and the Italian Opera House in Paris, have been utterly destroyed by fire. The coincidence in point of time of the destruction by the same means of a principal building in the capitals of the three chief states of Europe, is remarkable. Nor is this the first occasion upon which there has been reason to notice this coincidence. Many similar instances could be cited. Among them it will not be forgotten that the two great theatres of Covent Garden and Drury Lane were burned down in the same week. In addition to the fires in St. Petersburgh and Paris, since the calamity of the Royal Exchange, Earl Cowper's house and Sir E. Sugden's have been destroyed by the same destructive element. The Stock Exchange also caught fire, but the flames were subdued When the Czar's palace caught fire, the Emperor and Empress were at the theatre, witnessing the performance of Mdlle. Taglioni, when the news was brought to them, and they immediately hastened to the spot. The cold was so intense that the thermometer stood at 24 degrees below zero of Reaumur, or 54 degrees below freezing point of Fahrenheit, and the water thrown on the building would have frozen had not engines with apparatus for heating the water been used. This precaution, however, was soon rendered needless by the rapid extension of the flames, the heat from which was so great that the frozen surface of the Neva, near the palace, was thawed. Great numbers of people assisted at endeavouring to extinguish the fire, but all their efforts were useless. It first appeared in the hall of Peter the Great, though some accounts make it to have begun in the offices on the ground flour. This vast palace, one of the largest in Europe, accommodated 12,000 persons within its walls: it was built for the Empress Elizabeth, in what is called the style of Louis XIV, though the interior was fitted up in a more modern manner. Furniture, however, pictures, statues, valuables of every kind, have perished in the disastrous conflagration, the sight of which is said to have caused the Emperor to shed tears. The total damage is estimated at 25 millions of paper roubles, about one million sterling. The Courier du Bas Rhin informs us that several lives were lost on this occasion; that nothing was saved from the flames except some plate; and that among the pictures destroyed were several by Rubens. This journal makes the loss amount to 125 millions of francs; but in this calculation there must be some great error, or some inauthentic information. The Europe, a Legitimist journal, hints that the burning of the palace was caused by some "great criminals," and that many persons were concerned in it.—Atlas January 20.

Spain.

THERE is little worth recording from Spain. The new Carlist expedition, consisting of fourteen batallions, has been reviewed by Don Carlos, and by the last advices from Logrono, to the 25th ult., was daily expected to march in the direction of Leon. It was the opinion that Don Carlos would not accompany it He had called Gomez from prison, to offer him a command, in consequence of the refusal of Villareal to make submission, or be reconciled with his royal master. Cabrera was hovering near the Campo de Carinena, with 6,000 followers. Espartero was with his troops at Logrono, on the 25th and was making every preparation, it was said, for a vigorous pursuit of the enemy, should he descend from the hills. He had declined the appointment of Minister of war, and recommended General Latre for the office.

In Madrid efforts were made to obtain a command for Cordova, but so late as the 27th ult. they had not succeeded. The difficulty was how to satisfy the expectations of that general without giving offence to Espartero. The Modeasda ministry had as yet done little more than excite the derision of their opponents, without doing anything to justify the confidence or reward the support of their friends. Paciencia, which is the Spanish specific for every ill, moral, political, and physical, seems to be the remedy in the present case.—Atlas, January 7.

Canada.

Singapore Free Press, 26th April.

From lower Canada.—The Albany Evening Journal, received last evening, contains extracts from Montreal papers to the 14th, and verbal news to the same date. The informant of the Journal saw Welfred Nelson committed to prison amidst a large assemblage of citizens, He is one of the ten persons for whose apprehension a reward of £500 was offered. He was accompanied by a servant man, and under the guidance of an Indian was making his way to the States, and was much worn out with fatigue, having been seven days in the woods.

Sir John Colborne marched on the 13th for St. Eustache and Grand Brulé, with near 2,000 men, leaving but four companies of regular troops in the city. It was expected that the attack would be made on St. Eustache on the 14th, and on Grand Brule on the following day.

On the 12th, twenty five prisoners, charged with high treason, were brought to Montreal for commitment. Among them was Jalbert, accused for the murder of Lieut. Wier.

There is no later news from upper Canada.

Boston daily Advertiser, Dec. 21st 1837.

We held some conversations with Nelson in the prison; his appearance was ghastly, for he had suffered much, but he displayed a collectedness, and a composure of mind, truly surprising. It appears that himself, Dr. Kimber, Papineau, Brown and O'Callaghan, all took their departure together; and continued together for some time; when the difficulties they encountered induced them to separate, and shift each for himself.—Dr, Nelson, when taken, had been nine days in the woods, without any other protection from the climate than a capot he had on. He thought that both Papineau and O'Callaghan had been taken, and expected to have heard they were here before him.

He says that the rewards offered leave no room to doubt their being apprehended. He speaks of himself as "an infatuated man," and wonders how he should have undertaken to oppose the British Government, which, as he says, was powerful enough to crush Bonaparte." He now Sees the revolt in its true light, and speaks of the whole undertaking as madness.—Ibid.

There seems to be no longer any armed resistance to the public authorities in the District of Montreal.—All other parts of the Province are quiet, and will probably remain so. The attempted rebellion in Upper Canada has completely failed: so that the only quarter to which we shall have to look for the promotion of further disturbances in Lower Canada, will be the United States frontier, within wich the principal leaders of the late revolt have taken shelter. They will probably endeavor to keep up a traitorous correspondence within the Province, circulate false and alarming intelligence, so as to destroy confidence in the public security, and check trade and industry. This will be the war that they will now carry on against the revenue of the Province, and the public peace. We think the United States and State Governments will, at least, prevent them from appearing in arms, in their territory. They owe this to good neighbourhood, the duties of which are the same among nations, as among individuals. If the rebels do continue on the frontier to carry on their machinations against the peace of the country; as murder, robbery, and arson can be brought home to several of them, it is probable, that on depositions fully establishing the fact, they will be delivered up to justice, by the American authorities.—In the mean time they are liable to be outlawed, and to the forfeiture of all their property real and personal.

We should suppose that all officers and non-commissioned officers of militia, who are by law peace officers, will be active in bringing to justice, all those in their respective neighbourhoods, who endeavor to counsel or stir up disturbances, which can only have the effect of exposing the inhabitants to the misfortunes which have fallen on others.

CANTON PRESS.

Saturday, 26th May.

The overland mail with dates from England to the 27th January has been received here by the Anna Maria from Bombay. The only political news of interest they bring, is that the rebellion in Canada had been completely quelled, not however without considerable bloodshed at St. Eustache, where, as we see from the papers, upwards of 100 of the insurgents were killed. Grand Brule, apparently the head quarters of the insurgents, surrendered without resistance. The ringleaders, Papineau and others, have, with the exception of Dr. Nelson, hitherto escaped apprehension, but it was thought that they will ultimately be taken. The appointment of Lord Durham as Governor General of Canada and its dependencies, vested with extraordinary powers, was thought to be likely to pacify and conciliate parties.

In Spain things were as unsettled as ever. The Queen's Government weak and divided, and Don Carlos making preparations again to descend into Catalonia. In the Cortes Count Toreno proposed to settle the disputes about the Spanish crown, which have now distracted that unportunate country during more than three years. Lord W. Hervey, principal Secretary to the British Embassy at Madrid was, on his way to France, taken prisoner by the Carlists, but afterwards liberated. We observe Lord Eldon's death stated in the papers. For other particulars of news we refer to the extracts we have made from the Bombay papers.

We have to acknowledge receipt of the four first numbers of a new Cotemporary in the Straits, the Malacca Register, as well as of the first numbers of another paper, not new, but under another name, namely the Pinang Gazette and Straits Chronicle, the latter paper having engaged, it appears, the dramatis personae of the defunct Singapore Chronicle, and with them has resumed its bickering against our much esteemed Cotempory at Singapore of the Free Press. In the prospectus it is stated that the paper is to have no Editor, a novel experiment to which we wish every success, though it appears a hazardous one, we at least, judging by analogy, should tremble for our dinner, had we no cook, and be nearly as apprehensive if it were to be prepared by a committee of Cooks, reminding us of the German proverb. "Viele Koche verderben den Brey." *

We mentioned in our last paper that the Clock frequently stopped. On enquiry we find that no blame attaches anywhere for it's irregularity but that it arises from the want of proper ropes for the weights, which have to be sent for from England, and that, even to make it go as well as it does, constant attention, at least twice a day, is requisite.

Macao.

The following translation of "Instructions" lately issued by the Governor at Macao, has been kindly handed to us. It will be seen that it refers to the boats yclept foreign passage boats, and restricts the licence hitherto allowed them of going in and out of the harbour of Macao without notice from the Police or Custom-house, whilst it at same time puts passengers by these boats to the disagreeable necessity of landing in the inner harbour, instead of on the Praya, on and near which most of the foreign residents and visitors live. We do not know what may all at once have put the Macao authorities on the qui vive about these Passage-boats, nor why passengers should not land on the Praya, a restriction which seems to be uncalled for, causing considerable inconvenience to foreign residents, without, we should think, an adequate advantage derived thereby by the local authorities. The following is the document referred to:

"Instructions for all the schooners, lorchas, and boats, or any other craft that trade from here to Canton or any other places of this Empire.

"1st. Captains or Tindals of the schooners, boats, or any other crafts, of any size whatever, are required to observe every article of the present Regulation, and bound to follow any other police-order that may be added to it.

"2nd. All boats, on coming to the harbour, are obliged to anchor near the Custom-house.

"3rd. After having discharged their cargoes, and the Custom-house officers having been on board, the said boats or schooners are allowed to go out to the Praya grande: Should the Captains or Tindals of the boats not comply with these regulations, they will be put into prison and kept there for the term of 8 days, they being moreover, liable to pay a certain fine: Such boats as have no cargo on board, may, after the visit of the Custom-house officers, move out to the Praya grande. No passengers can be landed before the visit from the officers, and the Tindal is to report his cargo and passengers.

"4th. All Captains or Tindals of these boats etc. are required to have a correct list of their crews.

"5th. The crews of the boats etc. are not allowed to take arms on shore, nor are any of them to remain on shore after 8 o'clock at night.

"6th. In arriving at the harbour, the boats etc. have to wait near the Fort barra, until the soldiers shall have come on board.

"7th. Should there be no Custom-house officer, any goods to be landed will be attended to the Custom-house by a soldier.

"8th. All boats, etc. to have a blue flag on their mast head with their respective names on it.

"9th. All boats etc. going to, and coming from, the harbour, must have a regular passport from the Governor.

"10th. The crews are not allowed to leave their vessels to go on shore except under licence from the Governor

"11th. Every owner of boats etc. is required to give in to the Governor lists of such as he possesses, that they may be properly numbered."

Capt. Foster of the Corsair, when coming from Singapore fell in with a rock in the China Sea, not noticed in the charts, and of which he has favored us with the position and aspect; his account will be found in another part of the paper.

There is rumour in Canton of H. M. Chief Superintendent being about to come up to Canton; we can however give it but slight credit recollecting, as we do, the reasons who Captain Elliot left Canton which, were that he had received orders from his Government to communicate direct with the local authorities and not through the Hong merchants, a concession which the Vice-roy was not disposed to allow, and in consequence of which Capt Elliot addressed the former, stating that until his pretensions were allowed he should not again communicate with him. The flag staff in front of the Superintendents office was then struck and Capt. Elliot went to Macao. We do not know of any thing that can have occurred to make the Chief Superintendent alter his mind; on the contrary, some weeks ago, on occasion of some correspondence occurring relative to the Hospital ship at Whampoa, the Vice-roy in a letter to the Hong-merchants, rather politely told Captain Elliot to apply for a red chop to come up in order to settle affairs about that vessel. Capt. Elliot's answer to this was, so at least we were told, that he was ready to come up, if the Vice-roy's wish was made known to him direct, and not through the Hong-merchants. On this answer being communicated to the Vice-roy, another very angry letter appeared, in which it was stated that communication between his Government and Capt. Elliot could only be carried on through the Hong-merchants, complaining at the same time of the vain aspirations of the Superintendent, who, as the Vice-roy says, displays a vanity somewhat like that of a cray fish brandishing his claws as if they were battleaxes. In this position we believe affairs to be; if Capt. Elliot therefore now comes up through application to the Hong-merchants, the Chinese will have some right to boast that he has been reverently submissive.

The boat races of yesterday and the day before went off well; we shall give a sketch of them in our next, it being too late for this week's paper.

OFFICIAL NOTICE TO HER BRITANNIC MAJESTY'S SUBJECTS.

THE Chief Superintendent has had occasion to request the attention of His Excellency the Governor of Macao to an irregular practice of requiring Chinese Boats from Canton, having on board British Subjects, to anchor, or heave to, off the Barra Fort, or otherwise to interrupt them for examination: And His Excellency has thereupon been pleased to signify that strict orders shall be issued with the purpose to obviate further cause of complaint on this Subject.

If at any point, however, within the Inner Harbour a Portuguese Functionary should desire to see the Passport the Governor rests assured that the Passengers will direct the boat people to exhibit it: And His Excellency has also expressed a wish that Her Majesty's Subjects would abstain from discussion with the persons performing duties of this description, accepting his assurance that representations of vexatious hindrance which may be preferred to him shall be immediately redressed.

The Chief Superintendent has to request on his own part that circumstances involving cause of complaint should be communicated to him for submission to the Governor.

COMMERCIAL REMARKS.

IMPORTS.

COTTON MANUFACTURES.—The goods by the late arrivals are not yet landed, but the demand appears tolerably firm for LONGCLOTHS, both white and grey of good quality, and some considerable sales have, we hear, been effected within this day or two, but the particulars have not reached us. The commoner kinds and American Domestics have declined nearly half a dollar. COTTON YARN. The stock is very large of inferior quality and low numbers, and a sale is reported during the week of about 700 bales Calcutta Yarn and 200 inferior Glasgow at from 29 @ 32 $, and some of the latter even under that price. Yarn of good quality Nos. 20 @ 36 may be quoted from 37 @ 40 $.

WOOLLENS.—The stock of Broadcloths is very much reduced and none remain in first hands. Of LONGELLS there cannot be more than 2,000 @ 3,000 pieces unsold, but at the present high rates the dealers seem rather disposed to wait for the Logan's arrival said to be bringing about 15,000 ps.

CAMLETS,—there is a little more enquiry for the English, and the Dutch have improved 3 @ 4 $ per piece within the last month.

METALS,—as before, except that LEAD is not so firm.

STRAITS PRODUCE.—We have heard of no sales of either PEPPER or TIN, but they are both rather looking down.

RICE,—the weather continues most favorable for the new crop.

COTTON.—There is not, we believe, a single bale in the hands of the dealers, but they still hold back in hopes of fresh arrivals. The importations however from Bengal must be very limited for some time, but shipments had already commenced in Bombay, and vessels may now be daily expected. The stock altogether now here is very small.

OPIUM.—The demand for Malwa has again rather revived, and sales have been, we hear, made at 600 and even higher, but the Chinese are waiting for further arrivals before making their purchases for the Junks. Little has been doing in new Patna, except resales by the Chinese of their previous bargains partly with view perhaps of lowering the price. For old Opium there has been little enquiry.

EXPORTS.

RAW SILK.—The only transactions in Nankin Silk are one or two small purchases of middling Cargo at about 470. Nothing has been done in Canton Silk, parties appearing disposed to wait for the second crop, which should be in about two weeks hence.

TEA.—A purchase of Hyson is the only transaction we hear of during the week.

VOL. 3d. No. 39. CANTON, SATURDAY, JUNE, 2ND, 1838. No. 143.

ART. VI. Infanticide, as described in a proclamation, addressed to the people of Canton, by his excellency Ke, the late lieut.-governor of the province. Dated February 19th, 1838.

LIEUT.-GOVERNOR KE hereby promulgates his instructions. Whereas heaven and earth display their benevolent power in giving existence, and fathers and mothers exhibit their tender affection in loving their off spring, it is therefore incumbent on you, inhabitants of the land, to nurse and rear all your little infants, whether male or female. On inquiry, I find that in the province of Canton the drowning of female children is common, and that both rich and poor run into this practice. The causes of infanticide are manifestly these: the poor suppose, that, because they have not the means of support, it is unfitting they should nourish a commodity (female infants) which will become only an increasing source of expenditure; while the rich affirm, that such slender tenants of the nursery can never be raised to any important posts in the household. Surely you forget, that your mothers and wives about you were once female children. Had there been no mothers, whence would you have obtained your own bodies? If you have no wives, where will be your posterity? Being yourselves the offspring of those who were once female children, why cast your own into the field of death? Reflect! Consider what you are doing! The destruction of female infants, is nothing less than the slaughter of human beings. That those who kill, shall themselves be killed, is the sure retribution of omniscient heaven.

Should the widowed mother ever be left without a son, on whom she can be dependent for maintenance, the husband of a daughter may become the support and solace of her old age: is this a benefit lightly to be esteemed? Moreover, that just conduct ensures happiness, and that its opposite leads to misery—are two principles of retribution most firmly supported by reason. The crying, weeping babe, the moment it comes into being, is entangled in the net of death! To do this, requires the disposition of a pirate—the utter extinction of every generous feeling! To such the hope of a numerous posterity, a long line of descendants—celestia lreason will never grant.

Recently an essay on infanticide has been written by Kwang Wan, a literary gentleman belonging to the district of Yingtih. Therein I perceive that the reciprocal influences between heaven and man, the basis of success and misfortune, of weal and woe—are delineated with force and light sufficient to unstop the ears of the deaf and to open the eyes of the blind. Copies of this essay I have caused to be sent into all the departments and districts of the province, with admonitions and instructions, that the practice of infanticide may everywhere be examined into and forbidden. I also issue this proclamation for the instruction of all the inhabitants of the province, both civil and military. Henceforth it becomes the duty of each and all of you to revere the benevolent power of heaven and earth; to exercise in their fullest extent those kind feelings which fathers and mothers owe their offspring; and when you have sons and daughters born to you, and your hearts are inclined to this most foul and cruel practice of infanticide, then break from your slumbers, repent and turn from your former misdeeds. And you, elders and gentry, chiefs among the people, ought likewise continually to endeavor by your exhortations, your support, and your kindness, to prevent the destruction of human life. Hereafter if any dare to oppose and act in opposition to these instructions, it shall be the duty of the elders and gentry to report them to the local magistrates, that they may be seized, examined, and punished. Assuredly no clemency will be shown to such offenders. Therefore give good heed to these instructions A special proclamation.—Chinese Repository for May.

Java.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE SINGAPORE FREE PRESS,

Mr. Editor.

It appears surprising considering the proximity of your settlement to Java, and intercourse kept up between both places, that so much ignorance should still exist respecting the present condition of this flourishing Island, and the policy of its rulers. The mention made in a late number of periodical,* of high reputation, of "the narrow and dishonest policy of the decaying Dutch Colonies in Batavia and Timor," has pressed this on my attention, and I now address you, more with a view to express my regret that the Free Press of the Straits, and its Java Correspondents, should allow such ignorance to continue at home, than with the hope of being able to supply the desired information. I am no advocate for the restrictions on foreign trade, and spirit of commercial monopoly which yet prevail here, consequently will not hold out the Colonial system of Java as worthy of imitation in every respect; but when I took to the rapidly increasing amount of our Exports —financial prosperity admitting even of large remittances being made to the mother country—and a peaceful and contented population, now estimated at eight millions, I confess I am somewhat skeptical as to the "decided superiority" some neighbouring British Settlements claim over "the decaying Colony in Batavia."

To enter here in a minute account of the rise and progress of our agricultural prosperity, though interesting, would surpass the limits I have proposed to myself, in this letter—the following very brief summary must therefore suffice. A sincere, but mistaken feeling of benevolence, towards the native, prevented the Baron Vander Capellen, during his administration, (1816 to 1825) from disposing of land and the labor of its occupants to Europeans; frustrating for a time the enlightened scheme of a high functionary, then in charge of the native Provinces, to cultivate with coffee, the extensive waste grounds in his jurisdiction.—The opinion that Europeans were more severe task-masters than the native chiefs, and the restrictions to which it gave rise, retarded for some years, the growing prosperity of the Colony; but this opinion was gradually shewn to be groundless, and crowds of willing labourers, who now flock to the sugar and coffee plantations, afford daily proof of its fallacy.

Whatever may be the disposition of the European planter or contractor, the great ruling principle of self interest will in most cases prevent his harsh treatment of native labourers, and this reflection ought to satisfy the fears of the most scrupulous on this point.—The Commissioner General Viscount DUBUS (1825 to 1829) repealed all the injudicious Decrees against cultivation passed by his predecessors, and encouraged the holding of lands in lease by Europeans; but it was reserved for General Vanden Bosch (1829 to 1834), by his well known system of Government contracts, to give that extraordinary stimulus to the branches of cultivation which has more than doubled the produce of the Island within the last few years.

This system, the details of which have been frequently given in your columns, has worked well—much better than its most sanguine advocates anticipated.

The chief objections I have heard brought against it are, that the natives are forced to labor against their will—and are not adequately paid by Government. As to the first of these objections, one of the greatest English moralists approved of the "introduction by useful violence of the arts of peace" into a country more famed for its civilization than Java—and as habits of industry are not of rapid growth, it is scarcely to be expected that the labor of the Javanese, though fairly remunerated and beneficial to himself, may not be in some degree compulsory—probably more so as yet than statute labor in several parts of Great Britain. With regard to the second objection, I believe it to be made without foundation, and in favour of this opinion can state that during the year 1836 a sum of nearly fifteen millions Guilders, was appropiated by Government to the furtherance of new plans of cultivation, and encouragement generally of agricultural enterprise.

In giving proofs of the great increase of the exports, I select the years 1826 and 1836 as they happen to be the most easy of reference.

Exports of Coffee 340,059 Pls. of 136 lbs. Eng. each.
Sugar 19,795 " "
Rice 5,895 Coyans.
Indigo 9500 lbs.
Tea.....

Value of total Exports 1826; 15,273,502 Guilders.

1836.

Exports of Coffee 498,077 Pls. of 135 lbs. Eng. each.
Sugar 509,513 " "
Rice 35,430 Coyans.
Indigo 407,798 lbs.
Tea 9,016 lbs.

Value of total Exports 1836: 41,216,487 Guilders.

The Tea plant thrives well on Java, and as the quality of the article brought to market has been pronounced good by competent judges, a rapid extention is now given to this interesting branch of cultivation.

In the exports of this year, both Cinnamon and Raw Silk will make some figure; the former is likely to succeed, but the latter will I fear never increase much the resources of the Colony. There are at present upwards of 120 Sugar Establishments using European Machinery in full activity of which 29 are situated in the Residency of Sourabaya.

Being deeply interested in the welfare of Java, I dwell with pleasure on these proofs of its prosperity—at the same time hope they have not blinded me to the weak points of our Colonial policy, which may form the subsequent letter—Free and liberal criticism of the measures of Government, ought not to give offence—and when made in the spirit of fairness may be productive of benefit.—But I am sure, Mr. Editor, you will join with me in thinking the period arrived when feelings of enmity and petty jealousy should cease, between two nations, allies of ancient standing at home and holding a close neighbourhood in the East. The disagreeable bickerings which took place when the limits of our respective boundaries were not defined, were probably excusable, perhaps unavoidable; but now that this cause of contention is removed, they ought to give way to sentiments of a more friendly nature.—You Gentlemen of the Press, can do much to produce the kindly feelings desiderated, and that you may continue to use ably that "powerful engine" for the wise management of which you are responsible, is the earnest wish of,

Mr. Editor,
Your obedient Servant.
JAVANICUS.

Batavia, 20th March, 1838.

The details of the system of government contracts, mentioned in such commendatory terms by our correspondent, are we believe as follows:—

A suitable tract of Land having been selected by a party desirous to embark in the cultivation of sugar, the government give orders for the planting of the cane by natives, the Resident of the district appointing persons under him to superintend and carry on the cultivation. When the cane was ready for cutting, it was to be valued by two competent and impartial persons, and the contractor debited at the price fixed by them. The government at the same time agreed to give advances of from 50,000 to 80,000 guilders, according to the magnitude of the contract, for the purchase of machinery, and to enable the contractor to erect the necessary works. This advance, it was stipulated, should be returned within 5 years, by instalments payable in sugars; the rate being 12 guilders per picul, in the first instances, but we believe more lately 9 guilders.—After paying for the cane delivered for the season, and the stipulated instalment of the capital advanced, the surplus sugar was to be at the option of the government, to take over at the market price of the day, or the contractor to be allowed to dispose of it as he pleased. The natives were to be paid a fixed rate per bow, for the planting of the cane.—the coolies necessary for cutting and transporting the cane; boiling, drying and packing the sugar &c, were to be found and paid by the contractor, the government having nothing to do but to grow the cane. The nature of the contract has we believe of late undergone some modification; the government declining longer to have anything to do with growing the cane, or finding, coolies for the contractor as formerly to plant it; but the conditions of the contracts still made are in other respects as already stated. The cultivation and manufacture of Indigo have been carried on, we understand, under the same system. The Government also had formerly establishments of their own for the cultivation of Indigo, which it is said they carried on at the expense of their Coffee gardens, the production of Coffee having been reduced in the course of two years, no less than 45,000 piculs, in consequence of the people being taken from the gardens to plant Indigo. It sometimes happens that lands, on which the natives are growing rice, are selected for the cultivation of sugar, or indigo; and in such case the natives are indemnified by grants of other land for the same purpose—but their interests must no doubt often suffer in the exchange, and the practice can scarcely have the effect of conciliating their good-will. *Sing. Latest News from England.

From the Bombay Gazette 17th to 23d April.

The Atalanta arrived to day from Suez 30th ultimo, Mocha 7th, Maculla 10th instant. So that she has made an excellent passage after all. It had been expected that the English mail would have arrived several days earlier, but it was not anticipated that the packet would contain later news than about the end of February. The delay of the Atalanta then is so far gratifying that we are put in possession of intelligence of so late a date as the first week of March. This is we believe the quickest dispatch ever made of the mail between this country and England, only 43 days having been taken up in the transmission of it from London.

The Winter had been felt with peculiar severity in the Northern parts of Great Britain, and the mails had been in many instances stopped in consequence of the snow.

The Bombay Shipping has been rather unfortunate. The Columbia and John Stamp have both gone down, the latter with the loss of seven of the crew.

We are sorry to observe that John Reeve the Comedian is no more.

We are sorry to see from the London papers of the 6th that there are rumors of dissentions among the ministry. It is said, though not upon what we should consider good grounds, that Lord John Russell had tendered his resignation, which had not however been accepted.

The mail Coach from Suez to Cairo, and vice versa, is to be brought into operation on the 1st of October next. It is to be drawn by 8 mules. The fare from Suez to Cairo is to be six guineas for each person.

The news by this packet are altogether of very little consequence.

By letters from Madrid dated 24th February, we learn that a victory has been atchieved by General Flinter, but only very decisive in its effects, but almost bloodless in it's consequences. The Chapter of Toledo celebrated the event by a grand Te deum at which the hero himself was present in an edifying attitude, and wept tears of gratitude for having been the instrument of exterminating Jara without the loss of a single man. He owes this signal triumph to a most successful ruse de guerre, of pretending to fall back upon Tolosa, lulling, thereby, the Carlists into a false security, and taking them while quite unprepared.

The affairs of the Christinos appear to be improving in Catalonia, and General Urbistondo having quitted his command, the greatest confusion is represented as having taken place among the Carlists. He is stated to be under arrest at Tolosa, and to have been unable to procure an audience of Don Carlos, when the latter passed through that town. Guergue Bonilio Garcia and Cabrera are now the only old Military chiefs in the service of Don Carlos who are not either in disgrace or exile.

As to the insurrection in Upper Canada it may be considered as now entirely suppressed. According to the latest accounts, Mackenzie and Van Rusenlaer have evacuated Navy Island, and their followers have dispersed. It is true that some accounts would make it appear that they are about to reassemble on the other point near Debort, where it is alledged that Dr. Duncombe has some force, but all that is said on this subject is extremely obscure, and upon the whole improbable. The agression committed by some Canadians on an American Steam Vessel lying at Schlosser has been made the subject of explanations, and has given occasion to no unfriendly feeling between the governments.

The accounts received yesterday state that Dr. Duncombe a leader of the upper Canada revolt has assembled a force on Bois Blanc, a Canadian Island near Malden, and that a number of men from the United States have joined him. An American, who is called General Sutherland, is said to have assumed the Military command. To this island Bois Blanc, the insurgents who were on Navy Island are said to have proceeded. On the other hand it appears that a Steamer fitted out by the Americans to assist the upper Canadian Insurgents has been taken with 400 stand of Arms on board. Several of the leaders have been taken in this vessel.

Last night Lord Brougham made one of his brilliant speeches. Its object was the further suppression of the slave trade for which purpose he moved a set of resolutions. Lord Glenelg intimated his intention to submit to the house a modified plan.

(From Galignani's Messenger, March 7.)

That there is a misunderstanding in the Cabinet, and that a change is contemplated in more than one department in the Ministry, we are positively assured; our belief of this is strengthened by the fact that Lord J. Russell did, on Monday last, tender his resignation, which was, of course, not accepted, as in that case the labours of the Melbourne administration would, in all probability, have been brought abruptly to a close.—(Satirist.)

The infant son of the Queen of Portugal was formally exhibited to the Cortes at Lisbon on the 26th of January, as legitimate heir to the throne; his present title is Duke of Alcantara. There was but a thin attendance of members, and the ceremony was very flat.

(From the Atlas, March 3.)

The city of New York, so recently the scene of vast devastation by fire, has sustained another calamity of the like description, though not to an equal extent. The New York Commercial Advertiser of the 30th Jan., gives a long detail of the catastrophe. It appears that the fire broke out the preceding day, in the upper part of the city, and the houses being for the most part built of wood, it spread with uncontrollable rapidity, reducing two entire streets to a heap of ruins. The loss of property is said to have been very considerable, but fortunately without the sacrifice of human life.

RUSSIA.

The following suspicious announcement is given in a letter from Frankfort, dated Feb. 20: "The Russian troops are gathering in Poland. There is a triple line of them along the frontier. Every traveller who attempts to pass is obliged to submit to the most rigid examination, and to explain to the authorities, and satisfy them by proof as to the nature of the business which takes him either into Russia or Poland. In default of this he is not permitted to pass the frontier, even though his passport have the visa of the Russian minister. Some important occurrence, which it is desirable to conceal, must either have taken place or be meditated in the interior. However, upon the fact wish I have stated you may rely." Ibid

(From the Last night Bombay Courier Extra.)

The United Service Gazette states that there is no doubt of the intended Marriage of our youthful QUEEN with PRINCE GEORGE of CAMBRIDGE.

On the 15th Feb. Mr. Grote brought his motion for leave to introduce a Bill "for taking the votes of Parliamentary Electors by way of Ballott. All the members of the Cabinet having seats in the House, with one exception, voted against the motion. Mr. Poulett Thompson was permitted, it is said, to be absent from the debate. On the division which ensued the entire numbers were.

The Ingles from London for Bombay had put into Falmouth with loss of sails and and foretopmast.

The City of Londonderry Steamer which left Falmouth on the 19th with the Indian Mails of the 17th of February put back on the 20th in a very disabled state; her packets were to be forwarded by the Iberia on the 5th of March.

The practice of affixing notices at the Stock Exchange has been imitated by Mr. Jaudon, the agent for the United States Bank. The following was put up to-day in contrast with that issued yesterday by the Bank of England;

"BONDS OF THE BANK OF THE UNITED STATES.

"Holders of the bonds of the Bank of the United States due the 1st day of April next are hereby informed, that they may receive the amount under a discount of 3 per cent. per annum for the unexpired time on presentation at the agency of the said bank (here follows the address) between the hours of 12 and 3 o'clock.

"S. JAUDON.

"March 7, 1838."

This is about as barefaced an assumption of a high state of credit as ever was practised. It has imposed upon very few within the city, but out of it the information may be useful that up to within a day or two of the date of this notice Mr. Jaudon has been selling bills or bonds, or whatever he may call them, subject to 4 or 5 per cent. interest, or perhaps more. He thus borrows at 5 per cent. for a year, and lends at 3 per cent. for a month, and yet imagines there is not sense enough in our capitalists to see through so palpable a deception. Let him try to sell his bonds on the terms on which he proposes to anticipate those nearly due, and he will soon come to his proper level.

The English market wore a rather drooping appearance in the early part of the day, but revived towards the close with a shade of improvement. Consols leaving off at 93¾ for money, and for account 93¾ to ¾. Bank Stock for the opening was 207 to 8; India Stock, 264 to 5½; Exchequer-bills, 61f. to 63s. India Bonds, 61s. to 64s.; and those unmarked, 12s. to 13s. premium.

Mr. O'Connell was reprimanded in the house of Commons for having, at a meeting at the Crown and Anchor charged the Tory members of Election Committees with perjury, on motion to that effect by Lord Maidstone. This incident has, as may be supposed, produced violent debates in the house during which the Ministry, who supported Mr. O'Connell, were several times in the minority.

Canton Regatta Club.

The third meeting of this club took place on Thursday and Friday, the 24th and 25th of May last; We gave a programme of what races were to be pulled a fortnight ago, and have now so lay before our readers their result in the following Umpire's report, leaving it to our correspondent "An Operative," to furnish further particulars.

"Umpire's report."

FIRST DAY.

		Time.
First race won by	"Water Lily"	11 m 10 s.
	"Flirt"	11 ,, 30 ,,

A good race, and well contested, Flirt taking the start and turning first, when, unfortunately, the Louisa, coming up, came so close as to oblige the Flirt to unship her scull, and was passed by the Lily, who won by four lengths.

Second race won by	"Fanny"	14 m. — s.
	"Gipsy"	14 ,, 5 ,,

Boats prow and prow to turning boat, capital pulling both.

Third race won by	"Gazelle"	9 m. 45 s.
	"Cutty Sark"	10 ,, 30 ,,
	"Happy go lucky	10 ,, 50 ,,

Gazelle distanced the others; Cutty Sark shewed her legs at starting, but the mettle of the rowers soon told.

SECOND DAY.

First race won by	"Dragon"	14 m. 3 s.
	"Ghost"	14 ,, 29 ,,

Won by Dragon in capital style, the Ghost beautifully pulled but hadn't it in her.

Second race won by	"Gipsy"	15 m. 15 s.
	"Dolphin" and "Young Queen" having fouled.

Gipsy took the lead and kept it, others in close company, the Young Queen a little ahead at the time of fouling and edging in for turning boat.

Sailing Match.

This regatta took place on Thursday afternoon last. Five boats had been entered and appeared on the spot. The weather was remarkably fine with just enough breeze to allow of the boats shewing their sailing qualities to advantage. The boats started in rotation by lot, the Mouse first closely followed by the Rat, which latter however did not make much head way against the wind and tide, and was soon overtaken by the third boat, the Ferret, which was seen to gain fast upon the Mouse also. After some delay the Salamander started; but it soon became evident that the race was between the Mouse and Ferret, the Salamander appearing not to be in good trim, The Witch started last, and went over the race ground, coming in before the Salamander, though, from the following umpire's report it will be seen that she has not been considered as having started. The distance to be sailed was from the Umpire's boat at the beginning of the Macao passage, and back again. Spectators would have enjoyed the scene more had the time for starting been half an hour earlier, it being almost dark when the winning boat came in.

The following is the Umpires report.

Foreign Passage Boats.

Tung, President of the Board of War, Governor of the two Kwang Provinces &c., proclaims to the Hong-merchants for their full information.

On the 27th day, of the 4th moon, I received the following report from Wan the Hoppo. "It is authenticated that the Barbarians have large decked boats, engaged in smuggling, constantly passing up and down the river. Your Excellency having intimated to me that hereafter small, undecked, boats only, should be allowed to run between Canton and Whampoa, and these only with permits, which should be examined at the different stations, and the boats searched; to ascertain that no contraband goods were concealed on board, which being found the case, the cruisers and forts should be ordered to let them pass unmolested; but should contraband goods, foreign women, or military weapons be discovered, or should the boats resist the search, and endeavor the escape without presenting their passes, then the cruisers and forts should be directed to stop them, and immediate notice thereof be forwarded to Y. E. that you might act accordingly; and also that if any large decked boats should endeavor to enter the river, immediate orders should be sent to the cruisers and forts to stop and drive them out, I issued an edict to the several stations, and to the Hong-merchants and linguists directing them to pay implicit obedience to Y. E. commands of which I duly informed Y. E.—This is on record."

"Now on the 11th day, of the present month I received a despatch from the Tiger's gate station (Bogue) stating as follows"

"The runners at the station are truly indefatigable in the performance of their duties. Day and night they keep a vigilant look-out. Verily they dare not shew the least grain of remissness!

On the 10th at 3 P. M., the runner Ko Teik discovered four small boats going out at the passage. As they did not bring up at the station to be examined, the said runner with the sailors of this station got into the boat and pulled off to the foreign boats to search them: this the foreigners did not actually resist, but they would not let us go alongside. We then asked them whither they were going, but they understood us not a word: they succeeded in getting clear away, &c., &c., &c., *

On the 17th Tsaou Shing having relieved guard, discovered two large decked boats coming into the river. They immediately gave notice to the cruisers and forts, to stop and drive them away, but having received no orders from the Admiral to that effect, they declined interfering. The runners therefore got into a boat and pulled off to the schooners but, the barbarians on board, insolently taking advantage of the smallness of our boat and fewness of our crew, daringly discharged their guns at us; at the same time continuing their cruise."

"I have also received petitions from the several Whampoa stations, stating, that the foreign boats enter and leave the river whenever the tide suits them, without coming to shew their permits and pass examination. This coming before me the Hoppo, I have examined into the subject and find, that there is not one foreign boat which obeys the old regulations, and calls at the stations to be examined and get passes, and that there are also large boats which come and go at will, and resist being searched. This is verily most daring defiance of the established laws. Day or night, as the tide suits them, they come and go. The language of these barbarians is different from ours, and their dispositions are perverse and daring."

"Although the river is so broad as to render seeing and hearing difficult, yet, in the day, it were easy to stop these boats; at night, however, the thing is difficult. Our Custom-house officers, when they go to search, are unarmed, and consequently unable to overcome resistance. It is true that the cruisers and forts might assist them, but they are often far distant from each other, and by the time the cruisers and forts have received notice, the foreign boats have escaped. It is my opinion that the management of this business is involved in great difficulty. Could not your Excellency devise some happy plan for speedily and quietly arranging this matter: keeping sacred the majesty of our fixed laws, at the same time that we curb the barbarians?"

This coming before me the Governor, I immediately issued orders to the Hong-merchants, to forbid the foreigners bringing large decked boats up to Canton. Small undecked boats passing between Canton and Whampoa must take out passes. I have already given orders to the Admiral etc. to assist the customs whenever called upon to enforce searches whether of large or small boats. It is the height of daring in these boats to come and go at pleasure, without applying for permits; and as for you, officers of the cruizers and forts, who refused to assist the revenues, when called upon, under the plea that you had received no orders from the Admiral, and yet reported not a word of this to me, truly, you have been guilty of the most trifling and detestable conduct.

I have already issued orders to the Admiral &c to seize all offending boats, and uniting the circumstances, issue this edict to you, the Hong-merchants, for your full information. Immediately on receipt of it, pay instant obedience to it, and forbid the foreigners hereafter bringing large decked boats to Canton. Desire them also, in obedience to the old regulations, to apply for passes for those small boats which run between Whampoa and Canton. Make diligent enquiries as to the country and owners of the boat which fired on the revenue boat; and find out whether she had any contraband articles on board and why she acted in that manner. Do not conceal the least thing but instantly report. Haste! Haste! A special Edict.

May 22d, 1838.

* The second place claimed by Young Queen, Time "Dolphin" .... 16 m. 13 s.
"Young Queen" .... 16 ,, 28 ,, and having heard the evidence as to the position of the boats at the time of fouling, I consider the second place to be won by the Young Queen.

CORRESPONDENCE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE CANTON PRESS.

Dear Sir,

Debarred, as we are in Canton, from the enjoyment of exercise on shore, our health requires, and inclination prompts us, to take it in boats on the river, which, by the nourishing benevolence of the Government, is, to a certain extent free to foreigners. To vary the monotonous tenor of our lives, and to assist us in spending our superfluous cash, we have established Regattas and organised a Club; the fitful meeting of which august body, I shall endeavor to give you a slight sketch of.

After mature deliberation the Committee came to the important decision that "the third meeting should take place in May."—Crews were engaged, coxswains courted and owners in a state of most intense anxiety. The further intentions of the committee were involved in impenetrable mystery until fearing some outbreak of operative indignation—a "strike among the watermen,"—they announced that the meeting would be held on Thursday and Friday the 24th and 25th Inst.

At an early hour on Thursday might be seen pacing down China street with agitated step, and lengthened faces, two or three owners.—Suddenly they stop at Ahoy's (the Canton Stultz,) and pour into the ears of that functionary, two or three hundred orders, the purports of which are to hasten his operations on what appear (proh pudor) two or three night Caps, and sh—bo, under garments. Concluding with sundry dark hints too mysterious to be revealed, respecting "stoppage of payment" should he "fail" to deliver them by 4 o'clock. They were finished however; and in company with said owners, I stepped into a Hong-boat and pulled up to the course where all the "beauty and fashion" of Canton were assembled.—Some in hong-boats—others in the more aristocratic flowerboat—while some figured in "fast-crabs."—The Coup d'œil was extremely pleasing.—Decked with the Regatta flag at the fore, and their national ensign at the peak, the Canton schooners bounded the course—Gigs, Cutters and Wherries, in Morning Post phraseology, skimmed the waters in pleasing variety, and hundreds of spectators-natives and foreigners-enlivened the scene. The weather was delightful: and the greatest good will and forbearance having been manifested by the Chinese, nothing occurred to interrupt or mar the sports, which have, I believe, given the most unbounded satisfaction. The arrangements were complete, and the services of the Committee and Secretary merit the best thanks of the Club, as do also the owners of the "Breeze" who greatly added to the effect, by saluting the winning boat in most of the races with their swivels.

The sculling match being the first on the list, at the appointed time the stations were taken. Ready? shouted the umpire, bang went a percussion cap,* and off started the boats, the "Flirt" having the lead which she kept until after rounding the turning boat, closely followed by the "Waterlily." The "Tam o'Shanter" kept within a reasonable distance but the "Louisa" soon drop astern. Bets were now all in favor of the "Flirt" and her friends were in high glee: I was just taking an imaginary draught of champagne out of the Cup, I was certain she would win, when the 'Louisa' fouled her, accidentally of course, and the "Waterlily" gained the race—"Twixt the Cup and lip &c. &c.

The Gig race was by far the most interesting of the whole. The 'Fanny' is an old friend, and has already gained a brace of Cups, but the "Gipsy" made her debut as a new boat—built here, and great credit she does to the Chinese carpenters.

Fifteen minutes having elapsed, they were called to their stations when a second edition of ready? and bang was enacted, and the boats started. It was long uncertain which boat had the lead, but this was gradually gained by the "Gipsy." At the turning boat, however, the "Fanny's" made a desperate effort and passed a head in which order they arrived at the winning boat exactly five seconds before the "Gipsy." The pulling was good in both boats—particularly in the "Fanny," and the dresses were neat and appropiate.

The wherries might now be seen flitting about—some completing their crews—others shewing themselves, before hand, to the admiring multitude At length the expected signal was given, and they started in the following order: "Gazelle," "Cutty Sark," "Happy go lucky," and "Whistling Swan," in which order they continued thoughout the race, which was generally ill contested.

The "Cutty Sark," anglice Shift, more poetically rendered "the brief invisible" was for some time the favorite, it being thought that the roughness of the weather would impede the progress of the light "Gazelle" which however beat the "Cutty" by forty five seconds. She was well pulled, and her crew in their "Cutty Sarks o' Paisley barn" did their best to bring her in. The other boats were so out of time that I have not mentioned them; tho' from the previous display of muscle and attitude in one of them, I imagine she was expected to 'do great things"—sic transit gloria &c.

The sports of the first day were now concluded, and the rain coming down in good earnest, the race course was soon vacated.

At the time appointed on the following day (Friday) the "Dragon" and "Ghost" entered the lists. The crew of the former, in their gaudy red frocks and caps looked unutterably ferocious, while the pale Ghosts presented an alarming combination of grace and strength.

In due time they started, and the superior qualities of the "Dragon" were soon apparent. She arrived at the winning boat twenty six seconds before her opponent her gallant coxswain waving the "Dragon Banner."

The Committee having liberally subscribed for a Silver Tankard it was pulled for by the "Dolphin," "Gipsy," and "Young Queen" (formerly the Vixen!! —animo fideli in regem)—The "Gipsy" won it right cleverly, and the 'Young Queen's' was awarded the purse, the Dolphin having fouled her while she attempted to cross the latter's bows.—The Tankard was presented on the Course by the Umpire who thus concluded his duties which he discharged in the most impartial and able manner.

This meeting has far surpassed it's predecessors: a decided improvement was perceptible both in boats and crews: none were missed but the 6 oared Gig "Not so-green" which it is remembered carried away a Cup at the last regatta.

Having already exceeded the limits, I proposed to myself at beginning, I shall now conclude, wishing "success and a long continuance to the CANTON REGATTA CLUB."

I am, dear Sir, Yours truly,
AN OPERATIVE.

Canton, May 29th, 1838.

* Since writing the above, I have learnt that it was a fowling-piece which was fired—not a percussion cap.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE CANTON PRESS.

The following item, Mr. Editor, in a letter from a passenger on board the Bengal Packet, you are at liberty, if you think proper, to insert in some "unfilled up corner" of your Journal.

The letter bears date "China Sea, Lat. 19° N. April 7th, 1838."

"Nothing of an uncommon character has occurred on board unless it be the death of one the of Lascars who was accidentally shot by a pistol when in the act of taking off the lock on Thursday afternoon. The ball passed through the left side just below the heart, and he pined but a few hours.' After repeating their prayers over the lifeless body, his surviving countrymen committed him to a watery grave."

Yours Respectfully,
SIRVEL.

The Ardaseer from Bombay arrived, we are told, on the 27th ulto., bringing the March mail from England in the shortest time that news have yet been received in China from Europe namely in 88 days, the last date from England being of the 7th March. We give in another part of our paper such extracts as we were able to make from the Bombay papers that were kindly lent us by parties who had received them by way of Macao, but, had we awaited the regular course of delivery of the letters, it would have been out of our power to give them to our readers, the letters per the Ardaseer not having yet been generally distributed, though 5 days (we write this on Friday night) have elapsed since she arrived. We of course know not what may have caused this unaccountable delay, the consignees will, we hope, be able to give satisfactory answers on this head. Per Volunteer from Singapore we have received the Singapore Free Press of 10th May, the news from which have been anticipated by the arrival of the Anne Maria noticed in our last.

We have received the letter from Mr. Holgate of Whampoa regarding the Hospital ship, as well as that from J. K. L., on clearances of ships, at too late an hour to make room for them or the remarks we have to offer on their contents; they shall, however, appear in our next.

Owing to the non arrival of the letter bag per Ardaseer we are unable to give our readers an account of the state of the home markets. Money, however, seems to have been plentiful as will appear from the quotation of stocks in another part of our paper. The prices current, or rather extracts from them, that we have seen as yet China produce was not mentioned.

Our readers will find another Vice-regal admonition to the Hong-merchants to do away with the foreign Opium-boats. It would appear from this document that the chinese cruizers stationed at the Bogue did actually make some demonstration to overhaul a boat on passing their station, in which attempt they have shewn more prudence than courage. Official communications like these are, we presume, meant for the eyes of the higher authorities at Peking, to impress on them the belief that the Canton mandarins are actually doing their duty, whilst the contrary is the case. The Opium smuggling has hardly ever been less molested than at the present moment, the mandarin boats themselves, in many instances, receiving the Opium from the smuggling boats. It is evident therefore that, whatever the Vice-roy's proclamations may say to the contrary, the provincial authorities of Kwangtung, all and every one, secretly protect the trade for a "consideration."

COMMERCIAL REMARKS.

The market has been in an excited state for the last three or four days, particularly in the articles of Opium, Cotton, Raw Silk and Tea, caused by the arrival of the Ardaseer from Bombay, with advices of 23d April, and the overland mail of 4th March. The letters of the agent, and one or two others were received, we understand, on the forenoon of the 29th, but the letters of the several consignees as well as the general letters were not delivered up to the time of our paper going to Press, so that we are not in possession of any particulars of commercial intelligence.

IMPORTS.

COTTON MANUFACTURES.—The market for better qualities of both grey and bleached LONGCLOTHS is tolerably well supported, the former selling @ 4¾ @ 5¼ and some sales of fair quality of white having been made @ 5¼ @ 5¾.

COTTON YARN.—The inferior descriptions continue very depressed.

WOOLLENS.—There is nothing to report in the BROADCLOTH, market, except that the dealers are getting rid of their stocks very slowly.

LONGELLS,—have declined about ½ of a dollar per piece, although none, we believe, remain in importers hands. CAMLETS, without alteration.

METALS.—IRON, is in demand at our advanced quotations. LEAD, dull of sale.

STRAITS PRODUCE.—PEPPER, from the recent importations both by junks and foreign vessels has declined fully ½ dollar per Picul; other articles without material change.

RICE,—the weather still very favorable, and prices consequently keep down.

SANDALWOOD,—has rather declined.

COTTON.—We have not heard of a single transaction during the week, and although the dealers must be entirely bare, as heavy arrivals are daily expected from Bombay, present rates will be with difficulty maintained.

OPIUM.—The price of all descriptions has declined during the week. Speculators being anxious to realize the profits on their purchases at low prices, have been forcing sales, and the arrival of two or three vessels from Bombay has induced the Chinese to hold back, and our quotations shew a reduction of $ 20 @ 30 per chest. The deliveries at Whampoa are also not so brisk. Although the crop of Malwa is reported to be so large, from the discouraging account sent from this side, not more than 10 @ 12,000 chests will, it is said, be shipped before the rains from Bombay. There has been no further importation from Bengal. The old Patna is almost without enquiry.

EXPORTS.

SUGAR CANDY.—Since the arrival of the Ardaseer from 6 @ 8000 Piculs have been bought at T. 6. 5. @ 6 6. per Picul.

RAW SILK.—From 7 @ 800 bales have been purchased during the week of Nankin Silk, and since the arrival of the Ardaseer, at an advance of fully $ 20 per picul, and for what remains they are asking still higher prices. There has been no purchase yet, we believe, of Canton Silk.

TEA.—We have slightly altered some of our quotations though they may be considered as nearly nominal.

FREIGHTS.—£ 10 @ £ 10 10 at which latter, we hear, the Thomas Lowrie has been chartered to London.

The Police in Kwangtung.

From "A memorial to the Emperor shewing the daily encrease of enervation and degeneracy in the Province of Kwangtung etc.

First. In the department of police, no negligence or indolence must be suffered; all judicial cases must be speedily attended to and determined; then will peace dwell in the abodes of the people, and the instigators of strife be checked.

Many are the cases of plunder that are from time to time brought forward in the province of Kwangtung; and of these a large number are attributable to unlawful associations. Bands of men combine and join together, under the designations of Teente Brotherhoods, Triad Societies, and such like. They carry off persons in order to extort ransoms for them; they falsely assume the character of police-men; they clandestinely build fast-pulling boats, professedly to guard the fields of grain, and these they man with a crew of from ten to twenty people, who cruise along the rivers, violently plundering the boats of travellers as they pass to and fro, or forcibly carrying off the wives and daughters of the tanka boat-people. The inhabitants of the villages and hamlets fear these robbers as they would tigers, and dare not offer them the least resistance, lest they should draw down their resentment. The husbandman, when he has received a field to plant and to culture, must take the precaution of paying these robbers a charge, which is called procuring an indemnity,—else, as soon as the crop is ripe, it is plundered, and the whole field laid bare. In the precincts of the metropolis, where their contiguity to the civil and military tribunals prevents them from committing violent depredations in open day, they set fire to places during the night, their aim being, under pretence, during the conflagration, of saving and defending, to avail themselves of opportunities to plunder and carry off. Hence, of late years, calamitous fires have greatly increased in frequency. The local officers have treated these merely as common accidental fires. And robbers, finding that they could thus act with impunity, have added to the irregularity of their doings.

In cases of petty altercations, or of more serious disputes, among the people, themselves—as the uneducated villagers adhere closely to the use of local dialects, it consequently rests entirely with the clerks and under-officers to interpret the evidence. When the judicial officer, whose duty it is to hear and determine, is in the slightest degree lax and inattentive, the attendants and servants of the court have the evidence pre-arranged, and join with bullies and strife-makers to subvert right and wrong,—fattening themselves upon bribes extorted under the names of 'notes or memoranda of the complaints,' 'purchases of replies,' and so forth,—retarding indefinitely the decision of cases,—and even instigating thieves to bring false accusations against the good; who, ere a true judgment is elicited, and the stolen effects are recovered, are already ruined and deprived of all their property. While the officers of government and the people are thus kept apart and separated, how can it be otherwise, than that appeals to higher tribunals should be incessant, and that instigation of strife and perseverance in litigation should prevail?

It behoves, therefore, that a declaration of the imperial pleasure should be solicited, commanding the governor and lieut.-governor of Kwangtung to issue orders to the magistrates throughout the province, to apprehend the lawless, and give security to the good, and with severity to seize all who are joined in illegal associations, sending them to the metropolis, that they may be openly punished, and that like proceedings may be interdicted. By these means, masters will be led to command their families; and these will have knowledge to be deterred from being seduced to attach themselves to such associations.—Whenever any case of plunder arises, the magistrates should make personal investigation, following the traces till they succeed in apprehending the thieves; they should not seek, by disregard of the matter, to avoid censure for ill-success. When fires break out among the abodes of the people, the magistrates should ascertain how they originated, and should not be allowed to assume indifference and so let the matter pass off. As soon as complaints or appeals are brought before them, they should immediately give their personal attention to the investigation, and, if true, should inflict punishment with strictness,—if unfounded, should visit with like punishment the false accusers. They should not give the rein to the clerks and attendants of the courts, lest their so doing should result in a want of truth or of perfect justice. In this way it may be expected to clear off the judicial cases, to settle long-delayed litigations, and gradually to bring to an end habits of plunder and robbery,—and thus it may be hoped that the people will be enabled to rest upon their beds in peace.

Secondly. The magistrates of districts, when collecting the taxes, whether of money or of grain, must not overrate the amount due, with the view of deducting from it, nor suffer the excise officers to connive at non-payment.

If the taxes be overrated, each individual will entertain schemes whereby he may hope to avoid payment, and the result will be, opposition to the collectors, and defalcation of the revenue. If non-payment be connived at, debts from the people to the revenue will accumulate, and still increase, and the consequence must be that bribery will become necessary, in order to obtain continued delay.

The province of Kwangtung, in place of its original contribution to the supplies conveyed to court, has for a long time past, paid the tax of grain, due from it, in money, which, after being collected, is remitted to the provincial treasury, under the charge of the financial and territorial commissioner. The people have always attended to agriculture, and have not failed gladly to discharge this tax. But, it is said, that, of late years, whilst innundations and drought have in no small degree afflicted the land, causing very scanty harvests, the magistrates when levying the tax of grain, have rated the price of it as high as six or seven taels for a sheih of 120 catties.* The common people are not possessed of abundant wealth, and cannot sustain being thus pecled and scraped; consequently, the clerks and tax collectors, and village bullies, have received bribes to shelter them and to let them pass free of payment. And hence, old debts and new levies conjointly press upon them, and remain alike unpaid.

It behoves, therefore, that a declaration of the imperial pleasure be solicited commanding that strict orders be issued to all the magistrates, that, whenever the tax on grain has to be collected, they shall previously to the collection, issue proclamations throughout every city, village, and market-place, declaring what is the legal amount levyable as the price of the grain-contribution, upon each acre of arable land, and commanding the payment thereof within a time named,—adding, also, that the clerks and tax gatherers are not permitted to extort fees, or to receive any surplus above the legal amount; that if any persons venture to undertake such exactions, in opposition to the commands so issued, they shall bestrictly apprehended and punished. At the same time, these orders must not be stretched to involve the unoffending. All debts incurred prior to the year 1833 have, by a gracious declaration of the imperial pleasure, received full remission; which fact should be made known by appending to the magistrates' proclamation a copy, on yellow paper, of the imperial commands. Thus will be attained the certainty, that the village husbandman and field laborers are all fully aware of, and thoroughly imbued by, the sovereign's benevolence: and any semblance of sanction will be removed from an undistinguishing enforcement of the payment of these remitted debts. Such measures as these will produce, in place of a tardy, a most ready and joyful, payment of the taxes.

The chief ministers of the imperial cabinet are four—two Tartars, and two Chinese. On the 1st of March last, a paper from the vermillion pencil appeared in Peking, appointing to these high offices Muhchangah, Fan Shengan, Keshen, and Yuen Yuen. Muhchangah and Keshen are Mantchou Tartars. Fan Shengan and Yuen Yuen are Chinese.

A new lieut.-governor has been appointed to Canton; his name is Eleang. Hoppo Wan is soon to be succeeded by Yuhkwan.

Delay of justice. Hwang Yewshuy, from Keeyang, one of the eastern districts of this province, has repaired to Peking, where he has appeared before the Censorate, accusing his fellow-townsman, Lin Wang, of robbery and various other grievous and cruel acts. According to a report of the Censorate, Lin has more than 10,000 people at his beck, always ready to execute his nefarious purposes. By these, goods are plundered; graves opened; innocent persons seized, and kept in confinement—until large sums of money are advanced for their ransom. Two of Hwang's brothers were in confinement at the close of last year, when he left Canton for the capital, which he did not do until he had carried his complaints repeatedly to all the local courts, from the lowest to the highest officers in the province. During the five last years, he presented his petitions thirteen times to the prefect of Chaouchow, and thrice to the governor and his colleagues in Canton—and to all in vain. As a dernier resort he has gone to Peking; the result of this final appeal remain to be seen.

Chinese Repository for May.

"Notices of Natural History."

From the Chinese Repository, for May.

The mih, in the Urh Ya, is called the white leopard; but the Pun Tsaou says, this classification is erroneous, and that the mih has a strong resemblance to a bear. This name was given to the animal, because the skin, when made into seats, or the hair when woven into sleeping clothes, is good to dissipate the moist humors of the body; and the character mih, therefore, is compounded of che a hog, joined to mo cuticle. In its general configuration it is like a bear, with a small head, short legs, and about as large as an ass. The Urh Ya, however, describes it somewhat differently; as having the trunk of an elephant, the eyes of a rhinoceros, the tail of an ox, and the feet of a tiger. The skin is particolored in stripes of white and black, though the colors are not very distinct; another author says, the skin has a yellowish cast, that the hair is very warm, and sleek and shining. It is very strong, and can take up in its proboscis and eat iron, copper and the joints of bamboo; also by licking these substances it can wear them away. Its teeth are extremely hard; for if they be thrown into the fire they will not be burned, and if an ax or knife be struck upon, them, it will be bruised, and nothing can batter them except the horns of the chamois and the diamond. It is on this account that these two things fear being struck together. Besides copper and iron, it eats snakes and reptiles. The mih was formerly found in Yunnan and the western provinces of China; and the people on the hills say it eats tripods, and cooking utensils, for which reason it is much dreaded. They kill it for its teeth and bones, which have very little marrow in them. Some of the people pretend that these bones are the relics of Budha, and thus deceive those who are ignorant. The metals which this animal eats are dissolved (lit. chao fused) in its stomach. In proof of this, it is recorded, that in the reign of Yu, the armory of military weapons was suddenly discovered to be empty, and on digging into the ground underneath a pair of a species of mih was found, called nee tee, or, 'gnawers of iron,' and in their bellies the iron of the weapons was found. The swords, which were afterwards made of this metal, could cut gemstones as easy as clay. It is for this reason, that the urine of this animal is prescribed when a person has swallowed iron or copper, as it will in a short time change them into water! There are two animals which resemble the mih in their predilection for metals; keaou tao, or the crafty, rabbit, and the kiw, but nothing further is known concerning them.

* The sheih is legally rated at from three or four taels.

The stock of Manila Hemp in first hands is about 1,000 bales, consisting chiefly of the indirect arrivals referred to in our last report. The market has been dull for some time past, and there were no buyers lately even at £10: for good quality holders now asks £30, but at this price there is no enquiry, and only small parcels can be disposed of from £30 to 31.

Sugar.—1,200 bales mid-ling brown Manila have been disposed of at from 22s. a 23s. but owing principally to the present severe weather, nothing has been done in other Foreign, in addition to a sale at the close of last week of 70 chests middling and soft White Rio at 27s 6d.

Little has been done in Tea this week, and prices of all kinds are without alteration.

There continues to be active demand for China Silk at the quotations, at which there are more buyers than sellers: Bengal is less in request, but prices of this kind also are rather stiffer, particularly for the better qualities.

THE TRADE OF THE MAURITIUS.

We have been favored by the kindness of a friend with a summary of the trade of the Mauritius for the year 1837, which contains many particulars of interest to our mercantile readers. The total value of the imports for this period was £1,035,789, of which £993 998 came on British and £41,785 on French bottoms. The Exports, including £17,792 of imports re-exported, were £831,050, of which sugar formed almost the whole—viz. £739,972 or lbs. 68,478,874. Of this Great Britain took lbs. 57,150,448; New South Wales lbs. 7,585,197, and the Cape of Good Hope lbs. 3,826,703. A small quantity was sent to Batavia.

433 British vessels representing 95,831 tons, and 65 Foreign representing 16,402 entered inwards, and 412 B. vessels and 41 foreign cleared out.

The imports consisted of lbs. 54,604 643 of rice and lbs. 4,974,360 of wheat from British India. Madagascar supplies only 1,338,323 lbs. of rice. We furnish also 5,298 664 lbs of gram and 2,087, 820 lbs. of oats. Great Britain sends £102 684, of Cotton manufactures and other articles, making a total of £345 744. France only retains a trade of the value of £123,653 of imports and £8,385 of exports in her old Colony.—Hurkaru.

FAMINE AND CHOLERA.

We annex an extract of a letter from a gentleman residing at Agra, which confirms the distressing accounts we have from time to time made public of the progress of the famine, and, we regret to add, of the cholera also which rages with great violence:—

"I have just received a letter from my brother at Agra; he says "the cholera is sweeping away 2 to 300 natives daily."

"The magistrate employs about 60,000 of the poor, and the poor house feeds about 4,000 daily. The people die like very dogs, and their carcases are as little noticed as those of the canine species. I traversed the banks of the river, one channel of which is completely dried up, and found about 25 sick, almost dying, and about as many corpses. I heard that mothers watch an opportunity at night and throw their children alive into the Jumna. A person coming up the river assures us he saw dogs and jackals actually devouring bodies in which life was not extinct. Is not this an awful visitation? But what have I told you? nothing compared with what I myself have seen, and it boots not now to tell, but my heart bleeds when I think of the scenes of misery. And yet the moral misery, is if possible greater. Amidst all this, the language of prayer is not heard, the sigh of repentance, and the throbbings of remorse are not perceived. The people stand aghast in stupid amazement, and rather rebuke the injustice as they esteem it, of God, than inplore his mercy and forgiveness."—Harkaru.

THE WONDERFUL TALE OF LUCKNOW.

The following story, which we heard from a Native friend, may amuse our readers who will exercise their own discretion in giving credence to it:

"Two Faqueers have lately been perambulating the streets of Lucknow, informing the liege that the Government of Oude is standing on its last legs, and boldly naming the fortunate individuals who are to obtain a share of the loaves and fishes under the new Sovereign: their appearance is very strange, dress indecently scanty and looks wild to a degree.

"The King having heard of their goings on, went to them at a sedeel by a large Suwarree: on his approach the Faqueers boldly repeated their tale, and exhorted His Majesty to prepare for the change about to take place in the fortunes of his house. In order to prove the correctness of their assertions, one of them placed a very sharp sword, edge upwards, on the ground, and thus addressed the King:—

"Protector of the world! you are attended by numerous young men, who are as courageous as Rustum, and strong as Giants, if any one of them will lift that sword from the ground, then will we acknowledge that we are liars and impostors, and consent to be disposed of, in whatever manner it may please the fountain of benevolence and source of all charity to determine.

"When he had ceased spdaking a smile of contempt played upon the lips of the young men, and an unanimous wah! wah! is wen kya mooskil? kya khoob lawasha? resounded through the air. Some of the young courtiers wishing to show their zeal, pressed through the crowd and attempted to raise the sword; suddenly a tremor seized their veins! their eyes started from their sockets! they seemed as if struck by lightning and could not move a limb.

"The crowd now became astonished and alarmed; several others made the attempt, but no one could raise the glittering blade, which shone as bright as new silver. On beholding this, His Majesty seemed convinced of the truth of their prophecy, and muttering "Khoda ka marzee, kismut kee bat," returned to his Palace and issued an order that no one should attempt to molest or interfere with the "Faqueers."—Ibid.

THE STORM.

We have omitted to make mention of the terrible storm of wind and hail with which Calcutta and the adjacent villages were visited on Sunday last. With the narrow spirit common to Ditchers, we conceived that the storm was confined to our own dear metropolis, and that the hail-stones were actually not bigger than the usual 'pigeon's eggs,' or musket bullets, and not quite so destructive. It appears, however, from information that has reached us, that horrible devastation was committed by the storm in the village of Rieopore, about 5 miles from town, near Ghurreahgaut.

Our informant from that quarter states, that several houses were swept away, as in a whirlwind, and that upwards of one hundred souls perished—and about twelve hundred were very severely hurt and—from the effects of the bamboos flying about like so many sheets of paper. Several head of cattle have been destroyed.

From another source we have learnt, that the hail-stones were actually larger than 6 pound shot, weighing rather more than a seer each. During the storm, a gentleman at Dum Dum went out of his house, and actually brought in one, perfectly round, which would not go into a Monteath or finger cup!—Englishman.

The third Government Opium sale of the season was held this day at the Exchange Rooms, and went off with considerable spirit, but a further reduction of prices, which was naturally to be expected from the continued unfavorable accounts of the extreme difficulties attending the Trade in China. The sale commenced at a quarter past eleven A. M., and closed at a quarter to two o' clock P. M. The attendance of natives and others was as numerous as we remember ever to have witnessed, and the whole of the first half of the Patna, 1236 C. was taken off by ten or eleven purchasers at 680 Rupees. The entire sale consisted to 2500 Patna and 1500 Benares. The former description fluctuated from 666 Rs. to 695 Rs. per chest, averaging Rs. 687-8 by the lot, or Rs. 681-8 by the chest. The Benares commenced at 575 Rs., gradually falling to Rs. 503, when it again rallied to Rs. 546, making an average of Rs. 540 per chest by the lot, and Rs. 534 10-8, on dividing the total proceeds by the number of chests sold. The fall in the value of this great source of the Government Revenue will be severely felt this year by those in the management of the Finances of the state, but it may ultimately tend to restore the advantages of the monopoly to the Company, if the said monopoly is to be continued, and our neighbours in the Celestial regions are to be permitted to go on indulging in the use of the "destructive Drug,"—which we being to fear they must have "by hook or by crook," reasoning from what we read of the daring necessary to effect, and the temptations held out to induce supplies in the teeth of repeated Edicts—and what is worse, fines, seizures, and loss of property as well as liberty; putting an entire stop to the cultivation in Malwah, which has been long felt as a thorn in the side of the Government, and we believe we may add in that of the Merchants, on this side of India connected with China likewise.

	Chest.	Highest.	Lowest.	Average	Proceeds.
Behar	2400	696	680	681 7-4	1,600,025
Benares	1500	575	503	534 7-2	801,375

We hear that there is a talk at present of the Government being about to open their Treasury for advances on goods. The exact period, however, is not, we believe, as yet fixed; but it is quite certain that the question as to what shall be the exchange fixed on by Government is at present under agitation. We hear that 2s. 1d. is talked of. And as every body knows that Government is above taking any advantage, which the present scarcity might give them, we dare to say that 2s. 1d. will be the rate at which the Treasury will open. There are, however, we are told, incredulous people who say, that in opening the Treasury due regard will be had by Government to the advantages of its position as a Capitalist with a sort of Monopoly, from the want of competitor, opening shop, with the certainty of getting his Capital taken up at almost any terms he may choose to impose on his customers. As we do not profess to be in the secret, we cannot reconcile these two conflicting statements; but according to the usual run of human affairs, people generally get as much as they can for their money; and we are not aware that Governments do not, in this respect, share the common lot of humanity. Calcutta Courier, 24th April.

BOMBAY MARKET.

(From Bombay Price Current, 21st April.)

COTTON.—There has been a large business done during the past week, chiefly for the China market, and in the middling qualities, but prices have been prevented from rising from the extensive arrivals, the vicinity of the Bunder being perfectly crowded with loaded boats. —The intelligence from England up to the 3rd ultimo by the Steamer has had very little effect on the market. The following are the current prices.

Broach and Jumbooseer.....	Rs. 129 to Rs. 130
Surat.....	Rs. 126 to Rs. 130
Dholera, Bhownuggur & CogoRs.	98 to Rs. 114½
Cutch.....	Rs 107 to Rs. 112½
Oomrawutty	Rs. 105 to Rs. 110
Akote.....	Rs. 113
Mangarole and Porebunder....	Rs. 82 to Rs. 85

OPIUM MALWA.—Very unfavorable advices from China were received here on Thursday by the Water Witch via Calcutta, bringing intelligence up to the beginning of last month, when Malwa had fallen to Dollars 330 per chest with increased difficulties in the deliveries both at Lintin and on the East Coast. We noticed in our last that the Ardaseer clipper was clearing out, but her departure has since been postponed, sine die. Previous to receipt of the intelligence referred to, prices were from Rs. 770 to Rs. 7 5 per chest, but nearly nominal, the speculators being very few.—We have since heard of no transactions.—The passes sold amount to 10,631 chests, of which 6,043½ chests have arrived, and 3,667 chests have been exported. No arrivals have yet taken place at Damaun.

CORRESPONDENCE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE CANTON PRESS.

Sir,—A paragraph appeared in your paper of the 19th Ultmo. referring to the British Hospital at Whampoa which for circumstances not worth explaining has not yet been noticed.

I beg leave to inform you that your informations are incorrect; and your assertions as to Commanders of Boats messing on board the ship perfectly false. Your insinuations as to the ship being in any way concerned in smuggling are totally erroneous, as Opium has never been received on board at any time since I have been in charge. As to the limbs and lives of the poor unfortunate Linguists, your fears may be perfectly at rest.

I am Sir,

SHIPS CLEARANCES.

TO CAPT. ELLIOT, R. N.
H. M. Superintendent,

Sir,—It is reported, and generally believed, that a British Vessel now outside the Port, lately arrived from England, whose papers, if inspected, would shew that she cleared out for Gibralter, or other ports in the Mediterranean Sea, but whose Logbook and other evidences would shew nothing of the sort. Her papers, thus, may be taken to be simulated, and the vessel itself liable to seizure. I think it right to make known the fact to you as it is generally reported; the practice itself certainly, if true, being any thing but creditable to the parties engaged therein; and if often repeated would render necessary the adoption of some plan for compelling the deposit of each British ships papers, on arrival at the outer anchorages, to an officer appointed by yourself as the Superintendent of British Trade. It is only upon a knowledge of cargoes in progress of shipment from London, and the different outports, as well as from copies of completed manifests, obtained at considerable trouble and expence, that the merchants here can come to any satisfactory conclusion, with regard to the sale or disposal of stocks held by them on their own or constituents accounts. Once permit false clearances to pass unnoticed, and you destroy all confidence, because all knowledge, of mercantile operations in course of preparation and completion.

I am, Sir,
Your obedient Servant,
J. K. L.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE CANTON PRESS.

Dear Sir,—By your kindly publishing the Regulations for the sailing match on the 31st Ultimo, as framed by the Committee and furnished by the Secretary of the Canton Regatta Club to the Proprietors of the Boats entered, it will appear how far the decision that "the Witch did not start," is in conformity therewith.

The Witch did start, and on the same tack as her competitors, but, being less fortunate, could-not weather the boat stationed to leeward,—and it is submitted to the opinion of those conversant in such matters, whether the necessity for her going on the other tack (nothing in the Regulations prohibiting such a probable contingency) ought to deprive her of the right to a start.

The time (by two observers) of the Witch's performing the distance was—

Start, 5-25. In, 7-22-35. Time, 1-57-35.

REGULATIONS FOR SAILING MATCH.

At a meeting held last Evening at Mr. Mark wick's Hotel, composed of the Committee appointed to conduct the affairs of the Sailing Match to come off on Thursday next, the following measures were agreed to.

That the course shall be from two boats stationed at the mouth of the Macao passage round the Fort, keeping the Honam shore on board in rounding the Fort and back to the starting point.

No boat to carry more than three fore and aft sails, viz fore sail, main sail, and gib, and no other propelling power to be used, excepting in case of getting aground or fouling any boat.

The boats will assemble at ½ past 4, and will start in rotation precisely at ½ before 5, the time of each boat quitting and returning to the winning point to be noted, and that performing the distance in the shortest time to be the Winner.

In case of the wind being light, the Umpire to decide whether the boats should start or the race be postponed—Each boat to carry a distinguishing flag at her fore top mast head—oblong shape and the size to be not less than 30 inches long by 18—, and any boat relinquishing the race will signify the same by hauling it down.

All disputes to be left to the decision of the Umpire, from which there can be no appeal.

CANTON PRESS.

Saturday, 9th June.

By the Waterwitch and Cowasjee Family, Calcutta papers to the 2nd May, and the Singapore Free Press of 17th have been received. We have given such extracts from them as we deemed of interest. The cholera and famine were still raging in Agra and the upper Provinces; and the picture drawn of the destitution of the poor is terrible, subscriptions are being made every where to alleviate the distress, and numerous contributions, have been made whilst the Government also is doing much to assist the sufferers. But the evil is great and well deserves the sympathy of the compassionate; we hope ere long to see a subscription list circulated here by some friend to humanity, which we doubt not will meet with every success from a community which has on so many occasions liberally responded to other calls on their benevolence.

DELIVERY OF LETTERS.—In a small community like ours, whenever any thing requires notice from the press, it is but too common to ascribe such notice to personal motives, particularly as it always must, more or less, point at a very small number, not like in large societies where the press becomes the monitor, generally, in deprecating abuses, of a large number of individuals, and is consequently able, in most cases, to generalize more than we can. Should, in what we are going to say, the reproach of personality be made against us, we deny before hand having any such aim, our remarks being levelled at a practice but too common in Canton, and to illustrate it, we are obliged to relate a very recent occurrence, which, from it's importance, and the inconvenience it has entailed on many, is better calculated to support our remarks than any we remember. On Wednesday the 27th May last the Ardaseer from Bombay arrived at Hong-kong, with the overland mail from England to the 7th of May. The consignee's letters, and those for a favored few, were despatched to Canton immediately, and arrived here on the following day. The general letters however were retained at Hong-kong until Saturday the 30th May, though there had been an opportunity to forward them some days before, and it is said, the letter bag had then already been put into the St. George passage boat, but was taken out again by Capt. Parry of the Hercules, because the person in charge of the St. George would not promise to send the letter bag to the consignees of the ship, but would deliver it to the parties to whom generally the distribution of letters is entrusted. The consequence was that the letter bag remained till the 30th at Hong-kong, when it was at last forwarded in the boat Grampus. This boat unfortunately struck on the chumpee oyster bank, the letters were however saved by Capt. Parry, who on hearing of the accident, immediately repaired to the spot and rescued them from the plundering Chinese. But even after this accident, it was but as an act of favor, that parties present could obtain their letters, though on what plea their right to them could be denied we are unable to understand. On Tuesday the 5th of June the unfortunate letters at last arrived, at a time when their contents had been forestalled by the arrival of the Water Witch from Calcutta with the same overland mail.

In this instance then a few houses here had important information seven days earlier than any of their neighbours obtained, not by any greater activity of their friends or themselves, but by a manifest trespass upon the British navigation laws, for which, in any country where they are available, the Captain would have become liable to heavy fine. To insist on the letters being delivered to the Consignees only, as seems to have been done in this case, proves that it was the intention of the Captain at Hong-kong to put the time of delivery here into their power; why consignees of vessels should desire to have any controul over letterbags, except for unlawful purposes, we cannot discover. They have no more to do with the letters, than the man in the moon, though it is in a manner customary here to exert such control.

The only excuse that parties, guilty of the detention of these letters, can have is that they have but followed an example frequently given before: an excuse as bad as none; or the Captain may perhaps plead orders from his owners that he was not to forward the general letters until a certain time after those for particular parties had been sent up; this plea is also untenable, the Captain not being at liberty to prefer his owners' orders to the laws of his country, nor would such orders, we apprehend, mitigate the fine to which he would have made himself subject by similar behaviour in any British port. Captains of ships therefore, and their owners or consignees, not restrained in China by the fear of fines, are frequently tempted to promote the interest of one, and to neglete that of the whole community; we are afraid this evil practice of unduly retaining letters will be continued, until either powers are given to Her Majesty's Superintendent to punish such transgression of the laws, or until public opinion itself enlists on the side of law and justice and puts a stop to it.

The Admiral of the Bombay station, Sir Frederick Maitland, in H. M. S. Wellesley, 84, is on his way to China from Penang, whither the 18 gun Sloop Larne has already preceded him. It is said that two other frigates from the Bay of Bengal are also coming this way. After the Admiral's arrival we shall probably be able to amuse our readers with the Chinese pilot's report, who probably has never seen so large a ship before, and will accordingly, as is the custom, give a flaming account of her to the authorities. It is, we believe, not expected that the Admiral will at all enter into communication with the Chinese government, and the other frigates if they come, only come to breathe thé cooler air of the China Sea, to do which however, at this season, they must go higher north, the thermometer here rising daily to 90°.—

During the thunderstorm on Saturday last, one of the large passage boats plying between this and Fashan (a village or rather an unwalled town about 10 miles from Canton, containing, it is said, a population equal to that of Canton) was struck by lightning almost in front of the Foreign Factories here; her mast was splintered to pieces and three men were killed.

THE HOSPITAL SHIP AT WHAMPOA.—Our readers will find, in another column, a letter from Mr. Holgate, the receipt of which we acknowledged in our last but could not then find room for it. The very decided and by no means polite tone of the letter, has made us give it an attention which, we think, will be far from agreeable to Mr. Holgate, but he must be aware that "he will reap as he sows," and having thus in a manner dared us by his flat negatives, we now proceed to vindicate what we said, and may possibly go a little further into new matter, that the public may know to what use the British sailor's hospital has been converted. We do this with reluctance, but Mr. Holgate's letter demands, as coming at the same time from an official quarter, due attention.

First then "our informations are incorrect;" does Mr. Holgate mean to say that our information was incorrect when we stated that five sick had been at any time the maximum on board the hulk; and that she generally was without any; or were we wrong in stating that the Opium-smuggling boats crowded round her? "Your assertions as to commanders of boats messing on board the ship are perfectly false" says Mr. Holgate; may be that they do not do it every day, and that every one concerned in the Whampoa smuggling trade, and who has availed himself of the hospitality of the Hospital ship, be not himself a captain or commander of a boat; the fact is of little importance compared to other matters, in which, it seems, people on board the Hospital ship have come in closer contact with the Opium trade, and which we shall come to presently. "Mr. Holgate continues." Your insinuations as to the ship being in any way concerned in smuggling are totally unjust, as Opium has never been received on board at any time since I have been in charge." Now, though Mr. Holgate has taken a fortnight to produce his letter, for circumstances which, he says, are not worth explaining, and this we will believe, he cannot have read our remarks, or not understood them, for we made no such insinuation, we merely stated that we feared that the Chinese would believe that the Hospital ship served as an Opium store ship, an impression, which, we repeat it again, obtains, how justly, let our readers judge, even among the foreign community. We then stated that the ship would be suspected, nothing more,—were we wrong? most of our readers will answer, no. Mr. Holgate then continues. "As to the limbs and lives of the poor unfortunate linguists, your fears may be perfectly at rest" Mr. Holgate must excuse us that we cannot think his individual guarantee on this point as a satisfactory one, much as we wish to hold it so. Mr. Holgate is probably not aware of the fate of the unfortunate linguist Hopun, and two pilots, who had, the former secured, and the latter brought into the river, the Fort William, in whose boats Lord Napier came to Canton. The poor linguist, though perfectly innocent of any connivance with Lord Napier, was imprisoned and tortured, and afterwards sent into exile, but expired on the road from the barbarous treatment he had suffered. Now, greater interest was made to save that unfortunate man, than what we believe to be at Mr. Holgate's disposal. We have heard that the linguist Atung, who is complicated in the affair of the Hospital ship, has frequently been threatened with heavy punishment if the ship did not leave the river; that the poor man was much afraid that these threats would be carried into execution; and that he has been several times to Macao to entreat of Capt. Elliot that the Hospital ship should be sent away. The man himself must certainly be better able to judge of his circumstances than Mr. Holgate, unless indeed we understand the guarantee given by the latter wrong, and that he means to say that we need not fear for the linguist, for that in case he should be tortured, and his limbs distended by the rack, he would cure him again. In this sense, Mr Holgate's, as a surgeon's assurance, may be of some value, in no other, though it can give but little consolation to the linguist.

Thus far Mr. Holgate's letter; we shall now enter into new matter, and show that the Hospital ship is not so unconcerned in smuggling as it would appear, and as we believed it before we received Mr. Holgate's letter denying our former statements. It will be kept in mind that the Hospital ship is a public institution, partly purchased by money furnished by the British treasury, and as such she has been represented to the Canton authorities; that therefore proceedings in her, connected with any illicit trade become highly blameable, though custom and participation have made us look with a favorable eye upon such acts committed by private individuals, and that, as being a public institution, we believe to have an undeniable right to notice the proceedings on board of the ship. First then, will Mr. Holgate again flatly deny it, when we say that the gunner, or by whatever title that officer of the Hospital ship goes, makes occasional trips as commander of Opium boats to and from Hong-kong? and he a salaried servant of the Hospital ship? Will Mr. Holgate be able again to contradict us that one boat at least, has been built or raised upon on board the Hospital ship, a boat which is understood to belong to Mr. Holgate, a boat which, after being launched, was employed in the Opium-trade, and which now, though sold to other parties, still remains at Whampoa laden with Opium? What we have hitherto stated are mere accessories, we now come to the point itself, of whether the Hospital ship has had Opium on board or not, which is negatived by Mr. Holgate, and asserted by several parties to whom we believe credit to be equally due. Our information is to the following effect; that a party engaged in the Opium trade has stated, in the presence of several, that a certain number of chests were, from the Hospital ship, put on board one of the foreign boats, and moreover that, when this person was told that what he said would find it's way into the Canton Press, he stated explicitly that he could make good his assertion. We are, of course, willing, on application from Mr. Holgate, to give the name of our informant.

Will, after what we have now stated, any one blame us for having said three weeks ago that the Hospital ship was getting into bad odour, or is it to be wondered at that it is so? We believe not, and we shall see whether Mr. Holgate is again prepared to give a flat denial to every thing stated by us concerning the Hospital ship.

That Ship's stores are sold on board of that ship, such as gin and beer, etc, has nothing to to with the above, but it is objectionable on many accounts, but particularly as the trader on board of her sits there free of expense, and has therefore undue advantages over others who, in Canton, being in the same line of business, have heavy houserent to pay and duties on all the articles, going and coming, to the Chinese.

It is probably the last time that we shall have to recur to this, to us, unpleasant subject, hearing that the vessel has been sold to the Co-hong for 4000 $, to be broken up, we suppose. This latter information we give however as a report, though we see not much reason, judging from the source whence we had it, and the probability of the thing, to doubt of it.

The great Western Jungle.

Quick as thought, Mansfield discharged his unerring rifle, and the bear, rearing up to her full height, rolled headlong down the rocky steep, falling right over poor Kamah, who had not yet had time to scramble out of the water.

The Jaggardar had hardly uttered a yell of astonishment, when he found himself firmly clasped in the deadly embrace of the bear, and felt her hot breath blowing upon his cheek. Twisting his body round, with the agility of a wild cat, he avoided the first grasp which she made at his head; and knowing full well that he had nothing else for it, thrust his naked arm, without hesitation, between her extended jaws, seizing the root of her tongue, with the desperate gripe of a man who is determined that nothing but death shall force him to quit his hold. A deadly struggle now ensued; the two combatants—each equally savage in his own way—rolling over and over, and struggling, like two incarnate fiends, in the midst of the muddy stream, now crimsoned by the blood which flowed copiously from the wounded bear. And it was well for the Jaggardar that she had been wounded, else the contest would have been speedily ended. Mansfield stood for some time anxiously watching their movements; with his forefinger resting on the trigger of his rifle, in hopes that some lucky turn might give him an opportunity of firing into the bear: and more than once the weapon was raised to his shoulder; but so quick were their evolutions, that he did not dare to risk a shot. For an instant the shaggy hide of the bear appeared on the surface; and ere it could be well distinguished, its place was supplied by the dusky figure of the savage—his teeth firmly clenched—every sinew in his wiry frame strained almost to cracking—and his blood-shot eyes starting from their sockets, in consequence of the dreadful pressure he endured.

"This will never do," exclaimed Mansfield, hastily throwing down his rifle, and preparing to plunge in the water; but ere he could do so, the blade of old Kamah's hunting-knife was seen to flash brightly in the sun, and next moment he started to his feet, with a savage yell of triumph, flourishing the blood-stained weapon round his head, whilst the lifeless body of the bear floated slowly down the stream: he had just withdrawn it from her heart.—Colburn's New Monthly Magazine.

COMMERCIAL REMARKS.

IMPORTS.

COTTON MANUFACTURES.—Several parcels of LONGCLOTHS, have been sold during the week at previous prices, say for white about 5¼ @ 5¾, and grey 5 @ 5½. but when the heavy supplies arrive per Parkfield and Tyrer, these rates cannot, it is expected, be maintained. CHINTZES, of good patterns and dimensions in fair demand at $5 @ 6. COTTON YARN; good Watertwist, Nos. 20 @ 36 at $40 @ 42 in fair demand, the supply being rather short, but the importations and stock of inferior yarn are very heavy, and very low prices offered for it.

WOOLLENS.—Quotations of SPANISH STRIPES, remain nominally the same but there is little demand, which appears unaccountable, the importations having, during the past season, been so very short, and prices very moderate. LONGELLS, have declined—the last sale reported was 2,000 pieces at 10½, and which, we believe, was the only parcel remaining in importer's hands. This price, we fear, will not be obtained for the next arrivals, although the stock is unusually small and the importations hitherto are not 40,000 pieces against the E. I. Company's annual supply of generally 150,000 Pieces. CAMBLETS, both Dutch and English are rather reviving from their depression, there having been no recent importation.

METALS.—IRON, the small rod and nail in good demand at $5, the supply being very short, arrivals would soon cause a decline. LEAD, dull of sale at $6½ @ 6½.

COCHINEAL,—moves off very slowly, and the stock it still heavy.

STRAITS PRODUCE.—PEPPER, is declining, there being several late arrivals as well in the junks as in foreign vessels. RATTANS, keep up, and TIN, from there being little on hand has advanced a little. BETELNUT, no new yet come to market, the price of the old is supported, being all in one hand.

RICE,—has if anything, still further declined, the weather continuing very favorable.

SANDALWOOD.—declined, there being little demand for the northern markets, where the great consumption is.

COTTON.—the dealers cannot, we think, have hardly a single bale on hand, but yet, no purchases have been made for upwards of a month, and our quotations are quite nominal. Exclusive of the late arrivals, the Bombay Castle, Anna Maria, and Balcarras, the stock on the first was estimated at

Bombay,	Bengal,	Madras,	Total.
13,000	7,500	1,300	21,800
and the clearances in May were only
7,600	800	200	8,600

Heavy arrivals of the Bombay staple are daily expected, but the Bengal crop is reported short, and the price high, and arriving very slowly in Calcutta. From Madras we have no particular report, except that the quotations were not high.

OPIUM.—Our nominal quotations for the Bengal drug are much under those of last week, but we do not hear that any considerable sales have been made since the arrival of Waterwitch and Cowasjee Family whose importations, and at so low a cost, have for the moment checked the demand, although yesterday there were again enquiries. The old Opium is very depressed. Malwa is rather firmer, holders being sanguine that the purchases must be made for the Junks, before further extensive importations. Turkey has also improved a little, but the demand is limited. For deliveries of last month see above. The Waterwitch and Cowasjee's cargoes are not icceluded.

EXPORTS.

RAW SILK.—There are about 300 bales only unsold, middling silk, and for which, we understand, the holder is asking from 500 @ 520 There is a good deal not shipped off yet, but which will go by the vessels about loading. The second crop of Canton Silk is reported to be good.

FREIGHT.—Nom inal—the Anna Maria is, we understand, chartered for Bristol, and the Balcarras and Volunteer laid on for London, and as these and the ships loading will carry most of the teas not engaged for expected vessels, freights must decline.

The Tapley is despatched to day for London to be followed in a few days by the Elizabeth to Liverpool. The Witch and Cowasjee were despatched for Calcutta, the former on the 6th the latter yesterday. The Ardaseer will sail in a day or two for Bombay—The Logan and Hellas from London, the Parkfield and Tyrer from Liverpool, and the Rob Roy from Calcutta are all due.

Foreign Relations of China.

From a Correspondent.

In reviewing the past, we easily perceive that the Empire was never as extensive and kept the neighbouring states in such total subjection as at the present time. It is not our wish to investigate the causes of its all engrossing influence, but to dwell upon the particulars which characterize the policy of the reigning Emperor towards foreigners in general. The most redoubtable enemy which China ever had and again to which it had to wage a continual war since times immemorial, are doubtless the Mongul tribes, who live to the North and Northwest of the Celestial Empire. Without means of subsistence, either too lazy to cultivate the ground, or dwelling on an ungrateful soil which produces nothing, they live a nomadic life, and engage in hunting Starvation, a love of adventure, and a hankering after the good things possessed by the industrious Chinese, supplied them always with an excuse for ravaging the adjacent Chinese territory and taking occasionally possession of it. Not only did they, on their swift chargers, rout the armies of China, but the Turks, Russians and German knighthood were unable to resist their valor, and became in turn their temporary slaves. To tame this race, the Mantchoos engaged the nearest tribes in the conquest of China, and shared with them the amassed spoils. To prevent the remainder from pouring upon the Chinese territory, Kanghe stirred up domestic broils, and, when they had enfeebled each other, he conquered the unruly Kaldan and became the generous protector of the whole family by rendering them his obedient vassals. It was however a very difficult task to retain them in this subjection, and, to maintain a numerous army scattered amongst the immense steppes, was quite out of the question. The most powerful chiefs therefore received imperial princesses for their spouses, whose duty it always has been to act as spies upon their husbands, and who have a numerous retinue trained in all the arts of a crooked policy. They insinuate themselves so entirely that no word or action escapes their notice, without being duly reported to the Minister of foreign affairs at Peking. At stated times the chiefs appear at the capital to render homage to the Great Emperor, and are then dismissed with some presents Their children are often educated in one of the Peking colleges, and if they prove worthy of the care bestowed upon them they are advanced to high offices of state. The late prime minister was a Mougul. To tame, moreover, their warlike propensities, the Chinese government encourages the spread of Shamanism in that country, which, of all superstitions, is best calculated to enervate mind and body. The Dalai Lama with several of his inferior incarnate monsters, who reside in Mongolia, are in the pay and interest of the court at Peking, and exercise a paramount influence over the nation. The least hostilities shewn by any of the tribes, would be denounced as sacrilegious by these priests, and the bigoted people would never act against the dictates of this detestable hierarchy. Mongolia is thus quite in the grasp of Taou-kwang, and he will, as long as Russia does not obtain an ascendancy, maintain an uncontroled sway.

The Koreans have been repeatedly humbled by the Mantchoos, and consider this country as an integral part of the Great Empire, being grateful, that the Emperor permits them to be ruled by their native Princes and Government. The Mandarins have always treated the highest dignitaries of this nation with the utmost contempt. The Embassy which proceeds annually thrice to Peking, and more resembles a trading caravan than a diplomatic body, is used with studied neglect to render the superiority of the Celestial Empire still more apparent.

The tribes which inhabit the regions of Eastern Turkestan have been so much humbled by repeated defeat, and enfeebled by treachery of their own princes, that they are now trampled upon by the Chinese. In this part the Chinese have always acted as the agressors; at this very moment they are extending their dominions, and colonizing the districts more and more to the west; until they will come in contact with the Russian territory. That court is not ignorant of these proceedings, but only waits its time to strike a decisive blow.

The territories bordering to the East upon Sze-chuen, and known by the name of Se-fan, though inhabited by warlike mountain tribes, have nearly entirely been subdued by Chinese cunning; and thus a wide field for industrious emigrants has been opened. If no changes occur, Se-fan will very soon be a Chinese province, and the remainder of the aborigines will be confined to their inaccessible mountain fastnesses.

Tibet has lost all independence, the Chinese residents (Tachin) rule the whole country with an iron sway. Chinese emigrants become every year more numerous, the principal native trade is in their hands, and the helpless priest possesses a mere shadow of authority. Chinese influence is most palpably exerted in Nepaul and Bootan, though both countries vacillate between the Company and the Celestial Empire.

Ava has kept up its commercial relations with China until this very day, and reaped great benefits from the two caravans which arrive annually at Amarapura. Many Chinese have subsequently settled at that city, and become very wealthy merchants. The intercourse with this country and Yunnan is by no means under great restrictions, and both parties find it to their advantage to encourage traffic. Birmah has never wanted the favor of the great Emperor, but will, in the same degree as it discards British influence, cleave to China, its only prop.

The Northern Shan chiefs hold their authority from the Chinese local magistrates, and enjoy full liberty of carrying on commerce. Chinese emigrants have also here greatly extended encroachments, the territory of many mountain tribes has been incorporated with Yunnan, and it is not at all improbable, that China will soon border upon Assam, for nothing can resist the persevering industry of these settlers.

Cochinchina has happily maintained its independence and disdains to acknowledge the supremacy of Heaven's Son. Keenlung tried very much to establish his sway in Tunkin, but his army was routed, and nearly annihilated. Even the present peaceful monarch Taoukwang has repeatedly interfered with the international quarrels, but always proved unsuccessful in his endeavours. The trade between the two countries is carried on uninterruptedly, and no hostilities have lately taken place on either side.

Siam renders homage to China, in order to improve its commercial advantages, and to be permitted to trade to all ports. But besides an embassy as a mere matter of ceremony, every third year, no political relations exist, whilst its trade with this country is the most florishing of any in Asia. If this Government had a proper navy, it would be a very easy thing to take Siam, since the Chinese emigrants are far more numerous than the natives themselves; but there is not the least desire to extend the dominions of an already unwieldy empire in that direction.

Japan, once feared by China as a piratical power, has rendered its intercourse merely commercial. The Chinese most willingly submit there to all the indignities which a suspicious Government may impose, and the Celestial Empire purposely avoids all collision with this power.

Russia and Great Britain alone can possibly inspire any fear to the Chinese. The former has kept up a steady course of policy since the time of Peter the Great, both for its political as well as commercial interests. In various instances it has been utterly foiled, and made the dupe of Chinese cunning. But its power in this direction is progressive, the establishment at Peking forms a rallying point, it has disciplined hordes at its command, which are more than a match for the Mongols, and may fan the flame of discontent amongst the much injured Turkomans. If the war on the western frontiers is rekindled, the influence of Russia will no doubt act detrimental to the interests of the Chinese. The trade at Kiachta is at the same time on the increase, and it would be madness to forego these real advantages for the possession of some icefields or deserts.

Great Britain can only wish for purely commercial relations, which have hitherto so much redounded to its advantage. But, to ensure their continuance, it is necessary to have a permanent resident at Peking, and to approach the Government on terms of equality. This and a great many other problems must soon be solved, in the mean while there is every prospect, that British trade will increase notwithstanding all the disadvantages. We ought to take the Russians for our example, who, by adopting a steady line of conduct, finally obtained their end. There is nothing impracticable. China, if proper means are adopted, and the policy is adapted to the country with which we wish to extend our intercourse, and not shaped according to the diplomatic code of the west, will at last consent to an intercourse on a firmer basis than at present.

Piracy in the Straits.

The Steamer Diana returned into port yesterday afternoon from a cruize on the East Coast of the peninsula, which she was prosecuting in company with H. M. S Wolf, and having on board 30 prisoners captured in an encounter with the Illanoon pirates of Tringanu, of which the following are the particulars obtained by us.

On the morning of the 18th instant, between 8 and 9 o'clock, six large Illanoon prahus were observed from on board of the Wolf making for the Tringanu roadstead, in which she was then lying—but in nearing her, they bore up, and stood out towards a large Chinese junk in the offing. The operations of the prahus, as they closed on the Chinaman, were visible from the mast head of the Wolf, and they were seen to commence the attack with a desperate fire, which was vigorously answered from the Junk. The Sloop of War had immediately got under weigh, but had to work to windward; while her own armed boats, as well the gun-boats in company, were unfortunately absent, having been despatched the preceding day to the Redang Islands, in search of some Illanoons who had lately killed & wounded some people from Tringanu. About mid-day however the Steamer was descried to the northward, and Captain STANLEY with great promptitude dispatched his gig and jolly-boat with two officers, some seamen and marines well armed, to the Diana with orders for her to proceed in the direction of the junk. It was not until about half past 4 that the Steamer, with the party from the Wolf, came up with the pirates, who were then drawn up in line astern of the Junk, and fired upon the Diana as she approached. But they had now a different sort of enemy to deal with, and the Steamer, stopping her paddles as she came opposite each prahu, and being able to get her guns to bear with terrible effect, poured in a destructive fire, stretching the pirates in masses on on their decks. The headmost and largest prahu, however, maintained a fierce resistance, protracting the contest until half past 5 P. M. when she was boarded in a half sinking state, which afterwards rendered it necessary to cut her adrift from the Diana. The other five, favoured with a breeze, hoisted sail, and edged away to the southward, with the Steamer in chase and closing upon them, when darkness coming on enabled them to effect their escape, in which they were further assisted by the tempestuous weather which succeeded. But it is believed, from the shattered and disabled state to which they were reduced by the severity of the Diana's fire, that they would be under the necessity of abandoning several of their vessels, and embarking their diminished numbers in one or two of the least roughly handled. It was observed that in the pursuit scarce any of the prahus could muster more than two or three paddles a side. The prisoners we understand acknowledge to 350 men being on board of the six prahus of whom 90 were killed, 150 wounded, 30 being prisoners on board of the Diana, eight of whom are desperately wounded.

They openly acknowledge that they were pirates, commissioned by the Rajah of Sooloo to go and plunder on his account, and confess to having taken, during the three months they were out, three Malay boats laden with rice. One Chinese, a Siamese, and three or four Malays, were found on board of the prahu which was taken—captures made on the Coast, and each of them decorated with a rattan twisted collar to make them fast at night.

The prahus were from 50 to 56 feet long, well armed, each mounting a long four pounder, several gingals, besides muskets, spears &c.

Captain STANLEY we are informed expresses the highest satisfaction with the manner in which Capt Congalton proceeded to the execution of his orders, as well as with the conduct of the party from his own vessel, whom we are sorry that night prevented from striking a still more effectual blow—although the Illanoons are probably too much damaged to present themselves again on the coast for some time to come.

All must agree as to how much the circumstances of this affair prove the value of Steamers for pirate hunting —as, but for the timely appearance of the Diana, these marauders might not only have escaped unpunished, but have possibly accomplished the capture of the junk which they attacked, and which would have proved a valuable prize, as she was a large vessel, that had just left this with a full cargo for China. The pirates complained, we believe, that she was rather too high out of the water for them to board her.—Sing. Free Press 24th May.

By the Rajah Wallie, from Batavia 26th ult., which arrived during the week, we received the Java Courant of 25th—from which we learn that the British ship Tafalzar, Syms, from Canton, bound for Cork; and French ship Hovere and Guadaloupe, Maniglie, from Manila 30th March, bound for Bordeaux, passed Anjer on the 25th ult.

The following paragraph, translated from the Java Courant of 2nd. inst. has been handed to us for insertion by a subscriber :—

"The Commander of the Netherlands barque Sumatra, belonging to a house of business in Batavia, after having navigated her in safety to Amboina, died there, and in the beginning of March last the vessel proceeded to Manado, under the command of the first officer, JEREMIAS ELLIS.

Unfortunately he also died during this voyage—when it was found that there was no one on board able to conduct the vessel to her port of destination, or to any other safe harbour. In this distress, driving at the mercy of the waves, was the unfortunate vessel with thirty souls on board (in Lat. 13 44 S and Long. 112 4 E.) descried by George Coffen, commander of the English ship Pacific, who without regard to his own distination exerted himself to get the delivery of the Sumatra, from her dangerous situation, provided the crew with all manner of necessaries, put his first officer on board, and under convoy of his own ship fortunately brought her in safety to the roads of Banyuwangee on the 21st of April last. It is thus owing to the generous and humane conduct of this worthy seaman, GEORGE COFFEN, that we are beholden for the preservation of so many lives as well as the ship and her cargo. Every one will therefore, we are sure, render him their grateful thanks for this good deed, which we have thus briefly brought to their notice." Ibid.

Maulmain.

The last account from Rangoon, by the Steamer Ganges, reports all to be very quiet there, but it is said the new Viceroy contemplates some interference with the timber trade, by which he is likely to obtain the monopoly of it. This cannot prove very agreeable to our merchants settled at Rangoon, who, no doubt, will use strenuous efforts to prevent it.

The Viceroy is said to have felt very indignant at some muskets having been fired from the Ganges at 8 o'clock at night, considering it an insult to the dignity of his office. Of course, on making known his sentiments, the practice was not preserved in, and His Excellency's anger was appeased.

The Lonach and the Elizabeth were the only two vessels loading in the River, and it is now very seldom that more than two or three vessels are seen there at a time, affording a very poor contrast to the long list of shipping which appears weekly in this paper, as lying off Maulmain. There was a report, some time ago, that the King intended to allow the free export of rice from Rangoon, but we have heard nothing of late on the subject. If His Majesty desires to restore the former flourishing trade of this his principal sea port, he could not adopt a wiser measure than that of allowing his subjects freely to dispose of their produce—a measure which at the same time would confer an incalculable benefit on his country and ensure him the affections of his people. The objection to a free trade in rice, according to the Burmese, is the fear of too much being exported so as to cause a famine in the country. Certainly the price of grain would be much enhanced, but large sums of money would be thrown into the country and would soon be distributed among the people. These "Political Economy" maxims, however, simple as they appear to us, are incomprehensible to the Burmese.

We understand that about 700 bullocks loaded with stick lac have come down by the route to the Shan countries, west of the Salween, lately opened by Dr. Richardson, and that more are expected. A few ponies also accompanied them, and are for sale here. This promises well, but there are reports of disturbances in that direction, and it is said that the Burmese are about to attack the Red Kayens, through whose independent slip of country our people have access to the Shan States tributary to Ava, but the report requires confirmation. The Burmese have formerly often endeavored to subdue these people, but always without success. Their mountains and fastnesses offer too strong impediments to an invading army constituted like that of the Burmese. It would be hard to see these poor people brought under the Burmese yoke after the friendly disposition they have evinced towards us, but we suppose our good wishes for a continued successful resistance is all we can offer them.

Chronicle March 31. Penang Gazette, 5th May.

Bank of France.

From the Atlas, January 20.

France, which has hitherto been a very toler country in that respect, is likely soon to run a race with England and America in the esta lishment of a large paper circulation. The Bank of France takes the lead in it. Notice has been given that from the 20 January it will issue "notes to order" (billets a ordre), transferable or transmissible by endorsement, for any sum from 500 to 200,000 francs. Under the system hitherto acted on, the bank issued "notes to bearer" only of two amounts, 500 and 1,000 francs. The credit and the circulation of these in Paris and its immediate environs were considerable, but out of that circle they ceased to pass with the same facility and to be received as money. This was attributed mainly to the inconveniences attaching to their being payable to bearer only. Although convenient for payments from hand to hand in the same town, their remittance from one place to another was accompanied with some risk: the loss of a bank note being irreparable, people did not willingly either remit, send, or carry them from home. The new notes or bills to order will, it is presumed, obviate these disadvantages; they will be transmissible like any other commercial values by endorsement, and thus their use become so much the more general, as no other paper would offer the same guarantee for security and solidity. They are to serve, it seems, to balance the account of one town to another between merchants, and thus contribute to diminish the charges of commission or brokerage which bankers are in the habit of receiving for furnishing bills of exchange, or will supersede the necessity of the transport of specie, which is so frequent. The "bankers" here alluded to are not of the class here known as private and country bankers, but merely merchants, dealers, or manufacturers, who are in the habit in the course of their business of drawing or discounting bills. In France there are no private bankers, properly so called. How far this interference of the Bank of France with the business and profits of the money dealers may be popular, need not be inquired, but that it must be serious damage to the country dealers in bills of exchange cannot be doubted, for persons there having to remit to Paris, for example, or any where else, will naturally prefer to exchange their hard cash for bank bills rather than private bills or be induced to accept these latter only when offered at a much lower rate of premium or interest.

This, however, it is said, is only the first step in a more enlarged scheme of paper dealing proposed by the Bank of France. The "bills to order" appear at present designed only for the use of traders and merchants, but the ultimate object contemplated is to create a circulation for them as money in every part of France among the public at large. To effect this now, or at a period more or less remote, it is stated there is but one course to pursue which is to secure the payment of them at the will of the holders in all the large towns, which it would not be difficult to accomplish, now that banks being to be planted in the departments, with whom it would not be difficult to come to an understanding to that end in the commencement, until the Bank of France should feel the necessity of creating herself a certain number of "branch banks," and thus complete a system of credit which it is asserted, "is demanded by the interest of industry." It is acknowledged that to "popularize" the bank notes in France will not be the work of a day, and that to effectuate it the bank must for some time in the beginning make up its mind to some sacrifices, for which however, it is calculated it would be amply compensated by the profits which would result from the immense extension of the circulation of the paper money. "But even," say the advocates of this system, "were these profits not so important as supposed, the public would still have a right to claim such a service from the bank in return for the enormous privilege with which it is invested—that of coining." Arguments for the extension of such a paper and credit system as here described are of course drawn from the examples of England and the United States. Above all, reference is made to the late bank of the United States, where it was carried to the highest degree of perfection, whose notes were not only payable at all their own branches, but also at almost all the other banks of the union, whose notes were also received in return. Thus nothing was more easy than the remittance of any sum from one place to another; "thus the liquidation of the exchanges between all parts of the republic was operated in the most simple and economical manner." These prefects of the Bank of France, but more immediately that on the issue of "bank bills to order," first noted as actually in operation, would seem to have been not a little influenced by the Laffitte bank, the bank of Havre, and a few other joint stock banks established or intended in various parts of France The Société bank had already given notice, prior to the notice of the Bank of France, that from the 1st instant they would commence issuing "bank bills," bearing interest at the following rates:—

Bank bills payable three days after sight, at three per cent.; bills fifteen days after sight, at three and a half per cent.; bills twenty days after sight, at four per cent. The interest payable only to the day of the visa. The bills transferable by endorsement without recourse. Orders at any date continue to be furnished upon any town in the departments.

J. LAFFITTE & Co.

December 30th, 1837.

The distinction between these bills and those of the Bank of France is, it will be observed, that the former are payable after date and carry interest, while the latter are payable on demand, and bear no interest. It ought not to escape observation in this matter, that although, so far as the French writers generally are disposed to attribute the commercial prosperity of England and America to the paper and credit system, there are not wanting some who discern in it, and in the evident desire to draw closer the connexion between the Bank of France and the government, a deep laid scheme of state policy.—Times.

The New Law of Wills.

From the Times, January 6.

From and after this day every will, whether of real or personal property must be in writing, and be signed by the testator, or by some person in his presence, and by his direction. The signature of the testator must be made, or at least acknowleged, by him in the presence of two or more witnesses present at the same time, who must subscribe their names as witnesses to the execution of the will, in the presence of the testator, and of each other. As the Act does not require any particular form of attestation to be used, it seems that any words of sufficient import will answer the purpose. It may be further necessary to bear in mind that every will made in future will be revoked by the subsequent marriage of the party making it without the birth of a child supervening.

Chinese Affairs.

From the Calcutta Courier, March 31.

We have heard much speculation relative to the Admiral's going to China; but we believe that the proceeding is likely to end in nothing more than a little harmless and fruitless negotiation. In no one case have the Whigs shown so much folly and imbecility, as in that of their measures relative to China. When they had a good ground for at least adopting towards that country a high tone, a better excuse for giving, if not a just provocation to inflict a drubbing on the celestials, our Whig administration remained passive, and, to use a homely phrase, they tamely pocketed the affront put upon their own functionary for obeying their instructions; they not only allowed three years nearly to pass over without taking any steps to resent the insult offered to him or even to secure to the British trade a representative of the British nation at Canton, but after the lapse of all that time tacitly admitted that in their own opinion the original appointment as well as Lord Napier's proceedings had been wrong, by appointing in the person of Captain Elliott, a superintendent who avowed and acted on different principles. His conciliatory policy has failed; but the wily Chinese have now given a new turn to the dispute, and placed it on a ground which is quite impregnable. They have turned against us the Opium trade. They call upon us put a stop to it: they appeal to moral principles recognized by every civilized nation, against this iniquitous traffic: they will in all probability meet the Admiral in limine with this appeal. "Put down this stain on civilization, they will say, forbid your subjects to bring hither and force into our country a deleterious and demoralizing drug—do this and we will then negotiate with you on other matters." Now if they do make this appeal what answer is the Admiral to make, or what is he to do? We know not: but we believe, unless he is prepared to declare our Opium vessels liable to seizure, if they attempt to enter a China Port or approach the Chinese Coast, his wisest course will be to make his bow and retire in silence. If, after all, the Chinese should stop the trade with Europe on account of the Opium, what will the tea dealers and tea drinkers say to it? All England will be in a ferment, we suspect.—Harkaru.

CORRESPONDENCE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE CANTON PRESS.

Sir,—In the editorial remarks regarding the delivery of letters, in your paper of the 9th instant, I observe with much regret that you have inserted a series of misstatements, and as I am personally concerned in stating the true merits of the case, I beg you will publish this in your next paper.

The "Ardaseer" did not arrive as stated by you on the 27th may, on which date I had not even made the land, the above vessel arrived on the 29th and the letters were forwarded the following day, the 30th by the first favorable opportunity which offered. It is true the letter bag was put on board St. George, but very untrue that it was removed for the reason stated by you, viz., "that the letter bag should be delivered to the consignees of the ship." The reason for removal was as follows. After the mails had been put on board the St. George, it was found that letters for Macao had not been separated, and as it would only lead to inconvenience and delay sending them up to Canton. I (and not Capt. Parry) sent for the mails, and retained those letters for parties at Macao, to be forwarded direct to their address. In the meantime the St. George had quitted Hong-Kong, and as the Grampus was at the time getting under weigh for Canton, the mails were put on board of her, and but for the unfortunate accident which occurred to that Boat, would have arrived in Canton, by the first opportunity which presented itself after the arrival of the Ardaseer.

Where you obtained the information "that there had been an opportunity to forward them some days before" (i. e. between the 29th and 30th) I am at a loss to imagine, you will possibly be able to inform the public. On my arrival at Hong-Kong, I found that letters by the last America arrival, were waiting an opportunity for Canton, and were forwarded at the same time with the despatches of the Ardaseer, a circumstance not likely to have occurred, had any previous opportunity presented itself.

ALEXANDER Mc.INTYRE.
Commander of the Ardaseer,

TO THE EDITOR OF THE CANTON PRESS.

Sir,—I have read with surprise your lengthy paragraph of the 9th Ultimo regarding the Hospitalship at Whampoa in which you proceed to vindicate your former unfounded assertions, after my most decided denial of their correctness. I must therefore again plainly contradict them, and request you to furnish me at your earliest convenience with the name of the person by whose authority you have published the accusation regarding the delivery of Chests of Opium to a foreign boat.

I am Sir,
Yours,
HENRY HOLGATE.

CANTON PRESS.

Saturday, 16th June.

By the Rob Roy from Calcutta and Singapore, we have received the Singapore Free Press of 21th ult. and have made some extracts from it in their usual place. It will be seen that a serious action was fought with six Illanoon pirate prahus, and the steamboat Diana which we are glad to see has returned to the Straits. This action proves more than any thing the superior usefulness of steamboats in the suppression of piracy in the Straits, to that of sailing vessels, as, owing to calms, H. M. S. Wolf was obliged to remain a quiet looker on during the whole conflict, and it is more than probable that the pirates would have succeeded in carrying the Junk which made a very gallant defence, even under the eyes of the Wolf, but for the oportune arrival of the Diana. The conflict seems to have been very bloody on the part of the Pirates. The powers of an Admiralty court in Singapore will for the first time, we believe, be exerted in this case in judging the 30 prisoners, evidence against whom as they were taken in flagrante delicto, will not be wanting to convict them. It is much to be regretted that the other boats got off, favored by the night.

A Subaltern's Sick leave or "Rough Notes of a visit in search of health to China and the Cape of Good Hope." By Lieut Nicolas Poleon. Calcutta, G. H. Huttmann. 1837.

It is not often that mere books of travels without any scientific object, or published under the auspices of the Bengal Government, have issued from the Calcutta Press, and as such rara avis the book before us merits some attention, as shewing that the cacoëthes scribendi does persecute it's victims even to the banks of sacred Ganges, and to the shores of far Cathay. The writer, an officer of the Native Bengal Infantry, visited, and made a short stay in China, in the latter part of the year 1833, and seems to have spent his leisuretime in taking notes of what he saw and heard; it is not to be expected that his narrow opportunities could enable him to give much new information, and we accordingly find none that has not been given forty or fifty times before him, with the exception of an attempt at portraiture of the characters of such people as he saw here, and whose hospitality rendered his stay in China agreeable, adding anecdotes of some of them. Now, though we believe that it is the mention of these parties alone that will cause his volume to be read, people being every where desirous to know what is said of their friends or acquaintance, yet it appears to us a very questionable taste to make the popularity of any literary production rest upon such meretricious qualities, and to repay friendly hospitality by obtruding on the public the names of parties who received the writer into their society, nor can we understand why the writer should retain the mock modesty of merely giving initials of Christian and sirnames, and of the latter the last letter too; rendering them as intelligible as can be to any one acquainted with our community, as if they had been written entire.

We have not much space to devote to the notice of this volume, and said before that with exception of the personal notices, it teaches us nothing new, but here we were wrong, for our author tells us some startling novelties, of whose existence, we believe, no one ever was aware, f. i. "The priests of Budh inhabit monasteries, and in their dress, forms of worship, &c., ape the Roman Catholics. They are a despised and abject race, chiefly composed of those whose crimes have obliged them to take sanctuary in a Joss house, and cut off their pigtails or long queues, which act at once saves their lives but converts them into monks. Their time in their monasteries seems a round of eating, chanting, and gambling." As to the Buddhist priests aping the Roman Catholics, the charge is somewhat ridiculous—their forms of worship were established long before the Roman worship became partially known in this country, and the Jesuits, when first beginning the work of conversion in China, were struck with the great similarity between their respective dresses and ceremonies, and supposed this to be the work of the devil the more easily to delude his victims into the worship of Fuh. We are not aware that any malefactor in China, pursued by the law, can take sanctuary in a convent, and are much inclined to doubt it, as well as that a criminal, by the tonsure merely, becomes a monk. These monks are, the same as in catholic convents, admitted generally in early youth, and educated for their profession, and though, from their poverty, which is one of the conditions of their existence, but little regarded and even contemned by the mass of the people, individuals among them often enjoy considerable personal influence. As to the time in their monasteries being a round of eating, chanting, and gambling, we believe our author there also to be misinformed. The rules of these monastic fraternities are very severe and they are accordingly obliged to live an ascetic life. They must abstain from the use of flesh; their food is of the simplest vegetables, and intoxicating liquors they are denied; they live moreover a life of celibacy, and such exciting amusements as gambling are prohibited under severe personal punishment. No doubt they often transgress the rules of their brotherhood, but such transgressions are but the exceptions, not the rule. They are useless members of society, just as the monks were and still are in many parts of Europe; they beg, but they derive their chief incomes from the endowments of the houses, and from the sale of gilt paper, joss-sticks and other vehicles of superstition.

The second and last extract we shall make, refers to the selection of the different sorts of Teas, and runs as follows "Green Teas" are prepared in a somewhat similar way, (as the bl-ck.) The first picking of young soft leaves is the best, and styled "Hyson Skin" and "Young Hyson." The remainder is "Hyson." Besides these, the small buds of the plant are picked and these are called "Peko." The quantity of these buds mixed with other teas constitutes the quality of the Tea. "Peko" is a very superior flavored tea. The refuse of the green teas is "Congo." "Though no one will, in a son of Mars, expect much knowledge of the qualities of teas, yet why not rather be silent than shew his ignorance by writing such nonsense. On the page preceding our quotation we are told that Gunpowder and Imperial are the best of black teas—both happen to hold that rank among the green. But in the paragraph quoted, every thing said about every kind of tea-names is egregiously wrong. Hyson Skin is the coarsest of all green teas, whilst Young Hyson is better. Hyson, is among the best green teas, and that of which the price frequently equals and even exceeds those of Gunpowder and Imperial. The small buds of green tea are not called Peko, which quality every body knows to be a fine black tea, and so far is Congo from being the refuse of the green tea, that on the contrary all teas under that name are what is called black, and some of them much esteemed and at very high price both here and in England.

The shortness of the visit of the author alone can excuse such mistakes as here pointed out, and with the exception of a few similar, and with what we have already said on the impropriety of publishing the names and anecdotes of private individuals without their consent, we see nothing to blame or to praise in this small volume. It is one of the many publications of the day apparently without aim or object except it be the advocating a peaceable policy towards China, instead of the one much recommended at the time of his visit, of sending an armament, to force our friendship on them. However, should, in consequence of this ill treatment Lord Napier experienced, war be declared, he hopes that employment will be given to the Indian army to which he belongs. Such is the force of habit and education that men may be brought to desire to kill and to destroy, though in a cause by them considered unjust. The part of it relating to the Cape of Good Hope we have only glanced at, and shall not offer any observation upon.

LITERARY. We have been much pleased by a small publication we have seen a few days ago, being a translation or rather version into the popular chinese of a number of Aesop's and Phaedrus fables, and we understand that this publication is to be continued from time to time. The first portion is very favorably spoken of by such Chinese as have read it. It contains the following fables: The wolf and the lamb. The lion and the bear contending for the spoil. The goose that laid the golden eggs. The dog and the shadow. The lion and the ass hunting. The wolf and the crane. The country mouse and the townmouse. The countryman and the snake. The contention of the ass and the lion.

A second letter from Mr. Holgate has been received, which will be found in another column, and to which, at present, we have nothing further to reply, but that we have given, as desired, the name of our informant; we shall, on another day, no doubt, have to report the result of the investigation.

We also published a letter from Capt. MacIntyre of the Ardaseer contradicting some remarks we made on the delay in the delivery of the Ardaseer's letterbag. We are sorry to have been led into the mistake as to the day of that vessel's arrival; we did so from believing in the information given us, and were misled like many of our neighbours. Indeed so common was the belief of the earlier arrival of the vessel, that a letter was addressed by six firms, members of the Chamber of Commerce, to ask for a special meeting of the committee to investigate the cause of the delay, and in this letter the arrival is stated to have taken place even a day earlier. The special committee met, and it being resolved to enquire of Capt. MacIntyre the circumstances of the case, he sent to them the letter we now lay before our readers, which was, by the committee, circulated among the members of the Chamber. The letters were forwarded the day after arrival of the vessel, but, we believe, no one can contradict our statement, that on that same day some letters by that vessel, to one or two houses, were received in Canton, and, that such distinctions should at all be made, is what we quarrel with.

We have heard that some of the foreign pasture boats have lately been searched by Chinese officers on their way down the river, as well as anchored off Canton, at a time when they had no cargoes. The attempt to stop boats on their passage up, at the bogue, has also been made, but without success. The report of the expected arrival of the Admiral of the Bombay station is said to have caused some apprehension among the Chinese authorities, for which, we suppose, there are no good grounds, though in former visits, ships of war have been bad customers to them.

We have no doubt that the article from our correspondent on "the foreign relations of China" will be read with interest from the knowledge it displays of the nations living to the north and west of this Empire. British influence and enterprize has reached the nations immediate neighbours of China, and it is very probable that, ere long, it will become the point of contention between Bengal and China as to which of the two governments is to draw advantage of, or in other words, to protect, the weaker powers bordering on their possessions, and any light, therefore, thrown upon the political influence of the one, cannot fail to be received with attention from the other.

Chinese Repository for May.

ART. I. Intellectual character of the Chinese, with remarks on the course to be pursued in the acquisition and diffusion of knowledge for its improvement.

WHETHER the Chinese are to come within the range of modern improvement soon, or not till after the lapse of ages, depends in no small degree on the course pursued by foreigners. The people of this country believe, that the highest attainments, of which the human mind is capable, have been made by their own ancient kings. To the past, therefore, they look for whatever is excellent, both in precept and in practice. Some broken rays of pure light no doubt were communicated to the eastern patriarchs, having been transmitted from the great progenitors of our race though their immediate descendants. But all traditionary light was soon extinct; all correct ideas of Deity, and of man's origin and destiny, were soon lost; and the human mind groped in darkness. Thus alienated from their Maker, the source of all good, it may be the Chinese have advanced as far in improvement as the human intellect can go by its own light and by its own strength. Were the subject thoroughly investigated it might appear, that the people of this empire have been estimated too low by foreigners. Here, as everywhere else, there is a great diversity in both physical and mental structure. The proportions of the body, the form of the eye and the length of the arm, may differ widely, while the muscular strength and the power of action are equal. Taking them all in all, we suspect the Chinese will not, in natural endowments, suffer in comparison with the inhabitants of any other equal portion of globe. The impress of the Creator's hand is as clearly seen in the east as in the west—in the structure of the mind as in that of the body. And until further information is afforded us, we are disposed to admit and to maintain, that the Chinese are not naturally deficient in mental capacities, and that in useful attainments they have advanced as far as any people ever have gone or can go without the aid of divine revelation.

On this last point, perhaps some reserve should be made. Yet how far and in what the Chinese are inferior to the ancient Phœnicians, Greeks, Romans, and Egyptians, is a question we would rather propound, than discuss, at present. This country and its inhabitants are not, and never have been, well known by foreigners. Most of the works which have been written in European languages, about China and the Chinese, are full of erroneous statements. In geography, history, government, morals, religion, and indeed in almost every department of knowledge, they are woefully deficient or egregiously erroneous, both. This ignorance has resulted from a variety of causes. Foreigners have seldom enjoyed the means of acquiring an accurate acquaintance with the Chinese. And when opportunities have occurred, they have too frequently been neglected. Some of the Jesuits made extensive geographical surveys. These, if not the principal, are the most valuable records we have of this country. But in modern times, who has traveled over these provinces? Who has had extensive intercourse with their inhabitants? Who has read their books?—That the empire is of vast extent, its boundary stretching for thousands of miles, along the Russian frontier, round through Bokhara, Tibet, Tungking, to the China sea; that throughout all this wide domain the emperor is sole monarch, with his courts at the capital and his viceregents in all the provinces; that literary examinations are often held, and honors conferred for the encouragement of learning; that intercourse with foreign nations if grievously restricted by the government, while the people are passionately fond of commerce;—these, and many other facts of a general nature, are easily ascertained. But, if it be asked, Who defines the lines of demarkation on all these wide-spreading frontiers? By what tenure are the lands held by those who cultivate them? What are the qualities of the soil, and the modes of cultivation? What mineral treasures does the earth contain? What is the condition of the peasantry? How far is infanticide practiced? To what extent, and on what conditions, are human beings bought and sold? What is the extent, and the process, of education? What rank shall be given to the various writings of the Chinese? By what considerations, and in what way, are their minds most easily influenced? What are the prominent features of their intellectual character? If these, and a thousand other similar questions are asked and pressed, the proper answers cannot readily be obtained—if obtained at all—without reference to native authorities.

COMMERCIAL REMARKS.

IMPORTS.

COTTON MANUFACTURES.—White LONGCLOTHS, continue in good demand for the Junks, grey are rather dull. COTTON YARN. The better quality still enquired for, but the common description almost unsaleable at any price and stock very heavy.

WOOLLENS.—We have heard of no transactions among the dealers, but both LONGELLS, and SPANISH STRIPES, are reported to be declining. There are none now in first hands, and the stocks altogether are very short. The Logan, however, just arrived from London has a considerable quantity of LONGELLS, which may still further affect them. The quantity of SPANISH STRIPES, on hand is very small CAMBLETS, both English and Dutch rather dull again.

METALS.—IRON, in demand at our quotations, from the small stock; LEAD, rather declining.

STRAITS PRODUCE.—We hear of no sales of PEPPER, but it cannot be quoted higher than 7¼ @ 7½. RATTANS, and TIN, are supported, the supply being small. BETELNUT, no new yet come to market.

RICE.—There has been some heavy rain during the week, but not, it is said, sufficient to injure the crop, and RICE, therefore, keeps down.

SANDALWOOD —dull of sale; the best cannot be quoted higher than $20 @ 21.

COTTON.—No sales have yet been made. The dealers and country people must be quite bare of stocks, and the demand will no doubt be brisk, when they commence purchases, but perhaps at lower prices—as the Bombay ships will now be arriving daily. The Charles Forbes is in, and the Glenelg and Lowjee Family were spoken outside.

OPIUM.—There has been very little doing in the Bengal description during the week, and prices have rather declined with little demand, particularly for old Opium. There has been no further importation of Malwa, and the price is therefore supported. Sales at Whampoa have for the present nearly ceased, in consequence, we believe, of additional fees being required, but the deliveries to mandarin boats within the river are going on as freely as ever principally of Malwa. The deliveries at Lintin to the 8th were: Patna. old, 23; new, 29; Benares, old 9; new, 7; Malwa, 205½; Total, 273½ chests.

EXPORTS.

RAW SILK.—The whole that remained has been purchased. There were reports during the week that the first crop of Nankin Silk was short, but this requires confirmation, as we very much doubt whether sufficiently late advices could be received from the Silk country, and similar reports are spread every season regarding silk as well as tea and cotton. The exports to England including the Tapley's have hitherto been 4165 Piculs.

TEA.—Purchases to a considerable extent have been made in old Congous within the last few days, only low now remain, and of them an inconsiderable quantity. Some Chops of new Orange Pekoe have been brought down, and realized high prices, which we do not quote, the transactions not being sufficiently extensive to establish a market. The exports of this season, including the last Cargo by the Tapley, have been as follows: Congou, 164.8 3?; Caper, 5.040; Souchong, 7.360; Campoy, 217; Ankoy, 99?; Hongmuey, 2,759; Pekoe, 4,026; Orange Pekoe, 3,313; Hyson, 10,707; Young Hyson, 6,404; Hysonskin, 1,479; Twankay, 31,221; Gunpowder, 3,255; Imperial, 2171 Piculs; Total of black teas, 25,070,266 lbs; of green teas, 7,361,933; Grand Total 3?,433,200 lbs.

FREIGHT.—The Red Rover, we understand, has been chartered for London at £8, and freights must further decline, as, in addition to the expected arrivals, one or two country ships are offering.

ART. I. Intellectual character of the Chinese, with remarks on the course to be pursued in the acquisition and diffusion of knowledge for its improvement. Continued from our last; Chinese Repository for May.

Anxious as we are, and ever have been, that friendly intercourse be be opened and maintained with the Chinese, and that to all the inhabitants of the empire the 'glad tidings' be speedily proclaimed, we would not have the work undertaken without due preparation—such preparation as will lead to success; nor, when undertaken, would we have it prosecuted in a manner or by means, sure to end only in disappointment, disgrace, and ruin. One of the chief causes of failure in gaining access to the Chinese, in holding intercourse with them, and in exercising any good influence over them, has consisted hitherto in our ignorance of their chagcter. They are not made up entirely of peculiarities. When they see a thing to be good and useful to themselves, they know how to appreciate it, and are eager enough to obtain it. 'In modern times,' say they, 'there have come in from foreign countries three good things—vaccination, fire-engines, and a constant flow of rice.'* Many approaches to the Chinese have failed for want of proper regard to circumstances of time, place, and persons. There has been here, sometimes, not only a failure in 'suiting the action to the word, and the word to the action,' but both word and action have been wrong. And sometimes what was de facto good and well-intentioned on the part of the foreigner, has, through his own ignorance, proved nugatory: nay even worse; kindness has been regarded as hostility, and friendly attention deemed an outrage. There are a great many influences acting on the minds of this people, which lie almost beyond our observation, and of which we know little more than their mere existence. Hence it frequently happens that prejudices are excited, and are to be encountered, where we least intended or expected them.

We will not, at present, attempt to draw even an outline of the intellectual character of the Chinese. The task is too difficult, and our researches have hitherto been far too limitted, to allow us to do the subject justice. The mind of the Chinese—the manner in which it is disciplined, its habits of operation, and its results—need and ought to be carefully investigated. It is not, we are most fully persuaded, so much in intellectual power, or constancy of application, that the Chinese are deficient, as it is in their objects and their modes of study. For years the young student sins at nothing but mere words; and he acquires nothing else, and many of the studies which he has to pursue in riper years, neither yield him any fruit, nor direct him to any ends worthy of his attention.

What an able pen recently wrote of England previous to Bacon's time, is apposite here. "The ancient philosophy disdained to be useful, and was content to be stationary. It dealt largely in theories of moral perfection, which were so sublime that they never could be more than theories; in attempts to solve insolable enigmas; in exhortations to the attainment of unattainable frames of mind."—Just so it has been in China. "The wise man lives according to nature. Instead of attempting to add to the physical comforts of his species, he regrets that his lot was not cast in that golden age, when the human race had no protection against the cold but the skins of wild beasts—no screen from the sun but a cavern."—Perfectly Chinese. "In my own time," says Seneca, "there have been inventions of this sort,—transparent windows,—tubes for diffusing warmth equally throughout all parts as a building,—short hand, which has been carried to such perfection that the writer can keep pace with the most rapid speaker. But the inventing of such things is drudgery for the lowest slaves: philosophy lies deeper. It is not her office to teach men how to use their hands. The object of her lessons is to form the soul. Non est, inquam, instrumentorum ad usus accommoda opifex." Allowing to Seneca something for his more accurate notions of the soul, than can be ceded to the Chinese philosophers, he will find here his equals in vehement declamation against all kinds of useful invention. Wisdom with the Greek, and propriety with the Chinese, were all in all; while gross folly and improprieties were equally characteristic of both. Neither with the one nor the other were useful improvements encouraged. 'Instead of marching, they merely marked time. There was no want of ingenuity, of zeal of industry. There was every trace of intellectual cultivation except a harvest. There was plenty of ploughing, harrowing, reaping, thrashing. But the granaries contained only smut and stubble.'

Had the writer undertaken to describe the intellectual character and labors of the Chinese philosophers, he would not have drawn a picture very different from that we have quoted above. Some of the points of resemblance between Europeans and Chinese, prior to the reign of Elizabeth, are remarkable. "That disposition to admire whatever has been done, and to expect that nothing more will be done," is as strongly characteristic of this nation, nay even much more so, than it ever was of pagan Greece and Rome, or of Europe during the dark ages. "In the fifth century, Christianity had conquered paganism, and paganism had infected Christianity. The church was now victorious and corrupt. The rites of the Pantheon had passed into her worship: the subtleties of the academy into her creed. In an evil day, (says Bacon,) though with great pomp and solemnity, was the ill-starred alliance stricken between the old philosophy and the new faith. Questions widely different from those which had employed the listenings of Pyrrho and Carneades, but just as subtle, just as interminable, and just as unprofitable, exercised the minds of the lively and voluble Greeks. When learning began to revive in the west, similar trifles occupied the sharp and vigorous intellects of the schoolmen. There was another sowing of the wind, and another reaping of the whirlwind. The great work of improving the condition of the human race was still considered as unworthy of a man of learning. Those who undertook that task, if what they effected could be readily comprehended, were despised as mechanics; if not, they were in danger of being burned as conjurers."

All this, when applied to the farthest east, is perfectly true, even to this hour. The darkness which was broken up in the sixteenth century, when that bright galaxy of reformers rose in the western hemisphere, remains here thick and portentous as ever. 'Words, mere words, and nothing but words, have been all the fruit of all the toil, of all the most renowned sages,' not of sixty generations only, but of time immemorial. The days of this 'sterile fertility,' long ago numbered in the west, roll on here, and will continue until some light breaks in from a foreign source. Yet even the emperor is able to make his great ministers understand the word truth: so he has declared by imperial edict; and the declaration is true—and to a far greater extent than he intended or imagined it to be. The longlived dynasty of error holds an iron sceptre over all the many millions of this numerous people; while in themselves the power of resuscitation, and the disposition to break from thraldom, are wanting.

In Europe a variety of causes combined to hasten a change. Much was produced even by collisions of rival sovereignties. But, says the writer above quoted, "it is chiefly to the great reformation of religion that we owe the great reformation of philosophy," and—he might have added—the great improvements in all our civil and social institutions. So we are sure it will be in China. Thousands of causes may conspire to produce change; adverse servitude may drive men from one position to another; pride may be checked temporarily; the guilty may be removed in crowds by the sword of the executioner; still the desired improvements will be wanting, until great reformations are effected in religion. Commerce, government, diffusion of knowledge, the practice of medicine, and other acts of benevolence may, and no doubt will, effect great and good changes, and prepare the way for others still greater and better: for these useful purposes they are fitted, and ought to be employed. Providence will, no doubt, cause them to hasten the coming of better days. But the great existing evils cannot be removed, until the word of God is known and felt.

The all wise Maker of the human frame knows it well: he knows alike our physical and mental capabilities and our necessities. We cannot, therefore, reasonably suppose he would give a revelation of his will—unfolding a system of rules and precepts, good, complete, every way,—unless there was really need of such. It would be derogatory to the divine government to suppose, that its constitution can be set aside, in any of its parts, with impunity. Here now it is in no part recognised. Here truth is not understood. The Maker of heaven and earth is not known. His revelation is anathematized. His power is trampled on. His ordinances, his laws, his commands, are all unheeded. Consequently the understanding of man is darkened; conscience is seared; and cruelty, wrong, and outrage, are practiced in all the high places of the land; while sorrow and suffering are the common portion of the poor. Nothing but acknowledgement and cordial reception of Jehovah's truth—his revealed word, and the agency of his Spirit, can effect the reformation of China. We err if we imagine otherwise. The Giver of all good things has placed, and doubtless ever will place, great honor on his law and his gospel. They are our Magna Charta—any infinitely more, they are not merely a guide and protection through this wilderness, they are a passport to "a better country." Jehovah himself has declared, in the clearest terms, that his word shall stand, that neither kings nor the gates of hell shall prevail against it. He has declared in the plainest manner, that those who dishonor him, he will not hold guiltless. All history testifies that the neglect of laws, "holy, just, and good," lead inevitably to degradation: of this the ancient Hebrew commonwealth is full of confirmation, and so is modern Europe. Where the law and the gospel of the King of kings are honored, there are freedom, peace, happiness,—where they are not honored, misery and suffering abound. The ways of sin always lead to sorrow, shame, and death.

True philosophy, as well as true religion—which in fact is the best of all philosophy—requires that we maintain right views of the divine government, its nature and influence, in both the physical and intellectual world; otherwise we shall be liable to seek for improvement from inadequate causes. We are not to expect any where to acquire good without effort: gold, silver, and merchandize—honor, learning, and the comforts of life—and all such like things, must be toiled for ere they come. So with those which belong to the mind, the soul. It seems to be often forgotten, that the religion which is from heaven is profitable for all things—that it requires nothing but what is useful—that it forbids nothing but what is hurtful.

When the law and the gospel of God are elevated to their proper place in the moral code of the human family—when temperance, probity, good faith and true charity, come to have their due influence—when men learn to love their enemies, to do good to those who use them despitefully, and are as slow to inflict injury as they are unwilling to receive it—as anxious to make reparation as they are to seek it—more willing to suffer wrong than to give countenance to even the mere appearance of evil—in a word, when they become true philanthropists, Christians indeed,—then peace, order, and free intercourse of nations, with all the common blessings of life, will be enjoyed,—not perhaps in perfection, but in a measure worthy of the Christian name and of the dignity of man. Idolatry is pitiable; intemperance and incontinence are worse than brutal. To these, and to all their accompaniments, the ascendency of the gospel is death.

Truth is one. Human nature is one. Man has a common origin. But the circumstances of the human family vary almost infinitely; and the minds of men, like their bodies, diverge into endless variety. Power over mind, as well as over matter, is acquired by knowledge. Foreigners are without any great influence over the Chinese, because they have but little knowledge of their character. Even when in direct intercourse—carried on by conversation or by writing—embarrassments, growing out of ignorance, are constantly experienced. Honor, virtue, benevolence, justice, conscience, right and wrong, and a thousand other terms, actually mean very different things when used by different persons. Here creatures of the imagination, mere fancies, are called true doctrines, while the eternal truths of God are branded as falsehoods and lies! Why is this?

The whole circle of Chinese literature needs to be brought under review, in order to ascertain how far it may be used or otherwise. In this investigation it should always be borne in mind, that error is worthless or hurtful, and that the acquisition and extension of truth are ever salutary. A great contest is coming on here between truth and error. Luthers, and Bacons, and Howards, will soon be "in the high places of the field." The politician, the merchant, the scholar, each and all, as good practical men—as Christian philanthropists, have here great and powerful motives for action. No one can remain an idle spectator. The improvement of foreign relations with China, and the improvement of the Chinese, are inseparable; and both may be accelerated, retarded, or stopped entirely, according as foreigners shape the course of their conduct. In this point of view it is of great importance that we acquire extensive knowledge, not of the language and country merely, but of the people—not of their sinews, but of their minds. To the consideration of this subject we invite our readers, especially those who are resident here, and who have it in their power to aid in the desired researches and in giving a better impress to the multitudes around us. Hic labor, hoc opus est.

To bear some part in working out these improvements, the proprietors of the Repository undertook their publication. During six years which have now elapsed, the object has lost none of its importance, nor do they feel the weight of its claim on them to be less. On the contrary, they see it to be more. Accordingly, so far as they have opportunity, will continue their endeavors to promote the acquisition and diffusion of truth and knowledge. To those who have contributed to the pages of the work, they tender their best thanks, while they invite the continuance of such obliging favors. The number of correspondents has steadily increased from year to year, and their contributions have added much to the value of our pages. Two of the early contributors have ceased from their labors: we allude to Dr. Morrison, and to the Rev. Edwin Stevens, late seaman's chaplain here,—both able supporters of our work. To the son of Dr. Morrison the readers of the Repository are much indebted; especially for translations of many state papers, and for articles on the language, geography, and government, of this country. In future we shall be glad to have the articles bear the signatures of their respective authors, at least so far as they are willing their names should appear.

For the kind aid afforded in circulating the Repository, and for the many friendly notices of it in cotemporary journals, we owe much; and feel more anxious than ever that the work may prove worthy of such favors, and of the divine approbation.

The Sandwich Islands.

S. Island Gazette, April 7.

The editor of the Otaheite Gazette prints his paper entirely with his own hands, in a barn. Thinks he shall get along.

Boston Times, Sept. 15.

"Otaheite Gazette!" Will the Editor of the Times please inform his insulated, ignorant, interrogating cousin of Oahu, how long since the Otaheite Gazette was commenced; and how long since "barns" have been established at the Georgian and Society Islands? Or does the above quotation refer to the S. I. Gazette? If so we eschew the abominable accusation of having patience enough to pick up those little insipid fragments of metallic matter so useful in the formation of a newspaper. "Thinks he shall get along." This latter assertion we are pleased to echo. We hope we shall get along, and think so. The result of our endeavours is however a question before the public. If we do not get along at Oahu we may yet get up an Otaheite Gazette in a barn!

Genius and talent like ours cannot fail of being duly appreciated by the refined inhabitants of Otaheite.

Pigs. The way they kill pigs at Oahu is a sin. A rope is fastened to the extremity of the proboscis of the animal which is gradually wound around the said feature until the animal is lulled into an unmoving strangulation. A swinish monster is melting away in a death squeak, at this very moment, under our window. Dying pigs are hard articles when the printer is waiting for copy.

Gambier's Islands.

Original communication.

The natives of Gambier's Islands, like those of the other islands of the Pacific Ocean were formerly idolaters: At the time of the arrival of missionaries at their group they were devoted to their various degrading superstitions. They offered their choicest fish and fruit to their imaginary deities. The tables of their tutelary divinities were loaded with the produce of their islands, though their wives and children were often doomed to famish with hunger.

They had both civil and religious laws: The King was at the head of the civil department, and the High Priest governed the religious rites and ceremonies. The monarch had his Prime Minister, or guardian of power as is usual in civilized countries. The King also retined a chief architect, a carpenter, a thatcher, a cook, a steward, pages &c.

The principal Queen,—(all the King's wives were called Queens,)—and, her ladies of honour, and servant maids

The High Priest had, under him, his priests of different ranks; he always presided at the ceremonies performed in honour of the gods: He taught the priests of the different districts the manner of performing the religious rites,—he divinised the idols—he ordered new temples to be built,—and he made known the supposed will of the heathen gods to their heathen devotees.

The temples of Gambier' Islands were tolerably well built: They were large wooden houses, covered with the leaves of the rautara, the workmanship of these temples was beautiful: The idols were of wood, roughly carved into human shape, in parvi naturalibus; they were placed in the interior of the temples at an elevation of from three to four feet from the floor, and were fastened to posts: Before each of them was placed a table covered with an abundance of fish and fruit.

A number of festivals were observed by the people of the islands,—they were called ti rua and were celebrated in honour of Varua Kino,—(the evil spirit;)—at these ti rua gestures of the most ridiculous nature were practised; hideous motions of the mouth and horrid contortions of the bodies, serving to render them more like monsters than like human beings, were among the religious pranks of the natives.

Included with the reigning deities of Gambier's Islands were reckoned Curunga,—(the god of rain,)—and other gods; to these they seldom offered sacrifices, for they considered them good beings and feared no injury from them; Varua Kino, they trembled before, believing always his power to destroy their lives.

The ceremonials, in honour of the Gods, were modestly performed, while those practised before the shrines of varua kino were accompanied with the most indecent gesticulations: Some regard to decency was always preserved in the persons of the dancers in the praise of the good gods, but entire nudity was supposed to be the most acceptable to the evil spirits: The religious dances generally continued throughout three or four days.

The old ceremony of burying the dead at Gambier's was both curious and interesting. As soon as a native died the corpse was rolled in tapas, placed on a bench and carried to a temple in the centre of which it was placed; here the friends of the departed danced and mourned, giving vent to their sorrows in ugly grimaces: After a short time the priest entered the apartment with a bag filled with a sort of hard fruit; with this fruit he pelted the lifeless body, addressing words to it during the exercise of his mad nonsense; he continued his pelting and talking until the bag, in which he carried the fruit, was empty: The remains were then ordered to be removed from the temple and were generally placed upon a pile of wood prepared for them, or upon a rock in the sea; in some instances the bodies of the dead were depostid in holes in the mountains to be devoured by rats.

The ceremonies attendant upon the birth and minority of the King of Gambier's Islands merits description. As soon as the Queen became the mother of a male child,—ladies never reigned over the Gambier nation!) the infant was carried to the top of a mountain situated upon the large island of Mangereva; the royal babe was accompanied by a nurse, and a few domestics, who were destined to be his only companions until he arrived at the age of manhood: No person was ever permitted to visit or converse with the youthful monarch, except his attendants and the reigning King and Queen during the course of seventeen years; nor was any one allowed to speak even to his attendants during this time: The King and Queen frequently visited him. They pointed out to their child the beautiful valleys of his native land; they shew him the ocean, the islands, and the rocks surrounding the mountain upon which he stood; they counted the villages and hamlets before him—and told him that he would soon be monarch of all he saw: They repeated to him the names of the chiefs who governed the several districts and taught him to believe that all those chiefs were destined to be the creatures of his authority: Thus was nutured the pride of the Monarch of Mangareva.

Before their islands were visited by foreigners, the natives of the Gambier's fancied themselves the most powerful people in the world; if they even credited the existence of a few islands in the Ocean, they were supposed to be far inferior to their own, like Crescent Island and Lord Hood's Islands, to the sovereignty of which they laid claim. The Gambians discovered the last named islands about sixty years ago; Crescent Island was peopled by them: The Gambians being engaged in a civil war, drove the defeated party to sea; they drifted upon rafts, before the wind until they reached Crescent where they settled and with their descendents have lived to this day, subsisting chiefly upon fish.

Doctor Rouchouze the present Bishop at the Gambier's, visited these natives in 1836 with the intention of making arrangements for bringing them to the island at which he resides; they consented to come, and will be removed as soon as a vessel can be obtained for their conveyance.

It may be reasonable to suppose that the little group of islands about which we are writing has been peopled for a great length of time: The natives have not preserved the least traces of their origin in their legends and traditions: They enumerate sixty or seventy Kings, the names of which they repeat with wonderful facility: The name of the present Monarch is Maputeo, whose Christian appellation is Gregory Stanislaus.

We may not safely ascribe unlimited credit to their ancient traditions, although the antiquity of the nation is circumstantially attested by the existence of old monuments: There is a wall on one of the islands which must have been the work of man, and which bears the marks of extreme age; this wall is almost covered with earth; upon the top of it are trees, the origin of which cannot be accounted for; all the natives can say about these trees, is, that they have always seen them growing where they are, and that their ancestors have informed them that they too saw them there from their earliest recollection. There is a tree upon one of the Islands described by the natives as having formerly touched a neighbouring mountain; it is said to have advanced gradually towards the sea: Since the arrival of the missionaries, this tree does not appear to have moved: If it be one of the walking plants sometimes alluded to by naturalists, it is indeed a very large one.

According to Beechey, in the narrative of the Blossom's voyage "this group was discovered by the ship Duff, on a missionary voyage, in 1797, and named by Mr. Wilson, her commander, after Lord Gambier." They are in latitude, about 23 degrees south, and longitude 135 west of Greenwich. Capt. Beechey describes them particularly as they appeared on his visit, (in 1836,) to the group.

The population seems to have declined in late years: There are seven islands in the group all of which were formerly inhabited; two of them at present are without a population.

One of the natives told the Rev. Mr. Maigret.—(one of the missionaries,)—that about twenty-five years ago, the inhabitants were as thick as the trees of the forest, but that a great famine had taken away all the young children and the old people,—the strong and healthy of the population being alone able to survive the destroying influence of the calamity. It was asserted, that, at the time of the great famine, the bread fruit was blown from the trees before it was ripe, and the roots were destroyed in the ground, by the parching rays of the sun.

Since the visit of Capt. Beechy in H. M. Ship Blossom in 1835-6, the Gambiers have been seldom visited by foreigners; a few schooners engaged in the pearl fishery from the island of Tahiti have been among the majority of the vessels which have touched there.

Thus far we have imperfectly glanced at the history of this small but very interesting group; we have compiled our notes from such data as we have been able to obtain from some of our acquaintances to whom the past condition of the islands has been, for some time, a familiar subject. It is plainly obvious that the natives of this group were among the most savage and degraded of the South Sea islanders; the accounts of Captain Beechey's reception at the time of his visit, and his delineations of their conduct and character, as found in the history of his voyage in the Blossom, give a terse and comprehensive idea of the times as they were at the Gambiers thirteen years ago.

Idolatry was abolished at Akamaru on the sixteenth of April 1835; at Akena, another of the islands it was abolished on the twenty first of April.

The other islands followed the example of the above mentioned before the end of 1835.

We give the words of a gentleman who visited Gambiers on the twelfth of November 1836. The aspect of things, we may judge by the tenor of his observations seems to have been somewhat changed by the influence of the missionaries; if no real good has been done the Gambians by the introduction of Catholicity they have at least put on the outward deportment of Christians and good men, the internal working of the word of truth for the accomplishment of their future salvation is a matter of consideration which belongs more properly to the casuist than to the historian or daily observer.

Maulmain.

From the Maulmain Chronicle, of 14th April.

We are enabled to publish to-day a Statement of the Trade of this Port for the year 1837, which we have reason to believe is as complete and as accurate as circumstances will allow.

In order to exhibit at one view, the decided increase of our trade in 1837 over the preceding year, we place the totals to and from each Port in juxtaposition.

From this it will appear, that the Imports have increased nearly six lacs of Rupees, and the Exports two lacs and a half. Among the Imports, the increase is found chiefly under the head of Marine Stores, spirituous liquors, and articles of Europe and Burmese manufacture. Among the Exports, it is found in the staple productions of the country, rice and timber. Under the head of Imports, we may notice that five lacs of Rupees were received during the year into the Government Treasury, to which may be added, what does not appear in our statement, about half a lac of Rupees perhaps, brought up from the Mauritius for the purchase of cargoes of rice and timber. Under the head of Exports also, it would not, we think, be improper to include the estimated value of the vessels built and launched during the year; rough estimate.

	No.	Ton.	Estimated value.
Vessels launched	9	2,500	250,000
Ditto fitted for Sea			12,500
		Total	275,000

We are not aware that the mode in which our statements are drawn up requires any particular explanation. The words "sundries" may be perhaps thought too comprehensive, but we have divided it among articles of Europe, Indian, Chinese and Burmese produced of manufacture.

The following is a statement of the Imports into Maulmain from the neighbouring Shan States during 1837.

	No.	Value.
Elephants	68	13 600
Ponies	146	17,520
Buffaloes	99	990
Cows and Bullocks	3,430	45,000
Sundries		45,000
		81 610

Of the Exports to those States, we can procure no detailed statement. Little else, however, is taken to them from hence but piece goods, either Europe or native, the value of which may, perhaps, be estimated at about 60 000 Rupees.

Taking then into consideration the various items above alluded to, and which are not brought into our statement, we shall have the following as the amount of Imports and Exports for the year 1837.

Imports	Rs 20,22,275
Exports	,, 11,03,410

The following extract is from Bell's Messenger, of the 8th October:—SURVIVORS OF THE EXPEDITION OF LA PEROUSE. The Journal de la Marine et des Colonies, states, that an American captain named Megrell, has written to inform the Societie de Geographie that in the course of his voyages in the south seas, he had found two of the children of of a surgeon attached to the above expedition; and the Minister of Marine has desired to be furnished with every particular collected concerning them, together with the precise latitude and longitude of the Island in which they were found. — Sydney Monitor.

CANTON PRESS.

Saturday, 23rd June.

Arrivals during the week from Java, Bombay and Singapore, have put us in possession of the Sandwich Island Gazette to 7th April, of the Sydney Monitor to 7th February, of the Pinang Gazette of 12th and 19th May, and of the Singapore Free Press of 31st ultimo. From the first and last our readers will find some extracts. In the Sydney papers we find nothing but of local interest, which is likewise the case with the Pinang Gazette. We see from the Singapore paper that the Diana, Steamer, had left for Pinang to return with Sir William Norris, the Recorder, to be present at the trial of the 30 Pirates lately caught, as well as some others likewise taken by the Diana.

The Hing-tae Affairs.

Letter from the Hong merchants,

To MR. DENT,

A respectful communication. The proposal, we made, some time ago, to liquidate the foreign debts of the Hingtae hong in nine years not having met the entire approval of you gentlemen, we your younger brethren, now beg to propose to clear them off by eight and a half annual instalments to be paid regularly when due.

The first year to commence on the 4th day, of the 4th moon, of the 18th Year of Taou-kwang, corresponding to the 1st day, of the 5th moon, (1st May) of the English year 1838 and to end in the 19th year of Taou-kwang, or on the 30th day, of the 4th moon, (30th April) of the English year 1839: on which day the first instalment is to be paid.* The second instalment to be paid on the 30th April 1840: the third on 30th April 1841: the fourth on 30th April 1842: the fifth on 30th April 1843; the sixth on 30th April 1844: the seventh on 30th April 1835: the 8th on 30th April 1846: and the half and last instalment on the 1st November 1846.

The foreign debts will thus all be settled between the years 1838 and 1846; or in 8 years (Quaere 8?) Should our benevolent elder brethren, after due consideration, accept our proposal, they will please write us to that effect, as soon as possible; that we may petition for the sanction of Government.

It is for this purpose we write, and with compliments remain, &c.

(Signed by 11 Hong merchants.)

Taou-kwang, 18th year, 4th (Intercaly) moon, 25th day. June 15th 1838.

The above is the translation of a letter from the Hong-merchants to Hing-tae's creditors, offering, as will be seen, to pay in annual instalments, during eight years and a half the debts of the Hingtae-hong. This offer, though it sounds a little better than the one made before, is literally the same as that made formerly of paying within 9 years, more than half a year having now elapsed since that offer was made. It comes to be in fact a payment made within ten years, as the last instalment will be due in November 1846, whilst Hing-tae first declared his insolvency in November 1836. We do not hear that any meeting of the creditors has yet taken place to take this new offer into consideration, but we much fear that better terms will not be attainable, and that it will perhaps be the best for the interest of the claimants to close with this proposal, however heavy the loss to which it subjects them. The greatest difficulty in the settlement will be, how to obtain due guarantee for the regular payment of the instalments, and none better, we presume, will be available than the joint signatures of the different Hong-merchants, as likewise the imperial sanction to the arrangement, which, we suppose, it will be necessary for the Hong-merchants to obtain. The funds to enable the Hong-merchants to pay the instalments will be raised, as we stated on a former occasion, by levying a duty on the foreign trade, a practice which has long prevailed under similar circumstances, and the tax, though at present no old debts are being paid off, is still levied under the name of the Consu-tax, the proceeds of which it is now generally understood, are expended for the necessities of the Co-hong, such as presents to the Emperor and his court, to the Vice-roy, Hoppo, Fuhyuen, and the numerous other provincial officers who look upon the Co-hong as as a milch-cow especially their own. This tax is now to be encreased sufficiently to admit of Hing-tae's creditors receiving their annual instalments out of it, but, in what proportion and how much on each article, has not yet been definitively settled, though the merchants have often met in Consu about it. The chief part of it will necessarily fall on the two principal exports, Tea and Silk, and Cotton will probably also have to bear it's share, though it is believed that imports will be burthened with less of it in proportion than exports, and the tax will ultimately fall on the consumers of them in Europe and America. Such an arrangement certainly appears unjust, nor will we defend it, but, if the tax were levied on imports, we believe that the trade would suffer more than it is now likely to do, since heavy duties on Cotton manufactures, and on the raw material would necessarily enable the Chinese the more effectually to compete with their own produce and manufactures, and thus considerably reduce the sale of the foreign. Besides, the duties on Cotton manufactures are already considerable, and those on Woollens very heavy indeed, and any considerable increase would drive them entirely out of the market, or the importer must resort to smuggling. As soon as we obtain the new tariff we shall lay it before our readers. The mode in which the tax is now collected is different from what it has hitherto been, since now Hong-merchants are obliged to pay it, cash down, at the time of shipping or receiving goods, instead of, as formerly, being merely debited with the amount, and pay ing at the end of the year their quota for the necessities of the corporation in proportion to the extent of their business respectively. The present system is much more satisfactory, and should it be persevered in, there is every probability that the Hingtae instalments, as well as those which the Hong merchants will probably be induced to pay for the King-qua hong, will be regularly paid. The arrangements for the latter hong will, it is supposed, be of a private nature, to which the Imperial consent will not be asked, since, to do so, would require the formality of breaking the Hong, and this would probably draw upon it's present head, a man much respected undeserved punishment and even banishment, without the creditors reaping the slightest advantage therefrom. We hear that this hong has petitioned the Imperial Government to grant time for the payment of the heavy arrears of duties it owes, to the amount, as stated by the Hong merchants some time ago, of 300,000 Taels.

* In the original, the beginning and ending of each of the succeeding years is indicated in the same manner as above; but for the sake of brevity, the result, only, is here given.

(TRANSLATOR.)

With reference to a letter from Mr. Holgate, the surgeon of the Hospital Ship at Whampoa, published by us last week, to which we then were not able to make an answer, owing to the necessary enquiries not having then been made, we have now to state that Mr. Holgate has furnished us with the replies from the parties accused of having received Opium from the Hospital ship, in which the truth of the charge is most unequivocally denied, they stating that they never received, or had on board the Hospital ship, any Opium. To give this explanation we owe to Mr. Holgate whom we accused upon evidence we, or rather our informant, have failed to substantiate. We owe it however to ourselves to state the nature of the information upon which we acted, and which deceived us. It was a statement made by a person engaged in the Whampoa trade, that a certain quantity of Opium had been received from on board the Hospital ship into the schooner Coral and that he could prove this by the Coral's books; this statement was made by this party in presence of others, and we now can produce three witnesses who heard it, and shall be able to bring more evidence so soon as we can obtain it from Macao as to the statement on which we relied having been made. Mr. Holgate applied by letter to this party, and received in answer the following which we extract: "In answer to your note of this morning, I beg to state that in regard to what is stated relative to Capt. —— (Commander of the Coral) is totally false.", thus convicting himself, nor does this note deny that it's writer had made the statement in question, but only denounces it as false. We refrain from publishing the name of this party, though we should be justified in so doing.

On Sunday last thirty five criminals were executed in the usual place, and we are informed that to morrow week 60 more will be decapitated. We have not been able to obtain information that can be relied on, as to the crimes of these miserable victims of the severe laws of China, nor what caused them to be beheaded at this time of the year; the custom in China being for the Emperor to send his confirmation of such sentences as have been pronounced by the judges during the year, in autumn, when the regular executions take place. It is said by some that several of these culprits were guilty of piracy; we do not hear that any were accused of dealing in, or smuggling of, Opium.

A foreign passage boat was seized by the Mandarins about a week ago laden with Sandalwood. She has been anchored close to How-qua's packing house and continues in possession of the Mandarins.

Society for the Diffusion of Useful Knowledge in China. — This society was established in March 1836—it's name sufficiently indicates its objects, and we have now before us its second and third reports from which it appears that if not much has been actually accomplished, a good deal is in preparation which cannot fail to prove useful to the Chinese for whose improvement the society has been instituted. The chief object of attention of the society is given to the publication, in a cheap form, plain and easy treatises in the Chinese language, on such branches of useful knowledge as are suited to the existing state and condition of the Empire. We have no doubt that such publications, if properly selected, will find eager readers among the Chinese, and we, in fact, know among our acquaintance among the Chinese several who have read with attention, and as they declared to us, with much satisfaction, some of the numbers of a Chinese magazine now jointly edited, under the sanction of the Society, by Mr. Gutzlaff and Mr. Morrison, and among the subjects on which it treats, we find the following. On German universities and academies; History of ancient Egypt: Geography of the Presidency of Bombay; Astronomy; means of restoring the drowned, when apparently dead; United States, their discovery &c; Natural history; history of the jews; Geography of India; maritime discoveries; description of diving bell, with a plate; Geography and history of Prussia; volcanoes; limited knowledge of the Chinese; history of Europe; moral precepts; expeditions to the north-pole; relation of shipwrecked Chinese saved by foreigners; charity and benevolence; Napoleon; Portugal; surface of the moon; suspension bridges; Russia, it's history and statistics; the Phonicians; France, its history and statistics; and many other subjects. This publication is industriously distributed among the Chinese not only in China, but in Singapore, Malacca, Pinang and Siam, wherever Chinese are settled. Besides this Magazine, Mr. Gutzlaff intends publishing in Chinese, in three volumes, "a brief Geo of General History; Mr. Bridgman has in a state of forwardness, likewise in the Chinese language "A brief History of the of United States" in two volumes. A history of the Jews is also in preparation.

The following are the subjects regarding which the society proposes principally to publish in Chinese, viz:

History, including Biography,
Geography, including travels,
Natural history,
Medicine,
Mechanics, and Mechanical arts,
Natural Phylosophy,
Natural Theology,
Belles lettres;

in any one of which departments, whoever knows the Chinese or their literature, will probably agree that they have much to learn. Hitherto however the Chinese langua,e has found so very few students among foreigners, partly owing to it's very, and partly to the exaggerated difficulty of its acquisition, that the few who have acquired it have generally too much upon their hands to be able to devote as much of their time as is desirable they should to the objects of the society; we have however shewn above that they have by no means been idle and we hope that in a short time we shall also enlist the talent of the several savants in Europe, who have made the Chinese language their study, in favor of the Society, and that they will now and then contribute some articles, as well as the missionaries in Java and the Straits, many of whom are counted amongst the most able Chinese scholars, and are corresponding members of this society.

In contrasting however the objects and utility of the Society with its present means, we are sorry to find that the support it has found from the Public is by no means commensurate, and though its expenses have hitherto been on the most moderate scale, the publication of the books mentioned above is very likely to reduce the finances to a low ebb, so much so that we believe it to be contemplated by the Committee to ask for new subscriptions from the members of this community, in which we hope, nay, are pretty certain, that they will be successful, we being convinced that all our neighbours will be willing to give the necessary pecuniary support to an institution which promises considerably to ameliorate the moral and social condition of the Chinese.

We find the following in Marco Polo's travels, who, speaking of the munificence of Kubley Khan, the first Tartar Emperor of the whole of China proper, including the provinces to the south of the Yellow river, which had before his time effectually resisted his predecessors, says:

"You must understand that the Tartars, according to their ancient customs, bestowed no alms, but rather upbraided those that were in necessity as hated of God; but the idolaters, especially the Backsi have propounded it as a good work, acceptable unto God, and have taught him (the great Khan) to be thus bountiful (alluding to storing rice towards times of scarcity) so that in his court bread is never denied to any who ask it, and there is no day in which there is not given away twenty thousand crowns in rice, millet, and Panike; whence he is esteemed as a God by his subjects."

Obituary.

DIED at Bankok, Siam, March 28th, of cholera, after an illness of only 12 hours, Mrs. EZRA G. JONES the beloved consort of the Revd. JONAS TAYLOR JONES, of the American Baptist Mission. She had long been a pious, exemplary, intelligent and useful Christian; and although her warning of evident dissolution was short, yet her end was happy, and she manifested to the last that the principle of our holy Religion had taken deep and powerful hold upon her heart. The peace that surrounded her expiring moments originated not in the slightest degree from the stupor of disease, but was the legitimate result of the presense of God and a well grounded hope of immortality through the merits of the Redeemer of mankind.

COMMERCIAL REMARKS.

IMPORTS.

COTTON MANUFACTURES.—There is no material change, either in the price or demand for LONGCLOTHS, being without the further expected arrivals. COTTON YARN, the price of good quality of yarn has hardly been maintained, from the heavy pressure on the market of so much of inferior quality; the latter description is very difficult of sale even at very low prices.

WOOLLENS.—Purchasers of BROADCLOTH hold back, but the importations by the Logan being small, we do not think that holders are likely to submit to any reduction. LONGELLS, must be quoted at least ½ of a dollar less, without sales being practicable at that rate even. CAMBLETS, have also declined, particularly the Dutch,—of English there do not appear any of the Logan's imports.

METALS.—LEAD has declined about ½ of a dollar per Picul. IRON, maintains its price, there being no further supply.

STRAITS PRODUCE.—No further supply of BETELNUT or TIN, and prices remain the same; PEPPER, is still lower; RATTANS, in demand.

RICE,—The crop reported abundant and prices therefore keep down.

COTTON. —No transactions yet and our quotations must be considered quite nominal,—but we understand the points in dispute between the Hong merchants and dealers, as to terms of sale, were settled yesterday, and business will therefore now, it is expected, be resumed with briskness, as the dealers must be quite clear of stocks. The floods, however, which are now prevailing to a moderate extent, may retard operations for a time.

OPIUM.—The demand for Malwa continues brisk for the river, and the supply of the Junks, and the price is firmer from the Bombay ships keeping out. The new Bengal drug is without improvement in price, although within this day or two there have been more enquiries. In the old nothing doing, nor in Turkey. Deliveries at Lintin to the 15th were: Patna, old, 37, new, 124; Benares, old, 29, new 20; Malwa, 349½; Total, 559½ Chests.

EXPORTS.

TEA.—Prices remain as before, purchases of low Souchongs to a considerable extent have been made, but we are not aware whether for England or America. Our statement of exports on the other side does not include the cargo of the Elizabeth despatched for Liverpool yesterday.

RAW SILK.—No further arrivals from the interior, and none remaining in the market, we believe, unsold. The first crop is still reported as likely to prove short, but these reports cannot, as yet, be relied on.

FREIGHT.—We understand a ship has been freighted for London, during the week, at 7 £ per ton.

Gambier's Islands.

From the Sandwich Island Gazette.

We herewith append the extract from the private notes of the gentleman alluded to.

"Mide Gambier's Islands on the 12th Nov. 1836 stood off and on;—after making signals for a pilot saw several natives on the reef, but none of them appeared inclined to come off to us; it was growing dark;—not knowing the entrance to the harbor, we kept in sight of land all night,

13th. Kept away for the land. Capt. got the boat out and pulled towards the reef where we observed a number of natives,—(having previously armed himself and his boat's crew,) in hopes of getting one of them to shew us the way into the harbour.—By making signs, we gave one of them to understand what we wanted;—he came off with the Captain to pilot us in. This native was a diver, and is employed by the Captain of a Chilian vessel now in port to dive in the lagoon for Pearl shells, an article in great abundance at this place. The Captain offered him some rum; when he smelled it he exclaimed "Ata maitai,"—(not good,)—and returned it without even tasting it;—we then offered him some bread for which he appeared very thankful; before he ate any of it, he blessed the Lord in a short prayer and crossed himself after the manner of the Catholics! We were surprised at seeing this, as, (although we knew there were Catholic priests on the Islands,) we had no idea that in so short a time, (since 1834,) the meanest of them were instructed to thank their Creator for every blessing received.

14th. I went on shore, and was introduced by Monsieur M. to the Bishop of these Islands; this gentleman treated us very kindly, and assured us he would be extremely happy to be of service to us, for which we thanked him, we told him of an accident which had happened to the vessel at sea, that she had carried away her bulwarks &c., upon which he immediately despatched a carpenter to repair the damages. I returned on board to supper,—having accepted an invitation to dine with the missionaries tomorrow.

15th. Went on shore to dinner, per invitation of the Bishop yesterday; called on him at his house, which is a neat and comfortable one story building near the water side, built of stone;—after partaking of some refreshments, he gave me an account of the state of the Islands. It appears that the first Catholic missionaries, Messrs. Caret & Laval, arrived here in the Am. Sch. Peruvian on the 7th August 1834;—the natives were then in a most savage and degraded state and were cannibals;—the missionaries, (through the medium of an interpreter,) made known to the King and chiefs the object of their mission, their reception, as might have been expected, was not very inviting or encouraging; but their mild and benevolent manner soon obtained for them the affection and good will of many of those innocent creatures. They, in a short time, acquired a sufficient knowledge of the language to enable them to converse with the natives, and to impart to them some knowledge of the true religion. The number of their pupils increased every day, and they were convinced by the instruction they received that true religion did not deprive man of liberty, but that it was established by his Creator to instruct him in the use he should make of that liberty, in order to make him happy during life, and to secure to himself an eternity of happiness in Heaven. The natives flocked in from all directions, without compulsion, to hear the missionaries. They were captivated with the beauties of their doctrines; they plainly saw the absurdities and impieties of their own forms of worship, they no longer offered to their imaginary deities human sacrifices; human flesh was no more to be the food of their priests or themselves. They were soon convinced that they were to do unto others as they wished others should do to them; hence murder, theft, and other crimes too horrid to the mentioned, were entirely abandoned, so that at present there is not to be seen the least vestige of those crimes on these Islands. Crime being banished, the missionaries turned their minds to the amelioration of the condition of the natives. They were cheered in the commencement of 1835 by the arrival of His Lordship the Right Rev. Dr. Rouchouze, who was accompanied by two other missionaries, and two mechanics, (an architect and a painter,) the latter were immediately employed in the instruction of the natives, many of whom acquire habits of industry in a short time. The Bishop distributed cloths to them on this arrival, so that at present there is scarcely any one to be seen naked on the entire group, except those who are employed in boats or diving for Pearl shells. They are all converted to the Catholic faith, and in making them christians, the missionaries have exerted themselves to add to their temporal happiness, as well as to point out to them the means of providing eternal welfare!! The natives are employed in cultivating the sugar cane, cotton tree vegets bles &c., &c. The The missionaries brought with them some domestic animals, these are daily increasing.

Goats and sheep are numerous on the mountains,—they also brought seeds from Europe, which they are cultivating. Their gardens are in a flourishing condition.

Honesty is a principal feature with the whole of the natives. I was told by the Capt. of the Chilian Brig in port that he has left articles in the most careless manner about his vessel while it has been crowded with natives and he said he had never missed the most trifling thing.

15th. Got under weigh and stood for the opposite Island where we landed four of the priests;—here the King sent us off presents of Bread fruit—Cocoanuts—Fowls &c., &c., we received every attention from the Bishop, who supplied us at a great deal of trouble with wood, water &c., and for which we are under many obligations as he would receive no remuneration for the same.

The name and title of the Bishop at Gambier's is the "Right Reverend Stephen Rouchouse;—Bishop of Nilopolis in partibus and Vicar apostolic of the Eastern Oceania." It is impossible, in a brief description like this, to picture all the prominent points of contrast between the past and present condition of this group of Islands; a volume would hardly contain all that might be said regarding the great changes which have been brought about, with a suddenness the most surprising, in the condition of the Gambians, enough has been noticed, however, to prove that a good beginning has been made to advance the islanders upon the road of improvement. Is it plain that idolatry has given way to christianity; far at present there is not a single idolater upon the islands,—(except indeed the Catholics, are stamped as idolaters!—Yet there is not a single punishment appointed by either the King or the missionaries for the prevention of idol worship; what is more singular, no civil law exists for the suppression of fornication, theft or other offences; the influence of the precepts inculcated by the priests has the effect to preserve the public morals and to ensure the welfare of this happy little community. The condition of the Gambians strikingly corresponds with that of the inhabitants of Pitcairns before the interference of designing men began to mar their happiness. The missionaries do not prohibit the use of tobacco, nor ardent spirits; intemperance is discouraged by them.

The ancient method of disposing of the dead has been superceded by the establishment of beautiful cemeteries, which are enclosed by a fence. We have taken parts to inquire upon every point concerning the population of Gambier's Islands and the result of the missionary enterprise at that group; so far as we can ascertain, there has been a most encouraging and happy change effected by the influence to the Catholic missionaries.*

* The account here given of the salutary effect the catholic missionary labors have had at Gambiers Islands, appears too favorable to deserve full faith, indeed, throughout this description, the desire of the writer to raise the Catholic missionaries at the expense of those of the protestant persuasion, is evident, and his violence in the concluding part of his paper (which we do not give) tempts us to doubt his integrity. Ed. C. P.

The poor in China.

In China, sudden and unforeseen calamities, such as river breaking its embankment, fire destroying a village, and the like, often reduce a whole kindred to a state of extreme poverty, and oblige them to beg, for which they have a public licence. In all other cases where disease is not the cause of pauperism, it seems to be the practice in China, for the able part of the family to support their poor or reduced relatives.

The remaining classes of paupers are such as are diseased. These may be divided into two large classes, viz, the clean and the unclean; the first class comprehends: 1st, the blind; 2d, the lame; 3d. the deaf and dumb. The unclean class consists of lepers.

The number of blind poor in China is astonishingly great. I have not been able to ascertain any thing even like an approximation of the exact proportion to that of the whole population. The best informed appear not to know, or perhaps they are unwilling to tell; for they generally say, that they came from another part of the country, &c. Some of them learn to perform on musical instruments and to recite tales, for which they receive payment, and therefore may be considered as subsisting by their industry; but a great proportion of them go about as common beggars, frequently in companies of 10 or 12, in which case they are attended by a guide; more generally two or three go together and guide themselves along by means of long sticks by which they seem to feel the way.

The blind and lame sit in the streets and highways, and implore the charity of the compassionate. Leprosy is a dreadful calamity in China. It dooms the wretched sufferer, even should he recover, to remain for ever after, an outcast from his relatives. This class is exceedingly numerous and crowds the streets and highways. They are seen in considerable numbers near the residence of Europeans at Canton. A cold winter night is usually destructive to many of these miserable beings; they might easily be restored to health, yet in the superstitious nation of the Chinese, the restoration of such to health, does not restore them to any of the comforts of social intercourse, not even to work.

In Canton and other large towns, establishments exist for supplying the destitute, aged, blind, lame, &c. with maintenance.

No division similar to our Parishes exists in China; nor indeed any other, unless for Police regulations, and these have not connected with them any establishment for the support of the poor.

Their places of religious worship are made, occasionally, merely the place from which alms are distributed, and we have reason to suppose, more from ostentation than true charitable motives. The Mandarins of the district sometimes also distribute from their temples, the allowance to the destitute, aged, blind, &c. but no charitable fund seems ever to be connected with any of their temples, considered as a religious establishment; yet it seems to be a sentiment pretty universally diffused that charitable deeds are pleasing to heaven, and that they may deprecate impending wrath. Accordingly, on certain days charitable donations are made of money, more frequently of rice. In a country where the necessaries of life are generally very cheap, and where a little rice, a little pork, or fish and vegetables, enable the poor to make even a comfortable meal, it will be readily understood, that the condition of the poor is far from bad. Even the leper seems from the nature of his infirmity, to obtain supplies of food with facility, and he seems to bow to his hard fate with a degree of resignation.

These remarks apply perhaps generally to the southern or warmer provinces of China. In the northern division, where rice is not cultivated, and where, the winters are severe, the poor suffer much greater hardships. In proof of this it may be stated, that the northern beggars often find their way even to Macao. Extract from a letter by Doctor Livingstone. Into Chinese Gleaner.

The trade of the Mauritius.

We have been favored by the kindness of a friend with a summary of the trade of the Mauritius for the year 1837, which contains many particulars of interest to our mercantile readers. The total value of the imports for this period was £1,035,183, of which £993,988 came on British and £41,785 on French bottoms. The Exports, including £77,199 of imports re-exported, were £831,050, of which sugar formed almost the whole—viz. £739,972 or lbs. 68,478,874. Of this Great Britain took lbs. 57,132,448; New South Wales lbs. 7,585,197, and the Cape of Good Hope lbs. 3,926,703. A small quantity was sent to Batavia.

434 British vessels representing 93,551 tons, and 65 Foreign representing 16,494 entered inwards, and 442 B. vessels and 41 foreign cleared out.

The imports consisted of lbs. 54,604,681 of rice and lbs. 4,974,360 of wheat from British India. Madagascar supplies only 1,338,393 lbs. of rice. We furnish also 5,498,664 lbs. of grain and 2,087,820 lbs. of oats. Great Britain sends £109,984 of Cotton manufactures and other articles making a total of £345,744. France only retains a trade of the value of £122,653 of imports and £6,485 of exports in her old Colony.—Hurkaru, April 27.

Pirates in Singapore.

From the Singapore Free Press, May 31.

The captive pirates brought in by the Diana appear to be at present the reigning object of curiosity in the settlement; and among others of the jingan we went to have our look at the new fish. There is certainly nothing either formidable or very ferocious in the appearance of these savages; and with one or two exceptions they are about as miserable a looking crew as we ever beheld—some half dozen of them being mere boys. In the attack of the Steamer they lost, we believe, by their own account, nearly all their best fighting men; the others being reserved for the less honorable occupation of pulling the oar, cooking &c., and this may account for the inferior display of physical vigour presented by the survivors. It is impossible to suppose that lads so very young as several of them are, would voluntarily embark in a course of blood and plunder, and associate themselves with a set of ruffians to be tyrannised over at the ferocious will of their masters—for it is easy to conceive that their situation was one of the most complete bondage. Accordingly, the story which all these boys tell, is that they were carried off by violence from their own homes, and compelled to serve on board the pirates. Many of the men among them indeed give the same account of themselves—but whether true or false, there is not of course the same moral improbability against their voluntary connection with piracy, as exist in the case of their more juvenile companions. The owner of the prahu which was destroyed is among the captives—and he says that their commission from the Rajah of Soolo was to plunder as far as the Coast of Siam, and that had it been known that it was contrary to our law to go there it would not have been attempted! They appear to consider themselves in fact as having been engaged in the lawful discharge of their duties as subjects of his Highness of Soolo—who we doubt not will be very sorry to hear of the deconstiture of the expedition, in as far as it will deprive him of a large expected return of booty.

The prisoners deny that the prahu in which they were, was the largest of the fleet—and state that, the largest was the one which had their chief on board, the Orang Kaya of Kalee, and was one of those that escaped. Bangee is the name of the part from whence the pirates commenced their cruize.

In our last number we omitted to notice the capture of a Malay pirate prahu by the Steamer between Sangora and Calantun, and before she joined the Wolf in the attack on the Illanoons. They killed several Malays on board of her, and took the survivors prisoners. This prahu also had on board several slaves, captured by the pirates along the coast.

THE MILLSTONE THAT RAN AWAY WITH THE MAN.—The boors of Schilda had built a mill, and with extraordinary labour they had quarried a millstone for it, out of a quarry which lay on the summit of a high mountain; and when the stone was finished they carried it, with great labour and pain, down the hill. When they had got to the bottom, it occurred to one of them, that they might have spared themselves the trouble of carrying it down, by letting it roll down. "Verily," said he, "we are the stupidest of fools, to take these extraordinary pains to do that which we might have done with so little trouble. We will carry it up, and then let it roll down the hill by itself, as we did before, with the trees which we felled for our council house." This counsel pleased them all, and with still greater labour they carried the stone to the top of the mountain again, and were about to roll it down, when one of them said, "But how shall we know where it runs to? who will be able to tell us aught about it?" "Why" said the bailiff, who had advised the stone's being carried up again, "this is very easily managed; one of us must stick in this hole (for the millstone had of course a great hole in the middle), and run down with it." This was agreed to, and one of them, having been chosen for the purpose, thrust his head through the hole and ran down the hill with the millstone. Now at the bottom of the mountain was a deep fish-pond, into which the stone rolled, and the simpleton with it, so that the Schildburghers lost both stone and man, and not one among them knew what had become of them. And they felt sadly angered against their old companion who had run down the hill with the stone, for they considered that he had carried it off, for the purpose of disposing of it. So they published a notice in all the neighbouring boroughs, towns, and villages, calling on them, "if any one came there with a millstone round his neck, that they should treat him as one who had stolen common go ods, and give him to justice." But the poor devil lay in the pond, dead. Had he been able to speak, he would have been willing to tell them not to worry themselves on his account, for he would give them their own again. But his loud pressed so heavily upon him, and carried him so deep in the water, that he, after drinking water enough—more, indeed, than was good for him—died, and he is dead at the present day; and dead he will, shall, and must remain.—From the Foreign Quarterly Review.

CORRESPONDENCE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE CANTON PRESS.

My dear Mr. Editor,

Articles of commerce generally are not fit subjects for poetry, being more calculated to make money by, than to make verses on. Tea is thus apostrophised by Cowper in the following well known lines.

"And while the bubbling and loud hissing urn
Throws up a steamy column, and the cups
That cheer but not inebriate wait on each,
So let us welcome peaceful evening in, &c."

These lines were brought to my recollection by the following circumstance. While rummaging in some green Tea boxes and smelling the leaf in conformity with the rules of my humble profession, I stumbled upon a sheet of pink paper with some Chinese writing upon it. I showed it to a friend who is supposed to know summut of that 'ere matter, so, after a few hours of study, he handed me the following.

Tsan ying ming sze—soo kaou fung.
Taou yin shin seen—heaou loo tsung,
Seaou seih choo jin—tsin tsze meaou,
Nune ya tsih heang—hsou fung chung.

Seun luh ping heang—jin che hwuy,
He chun chu yu—chwang tsing hwuy,
Mow ching le tsew—fung lung jih,
Wan pih tseen saou—mwan chwang kwei!

with this translation.

Our worthy guest would sip a cup of tea,
To fill his honest soul with mickle glee.
Haste landlord! fairy's dew upon it pour.
And from my far-famed terrace crop the flower!

See that the leaf be green—it's smell perfume,
Hyson or perlé—each in season's bloom
May golden crops repay your hardy toil,
And thousand fleets convey it to your soil!

The fact is, it is a puff to get rid of his tea, and any man going to Ganhwuy—if he will only enquire for the sign Yu Hang (lit. sweet smell and plenty of it) will no doubt be entertained with a cup of his best and strongest—the fairy's dew to make it with is, I think, all in my eye.

Debts of the Teenpo (Kinqua) Hong.

LETTER FROM LINCHONG.

Your younger brother, of the Teenpo hong, begs, most respectfully, to lay before his benevolent elder brethren a few remarks concerning the foreign Creditors of his insignificant hong.

Years have elapsed since you, benevolent elder brethren, first traded with our poor hong; and deeply grateful have we ever been for your distinguished patronage. Your kindness is graven in our hearts and has penetrated our very bones: words are unequal to the expression of our feelings. We must now again offer our grateful thanks to you, benevolent elder brethren, and to you, Hong-merchants and others, for your condescending consideration of our paltry firm during our difficulties of the two past years; as well as for your kind forbearance in not pressing your claims, and your unwillingness to ruin and make bankrupt our hong; rather willing to wait a few years till our affairs prosper and our debts can be paid. For this kindness our obscure hong is eternally obliged.

It is true that our affairs are still more deeply embarrassed, but what has been the cause of this? From the time we first commenced business we have acted uprightly and equitably in all our dealings. Neither debauchery nor extravagance have eaten up the money. But since the 2nd year of Taoukwang, our difficulties have been encreasing. The successive failures of the five hongs Consequa, Exchin, Poonqua, Manhop and Chunqua within a short time of each other, and between which time and the 13th year of Taoukwang (when the accounts were settled) we alone contributed, towards paying their foreign debts, $ 1,100,000. After this loss we redoubled our exertions to retrieve our fortunes and to retain the confidence of you gentlemen. Our own debts we could gradually have cleared off; but after the sudden and unexpected failure of the Hingtae hong, in the year before last, we found our hands tied, as it were, and our hope fled. We had it, then, in contemplation, to request your assent to an arrangement respecting the settlement of our debts; but the other Hong-merchants not having proposed any plan, we could not earlier communicate on the subject.

Now the Hong-merchants and other creditors have kindly agreed that we shall pay our debts by instalments in a certain number of years; the like arrangement has been made for the payment of our Government debts; so that the two accounts will be simultaneously settled.

The amount of our insignificant hong's debts, to you foreign gentlemen, we calculate at $ 1,100,000. Should you consent to our paying this sum in ten years, you will truly display extraordinary goodness and liberality. Should you however deem this period too distant, we propose to allow you 5 per Cent interest, to be paid after the principal is cleared off. Our brother Hong-merchants have liberally agreed to advance me the annual sum of $ 100,000 which will enable me to satisfy your claims, benevolent elder brethren. Thus the principal will be cleared off within 10 years, and the interest (the amount of which being duly calculated) in the 11th or 12th year. In the humble opinion of our wretched hong this is the most promising way of liquidating the debts; and with the valuable assistance and support of the Hong-merchants and our benevolent elder brethren we hope to escape bankruptcy. Our exertions shall be unceasing, in order to settle all the debts within the ten years; but should our business encrease and fortune smile upon us, this might be accomplished even in 8 or 9 years.

We humbly entreat that you will graciously view our proposition and grant our desires: deign, also, to favor us with an answer in writing, that our respective bonds may be held as proof. By agreeing to this, our benevolent elder brethren will display the most exalted goodness of heart, and will, verily, deserve our eternal gratitude.

It is for this purpose I write; and, requesting a written reply, with compliments remain &c. &c.

LEANG SHINGHE.

(Circulated on the 24th June 1838.)

It will be seen from the above letter from Linchong to the creditors of the Kinqua-hong, that their claims are about to be adjusted, and that the offer has been made to pay the debt in annual instalments during ten years, and that even interest at the rate of 5 per cent is to be allowed, to be paid in the 11th and 12th years: Satisfactory as such arrangement, under the existing circumstances must be to the creditors, they will, we believe, not enter into it unless the Co-hong, i. e., all the Hong-merchants collectively, guaranty it, nor can it be considered as definitely settled without this guarantee, by which the Co-hong would be bound to pay annually the sum of 100,000 $ which, as Linchong informs his creditors, this body has promised to do. As to the claims on the Hingtae-hong, we believe that, finding it unlikely that they will be able to obtain better terms than those offered in the letter, from the Co-houg, a translation of which we publish ed last week, viz to pay the debt by annual instalments within 8½ years, the first to be paid on the 5th May next year, and the last on the 30th November 1846, the creditors will probably be prevailed on to accede to them. The necessary funds for the payment will, as we be before stated, be raised by the Consoo-tax, but in what manner, or which articles are to bear the greatest part of it, has either not yet been settled by the Hong-merchants themselves, or has at least not yet transpired.

Several complaints have of late reached us from our Subscribers at Macao, regarding the irregularity with which our paper has reached them. This has been owing to the irregular despatch of the passage boats from here, there frequently not being one sent to Macao during the whole week. To ensure, however, the regular delivery of the paper, in future we have now made arrangements, though at some cost to ourselves, which will, we hope prove satisfactory.

PASSAGE BOATS.—Another prohibitory edict against these boats has been issued by the Governor and was circulated among the foreigners on Wednesday.

Want of time has prevented our giving a full translation, but from the cursory look we took at it, we are able to give an abstract of its contents. It appears a mere repetition of the terms and arguments used in the many preceding edicts on the subject, and tends more and more to lay bare the vacicle character and imbecility of the local government. The shameless avowal of their inability to stop these boats—the acknowledged cowardice of the revenue and naval officers—their unpunished disobedience of orders, and lastly the threat to turn three senior hong merchants out of the Co-hong, should they not accomplish by persuasion, what the Government with all its vaunted power, and vapouring edicts is unwilling or unable to do, proves, either their insincerity, and establishes their already well known venal character, or exposes their utter inability to take effectual measures for the suppression of the Opium trade in the river.

The novel features of this edict are few. After commenting in a dignified and magisterial tone upon the daring audacity of the barbarians, in discharging their guns at the great Emperor's tiger hearted soldiers, he directs the latter to return the fire, on the next repetition of the offence, consoling himself with the palliating and humane reflection, that the barbarians have brought it upon themselves by striking the first blow! He indulges in a little praiseworthy commendation of the nourishing goodness of the Heavenly Dynasty, to us poor devils from a far, for nearly 200 years; and lamenting, in a tone of deep pathos, our ungrateful disobedience of the splendidly luminous laws. He imagines (how reasonably, probably, some of our readers can tell) that the unwillingness of the schooner to be searched arises from their being engaged in smuggling Opium &c! and forbids their coming up to Canton. He warns the "preventive service" to let the boats pass unexamined, at their peril; and threatens the three Senior hong merchants, with expulsion from the Co-hong, if the abuse be not quickly remedied. Decidedly, not the least grain of indulgence shall be shown. The whole concludes with an imperative command, to find where the two boats (mentioned in the Custom Officers report, to the Hoppo, as having fired upon them) are anchored, and within three days to expel them from the river. Intensely tremble!

We have been told by a respectable Chinese friend, that the childish vagaries of the present Governor have rendered him the laughing stock of the city. And really if we are to judge of his character, and diplomatic abilities, by his Edicts, we are inclined to think a clever man might be found to perform the duties of Tsung tuh.

WHAMPOA HOSPITAL SHIP. "A general meeting of Subscribers to this admirable institution was held last week at the house of Messrs. Fox, Rawson & Co. when the committee informed the meeting that in consequence of Kinqua, the hong merchant who had secured the ship, having been implicated by the local government in charges which might probably lead to serious persecution, it was considered the most advisable plan to dispose of the block, stores, &c. to the Co-hong for $8000. This proposition was immediately acted upon, and the Hope was transferred to her new purchasers yesterday."

The above, taken from the Register of the 26th, confirms what we stated some weeks ago, that the Hospital Ship had been sold to the Co-hong, but not for 4000 $ as we had been informed, but for 8000 $. The ship is to be broken up, and has, to that end, been resold to a carpenter for 3500 $, so that, through "this admirable institution" between the fear of punishment from the local authorities, and the refusal of the committee to remove the ship, the Co-hong have been squeezed to the tune of 4,500 $, of which part, we presume, will revert to the crown of England, the donation of the Superintendents of trade having been $ 4510.—or about one half of the amount subscribed. Besides this loss, the Hoppo claims, for the prolonged stay of the vessel at Whampoa, extra port charges from the security merchant Kinqua, though these, we doubt not, will be repaid him out of the funds of the British Seaman's Hospital Society. That some means ought to be devised to obtain medical assistance to seamen at Whampoa, where at times, owing to the swamps round it, there is much sickness, is highly desirable, and we suppose some means will be devised by the Committee for this purpose, but how this is to be brought about so as to be a durable establishment, not likely to clash with the enactments of the local authorities and their jealousies, will require mature deliberation. The Hospital ship, we are sorry to say never had the sanction of the government here, nor has it, as far as we are aware, been much resorted to by the sick, and the only advantage derived from its station at Whampoa has been that of giving a domicile to the surgeon. If that desideratum could be obtained by any other means, experience seems to shew, that a stationary Hospital is little required at Whampoa, though, it must be confessed, that experience was obtained only during two remarkably healthy seasons.

FESTIVAL OF DRAGON BOATS. This popular festival was celebrated on Tuesday last (the 5th day of the fifth moon being the principal day) and we have seldom seen so many of these dragonboats as there appeared this year on the river. The weather being fine, an immense number of spectators were on the river and walking in front of the factories, where, fore milles, we believe, is the only open public space whence a view of the river can be had. The Chinese seem to regard this festival with more than ordinary affection; the common and seldom interrupted routine of business is abandoned; the shops of the mechanics are deserted, and a holiday is given to the children at school, who were seen in great numbers enjoying their liberty, adding not a little with their shrill voices to the noise from the river. There gongs were continually beaten, and on a dragonboat passing a chop, passage, or flowerboat, these saluted them by making as much noise as they were able, firing off muskets and even small cannon, letting off crackers and beating gongs. From the number of dragonboats and that much greater of the others, this kind of noise was of course unceasing, and lasted from about 10 o'clock in the morning till sunset. We have not heard of any accidents this year, such as of upsetting or sinking of the dragonboats, which is of frequent occurrence in these festivals, and by one of which accidents upwards of 20 men were drowned last year at Whampoa. That such mishaps are not more frequent is to be wondered at, considering the peculiar construction of the boats, and the great many men they carry. The boats are, we should think about seventy feet long, by four feet wide, and very shallow, which render their turning a matter of great difficulty and, in a river where a strong tide runs, of great danger; moreover many of the boats must be very weak, the villages to which they belong, priding themselves on their antiquity, many of them being, it is said, upwards of a hundred years old, and preserved by being, during the whole of the year, except for a few days, buried in the mud on the river's side. These very ticklish boats carry each from between 80 to 100 men, of whom about twenty are engaged in beating gongs, waving flags, etc. and the rest in paddling, sitting two abreast. The boats avoid turning as much as possible, and when about to return whence they came, the paddlers turn themselves round, and push away in the opposite direction, the boats being equally sharp on both ends, and going equally well backwards and forwards.

As the new season for the shipment of Teas is about commencing it may not be out of place to republish the resolution passed by the General Chamber of Commerce of Canton regarding the execution of orders for Tea and Raw Silk with a preamble setting forth the Grounds thereof, dated 22nd December last and which we published on the 30th December.

"As the Foreign Trade of China is by Chinese law wholly carried on through a body of Chinese Hong-merchants in number not exceeding Thirteen, who alone are permitted to own boats for the transportation of Merchandise to or from the foreign Shipping, or warehouses for the safekeeping of the same prior to sale or subsequent to purchase, and in whose service and under whose absolute control, are all the coolies or labourers and boatmen employed in the foreign trade, and into whose possession therefore all Merchandise introduced in Canton or exported therefrom by Foreigners, is necessarily intrusted, from the time of it's leaving the Ship's deck, or to that of being laden thereon, without the possibility of supervision by the foreigners interested therein as Agents or otherwise, and from the regulation of the Hoppos office or Customs and the distance of the foreign shipping from Canton, when at the appointed anchorage for receiving or discharging Cargo, the Merchandise imported, must unavoidably remain one night in boats in charge of servants or boatmen, and that exported, one night in the warehouses of the Hong-merchants after having been put in a complete state for Shipment, and another night in boats, which affords facilities for fraudulent practices which have been often availed of by the Chinese and the regulations above enumerated having become fixed by the long practice of British East India Company in the late trade with China and by the acquiescence of all other foreigners, and absolutely unalterable by any influence within the exercise of the foreign houses of Agency of Canton.

"And as Tea is a production which enters largely into the export trade of China, and is a commodity the value of which depends (besides seasons, the state of foreign markets, and other circumstances) on the fluctuating taste of foreign consumers, which is so capricious, that the most skilful judges, both native and foreign in China, declare the most discordant opinions as to the character and value of Tea designed for it's supply, and the professional inspectors or brokers in Great Britain, or elsewhere, judgments thereon equally conflicting and various: and as Raw Silk, an article of export next in importance to Tea, from the mode of packing at the places of production, in which condition it is necessarily shipped, and from the system of Sale, can never be procured of a quality absolutely uniform throughout, but is always more or less mixed:

"And as, notwithstanding the circumstances above enumerated, certain importers of Tea and Raw Silk into Great Britain, have refused to receive for themselves investments made by their orders, and for their account, and declared that they consider the same at the risk of their Agents in Canton, on whom they would attempt to throw the loss of their speculations, on the alledged ground of a want of correspondence between the quality of the goods ordered, and those which, were shipped, although the order were executed with due diligence and attention, and with the closest practicable adherence to their prescribed condition;

"Therefore, moved by the foregoing considerations, Resolved by the General Chamber of Commerce of Canton, that the conduct of the aforesaid importers of Tea and Raw Silk into Great Britain is, in the opinion of the Chamber, not only contrary to commercial usage, but with respect to the mode in which trade is necessarily conducted at the port of Canton, especially unreasonable and unjust, and must be firmly resisted; and that in the execution of any order for Tea or Raw Silk hereafter intrusted to us, (the members of the Chamber and others who declare their assent to this resolution) we will not on any plea be held answerable for any discrepancies of quality which may be alledged to exist in England or elsewhere, unless it shall be shown that due care and skill have not been observed in the selection and purchase of the goods, and in shipping them off,—

COMMERCIAL REMARKS.

IMPORTS.

COTTON MANUFACTURES.—We have had no further arrivals of LONG-CLOTHS, but the market is not so brisk either for the white or grey. COTTON YARN, without improvement in price or demand, and the inferior kinds unsaleable. CHINTZES, some sales have been lately effected of some of narrow dimensions, and not very suitable patterns at about $ 4 @ 4½ we understood.

WOOLLENS.—No sales have been reported to us of the late importations of SPANISH STRIPES, but the quantity being small, the market continues firm. LONGELLS, must be quoted rather lower, the dealers taking advantage of the supplies per Logan and Helias to force down prices. None, we believe, have yet been sold. No favorable change in either Dutch or English CAMBLETS.

METALS.—IRON, retains its price under very moderate importations. LEAD, on the contrary, has rather declined, the market being fully supplied both with native and foreign.

COCHINEAL.—continues very dull.

STRAITS PRODUCE.—Without alteration or any transactions, that we have heard, during the week.

RICE.—The crop is a good one, and prices remain therefore very low.

COTTON.—The market has not yet opened for the new Bombay COTTON, nor has there been a transaction in any description, and our quotations must be considered quite nominal.

OPIUM.—There has not been so much doing at Whampoa during the past week; but Malwa continues in demand for the supply of the Junks at 640, and there has been a little more enquiry for new Patna; nothing doing in the old drug. We have had no further importations. The Lintin deliveries to the 22d were. Patna, old, 42, new, 178; Benares, old, 33, new, 33; Malwa, 425½; Total 713½ chests.

EXPORTS.

RAW SILK.—Reports are still current of a partial failure of the first crop of Nanking Silk, and that prices are high.

TEA.—We have no transactions to report. The cargo of the Alexander despatched for London during the week is as follows. Congo, 2,009; Souchong, 93; ankoi, 102; Hungmuey, 51; Pekoe, 100; Hyson, 78; Hysonskin, 126; Twankay, 197 Piculs, and 100 Piculs Raw Silk. In the statement of exports on the other side the cargo of the Bonanza despatched for Liverpool this day is not included.

FREIGHTS.—The nominal rate is 7 £, at which there does not appear much eagerness to ship.

The Honorable Company's Steamer Berenice, W. Lowe Esqre. Commander, arrived from Suez a little before 5 A. M. this morning. She left Suez at 7 A. M. on the 21 st. and Mocha at 5 30 P. M on the 28th ult.

A Debate on the subject of the idolatrous worship in India, which took place at a Court of Proprietars held at the India House on the 21st March, terminated with the following amendment which was carried by a majority of 35 :—

"That this Court deems the continued public discussion of questions affecting the religious feelings of "the natives of India to be fraught with danger, and "that the regulation of such matters may with more "safety be left to the responsible executive."

On the 7th March Lord Brougham called the attention of the House of Lords to the order in Council of the 17th July 1837, permitting the exportation of natives from India to Guiana. The observations which were made by his Lordship with reference to the Mauritius Magistrates were not of the most flattering description. A great deal of the antislavery spirit seems reviving at home, and we should not be surprised if the system of apprenticeship, short as must now be the duration of this probationary state, was to receive a blow. Lord Brougham has summoned all his energy on the subject.

The late arrivals from America of a commercial description are stated to be rather gloomy, and there appeared but little prospect of any further realization of assets — suspected the three great American houses which failed last summer.

There have been, since our last Spanish intelligence, a few inconsiderable actions in Spain which have been to the advantage of the Christinos. We observe some symptoms of a disposition to interfere in this struggle by other powers, in hopes of putting a limit to the warfare which is prosecuting.

The Circassians are still successful against their Russian oppressors; they have succeeded in blowing up the Russian Fortress of Gelenjik.

The Coronation is fixed for June, which will be more generally convenient than if it were postponed to a later period of the year.

MONEY-MARKET AND CITY INTELLIGENCE.

Saturday Evening.

The speculations for the rise in Dutch stock are evidently suspended, and the price is giving way,but there seems no disposition at present to reverse the operation, which would be the signal, in the present state of the market, of a general alarm among the holders. The leaders still cling to the hope that the political question is about to be settled, and that Holland will be relieved from that portion of the debt which is assigned to Belgium. An opinion was advanced yesterday, that were the political differences now actually disposed of, another ground of dispute would be created in the adjustment of the debt itself, and this to borne out by the letters received from Paris this morning, which anticipate that Belgium will either repudiate the debt altogether, or allow it to take effect only from the period of the final settlement of the differences, instead of from the separation of the two countries. Every thing relating to this question is in the most perplexed and uncertain state.

There is an obvious falling off in the demand for American securities, and Mr. Jaudon finds that the bills and bonds of the United States Bank do not go off near so readily as a first. Indeed, there are circumstances connected with the conservice of this latter description of paper which have induced many of our *resident*s, independently of the mere credit they are entitled to, to refuse to have anything to do with them. They are made payable, it seems, at dates varying from 6 to 18 months, not by any individual especially named in the instrument, but merely at "the agency of the United States Bank in London." They have no other assigned place of payment on the face of them, either in Europe or America. Now, it is by no means a well-ascertained fact where this agency is placed, for none has been officially announced, since it was removed from the mercantile house which held it before the appointment of Mr. Jaudon to this mission, and supposing this agency to be suddenly broken up, which may be the case at any time, and war to arise between the two countries, the money people naturally ask how these bills are to be paid, and where they are to present them for payment. Nor do they fail to remark what a prodigious power is placed in the hands of one man, in the appointment of Mr. Jaudon, who literally has at his command nearly all the resources of this bank. It is not that any one expresses a doubt of his honour and integrity, but that such an extensive trust so entirely without control, and in a foreign country is contrary to all the sound principles on which such business is regulated.

There are some statements in circulation which can only have come from himself, that a deadly quarrel has sprung up between the Bank of England and Biddle's Bank; from the refusal to open an account with him on his first arrival in England. We thought the Bank wrong on that occasion, and that it was a piece of petty hostility which never should have entered into the conduct of a great institution; but the quarrel can have no great terrors for them. The only point in which the Bank are vulnerable is the ill-judged traffic in gold to New York, the mere profit of which, leaving all other considerations out of the question, is now held to be a very doubtful matter.—Times, March 20.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—The division on Sir Wm. Molesworth's motion of censure on Lord Glenelg's Colonial Policy, after two night's debate, took place on the 7th. The original motion was withdrawn for Lord Sandon's amendment; and at the close ministers found themselves in a majority of 29. The numbers bring for the amendment 287, against it 316. This result was not anticipated—it was expected that the death blow to the Cabinet if otherwise would have been inevitable.

Lord Durham's Expenses as Governor of Canada are to be defrayed by the Government, but his Lordship is to receive no salary.

House of Lords. On the 19th, Lord Brougham's Bill for the abolition of Negro Apprenticeship in August next was read a first time, several Petitions were presented for the abolition of the apprenticeship system. 20th. A long discussion took place on the Poor-Law Amendment Act, introduced by Lord Stanhope on a motion for the number of Petitions presented against it. Lord Brougham and the Duke of Richmond defended the Act, and the motion was ultimately negatived without a division. 23d. The House principally occupied with conversations on the presentation of Petitions.

FRANCE.—Louis Phillip's ministry is engaged in the grand subject of an amicable adjustment of the affairs of Spain by negotiation, and it is said that the British ambassador and the ministers of Russia, Austria, and Prussia have had several interviews about the matter.

A most interesting debate on the motion for a grant of Secret Service money occupied the Chamber of Deputies from 11th to 14th Inst., when Ministers carried it by a majority of 219 to 133. The existence of the Ministry mainly dependet upon this Question—the Doctrinaires had openly quarrelled with but reluctantly sided with them, notwithstanding a coalition is talked of between this and the Thiers party. A proposition for the abolition of the punishment of Death was discussed on the 17th, but rejected; on the commission being appointed to examine into the "ensemble" of the Budget, on the 19th, the members of the opposition avowed their perfect unpreparedness notwithstanding which various reports are afloat respecting the stability of the Ministry. The French are described as gaining ground in Africa, and that Marshal Valee is endeavouring to prevail on several Tribes to enter into the service of France. Antwerp Letters speak with great confidence of the settlement of the financial differences between Belgium and Holland. The Emperor Nicholas is expected at Berlin in May. The Kings of Wurtemberg, Hanover and Saxony and several Saxon Dukes and Princes, are to meet the Emperor.

PORTUGAL.—The dates are to the 2d Inst. ministers had resigned, and as two unsuccessful attempts had been made to form a Cabinet, it was expected that the present officials would remain in office till the dissolution of the Cortes.

The news from Lisbon it important. An attempt has been made by the Ultra Revolutionary Party to possess themselves of the reins of Government, with a view to the abdication of the Queen in favour of the Young Prince when a regency would have been appointed. This however has not succeeded. A regular battle was fought between the troops and rebels, who were completely defeated. The number killed is no doubt greatly exaggerated, some accounts say 100, others 46. The effect on Portugese Bonds here was trifling.

AMERICA.—The Montreal Herald of 3rd Feey, states that further trouble was anticipated in the Country of Arcadia, where the Canadians were undergoing frequent drillings, and threatening the British population, Fifteen of the persons taken in the Schooner "Ann" had been carried to Toronto, to await their trial.—The Assembly had voted two sums of money for swords to be presented to Col. McNabb and Captain Drew R. N.

Canada.

The unavoidable conclusion from the Canada news is, that the frontier districts of the United States from end to end are resolved upon the invasion of the British provinces, and that there exists no sufficient power in the republican constitution enabling the executive and legislative authorities, how well soever disposed, and there is every reason to believe both to be influenced by the best and most pacific dispositions, to control the threatened hostilities. We are not going beyond the strict truth in saying that the whole of the Canadian frontier is menaced for thousands of miles. This gigantic danger will require a commensurate state of preparation, which must be rendered still more onerous by the peculiar circumstances of the case. Were Great Britain at war with the United States, the case would be one of much less difficulty, for then we could prosecute the most summary, and therefore the cheapest and most effectual line of defence, carry the war into the enemy's country, extinguish their commerce, ruin their marine, place their cities under contribution, and avert a repetition of injury by penal retaliation. Peace, however is to be desired by both states, and therefore we trust that no consideration of mere convenience or of economy will cause its interruption by Great Britain, as long as any other means of protecting our fellow subjects in Canada can be resorted to. But the government and legislature of the United States must cordially concur in our exertions to avoid the calamity of our national war. If it does not exactly suit with the principles of a Republican form of government to obviate the outrages and crimes of its citizens, by preliminary restraint, no social or political duty can bind it to protect them in the commission of injustice upon unoffending neighbours. Let the Government and Congress then speak out; let them warn the aggressors that they will not protect their countrymen from retaliation, if a just retaliation is provoked by making that country the scene of military preparation for unprovoked attack upon a friendly power, and that they will not interpose to rescue pirates from the just punishment of piracy. This would cost the United States nothing, and it would put an end to the present state of affairs, so odious and so pregnant with danger. As to the course to be pursued by our own Government, the first step plainly is to cancel the preposterous and expensive mission of Lord Durham. What good can his lordship do in a case so strictly military as the present crisis of Canada? But, if he can do no good, according to the rule infallible in such cases, he must do much mischief. What would have been the result of the Peninsular war, or of the Belgian campaign of 1815, if an irritable and haughty civilian had been placed as a high commissioner to control the arrangements of the Duke of Wellington.

In the House of Commons. Lord John Russell appeared at the bar, and stated, that Her Majesty had taken into consideration the address which was agreed to by the Commons, on the 27th ultimo, in favor of pronation in the marises, and that it was the intention of government to appoint a committee of naval and military gentlemen, to take the subject into consideration, and to report to the House. In answer to a question from Mr. Mansel, as to whether Lord John Russell did or did not mean to bring forward his threatened motion on the subject of the Bishop of Exeter's charge of bribery and treachery against the Roman Catholic members of the House of commons, the Noble Lord said, that he did not mean to bring it forward at all; his object in giving notice of such motion, being merely to show the inconvenience which would result from such a course as the House had lately adopted in the case of Mr. O'Connell.

The President of the Council of Ministers, at Lisbon, has acquainted the Cortes that the Portuguese Envoy in London has received instructions to demand satisfaction for the violation of the law of nations, committed some months ago at Mozambique, by Her Britanic Majesty's ship Leveret, in firing upon a Spanish slaver under the guns of the fortress.

One of the largest in-door meetings which ever took place in this, or perhaps in any other country, was held this day at eleven o'clock in Exeter Hall, to petition Parliament for an immediate abolition of Negro Slavery in the West Indies. Upwards of 5000 persons were wedged into the large room, and it was supposed that from 6000 to 7000 went away who could not obtain admittance. Lord Brougham presided as Chairman, and addressed the meeting at considerable length, as did Mr. O'Connell and various other public men. There were several Members of Parliament present. The meeting adjourned at half past two o'clock till the following day, the one half of those gentlemen who wished to address the meeting not having had an opportunity of doing so.

The great meeting to petition parliament for the immediate abolition of slavery in the West Indies, which was adjourned yesterday, took place to-day, when Lord Brougham again made one of his most splendid speeches. A number of dissenting ministers, and other well-known public characters, addressed the meeting, consisting, as it did yesterday, of 5000 persons. The resolutions were all unanimously adopted.

We find the following, under date of Munich, the 4th of March, in the Leipsic Gazette:—"The negotiations between our Court and that of France, have been brought to a most happy termination. A marriage between our Prince Royal and the daughter of the King of the FRENCH may be considered as settled." Another letter in the same journal says, that all obstacles to this marriage have been overcome by a promise from the King of the FRENCH to give his daughter a dowry of twenty millions of francs. The French legitimist journals do not contradict this statement; and it was considered probable in Paris.

In the House of Commons, Colonel Seale moved for leave to bring in a Bill to admit, under certain regulations, Foreign Corn bonded in this country, to be ground in certain mills, and manufactured for exportation. The Marquis of Chandos opposed the motion. Sir E. Knatchbull, thought he considered the gallant Colonel had misstated the case, would support the motion if the Government gave security that the agricultural interests would not be injured by adopting the motion. Mr. Warburton supported the motion, and hoped the representatives of seaport towns would do the same. Ultimately the motion was carried on a division, the numbers being, for the motion 127; against it 92; majority 35.

The rumor, which has appeared in several papers, of an intended marriage between a widower, holding a responsible situation in the government of the country, and a distinguished widow, refers to Lord Melbourne and the Duchess of Kent.

The accounts received this morning, from Liverpool, state, that the Bank of England having determined to forward immediately, a million of gold to the United States, produced a very favourable impression in the above town, particularly amongst the commercial classes, and cannot fail to produce a still more favourable one in America, as soon as the news of this shipment arrives out.

Great preparations are making for the departure of Lord Durham to Canada.

The Marquis of Northampton, in reference to the same subject, and in order to the more effectual prevention of the slave-trade, suggested, "that there be stationed on the coast of Africa a combined squadron, formed of four nations, France, Holland, America, and England; and to prevent any jealousy of the nations, let the squadron be placed under the command of the Commodores of each nation alternately, and let the squadron thus constituted act under a joint flag. If this were to be adopted he thought the flag would be one of the most formidable in the world, and would at once put an end to a traffic which was the most disgraceful that existed in the whole universe."

In answer to a question from Sir Robert Peel, Mr. Spring Rice said, that Mr. Barry's plan for the building of the new Houses of Parliament was definitively fixed on

The news from Holland is important. King William, it is now understood, is about to accept the twenty-four articles offered to him, seven years ago, relative to his differences with the King of Belgium; which differences, it will be remembered, threatened at one time to involve Europe in a war.

The two battalions of Guards under orders for Canada, have been reviewed by Lord Hill in Hyde Park, by the General Commanding-in-Chief. The Dukes of Cambridge and Wellington, the colonels of the regiment, were on the ground. The troops march on the 26th instant for Portsmouth, to embark for North America.

London Markets.

24th March 1838.

EAST INDIA SUGAR.—250 casks and 107 cases of sugar in bond, imported from Singapore, have been offered at public sale; it was a damp parcel, and consisted of some very inferior sugars. The sale went off at low prices, viz., low and good middling yellow damp, 30s. 6d. to 32s. 6d.; low to good brown damp, 28s. 6d. to 29s.; dabs, 17s. to 18s.; and very low clayey dabs, 14s. 6d. to 15s. per cwt. For Bengal there has again been only a limited demand, but as the public sales have not been so extensive as last week, prices have not declined more than 6d. to 1s.; 6763 bags comprises the whole of the auctions, which partly found buyers; good middling, and very good white, at 29s. to 33s.; and low and middling white, at 30s. 6d. to 31s. per cwt. In Siam or Manila there has been no business doing, and the market has become heavy, without buyers, particularly of the soft and inferior kinds, except at reduced prices. As there is, however, but a small quantity of either description offering, holders are not disposed to accede to any decline.

TEA.—The tea market is firm, but there is scarcely any business doing.

SILK.—All descriptions of Italian Raw Silk, though only in limited demand, support former rates. East India sorts are also held firmly, and China may be quoted rather higher with a fair demand.

Gleanings.

An affectionate Husband.—At the last quarterly meeting of the Exeter Humane Society, a man claimed a reward for saving the life of his wife from drowning.

SAILORS.—The sailors in Her Majesty's navy are bad hands at making out names.—The Belleraphon is always the Billyruffian—the Hirondelle, the Irondevil—the Pitcmidjan is the Termigant, and the Vestilus the Naughty-lass. and so on adinfinitum. When the Queen was proclaimed at Portsmouth, one Jack, with a two-foot tail to his head, and a "ne quid nimis" in his mouth, cried out the moment the ceremony was over—" There, I told you so—she won't have none of the Radicals—they call her Queen Wictoria, and that's a Conservative all the world over."

An Irishman having accidently broken a pane of glass in a window of a house in Queen-street, was making the best of his way to get out of sight, as well as out of mind; but unfortunately, for Pat, the proprietor stole a march on him, and having seized him by the collar, exclaimed, "You broke my window, fellow, did you not?" "To be sure I did," said Pat. "and didn't you see me running home for the money to pay for it?"

TAKING CARRIOF THE BAGGAGE.—The following appears in a provincial American paper:—"Travellers should be careful to deliver their baggage to proper persons, as a gentleman a few days since slighting from a stage-coach, entrusted his wife to a stranger, and she has not been heard of since."

By a Polish edict, any sinner who eat on a fast day, was sentenced to have all his teeth drawn.

THE LEFT STOCKING.—Although it might be thought by some very singular how we obtained our knowledge, yet we assert it as fact, that ladies always pull off the Left stocking last.

COMMERCIAL REMARKS.

IMPORTS.

COTTON MANUFACTURES.—We have had no further arrivals of LONG-CLOTHS, but the market is not so brisk either for the white or grey. COTTON YARN, without improvement in price or demand, and the inferior kinds unsaleable. CHINTZES, some sales have been lately effected of some of narrow dimensions, and not very suitible patterns at about $ 4 @ 4½ we understood.

WOOLLENS.—No sales have been reported to us of the late importations of SPANISH STRIPES, but the quantity being small, the market continues firm. LONGELLS, must be quoted rather lower, the dealers taking advantage of the supplies per Logan and Hellas to force down prices. None, we believe, have yet been sold. No favorable change in either Dutch or English CAMBLETS.

METALS. –IRON, retains its price under very moderate importations. LEAD, on the contrary, has rather declined, the market being fully supplied both with native and foreign.

COCHINEAL.—continues very dull.

STRAITS PRODUCE.—Without alteration or any transactions, that we have heard, during the week.

RICE.—The crop is a good one, and prices remain therefore very low.

COTTON.—The market has not yet opened for the new Bombay COTTON, nor has there been a transaction in any description, and our quotations must be considered quite nominal.

OPIUM.—There has not been so much doing at Whampoa during the past week; but Malwa continues in demand for the supply of the Junks at 640, and there has been a little more enquiry for new Patna; nothing doing in the old drug. We have had no further importations. The Lintin deliveries to the 22d were. Patna, old, 42, new, 178; Benares, old, 33, new, 35; Malwa, 425½; Total 713½ chests.

EXPORTS.

RAW SILK.—Reports are still current of a partial failure of the first crop of Nanking Silk, and that prices are high.

TEA.—We have no transactions to report. The cargo of the Alexander despatched for London during the week is as follows. Congo 2.009; Souchong, 93; Ankoi, 102; Hungmuey, 51; Pekoe, 100; Hyson, 78; Hysonskin, 126; Twankay, 197 Piculs, and 100 Piculs Raw Silk. In the statement of exports on the other side the cargo of the Bonanza despatched for Liverpool this day is not included.

FREIGHTS.—The nominal rate is 7 £, at which there does not appear much eagerness to ship.

From the Bombay Courier Extra. and from the London Supplement to the Calcutta Englishman, London 24th March.

The Honorable Company's Steamer Berenice, W. Lowe Esqre. Commander, arrived from Suez a little before 5 A. M. this morning. She left Suez at 7 A. M. on the 21 st. and Mocha at 5 30 P. M. on the 28th ult.

A Debate on the subject of the idolatrous worship in India, which took place at a Court of Proprietars held at the India House on the 21st March, terminated with the following amendment which was carried by a majority of 35 :—

"That this Court deems the continued public discussion of quersions affecting the religious feelings of the natives of India to be fraught with danger, and that the regulation of such matters may with more safety be left to the responsible executive."

On the 7th March Lord Brougham called the attention of the House of Lords to the order in Council of the 17th July 1837, permitting the exportation of natives from India to Guiana. The observations which were made by his Lordship with reference to the Mauritius Magistrates were not of the most flattering description. A great deal of the antislavery spirit seems reviving at home ; and we should not be surprised if the system of apprenticeship, short as must now be the duration of this probationary state, was to receive a blow. Lord Brougham has summoned all his energy on the subject.

The late arrivals from America of a commercial description are stated to be rather gloomy, and there appeared but little prospect of any further realization of assets — expected the three great American houses which failed last summer.

There have been, since our last Spanish intelligence, a few inconsiderable actions in Spain which have been to the advantage of the Christinos. We observe some symptoms of a disposition to interfere in this struggle by other powers, in hopes of putting a limit to the warfare which is prosecuting.

The Circassians are still successful against their Russian oppressors ; they have succeeded in blowing up the Russian Fortress of Gelenjik.

The Coronation is fixed for June, which will be more generally convenient than if it were postponed to a later period of the year.

MONEY-MARKET AND CITY INTELLIGENCE.

Saturday Evening.

The speculations for the rise in Dutch stock are evidently suspended, and the price is giving way,but there seems no disposition at present to reserve the operation, which would be the signal, to the present state of the market, of a general alarm among the holders. The leaders still cling to the hope that the political question is about to be settled, and that Holland will be relieved from that portion of the debt which is assigned to Belgium. An opinion was advanced yesterday, that were the political differences now actually disposed of, another ground of dispute would be created in the adjustment of the debt itself, and this is borne out be the letters received from Paris this morning, which anticipate that Belgium will either repudiate the debt altogether, or allow it to take effect only from the period of the final settlement of the differences, instead of from the separation of the two countries. Every thing relating to this question is in the most perplexed and uncertain state.

There is an obvious falling off in the demand for American securities, and Mr. Jaudon finds that the bills and bonds of the United States Bank do not go off near so readily as a first. Indeed, there are circumstances connected with the connection of this latter description of paper which have induced many of our capitalists, independently of the mere credit they are entitled to, to refuse to have anything to do with them. They are made payable, it seems, at dates varying from 6 to 18 months, not by any individual especially named in the instrument, but merely at " the agency of the United States Bank in London." They have no other assigned place of payment on the face of them, either in Europe or America. Now, it is by no means a well-ascertained fact where this agency is placed, for none has been officially announced, since it was removed from the mercantile house which held it before the appointment of Mr. Jaudon to this mission, and supposing this agency to be suddenly broken up, which may be the case at any time, and war to arise between the two countries, the money people naturally ask how these bills are to be paid, and where they are to present them for payment. Nor do they fail to remark what a prodigious power is placed in the hands of one man, in the appointment of Mr. Jaudon, who literally has at his command nearly all the resources of this bank. It is not that any one expresses a doubt of his honour and integrity, but that such an extensive trust so entirely without control, and in a foreign country is contrary to all the sound principles on which such business is regulated.

There are some statements in circulation which can only have come from himself, that a deadly quarrel has sprung up between the Bank of England and Biddle's Bank, from the refusal to open an account with him on his first arrival in England. We thought the Bank wrong on that occasion, and that it was a piece of petty hostility which never should have entered into the conduct of a great institution ; but the quarrel can have no great terrors for them. The only point in which the Bank are vulnerable is the ill-judged traffic in gold to New York, the mere profit of which, leaving all other considerations out of the question, is now held to be a very doubtful matter.—Times, March 26.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—The division on Sir Wm. Molesworth's motion of censure on Lord Glenelg's Colonial Policy, after two night's debate, took place on the 27th. The original motion was withdrawn for Lord Sandon's amendment ; and at the close ministers found themselves in a majority of 29. The numbers being for the amendment 287, against it 316. This result was not anticipated—it was expected that the death blow to the Cabinet if otherwise would have been inevitable.

Lord Durham's Expenses as Governor of Canada are to be defrayed by the Government, but his Lordship is to receive no salary.

House of Lords. On the 19th, Lord Brougham's Bill for the abolition of Negro Apprenticeship in August next was read a first time, several Petitions were presented for the abolition of the apprenticeship system. 20th. A long discussion took place on the Poor Law Amendment Act, introduced by Lord Stanhope on a motion for the number of Petitions presented against it. Lord Brougham and the Duke of Richmond defended the Act, and the motion was ultimately negatived without a division. 23d. The House principally occupied with conversations on the presentation of Petitions.

FRANCE—Louis Phillip's ministry is engaged in the grand subject of an amicable adjustment of the affairs of Spain by negotiation, and it is said that the British ambassador and the ministers of Russia, Austria, and Prussia have had several interviews about the matter.

A most interesting debate on the motion for a grant of Secret Service money occupied the Chamber of Deputies from 11th to 14th Inst., when Ministers carried it by a majority of 219 to 133. The existence of the Ministry seeming depended upon this Question the Doctrinaires had openly quarrelled with but reluctantly sided with them, notwithstanding a coalition is talked of between this and the Thiers party. A proposition for the abolition of the punishment of Death was discussed on the 17th, but rejected ; on the commission being appointed to examine into the "ensemble" of the Budget, on the 19th, the members of the opposition avowed their perfect union ; notwithstanding which various reports are afloat respecting the stability of the Ministry. The French are described as gaining ground in Africa, and that Marshal Valee is endeavouring to prevail on several Tribes to enter into the service of France. Antwerp Letters speak with great confidence of the settlement of the financial differences between Belgium and Holland. The Emperor Nicholas is expected at Berlin in May. The Kings of Wurtemberg, Hanover and Saxony and several Saxon Dukes and Princes, are to meet the Emperor.

PORTUGAL.—The dates are to the 2d Inst. ministers had resigned, and as two unsuccessful attempts had been made to form a Cabinet, it was expected that the present officials would remain in office till the dissolution of the Cortes.

The news from Lisbon it important. An attempt has been made by the Ultra Revolutionary Party to possess themselves of the reins of Government, with a view to the abdication of the Queen in favour of the Young Prince when a regency would have been appointed. This however has not succeeded. A regular battle was fought between the troops and rebels, who were completely defeated. The number killed is no doubt greatly exaggerated, some accounts say 100, others 46. The effect on Portuguese Bonds here was trifling.

AMERICA.—The Montreal Herald of 3rd Feby. states that further trouble was anticipated in the Country of Arcadia, where he Canadians were undergoing frequent drillings, and threatening the British population, Fifteen of the persons taken in the Schooner "Ann" had been carried to Toronto, to await their trial.—The Assembly had voted two sums of money for swords to be presented to Col. McNabb and Captain Drew R. N.

Canada.

The unavoidable conclusion from the Canada news is, that the frontier districts of the United States from end to end are resolved upon the invasion of the British provinces, and that there exists no sufficient power in the republican constitution enabling the executive and legislative authorities, how well soever disposed, and there is every reason to believe both well influenced by the best and most pacific disposition, to control the threatened hostilities. We are not going beyond the strict truth in saying that the whole of the Canadian frontier is menaced for thousands of miles. This gigantic danger will require a commensurate state of preparation, which must be rendered still more onerous by the peculiar circumstances of the case. Were Great Britain at war with the United States, the case would be one of much less difficulty, for then we could prosecute the most summary, and therefore the cheapest and most effectual line of defence, carry the war into the enemy's country, extinguish their commerce, ruin their marine, place their cities under contribution, and avert a repetition of injury by penal retaliation. Peace, however, is to be desired by both states, and therefore we trust that no consideration of mere convenience or of economy will cause its interruption by Great Britain, as long as any other means of protecting our fellow subjects in Canada can be resorted to. But the government and legislature of the United States must cordially concur in our exertions to avoid the calamity of our national war. If it does not exactly suit with the principles of a Republican form of government to obviate the outrages and crimes of its citizens, by preliminary restraint, no social or political duty can bind it to protect them in the commission of injustice upon unoffending neighbours. Let the Government and Congress then speak out, let them warn the aggressors that they will not protect their countrymen from retaliation, if a just retaliation is provoked by making that country the scene of military preparation for unprovoked attack upon a friendly power, and that they will not interpose to rescue pirates from the just punishment of piracy. This would cost the United States nothing, and it would put an end to the present state of affairs, so odious and so pregnant with danger. As to the course to be pursued by our own Government, the first step plainly is to cancel the preposterous and expensive mission of Lord Durham. What good can his lordship do in a case so strictly military, as the present crisis of Canada? But if he can do no good, according to the rule infallible in such cases, he must do much mischief. What would have been the result of the Peninsular war, or of the Belgian campaign of 1815, if an irritable and haughty civilian had been placed as a high commissioner to control the arrangements of the Duke of Wellington.

In the House of Commons, Lord John Russell appeared at the bar, and stated, that Her Majesty had taken into consideration the address which was agreed to by the Commons, on the 27th ultimo, in favor of promotion in the marines, and that it was the intention of government to appoint a committee of naval and military gentlemen, to take the subject into consideration, and to report to the House. In answer to a question from Mr. Mansel, as to whether Lord John Russell did or did not mean to bring forward his threatened motion on the subject of the Bishop of Exeter's charge of bribery and treachery against the Roman Catholic members of the House of commons, the Noble Lord said, that he did not mean to bring it forward at all ; his object in giving notice of such motion, being merely to show the inconvenience which would result from such a course as the House had lately adopted in the case of Mr. O'Connell.

The President of the Council of Ministers, at Lisbon, has acquainted the Cortes, that the Portuguese Envoy in London has received instructions to demand satisfaction for the violation of the law of nations, committed some months ago at Mozambique, by Her Britanic Majesty's ship Leveret, in firing upon a Spanish slaver under the guns of the fortress.

One of the largest in-door meetings which ever took place in this, or perhaps in any other country, was held this day at eleven o'clock in Exeter Hall, to petition Parliament for an immediate abolition of Negro Slavery in the West Indies. Upwards of 5000 persons were wedged into the large room, and it was supposed that from 6000 to 7000 went away who could not obtain admittance. Lord Brougham presided as Chairman, and addressed the meeting at considerable length, as did Mr. O'Connell and various other public men. There were several Members of Parliament present. The meeting adjourned at half past two o'clock till the following day, the one half of those gentlemen who wished to address the meeting not having had an opportunity of doing so.

The great meeting to petition parliament for the immediate abolition of slavery in the West Indies, which was adjourned yesterday, took place today, when Lord Brougham again made one of his most splendid speeches. A number of dissenting ministers, and other well-known public characters, addressed the meeting, consisting, as it did yesterday, of 5000 persons. The resolutions were all unanimously adopted.

We find the following, under date of Munich, the 4th of March, in the Leipzic Gazette :—"The negotiations between our Court and that of France, have been brought to a most happy termination. A marriage between our Prince Royal and the daughter of the King of the French may be considered as settled." Another letter in the same journal says, that all obstacles to this marriage have been overcome by a promise from the King of the French to give his daughter a dowry of twenty millions of francs. The French legitimist journals do not contradict this statement ; and it was considered probable in Paris.

In the House of Commons, Colonel Seale moved for leave to bring in a Bill to admit, under certain regulations, Foreign Corn bonded in this country, to be ground in certain mills, and manufactured for exportation. The Marquis of Chandos opposed the motion. Sir E. Knatchbull, thought he considered the gallant Colonel had misstated the case, would support the motion if the Government gave security that the agricultural interests would not be injured by adopting the motion. Mr. Warburton supported the motion, and hoped the representatives of seaport towns would do the same. Ultimately the motion was carried on a division, the numbers being, for the motion 127 ; against it 93 ; majority 34.

The rumor, which has appeared in several papers, of an intended marriage between a widower, holding a responsible situation in the government of the country, and a distinguished widow, refers to Lord Melbourne and the Duchess of Kent.

The accounts received this morning, from Liverpool, state, that the Bank of England having determined to forward immediately, a million of gold to the United States, produced a very favourable impression in the above town, particularly amongst the commercial classes, and cannot fail to produce a still more favourable one in America, as soon as the news of this shipment arrives out.

Great preparations are making for the departure of Lord Durham to Canada.

The Marquis of Northampton, in reference to the same subject, and in order to the more effectual prevention of the slave-trade, suggested, "that there be stationed on the coast of Africa a combined squadron, formed of four nations, France, Holland, America, and England ; and to prevent any jealousy of the nations, let the squadron be placed under the command of the Commodores of each nation alternately, and let the squadron thus constituted act under a joint flag. If this were to be adopted he thought the flag would be one of the most formidable in the world, and would at once put an end to a traffic which was the most disgraceful that existed in the whole universe."

In answer to a question from Sir Robert Peel, Mr. Spring Rice said, that Mr. Barry's plan for the building of the new Houses of Parliament was definitively fixed on.

The news from Holland is important. King William, it is now understood, is about to accept the twenty-four articles offered to him, seven years ago, relative to his differences with the King of Belgium ; which differences, it will be remembered, threatened at one time to involve Europe in a war.

The two battalions of Guards under orders for Canada, have been reviewed by Lord Hill in Hyde Park, by the General Commanding-in-Chief. The Dukes of Cambridge and Wellington, the colonels of the regiment, were on the ground. The troops march on the 26th instant for Portsmouth, to embark for North America.

London Markets.

24th March 1838.

EAST INDIA SUGAR.—250 casks and 107 cases of sugar in bond, imported from Singapore, have been offered at public sale ; it was a damp parcel, and consisted of some very inferior sugars. The sale went off at low prices, viz., low and good middling yellow damp, 26s. 6d. to 28s. 6d. ; low to good brown damp, 24s. 6d. to 26s. ; dabs, 17s. to 18s. ; and very low clayey dabs, 14s. 6d. to 15s. per cwt. For Bengal there has again been only a limited demand, but as the public sales have not been so extensive as last week, prices have not declined more than 6d. to 1s. ; 5763 bags compries the whole of the auctions, which partly found buyers ; good middling, and very good white, at 32s to 33s. ; and low and middling white, at 30s. 6d. to 31s. per cwt. In Siam or Manila there has been no business doing, and the market has become heavy, without buyers, particularly of the soft and inferior kinds, except at reduced prices. As there is, however, but a small quantity of either description offering, holders are not disposed to accede to any decline.

TEA.—The tea market is firm, but there is scarcely any business doing.

SILK.—All descriptions of Italian Raw Silk, though only in limited demand, support former rates. East India sorts are also held firmly, and China may be quoted rather higher with a fair demand.

Gleanings.

An affectionate Husband.—At the last quarterly meeting of the Exeter Humane Society, a man claimed a reward for saving the life of his wife from drowning.

SAILORS.—The sailors in Her Majesty's navy are bad hands at making out names.—The Bellerophon is always the Billyruffian—the Hirondelle, the Irondevil—the Pharmigan is the Termigant, and the Nautilus the Naughty-lass. and so on ridiculum. When the Queen was proclaimed at Portsmouth, one Jack, with a two-foot tail to his head, and a "ne quid nimis" in his mouth, cried out the moment the ceremony was over—" There, I told you so—she won't have none o' the Radicals—they call her Queen WHIG-TORY, and that's a Conservative all the world over."

An Irishman having accidently broken a pane of glass in a window of a house in Queen-street, was making the best of his way to get out of sight, as well as out of mind ; but unfortunately, for Pat, the proprietor stole a march on him, and having seized him by the collar, exclaimed, "You broke my window, fellow, did you not ?" "To be sure I did," said Pat. "and didn't you see me running home for the money to pay for it ?"

TAKING CARE OF THE BAGGAGE.—The following appears in a provincial American paper :—"Travellers should be careful to deliver their baggage to proper persons, as a gentleman a few days since slighting from a stage-coach, entrusted his wife to a stranger, and she has not been heard of since."

By a Polish edict, any sinner who eat on a fast day, was sentenced to have all his teeth drawn.

THE LEFT STOCKING.—Although it might be thought by some very singular how we obtained our knowledge, yet we assert it as fact, that ladies always pull off the Left stocking last.

EFFECT OF PRUSSIC ACID ON A RABBIT.—Saturday Dr. Robinson delivered the third of a series of dissertations on poisons before the faculty at Maidstone. The subject was principally corrosive sublimate. At the conclusion the effect of prussic acid was tried upon a rabbit. Three drops were administered from a glass (the surface of which most probably abstracted half the quantity), and the animal immediately exhibited the usual symptoms —increased action of lungs, dilatation of the pupils, and the peculiar shrill cry which in such cases is generally indicative of immediately approaching dissolution. In order to give it a chance of recovery, however, a few drops of ammonia were administered, without apparent benefit. A constant stream of cold water was then poured upon the base of the skull, and along the spine, when the animal very shortly exhibited symptoms of resuscitation. It was then wrapped in warm flannel. In a quarter of an hour it was sufficiently recovered to walk. Dr. Robinson had in a former lecture mentioned that this mode of treatment had been discovered by accident. A cat, which had annoyed the apprentices of a chemist, was poisoned by them with prussic acid, and thrown by for dead. By mere accident, however, it fell under a stream of water which was pouring from a pump, the effect of which was it gradual resuscitatation. Benefitting by this hint, the same means have been succes-fully applied to more than one human subject who had taken prussic acid. No instance, however, had come within Dr. Robinson's knowledge where an animal had been restored after the symptoms which this rabbit exhibited; and the singularity of the case struck the faculty as being one, a knowledge of which it was desirable should be promulgated. The rabbit is now in full health and vigour.

THE SCHOOLBOY.—"Well, why is Arkansas of the feminine gender, David?" "Corz itz—why, corz itz got Miss Soury on the north, Louisa Ann on the souf, Mrs. Sippy on the east, and ever so many more she females on the west" "Very well, David, you may go to the head; you're a rising genius, and 'Ill make a man o'you before yer mother." "Yeth'er. "—Claremont (N. H.) Eagle.

Description of the Illanoon Pirate Prahus.

From the Singapore Free Press, June 14.

The prahu captured was 54 feet in length and fifteen feet beam, but their general length was 56 feet, strongly built, with a round stern, and the stern post having a considerable curve, on which the rudder made to fit, was hung on a pintle and gudgeon. The decks, after the same fashion as the Malay prahus, were made of split nibong fastened together with rattan, the nibong being cut into convenient lengths, so that any part of the deck could be rolled up—the depth of hold about six feet: From the upper edge of the prahus a projection of bamboo nearly two feet broad, was made all around the vessel from the stockade near the bow to the stern, on the outer edge of which was raised, of the same material, a breast work about three feet high, and outside this their rattan plaited cables were placed around, one coil above another, —an excellent protection against shot.

These vessels were double banked, pulling 36 oars, 18 on each side, nine of which rested on the edge of the prahu passing through the projecting raised work alluded to, the upper tier of nine oars, being worked over all the lower tier, were pulled by men sitting on the deck inside the boat itself, the under by others sitting on the projecting bamboo work, whose heads could barely be seen above it—the oars were worked diagonally in the style, as has been supposed by some authors, of the ancient war galleys, by which contrivance considerable room is saved. Indeed this work projecting from the side of the vessel, favours in some measure the ingenious theory of the late general MELVILLE, in his essay on the galleys of the Greeks and Romans.

The rowers among these pirates were of the lower castes, or slaves captured in their cruizes; hence a strong Chinese became a valuable acquisition to them, and the oars could admit of two men pulling at each if necessary.

Their rigging was of the most simple kind, a large sail forward and a smaller sail abaft, made of light mats sewed together—stretched on bamboos above and below, having cross pieces at intervals from top to bottom in the foresail only—which was hoisted on a triangle of stout bamboos forming the foremast—this is done exactly like the Bugis boats, a bamboo lashed close to the outer edge of the vessel on each side, and a third fastened to the deck amidships, immediately behind the stockade, is brought up to meet the two upright pieces, and all lashed together at the top forming a very efficient support to the sail, and excellently adaped for resisting shot; in fact it was found very difficult to shoot them away, for when struck by shot they were only split and still stood as well as before—the small mast behind was a spar.

The working of these sails was likewise very simple, for when the prahu went about the tacks and braces were let go, the bow pulled somewhat round, and the sail turned round to the other side of the mast, for the tacks—housed down and the braces, which led aft, made fast, and so the vessel was on the other tack. Each prahu had a stockade, not far from the bow, through which was pointed an iron four pounder, another stockade abaft on which was stuck two swivels, and around the sides were from three to six guns of the same description, all brass, stuck upon upright pieces of wood; they had likewise muskets, spears &c., and many of the pirates wore very large bamboo shields covering all the upper part of the body. The fighting men wore long hair which was loose in the battle and gave them a savage appearance. It may be mentioned that the orang kaya's prahu was armed with brass guns, according to the report of his son who is one of the captives.

We have been kindly favoured with the following comparative statement of the total Imports and Exports at this Settlement for the year 1837-38, ending 30th April last:—

	1836-37	1837-38.
Total amount of Import	$ 8,243,629	8,881,193.
Do. Exports	$ 7,806,965	8,024,133.

—in imports, the excess in favour of the past year being thus Drs. 637,566—and in Exports, of Drs. 217,158. In the course of a few weeks we shall have it in our power to lay before our readers the detailed statement of the trade for the same period; which will be a fitter occasion for any remarks which the subject may require. Sing. Free Press 14th June.

We regret to learn that the Small Pox has lately been committing great ravages among the native population of the Settlement, no less than 300 individuals, men, women and children, as is reported to us, having fallen victims within the last three months in the town! This is frightful devastation —and we suppose it was some similar example of the fatal effects of this scourge at Malacca which drew from the Recorder those observations on the subject of vaccination which fell from him when lately addressing the Grand Jury of that settlement. The illustrations which he then furnished of the benefit conferred on the population of Ceylon, by the introduction of the Cow-pox, ought certainly not to be lost sight of with regard to the Straits; altho' to remove the ignorant prejudices which exist on the subject among the natives must no doubt be a matter of some difficulty. But among other societies, why not have a "Vaccination Society" for the Straits Settlements? We know of no other, at least no better means, for disseminating correct notions regarding the practice among the native inhabitants of all ages and classes. Sing. Free Press.

Essay on the Opium Trade.

The following circular from the Secretary of the Society for the diffusion of useful knowledge we have been requested to insert in our paper. This circular only differs from the notice on the subject given in the Repository, in as far as the period for the delivery of the manuscripts has been prolonged, the day now fixed being the 29th March next year, instead of the 1st October next.

"The sum of £100 has been transmitted from Canton by the Editor of the Chinese Repository to the Committee of the Society for the Diffusion of Useful Knowledge for the best Essay on the OPIUM TRADE; showing its effects on the commercial, political, and moral interests of the nations and individual connected therewith, and pointing out the course they ought to pursue in regard to it.

"The following are the conditions on which that premium will be awarded;

"1. The Candidates for the premium will send their Manuscripts, of not less than 40 or more than 100 octavo pages of type, to the Secretary of the Society for the Diffusion of Useful Knowledge, giving their names and addresses, under a separate envelope sealed; of these envelopes only the one accompanying the successful essay will be opened by the Arbiters.

"2. All the Manuscripts which shall have come to hand by the 25th of March 1839, will be placed in the hands of two or more Arbiters, whom the Committee will nominate; and provided the best Essay shall be considered by the Arbiters worthy of the premium, the sum of £100 will be immediately remitted to the successful competitor.

"3. The Committee reserve to themselves the right to publish the prize Essay with the name of the Author.

"4. It is the wish of the Editor of the Chinese Repository that the unsuccessful Essays should remain at the disposal of the Committee, either to be published by them or sent to Canton. The Committee do not think that they can prescribe this condition; but they would thank the competitors to intimate whether they have any objection that their Essays shall in all events be at the Committee's disposal.

"5. The Essays addressed to the Secretary of the Society for the Diffusion of Useful Knowledge, London, must be sent post paid, or be delivered in such a manner as to be free from any charge.

By order of the Committee,

THO'. COATES, Secretary,

CORRESPONDENCE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE CANTON PRESS.

Sir,—The following lines may serve to fill up any vacant corner of your Paper: but should you be better provided with readable matter, in God's name, burn the Rhythm, and spare the infliction.

Your obedient Servant,
LAICUS.

WRITTEN IN A CHURCH YARD.

I wandered to the simple plot,
To seek my mother's grave,
Repining at the act of God,
Who took but what he gave.

'Twas even: and the solitude,
And melancholy shade,
Enticed my thoughts from earthly things,
To him who all things made.

I mused how once this senseless clay,
Was warm with rosy life:
How kind and good a mother she,
How dutiful a wife.

I thought of how in infancy,
She told of things above,
And bade me think of God alone,
To honor and to love.

She told how all his acts were just:
How merciful and kind:
And bade me not to mourn for her,
When I was left behind.

"For when" said she "I'm called away,
To meet my maker's face,
I leave behind all worldly ills,
For everlasting peace."

I thought such faith would surely meet,
Its heavenly reward:
But as I turned to leave the spot,
A tear fell on the sward.

CANTON PRESS.

Saturday, 7th July.

We have had several arrivals during the week, among which the Permee from Singapore, and the Canteenagh from Bombay, were those of most general interest, bringing the overland news from England to the 27th March. It will be seen that we have made longe extracts from the Sing. Free Press of 7th June, as well as from the London Supplement to the Calcutta Englishman of 24th March, a new publication containing a precis of the Europe news of the month previous to the starting of the Packet for the Mediterranean. Spain continued far from being pacified, though some little skirmishes had been of late in favor of the Queen's. The factions in Portugal had again broken out into open rebellion, but the Queen's party has, after a sanguinary contest in Lisbon, maintained the upper hand. The estates of Hannover, convoked according to the constitution of 1819, had addressed King Ernest in a very humble manner. In Canada the rebellion, so lately thought to have been put down, threatened to break out anew owing, it would appear from the reports from the United States, to the assistance given the Canadian patriots by the Citizens of the United States, bordering on Canada. The American Government, however, was doing all in it's power to discourage such aid being afforded: but the frontiers being of such immense extent, and the federal Government without the necessary troops to prevent such breaches of neutrality, it was feared that the English, for selfprotection, would be obliged to retaliate on the territory of the United States. Both Governments are supposed to be anxious to preserve the peace and we hope that by prudence and good will towards each other no national hostilities will ensue. The winter had been excessively severe all over Europe. In Ireland there had been some tremendous snowstorms, during which many people lost their lives. A severe gale has done much damage to the shipping at Liverpool, and to the town itself. The commercial accounts from America, as will be seen from some of our extracts were not so favorable as they had been. Those from England contine satisfactory to those engaged in the China trade, both SILK and TEA being at good prices.

At a special session of Oyer and Terminer lately held at Singapore, the Admiralty Jurisdiction conferred on that court was exercised for the first time, in the trial of 20 Pirates, two of whom had been taken separately in a small piratical prahu, and the other 18 by the Steamer Diana and some of the crew of H. M. S. Wolf, when in the act. of attacking a China Junk with a flotilla of six prahus. The clearest evidence as to their acts of Piracy was produced, and the Jury returned a verdict of guilty on all of them. Sentence of death on the two first was pronounced, and they accordingly were executed. The other 18 were remanded to the custody of the Sheriff, until the Court had time to institute enquiries before passing sentence.

THE HONG DEBTS.—We stated last week, when we published the letter addressed by Linchong of the Kinqua Hong, to his creditors, that the latter would probably accede to his proposal, and that the Hingtae affairs were likewise in a train of settlement, based upon the Hong merchants proposal to liquidate the debt within 8½ years, the last half dividend to be paid in November 1846. Since then, we believe, most of the principal creditors of the latter Hong have given in their answers, and, from what we hear, acceded to the arrangement as proposed by the Hong merchants, provided interest at the rate of 12 per cent per annum be added to their respective balances up to the day of a final arrangement being agreed upon. In preferring this claim, the creditors, we are informed, act upon a resolution adopted by the Committee appointed to inspect the claims against Hingtae, consisting of 3 Hong merchants and 3 foreigners, but it is thought now that the Co-hong is inclined to disallow this claim for interest, in which case the settlement may be as distant as ever, and it may after all become a matter in the arrangement of which the interference of the British Government will be necessary, for we do not see on what plea the Cohong can now, after having protracted the settlement unnecessarily upwards of a year, retract from the acts of their own representatives, nor, do we think, are the creditors very likely to submit to such an act of bad faith, whereby they would be losers to a great amount. The objection which Kinqua's creditors make to the mode of settlement as proposed is, that it does not, as was promised them, put them on a footing equally favorable as those of Hingtae, contrary to the repeated promises of the Hong merchants that they should be equally dealt with. They also demand, like the Hingtae creditors, that interest be allowed them at the rate of 12 per cent per annum up to the date of settlement, and to do this, the promised annual aid from the Hong merchants to Kinqua of $100,000 would not be sufficient. They moreover require that the interest, which Kinqua offers to pay at the rate of 5 per cent per annum, after the 10 annual instalments shall have been paid, in the 11th and 12th years, be annually added to, and paid with, the instalments. We believe, however, that hitherto the Hong merchants and Kinqua have objected to this mode of settlement, the latter having declared his inability to increase his annual payments by so much. Of the above purport or nearly so, we believe the respective answers from the creditors to have been, and the Hong merchants intentions to be; it now remains to be seen whether the latter will eventually act up to the promises they have so often given, or whether they will again elude a settlement by breaking them. In the latter case strong representations are likely again to be made to the Governor, giving him copies of the Hong-merchants correspondence in which the promises alluded to will appear, and it is possible that that officer may then be inclined to favor the just settlement of these claims, which has hitherto, on this pretext or that, been avoided by the Co-hong.

The late Hospital ship has by her purchaser been brought up the river beyond Canton, and is now to be seen in the Macao passage, where, no doubt, she is shortly to be broken up. We are somewhat astonished that the jealous local authorities should have suffered a ship of this size (about 900 Tons) to be brought up from Whampoa through the inner passage, this fact proclaiming to all the world, the possibility of bringing large ships to Canton, a fact which they have hitherto been anxious to hide. We suppose that this ship, though very light, without masts, or the usual ship's stores, could not draw less than ten or eleven feet, a draught of water too great to allow of her coming to Canton passing the French and dutch forts, which is the way boats take between Canton and Whampoa.

THE CANTON RIVER. In no country but China does so great a number of people own no habitation on terra firma—no where but here is a whole class of people to be found who have no house but their boats, whose whole existence is passed on the water, and who, though apparently exposed to so many privations, appear always cheerful and contented with their lot. The people living on the river of Canton are considered to be a separate race, and, we believe, even the Chinese laws consider them as inferior, and exclude them, together with play-actors and body servants, from the attainment of literary honors, and therefore from any advancement in the state, which otherwise is open to every free born Chinese. It is possible that in olden times the southern parts of China, as those of most other countries, were invaded and appropriated by settlers from the northern provinces, who, stronger and bolder than the old inhabitants, either enslaved or subjugated them so completely, that they, to enjoy some kind of freedom from persecution, chose the waters to live on. That laws, made of course by the invaders, should be unfavorable to these poor people, is in the natural course of human affairs, and thence their being considered unfit, after a time, of any thing but to hand the oar. In the course of time, these inhabitants of the river seem to have become reconciled to their fate, and, with asiatic patience, to have submitted in the lot that had fallen to their share. To the circumstance here mentioned, as well as to an innate love to the proximity of running water, which will be equally discovered in the habits of many surrounding nations, who may possibly claim kindred with them, such as the Bugis, Siamese, and Malays, we may therefore rather attribute the crowded state of many of the rivers of China in the proximity of large cities, than to a country so much over populated, as some have stated, as not to afford room to dwell on it to all it's children. We have frequently, in the descriptions of travellers, read of the hardships, privations, and dangers to which this abject floating population is exposed; but we are tempted, from what with our own eyes we have seen in the vicinity of Canton, to say, that in few communities is contentment so generally distributed, and in few is absolute want less common than among the people living in boats on the Canton river. It may be true that they have not much riches to boast of, but destitution they seem to be equally strangers to. Most of them have their very comfortable boats, than which none can be more conveniently arranged, as well for river navigation as for a place of abode. Most of these boats are kept scrupulously clean, much more so indeed than the persons of their owners, whom however, during the winter season, which in Canton is not very inclement, you will generally see well clad in warm clothes, much better in fact than the poor in most parts of Europe. In summer, clothes are little better than a luxury, but yet, one sees them well provided with them, and passing by their boats at dinner time, there are few in which one does not see the whole family busily engaged making frequent application with their saucers to a huge pot of rice, and with their chop sticks convey unto themselves the condiments that in various dishes are arranged round it. We do not say that poverty is altogether absent from the river; in what community is it not to be found? But to suppose that the Chinese population living on the water is there to obliged by extreme destitution is a great error. They from habit, and the stock they come from, take to the water as naturally as ducklings, and probably never have a thought that they could exist any where but in their boats. The bustle and traffic of a large town procures for them sufficient employment to gain a livelyhood. Some of these inhabitants of the waters are employed as ferrymen, others in catching fish, others again, with more affection to the land, serve there as porters whilst their wives attend to the domestic economy of their boats. Many, aspiring to a higher degree, for there are distinctions of rank here as well as elsewhere, are owners of floating coffee houses, called flower boats, looking like fairy palaces; various indeed are their occupations, and their degrees of life on the river, in fact, in some parts it presents the aspect of a floating city, and of necessity, all the arts and occupations of such are to be found there.

COMMERCIAL REMARKS.

IMPORTS.

COTTON MANUFACTURES.—The arrival of the Parkfield, with other heavy supplies being known to be close at hand, has caused a decline of ½ to ¾ of a dollar per piece in both white and grey LONGCLOTHS, and with a difficulty of sale, except for immediate delivery. One or two small parcels of white of middling quality are reported in the sales of the week at only about $5, and a few thousand pieces of gray at about 4½. COTTON YARN, remains very depressed, and good yarn Nos. 20 @ 34 would be with difficulty sold at $38, while some inferior, we learn, has been, within these few days, disposed of at $28 @ 29, and for some, we believe, not within 2 or 3 dollars of even this price could be obtained. The importation appears likely to be beyond the consumption. We reported some sales of CHINTZES, last week a $4½; we have since ascertained that one parcel was sold under $4, and 1,700 Pieces at from 2½ @ 3, being both much too narrow, and the latter, in addition, of most unsuitable patterns. Our information, it is well known, must be principally derived from Chinese purchasers, from whom it is not easy to obtain it at times very correctly, and we shall feel at all times obliged to our mercantile friends for reports of sales. CHINTZES, unless of good dimensions and new and suitable patterns, are dull of sale.

WOOLLENS.—The accounts of the markets in the interior for BROADCLOTHS are not very encouraging—but as the stock here is very moderate, they have not declined, there is not however much demand for them. LONGELLS, on the contrary, cannot be quoted, the scarlet higher than 10½ and the others 9 @ 9½, according to quality and assortment, and no demand, but we do not find that any of the holders are disposed to sell. CAMBLETS are very depressed, although there have been very few imported lately, and should the old rates of duty be levied, neither English or Dutch would realize $20 per piece.

METALS.—The importation of IRON is very short, and the price, in consequence, keeps up. LEAD would sell with difficulty at 6 $.

RICE.—The crop promises most favorably, and the price is still declining.

STRAITS PRODUCE.—Without transactions or alteration. No new BETELNUT yet arrived. TIN remains as before. PEPPER is heavy of sale. RATTANS continue in good demand.

SANDALWOOD,—has declined, although the stock is very short, the late accounts from the northward being unfavorable.

COTTON.—Business has not yet commenced, but the brokers are beginning to make enquiries, and although they talk of very low prices, say for the best Bombay 9. 5, it is expected that, as the dealers are quite bare, purchases must be made to some extent in a few days. Already nearly 60,000 bales have been received from Bombay, and several more large ships must be close at hand. No arrivals with Madras and Bengal Cotton.

OPIUM.—The market continues to be very moderately supplied with Malwa, and the whole quantity to come on before the end of the year cannot, it is said, exceed 13,000 Chests. The price, therefore, keeps up, and there has been, during the week, a fair demand @ 640 @ 650, which may at any rate, be expected to last till the Junks have all sailed. There has also been a little more enquiry for new Patna at 530 @ 540, and new Benares at 500. Old Patna and Benares are nearly unsaleable. Turkey is also taken off very slowly at about 400 $. For deliveries last month, see above.

EXPORTS.

RAW SILK.—The accounts are very general of a failure of the Nankin crop, and of very high prices but we are not in possession of much certain information to be relied on. The produce of Canton Silk is also reported short.

TEA.—The new Orange Pekoe is arriving fast, and is selling at high prices: the quality is for the most part good, and the crop is said to be short, but as the rates paid yield the Tea-men a very large profit upon the low cost in the country, considerable quantities may be expected of the second and third pickings later in the year. We hope the high prices paid for this Tea may not have the effect of rendering more difficult the settlement of more important descriptions, which will soon be in course of arrival. It will be seen from the statement on the other side, that the whole amount of Teas shipped to Great Britain during the season ending June 30th last, amounts to 33,416,266 lbs. against 40,170,666 lbs. shipped in the season 1836-37. The following is the Cargo of the Bonanza for Liverpool, Congou, 898; Souchong, 10; Hongmuey, 27; Pekoe, 27; Orange Pekoe, 48; Hyson, 60; Hyson Skin, 25; Twankay, 97; Gunpowder, 4; Imperial, 8; Raw Silk, 32 Piculs; and of the Thomas Lowry for London, Congou, 1668; Caper, 69; Souchong, 209; Pekoe, 60; Orange Pekoe, 36; Hyson, 234; Young Hyson, 21; Twankay, 404; Gunpowder, 399; Imperial, 272; Raw Silk, 102 Piculs.

FREIGHTS.—Nominal at £6 @ 7, and as there are two or three vessels offering, shippers are looking for lower rates.

ART. IV. Ophthalmic Hospital at Canton: the eighth report including the period from January 1st to June 30th, 1838. By the Reverend P. PARKER, M. D.

THE whole number of patients is 5600 of whom 1025 have been admitted since the last report. A smaller number than has been received in any preceding equal period—on account of the impracticability of treating more. The urgency of patients for admittance has exceeded all precedent. It has often been unpleasant to go to or from the hospital, in consequence of the importunate applicants, who often fall upon their knees in the street, or in numbers seize the arm, pleading poverty, and that they have come a long distance and waited many days; and having spent the little money they brought, must return home; they therefore entreat that at least their eyes be examined and a day appointed for their admission. In some instances, they have pursued me even to my residence, after being told the impracticability of receiving them.

The expenses for the present term are $1231.77, viz.:

For native assistants - - -	$195.23
For medicines, instruments, &c. - -	303.22
For board, fuel, &c. - - -	219.39
For repairs - - - - -	9.93
For rent (for one year, from Sept. 1837)	500.00

No. 4903. Tumor of a peculiar character. March 5th. Choo Yihleang, aged 21, a shoemaker of Kaouyaou, had a tumor on the right side of the neck, as large as his head, as it appeared from a front view. It was situated beneath the sterno-cleido-mastoideus muscle, and the superficial fascia. It extended from the ear to the clavicle, and from upon the trachea to the posterior edge of the above muscle, which was drawn very tense above it. When the patient entered the hospital it was firmly fixed, scarcely admitting a perceptible motion in any direction. At a point on the surface near the apex was indicated a slight collection of fluid. The patient was blooming in health, and resolutely desirous of its extirpation. He was admitted to the hospital, and in the course of a week or ten days, after repeated examinations it was manifestly more moveable—a fact that the patient also observed. With the advice of several surgeons who had seen the patient, it was determined to extirpate it, though it was possible the external carotid artery might require a division in the event. On the 25th of April the operation was performed, assisted by Messrs. Cox, Jardine, and Holgate. Precaution was taken for tying the carotid if necessary. The patient took 25 drops of landanum half an hour before coming to the table. The proceeding day he requested not to be tied, assuring me he would not move a limb, or speak a word. When the moment arrived, instead of shrinking from the crisis, he put one hand on the table and skipped upon it with great agility, as if overjoyful in the prospect of being freed of his troublesome companion.

The incisions were made in the direction of the muscle, from the mastoid process to the clavicle. A small portion of the anterior edge of the mastoid muscle was divided, but to our great satisfaction soon after the incisions were completed, the tumor readily separated from its sides, and in four minutes was completely out. A few small arteries that were divided soon contracted, and gave no further trouble; but two veins continued to discharge their contents so copiously that neither cold water or pressure would stop them, and ligatures became indispensable. One upon the external jugular apparently (for when natural positions are so altered we cannot speak confidently,) and upon a large branch of the same, passing under the lower jaw. During the operation the patient was perfectly collected, and did not utter a groan: spoke with natural voice when spoken to, and repeatedly requested the operator might not be alarmed. The tumor weighed 5½lbs. It was surrounded by a firm wall an inch thick, resembling in hardness the full grown coccoon, except at one point; then came another layer of three quarters of an inch of white pulpy substance, and centrally there were several ounces of milky fluid quite inodorous. The large muscle resumed its natural place, the wound healed chiefly by the first intention and in twenty days the patient, in good health and with unequivocal sentiments of gratitude, returned to his family. Thus the case that appeared formidable in prospect, has really proved of less trouble than often attends the removal of a tumor but a hundredth part of its size. It has been the more interesting as being the first instance in which I have applied a ligature to a vein. But the result favors the conclusion that veins may be tied with as much impunity as arteries. In the present instance one ligature came away of itself on the 12th, the other on the 14th day.

It is with gratitude to Him, to whose blessing it is to be ascribed, that we once more repeat the fact, that no fatal termination has attended as yet an operation at the hospital, though in two or three instances of great intricacy there has been but a hair's breadth escape from death. This circumstance no doubt has had an important influence in producing the unbounded confidence of all who apply for relief, among whom have been, the past term, persons of various ranks, and from the remotest parts of the Empire, from Ningpo on the east, and Peking on the north, to the borders of Tartary on the west. The generous remittances of medicines, surgical instruments, and a skeleton, from friends in New York and Philadelphia, demand and receive our most grateful acknowledgement.

ART. V. Foreign opium a poison: illustrated in ten paragraphs, written by Koo Kingshan, a literary gentleman of Keängning, in the province of Keängsoo, September, 1836.

OPIUM is a poisonous drug, brought from foreign countries. To the question, what are its virtues, the answer is: It raises the animal spirits, and prevents lassitude. Hence the Chinese continually run into its toils. At first they merely strive to follow the fashion of the day; but in the sequel the poison takes effect, the habit becomes fixed, and the sleeping smokers are like corpses—lean and haggard in demons. Such are the injuries which it does to life. Moreover, the drug maintains an exorbitant price, and cannot be obtained except for the pure metal. Smoking opium, in its first stages, impedes business; and when the practice is continued for any considerable length of time, it throws whole families into ruin, dissipates every kind of property, and destroys man himself. There cannot be a greater evil than this. In comparison with arsenic, I pronounce it tenfold the greater poison. One swallows arsenic, because he has lost his reputation and is so involved that he cannot extricate himself. Thus driven to desperation, he takes the dose and is destroyed at once. But those who smoke the drug are injured in many ways. What is about to be related of this poison, will I hope, rouse from their lethargy the smokers of the drug.

1. It exhausts the animal spirits. When the smoker commences the practice, he seems to imagine that his spirits are thereby augmented; but he ought to know that the appearance is factitious;—a mere process of excitement. It may be compared to raising the wick of a lamp, which, while it increases the light, hastens the exhaustion of the oil and the extinction of the light. Hence, the youth who smoke will shorten their own days and cut off all hope of posterity, leaving their fathers and mothers and wives without any one on whom to depend; and those in middle and advanced life, who smoke, will accelerate the termination of their years. These are consequences which may well be deplored!

2. It impedes the regular performance of business. Those in places of trust, who smoke, fail to attend personally even to their most important affairs. Merchants, who smoke, fail to keep their appointments, and all their concerns fall behindhand. For the wasting of time and the destruction of business, the pipe is unrivalled.

3. It wastes the flesh and blood. From the robust, who smoke, the flesh is gradually consumed and worn away; and their skin hangs down like bags. The faces of the weak, who smoke, are cadaverous and black; and their bones, naked as billets of wood. We expect with certainty, that they will soon be fit only to fill up the ditches by the way-side.

4. It dissipates every kind of property. The rich, who smoke, will inevitably waste their patrimony. It is the usual practice, in smoking, for two persons to lie down (on the same platform) facing each other (with their opium and apparatus between them). Indulging freely in conversation, they are soon in elysian fields; and, by a daily expenditure for purchasing the noxious drug, and for the entertainment of friends, who are also confirmed smokers of opium, the wasteful consumption of property is very great. Who, now, will say that such a course can be long continued?

5. It renders the person ill-favored. Those who have been long habituated to smoking, doze for whole days over their pipes, without appetite for food, finding it difficult to observe even the common civilities of life. When the desire for opium comes on, they cannot resist its impulse. Mucus flows from their nostrils, and tears from their eyes. Their very bodies are rotten and putrid. From careless observers, the sight of such objects is enough to excite loud peals of laughter.

6. It promotes obscenity. When men have long continued the practice of smoking opium, their wives and children learn to imitate them; and when it is carried to great excess, no distinction is preserved between the inner and outer apartments; no difference between night and day! Hence spring dark confusions, of which it is a shame to speak openly. This, indeed, may be styled a long, a great repose!

7. It discloses secrets. The smokers, whether honorable or mean, all recline on the same platform, where the secrets of their hearts are honestly divulged. "Where there is much talking, there must be some slander," is an old proverb. Now what the honest man hears in these scenes of dissipation, may not lead to any evil consequences; but from what enters the ears of the dishonest, it will be difficult to prevent disastrous results.

8. It violates the laws. Both in purchasing and in smoking the drug, one is ever liable to meet with worthless vagabonds, who under various pretences, for the purpose of extortion, will raise difficulties and cause the transgressor of the laws to be prosecuted and punished. Those who open shops for the sale of the drug are liable to the severe punishments of strangulation and decapitation; for those who buy and smoke the punishment is banishment. Why expose yourselves to these penalties of the law?

9. It attacks the vitals. By a long continuance of the habit, worms are generated in the abdomen; and in the confirmed smokers the baneful influences attack the intestines, and great injury is the consequence—injury which even the most celebrated physicians can never avert. Look at suicides. They swallow the crude opium, and instantly their intestines swell; the blood flows from their ears, eyes, mouth and nose; the whole body becomes red and bloated; when death ensues. There is no relief. Hence may be seen the virulence of the drug. Once, when on a journey, it happened that a fellow-passenger, who was a smoker, had used up all his opium; the periodical desire for it came on; but finding no means to gratify his appetite, he strove to take away his own life. By mistake he swallowed a cup of oil, which induced excessive vomiting; when he threw up a collection of noxious worms, particolored, with red heads, and hairy: they crawled upon the ground, to the great astonishment of the spectators.

10. It destroys life. The poor smoker, who has pawned every article in his possession, still remains idle and inactive. And when he has no means of borrowing money, and the periodical thirst returns hard upon him, he will pawn his wives and sell his daughters. Such are the inevitable consequences. From the province of Nganhwuy, I once saw a man, named Chin, who being childless, purchased a concubine, utero jam conceptum ære habentem; afterwards, when his money was expended and other means all failed him, being unable to resisted the desire for the pipe, he sold this same concubine and received for her several tens of dollars. This money being expended, he went and hung himself. Alas, how painful was his end!

Gleanings.

From the Atlas, March 20.

POSTAGE.—The select committee of the House of Commons for the reduction of postage, of which Mr. Wallace is chairman, sits three times a week to take evidence on this important subject. The principal part of the testimony during the last week was given by witnesses brought forward at the suggestion of the London mercantile committee, which is busy seeking for the best evidence throughout the whole of the United Kingdom. It is said the evidence proves at once the frightful extent of illicit conveyance of letters, comparatively unknown to the Post Office, and the want of the commercial community of a great reduction of postage.

SIMPLICITY.—The proprietor of an immense number of waterside carts in Liverpool, who has raised himself by industry to be a man of considerable property, being in conversation with a gentleman, was asked if he could draw an inference. "Not I," said he, "but I bought a bay mare the other day, and I'll lay a five pound note that she draws it, if it does not weigh more than five tons."

ANOTHER THAMES TUNNEL IRRUPTION.—Only a fortnight since we published, on the authority of the directors report, a most gratifying statement respecting the progress of the works at the Tunnel, from which we were led to infer that no further risk or impediment was to be apprehended. We learn, however, that the water broke in again on Monday morning, and although in this instance fortunately without causing any loss of life, it seems quite certain that the process of boring under that part of the river bed, where the water is deepest, is not unattended with great danger. The following account has been published, we presume on the authority of Mr. Brunel, the engineer. At half-past six o'clock yesterday morning (Monday) the appearance of the ground and an unusual noise as if from the rushing of water into a cavity having taken place, the engineer's attention was drawn to the peculiar circumstances and he therefore anticipated a rush of water. Mr. Mason, one of the assistant engineers, who was then just going on duty, with some active miners, attempted to take means to prevent an irruption; but finding it useless, he thought it necessary to order the workmen to retreat, which they did, in an orderly manner, by the safety-platforms erected by Mr. Brunel for the passage of the workmen in case of danger, and they ascended to the top of the shaft without any personal injury having happened to a single individual, although between sixty and seventy persons were in the works at the time. In about a quarter of an hour afterwards the water gradually filled the tunnel. Active operations were immediately commenced for filling up the aperture in the bed of the river, as a quantity of clay had been already collected near the spot for the purpose of forming the proposed covering towards the north shore, and which is not yet completed.

PARLIAMENTARY PRIVILEGES.—The liberty of speech which hon., members claim now-a-days as presumptive right, would, if exercised two centuries back, have subjected them to heavy pains and penalties. In an old chronicle we find the following strange record:—In 1621 a Mr. Edward Floyde was punished by the House of Commons for a breach of privilege, in having scoffed at the son-in-law and daughter of the King. The sentence is thus reported:—"1. Not to bear arms as a gentleman, nor be a competent witness in any court of justice. 2. To ride with his face to a horse's tail, to stand in the pillory, and have his ears nailed, &c. 3. To be whipped at the cart's tail. 4. To be fined 5,000£. 5. To be perpetually imprisoned in Newgate. It was put to the question, first, whether Floyde should be whipped or not, because he was a gentleman; yet it was agreed, per plures, that he should be whipped. Then it was put to the question whether Floyde's ears should be nailed to the pillory or not, and agreed, per plures, not to be nailed."

COMPARISON OF SPEED.—A French scientific journal states that the ordinary rate is per second:—Of a man walking, 4 feet. Of a good horse in harness, 12. Of a rein-deer in a sledge, on the ice, 26. Of an English race horse, 43. Of a hare, 88. Of a good sailing ship 19. Of the wind 82. Of sound 1,038. Of a twenty-four pounder cannon-ball, 1,300. Of the air, which, so divided, returns into space, 1,300.

North-America.

From the Buffalo Commercial Advertiser.

Gibraltar, (Mich.) Feb. 26.

Messrs. Editors,—I have opened this to inform you of a grand attempt of the Patriots; one which for folly and absurdity, casts all former ones in to the shade.

For some days back, we at Gibraltar, were stunned with reports of men and munitions of war, collecting between this and Monore. On the 24th, report said they were at Point Mouille, about 7 miles off; from there they would cross to Canada immediately. The Governor, Marshals, &c. came down from Detroit in the night. On the morning (25th) this command started with the civilians, for the Patriot camp. About half way we were told they had gone, and were now at the mouth of L'Ecorce, at 2 P. M., just in time to see the tail of the force, strung along the ice beyond our lines. The head had already got on Fighting Island. I was deucedly mortified, for the "sympathizers" were all on the broad grin to see how the military had been outgeneralled.

An officer soon after came from Detroit, with 30 regulars and 38 Brady Guards, making our force near 150. Sentinels were put along shore to stop arms, &c., from going or coming. A British armed force was seen coming down from Sandwich, so in the night or near day we were sure of a fight. In the morning, bright and early, bang went the cannon. As the firing was but from one gun, I thought they were burning powder to show they were "the boys that feared no noise;" but behold lots of them began to blacken the snow on the far side, and soon they approached our shore—the Sentinels stopped and examined them—they had no arms—that was why they came away. "Those who had arms (they said) would stay as long as they could,—with safety they did not add. Soon after, the British, it seems, made a show of surrounding the boys who were left, and so they came away, and thus ended the attempt.

We took from them some 40 muskets (stolen) 8 or 10 rifles, a half dozen swords and pistols, and a gun carriage, which, in the morning they had run past our sentinels.

The rascals had gone over with only one gun, (not mounted) and, may be, 60 small arms. Had they not shown a little sense in running away as soon as they did, every one of them would have been killed or taken. As it was, I saw one who was hurt in the arm by a grape shot, and heard of another whose leg was broken by ditto. The British had but one gun, which was fired some 30 times. Our men discharged their piece twice. I don't think any small guns were discharged, at least to hurt.

Now isn't this patriotic—all of it? People came from Detroit and other parts in crowds to see the fun, and I should have enjoyed the fun too, (you have no idea how downcast the scamps looked as they came back) but I must consider that the people on the Canada side have been kept, for six or eight weeks past, in fear and trembling for their families and property, by those good-for-nothing vagabonds.

I can't say whether they will come to a head again or not; or to what cause they will attribute their failure. Some are blaming Vreeland, one of the leaders, who was arrested in the night and carried to Detroit. I think the true reason of their ill luck is a want of common honesty among them all—they and their abettors, from A to Izzard. Yours, &c.

FROM THE UPPER CANADA FRONTIER.—The following account of the defeat, of what we hope will prove to be the last of the senseless and criminal expeditions fitted out from our territory against Upper Canada, is from a correspondent of the Columbus, Ohio, Statesman, under date of Sandusky, March 7.

Last evening Gen. Scott and suite arrived here.—The Canadian General, M'Leod, and others of less note, were at Drake's Hotel a few minutes before his arrival, when a letter was put into his (M'Leod's) hands, and a general scampering ensued. M'Leod was secured by one of our citizens until this morning, when, finding pursuit grew hot, he was furnished with a horse and started for Huron. Soon after, Gen. Scott with his four horse wagon took the same road, and the report holds good that he had taken M'Leod also.—Bradley, the late commandant at Port au Plait, is not yet taken, but will be, should he continue in this region, as Scott manifests a full determination to bring those lawless men to justice. I consider all military movements in this quarter as at an end, and most of the men have dispersed already. Another sleigh load of wounded men were brought across the bay this afternoon, having no means to pay for assistance and support, and must depend on private charity. Had the British force had Indians with them as usual, and as we expected, but very few could have escaped, and we should probably have heard the war whoop at our doors—but it seems there were none.

The Patriots make out their loss in the skirmish at 11 killed, 16 missing, and some 20 wounded returned here; but there are reasons for supposing the number to be much greater.

The most moderate of them claim to have killed of the British 15, and wounded in proportion. I must not say that some think they killed more than that number themselves, but the probability is, my statements are correct. Every one will assert that enough of blood has been shed in accomplishing nothing.

As usual in such affairs, some acts of individual bravery and desperate recklessness took place. A boy of some 16 or 17 carries away the palm of the fight, in the estimation of the men; but I feel unwilling to give any particulars of that kind, as it seems to me that we had better repress than incite a military spirit at this time.

The British attacking force were all red coats, but probably partly militia in the Lion's Skin. The whole number, from 3 to 500, came on in separate bodies, the main one intended to amuse those who had a stomach for a fight, while the flankers should advance and cut off the retreat. The Patriots on seeing the main column near them, retreated down the island, on the land 6 or 7 miles; and when they came out to take the ice, found themselves in front of the detachment which had advanced rapidly to cut them off. Here they received the British fire and returned it, but soon broke and fled.

I cannot but hope and believe that the British Government will, in the plenitude of its power, show a high attribute of mercy, and pardon these misguided men; while I have full confidence that our own will punish the leaders and scatter the rowdies of our own citizens, whose hearts have run away with their heads.

P. S. Since writing the foregoing, a Mr. Fox, who resided on Point au Plait, and remained there to protect his property during the late invasion, has arrived here in pursuit of property taken from him. From his statement I have nothing to correct except that the British loss in killed is something less than I stated.—The force returned to Malden almost immediately, taking such of the wounded as could be removed.—There were a few Indians of the Hurons with them, but they did not get up in time to pursue—a most fortunate circumstance for the flying Patriots.—Ibid.

Extract from a letter from Major Pitcher, dated

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 27, 1838.

SIR: Having received authentic information from the region of the Upper Missouri, of a highly important character, I deem it my duty to communicate it without delay, though not entirely applicable to my own agency, having, as I conceive it does, a bearing upon Mr. Harris's letter of the 11th ultimo.

It appears that the effects of the small-pox among most of the Indian tribes of Upper Missouri surpass all former scourges, and that the country through which it has passed is literally depopulated, and converted into one great graveyard. The Mandans, consisting of 1,600 souls had been reduced, by the 1st of October last, to thirty-one persons. The Gros Ventres, or Minetarees, a tribe about 1,000 strong, took the disease a month later than their neighbours, the Mandans. One half had perished, and the disease was still raging. They, no doubt, shared the same fate with the Mandans.

The Ricaras, who had recently joined the last named tribes, and numbered about three thousand, were most of them out on a hunting excursion when the disease broke out among the Mandans, and consequently received it sometime later. One half of them had fallen, and the disease was raging with unabated fury, not more than one out of fifty recovering from it. Most of those that survived, subsequently committed suicide, despairing, I suppose, at the loss of friends, and the changes wrought by the disease in their persons—some by shooting, others by stabbing, and some by throwing themselves from the high precipices a long the Missouri. The great band of Assineboins, say 10,000 strong, and the Crees, numbering about 30,0 0, have been almost annihilated; and, notwithstanding all the precaution used by the gentlemen engaged in the rrde of that remote region to prevent it, the disease had reached the Blackfeet of the Rocky Mountains; a band of 1,000 lodges had been swept off, and the disease was rapidly spreading among the different bands of that great tribe, numbering, I think, about 60,000 souls.

I have no doubt but the prediction contained in my letter of the 27th ultimo will be fully realized, and all the Indians on the Columbia river, as far as the Pacific ocean will share the fate of those before alluded to.

Gen. WILLIAM CLARK,
Superintendent of Indians Affairs.

This is a fearful description of deplorable suffering among the red men. It is gratifying to know, that as soon as authentic accounts of the ravages of of the small pox among the tribes on the Missouri were received, inquiries were promptly instituted by the proper authorities to ascertain their origin and extent, and measures adopted to afford alleviation, and, where practicable, to prevent further infection. Funds for vaccinating the Indians were immediately remitted, with authority to employ the necessary agents.

The agent charged with the execution of these measures possesses great energy, and the most favorable results may be anticipated.—Washington Globe.

RESUMPTION OF SPECIE PAYMENTS IN NEW-YORK.—The meeting of merchants, traders, &c., at the New-York Exchange, on Thursday last, was numerously attended. It was called to order by Charles H. Russell, on whose motion James Boorman, was appointed Chairman, and James Lee and Jonathan Sturges chosen Secretaries.

The following resolutions, offered by Pelatiah Perit, and seconded by Samuel Ward, were thereupon read and unanimously adopted:—

Resolved, That this meeting hails with great satisfaction the declaration on the part of the New-York city banks of their purpose to resume specie payments on or before the 10th of May next.

Resolved, That we have entire confidence in the solidity of our banks, and in their ability to resume and maintain specie payments, and that in this measure we will give them our cordial and active co-operation.

Resolved, That independently of moral obligation and legislative enactment, the favorable state of foreign exchanges, and the diminished liabilities both of banks and individuals, call for a prompt resumption of specie payments, and we consider such a course the surest means of equalizing ultimately our internal exchanges, and of restoring general prosperity.

Resolved, That in contemplating the resumption of specie payments, we can perceive no reason to apprehend that it will occasion any farther contraction on the part of the banks; but, on the contrary, that the restoration of confidence, which must necessarily grow out of that measure, will lead to a gradual increase of their issues, and enable them to extend greater facilities to the community.

Resolved, That regarding the general resumption of specie payments by the banks throughout the United States as essential to our national credit abroad, and as calculated to regulate our internal exchanges, we respectfully invite the institutions of other States to a simultaneous effort to accomplish this most desirable object.—From the Boston Courier, March 12.

Revenue of 1837.—The amount of gross revenue which accrued from duties on imports and tonnage in the ports of the United States in the year 1836, according to a statement recently presented by the Register of the Treasury, was $31,890,356. Of this amount $17,176,908 accrued in the city of New York; 4,489,473 in Boston; in Philadelphia 3,195,339; New Orleans 2,291,544; Baltimore 1 479,494; Charleston 698,339; Savannah 156,923; Richmond 152,575; Mobile 140,769; Portland 136,837; and Salem 128,081.

The amount of debentures, allowances, bounties, and expenses was $4 722,663, of which 1,378,844 consisted of expenses of collection. The amount of debentures and other deductions in New York was 1,467,792 and in Boston 820,680. The amount of allowances on fishing vessels was 213,091, and of bounties on salted fish 6,731.

There are one hundred and nine collection districts, in forty nine of which the expenditures exceed the gross revenue. The excess of expenditure over revenue in these 49 districts amounted to $ 227,365.

The amount of duties on imports which accrued in the city of New York in the year ending Sept. 30, 1837, was $10,855,201. The amount which accrued in the same period in Boston was 2,966,109, in Philadelphia 2,073,778, Baltimore 1,220,751 New Orleans 1,679,758, Salem 151,237.—From the Boston Daily Advertiser, March 13.

CANTON PRESS.

Saturday, 14th July.

By the Trenton from Boston 16th March, papers from that city to the 14th, and from New York to the 12th March have been received, and kindly lent to us. It will be seen from our extracts from them that the Government of the U. S. was taking active measures against the armed Canadian patriots on the territory of the U. S. For the present the insurrection in Canada seems to be put down, some of the chiefs have been made prisoners by the British, and if any few remain under arms, they seem to be not much better than armed banditti without political influence. The Canadian Chief van Rannzellaer, has, it is said, been made a prisoner in the U. S. The new Lieut. Governor of Upper Canada, Sir George Arthur, had arrived in New York, on his way to his government and Lord Gosford in Boston, to await H. M. S. Pique, to embark for England. MacKenzie, Chief of the Patriot force in Canada, had, it was reported, arrived in New York. From one of our extracts it will be seen that the banks of the City of New York were to resume specie payments on the 10th of May. The accounts of the state of the money market are more favorable than the late news from England led us to expect—confidence seemed to be gradually returning, and affairs, we hope, will bear a much better aspect as soon as the resolution of returning to specie-payment shall be in operation. Congress after having passed a neutrality bill, with reference to the Canada affairs, was principally employed in the discussion of a Treasury Bill proposed by the Government, and which, if carried, would lead to the Establishment of a Government bank, a proposal, which as might be expected, is strenuously opposed by the Whig-party, with Mr. Clay at it's head. In the senate, it was supposed the Government would, on this question, be in a considerable minority; in the House of Representatives the forces are reported to be pretty equally divided. A duel has been fought between two members of Congress, Mr. Graves, and Mr. Cilley, with rifles, in which at the third shot Mr. Cilley was killed. We have not seen any paper giving a description of the event itself, but read in others that the funeral of Mr. Cilley was attended by the members of both houses of congress; the chief judges had, by a committee of the house of representatives, been invited to attend, but refused on account of the manner in which the deceased met his death. It will further be seen from an extract that the small pox are committing frightful ravages among the Indians of North-America, destroying entire nations at once. This disease was carried to them, it is said, in a boat sent up the St. Lawrence, with the usual annual presents to some of the Indian tribes from the British government, in which boat one of the men was attacked with this illness, the character of which was at first mistaken, and time thus given to infect such Indians as went on board the boat, and these soon spread it among their tribes.

THE CHARACTER OF THE CHINESE.—China is, perhaps, the only country, visited by foreigners, where the communication with the natives, is conducted entirely in the English language. This extraordinary fact is no doubt attributable, in a great measure, to the partly real, but greatly exaggerated, difficulty of acquiring the language of the country; and also to the jealous fears of the Government, who fancy, and with some show of reason, that a knowledge of the heavenly dialect would afford facilities for traitorous intrigue with, and enable, foreigners, in some degree, to open the eyes of their subjects to their, as we conceive, degraded and slavish state.

It is not therefore surprising that, ignorant of their language, and deprived of all social intercourse with the natives, foreigners either entirely misunderstand the Chinese character, or, what is more likely, know nothing of it. We have heard it said, that reckoning from the son of Heaven down to the meanest Cooly in the Empire, the sons of Han are born, bred, and die, thieves and liars! The absurdity of this sweeping sentence is, of course, too manifest to need a single word of refutation: but when we consider the circumstances that gave rise to it, we are no longer surprised, but rather lament that foreigners should judge of the national character by what they see or hear of the few by whom they are surrounded.

Ex uno disce omnes, we need not point out, is peculiarly inappropriate here. The servants belong, without exception, to the very lowest class in the empire. They consider it a degrading service, and not one of them ever speaks of his employers but in a contemptuous or patronizing style. In order to gain the means of freeing themselves from this unpalatable thraldom, they pilfer and cheat as much as possible, and hold rather extravagant notions respecting the extent of their perquisites. But are the servants in Europe, we may ask, more scrupulous in their dealings? We think not. As regards their contempt of veracity, we must consider their ignorance. So far from having correct principles instilled into their minds in infancy, they are taught to consider it a praiseworthy act, to gull, successfully, a barbarian. The merchants, too, are generally uneducated men, and stand very low in the national estimation. Some of the Hong-merchants even have been suspected of taking unfair advantage in business; and in some few instances they have been accused of gross fraud. Yet from these specimens is the whole usually judged: that they are unreasonably so, any one at all conversant with their language can testify.

Amongst themselves the Chinese are excessively hospitable, and we have had opportunities of seeing the same hospitality exercised towards foreigners; ceremony and politeness are carried to the verge of absurdity, and are attended by their usual concomitant, insincerity, neither in a greater or less degree than we find among very polite people in Europe. Sensuality, in many degrading forms, prevails throughout the country: but here again they are not singular. That they are charitable, none can deny: a convincing proof of this is the immense number of persons who gain their livelyhood by begging, many of whom voluntarily submit to be maimed to render themselves eligible for this comparatively easy life. Yet the people generally are far from idly disposed. The population is so great that the strictest industry, is necessary, to withstand famine. The most striking and beautiful feature in their character is their respect and reverence for the aged. Who ever sees here, as is often the case in Europe, a white beard and tottering gait, made the object of ridicule? Who has not remarked the dutiful submission of the son to the wishes, however unreasonable or tyrannical, of his parents? And, on the other hand, who has not noticed the affectionate and indulgent behaviour of the latter to their offspring? Yet these people have been accused of being devoid of the natural feelings and affections of the beast. Infanticide is, indeed, but too common, among the Tan-kea people (dwellers on the river) and others of the poorest class, but here again their utter poverty and destitution may be pleaded in extenuation of crime.

We will now leave this dark, and turn to the sunny side of their character. Content with his lot, miserable though it be, every Chinese is a philosopher. In all the reverses of his life, rich or poor, ill or well, he maintains the same equanimity of bearing. Misfortune advances, he cheerfully prepares to meet it; fortune smiles—and he receives her favors with gratitude, but moderate withal; ancient customs have so imbued his mind, that he shrinks from improvement, thought apt at imitation. The literati's only guides are the books of Confucius and his followers; they pause at any new doctrine.

So long as the Government maintains its present line of policy, so long will the improvements of the western world make no, or a the best, but very slow progress. Candidly comparing their national characteristics with our own, and making all due allowances for the progress of civilisation, we are led to the conclusion, that, under the blessings of a liberal Government, and freed from the trammels of ignorance the Chinese would rank with any other nation in the world.

Shop opened by a foreigner in China Street.—Among our advertisements our readers will find that a foreigner has made a trial of opening a retail shop in Old China Street. A correspondence has taken place on the subject between the Co-hong and him, the particulars of which have been obligingly communicated to us. They are to the following effect: On the 11th of this month the Co-hong addressed a letter to this gentleman stating, that it was contrary to usage in China that a foreigner can keep a shop in China street, that, if he persevered, the Hong merchants should be exposed to trouble, and the Government officers would seize the goods in the shop, and the shop itself be shut up. To this communication the foreigner made the following answer:

TO THE CONSU,
Respected Sirs,

"I had the honor to receive your letter yesterday with respect to the shop that I and my partners occupy in China Street.

"My reason for occupying that shop is that your honorable body have lately cut off the communication betwixt the Chinese shop keepers, other traders, and myself; these men have for 12 years past been in the habit of purchasing from me a variety of fancy goods, and since you prevent them from acting as middlemen and retailers I act as retailer myself.

"Last month I applied on this subject to your Senior Merchant Howqua who on my complaint, that there were no purchasers, replied, that he would purchase himself at the market price. I sent him over more than 20 musters of Cotton Goods and, although they lay on his table for 14 days, I received no offer for any one of the sort.

"These are my reasons for keeping an open shop in China Street and when the officers of the Chinese Government come to investigate, this is the answer I shall give them."

We have been informed by this party that "the chief reason of his having established the shop is the difficulty he finds now in disposing of his goods at his residence in the foreign factories, ever since the regulation, which we mentioned sometime ago, restricting the out side dealers in their traffic with foreigners have been enforced. To this the Hong-merchant replied that the custom of Canton does not permit a foreigner holding a house, far less a place of sale, except in the foreign factories. The foreigner's answer to this was, that during 12 years brokers and small shop keepers have been in the habit of coming to his house in the foreign factories to buy such goods; this custom the Hong merchants have, by their own will, changed—and the necessary consequence therefore, of this change, is a change on the part of the foreigner."

It has ever been our belief, and we have expressed it on more than one occasion, that, with the free trade, the restrictions opposed to a more general intercourse with the Chinese would be continually encroached upon, and that little by little, the Chinese getting accustomed thereto, would accord to habit what by their laws they deny. We do not mean to say, however, that every such encroachment is likely to be successful, and the experiment now made of opening a shop, by a foreigner, in China Street is one of those, the ultimate success of which admits of much doubt. We, for ourselves, wish every success to this establishment, which, if allowed to be continued, cannot but be imitated by other foreigners, and thus afford additional facilities to the disposal of foreign manufactures; the beginning of this shop has hitherto been prosperous as to the business transacted, goods to a large amount having already been sold at and delivered from, it. But this success at the beginning is one cause more to make us fear it's continuance, and should force be employed to shut this new shop, it's enterprising owner will have no very good grounds of complaint against the Chinese authorities or the Co-hong, as he has evidently infringed the privileges of the latter, and acted against the policy so long enforced by the former.

The Portuguese Ship of war, Salamander, has lately arrived at Macao from Goa with a reinforcement to the garrison of about 150 soldiers. It is also said that the dissensions which had existed for some time between the senate and the Governor have, by the government of Goa, been decided in favor of the Governor, but we refrain from giving any of the various rumours that have reached us on this subject.

Is the Admiral in? has been the question of the week, though hitherto it could be answered in the negative only. A companion(ed, as the Admiral) is to be, by several large Country ships, besides his own frigates, the flotilla will, on reaching the coast of China, have quite a formidable appearance, and give rise to some uneasiness in the Chinese, who already have all sorts of rumours about the arrival of this armament, among themselves.

There is a report of an edict from the Emperor having been received, which in terms more severe than hitherto, prohibits the importation of, and traffick in, Opium. We have not, however, been able to trace this report to any satisfactory source, though it is now four or five days old. The deliveries at Whampoa and in other parts of the river are meanwhile very difficult, but this is owing to causes unconnected with the above Edict.

The Selma from Calcutta has arrived. She left the Sandheads, we are informed, on the 29th May, but brings no later letters from Calcutta than to the 20th. The Antonio Pereira was just entering the river when she left, no tidings of the arrival as yet of the Sylph. We should have published in the present number a statement of the Company's financial operations extracted from the Calcutta Exchange Price Current of 3d May, had we received it at an earlier date. Of the fourth Opium sale to take place on the 23d May we have not yet received any particulars, nor are we aware whether they have been received by this arrival. We have been favored with the loan of Calcutta papers to the 16th May, but find little or nothing for extract in them, except the following on things in Burmah.

"We are in receipt of the Maulmein Chronicle to the 21st, and of private letters from Rangoon to the 30th of April. The latter announce the second Act of Tharrawaddie's "interests of humanity" loving propensities. He has executed the ex-heir-apparent with 23 of his followers, including three females. The charge against him was his supposed predilection towards the English.

The Governor of Rangoon was, in a little way, also indulging his taste for the "advancement of the human race." He had ordered for execution a man convicted of stealing three rupees, and had himself tortured an individual for the purpose of extorting confession. The British merchants are forbade to approach this great man with their shoes on. Fifty thousand baskets of paddy had been sent to Ava, and all the dried Buffaloe's hides. The latter were intended to make shields of. An opinion was gaining ground, that Tharrawaddie was determined to refuse compliance with the Yandaboo Treaty, and, as a precautionary measure to guard against internal commotion, he has made away with the young Prince, who might have been a rallying cry for the opposite party in Ava.

Certainly the British name stands in a highly dignified position at this moment. Our magnanimous Ally at Ameerapura, is cutting off the heads of the friends to English connection and interest, while Lord Auckland is making snow balls at Simla, and Lord —— Mr. , with a zeal for our financial prosperity above all praise, is paring the section writers four annas and seven pie per 1000 letters.

We extract some particulars from the Maulmein Chronicle relative to the commission of enquiry sent from Rangoon, to investigate into the disturbances, robberies, and murderers at Martaban, and which, it seems, is likely to be as complete a mockery as its predecessor.

We have received New South Wales papers to the 8th of March, Sir George Gipps, the new Governor, had arrived and was well received. As this gentlemen carries out with him a strong radical reputation, it is possible he may be more popular than his Consetvative predecessors. It must be admitted however, that he rather damaged that reputation in not opposing more strenuously the Whiggism of Lord Gosford and the Conservatism of Sir Charles Grey in the matter of applying the Elective principle to the Legislative Council in Lower Canada, when in the situation of Commissioner in that Province, in which opposition, had he been successful, the late lamentable events there would not have occurred.

Mr. Samuel Terry, the Rothschild of New South Wales, died in February leaving above £500,000 —entirely made in the colony.

Should we meet with any information at all interesting to the general reader, we shall furnish extracts.—Hurkaru, 8th May.

COMMERCIAL REMARKS.

IMPORTS.

COTTON MANUFACTURES.—The reduction of the price of LONGCLOTHS has encouraged purchasers, and large sales have been made during the week both of greyand white. A parcel of about 4,000 Pieces of the latter was sold, we understand, yesterday at 4½ @ 4½. In COTTON YARN there is absolutely nothing doing, and we see little prospect of improvement with the heavy stock and supplies coming in.

WOOLLENS.—SPANISH STRIPES maintain their price, the supply being moderate. LONGELLA. are difficult of sale, and 2,000 Pieces of good quality and assortment changed hands two days since at not better than 9½ CAMBLETS are without enquiry.

METALS.—IRON wanted, the supply being very short. LEAD very dull and declining; we do not hear of any sales.

RICE.—The crop very favorable.

STRAITS PRODUCE.—PEPPER would hardly realize our quotation. A moderate supply of TIN would sell readily. RATTANS also maintain their price.

COTTON.—The market cannot be said yet to have opened. A sale of 300 bales was made in the early part of the week, we believe of fair Surat and Domrawutty, the former at 9. 5, and the latter at 8. 7. with the view of commencing and tempting purchasers by low prices, but we have heard of no transaction since, although the general impression seems to be that at such rates the Chinese will buy, and once they begin, there must be large clearances, as they cannot have any on hand. Nothing also doing in Bengal.

OPIUM.—New Patna and Benares have rather declined again, and there is not so much doing. The old drug it without enquiry almost. The arrival of the Lady Grant with the Hannah close at hand has caused holders of Malwa to submit to lower prices, but the supply is still very short. The Selma's letters came up yesterday, she left the Sandheads the end of May, but we do not find that she brings out any accounts of the 4th Calcutta sale, which, we understand, was to take place on the 28th instead of the 22nd of May, but we hear of no reasons for the change. The latest advices from China at that date were of the middle of March, but the Selma saw the Antonio Pereira going in. The deliveries at Lintin to the 8th were, Patna old, 12; new, 137; Benares, old, 27, new, 145; Malwa, 24; Total 345 Chests.

EXPORTS.

RAW SILK.—We have received no further accounts of the crop of Nankin Silk.

TEA.—Nearly all the new Orange Pekoe yet brought down has been purchased at fully our quotations. We do not hear of any other transactions. The three despatches of this season (since the 1st July) per Thomas Lowry and Vanguard for London and Anna Maria for Bristol, have taken the following teas: Congou, 6387; Caper, 69; Souchong, 202; Bongmuey, 78; Pekoe, 208; Orange Pekoe, 228; Hyson, 1273; Young Hyson, 192; Hyson Skin, 102; Twankay, 1602; Gunpowder, 486; Imperial, 356; Total of black teas 7381; and of green Teas 4078 Piculs. In our last we erroneously stated the quantity of Hyson in the Thomas Lowry at 234,—ought to have been 455 Piculs.

FREIGHTS.—The Tickler and Parkfield also, is it said, have both been taken up, but we do not hear at which rate.

Ships of war in China.

The following has been obligingly sent to us for publication; it is gratifying to find that enough attention has been obtained for the China-trade to think it worthy of the often repeated visits of the ships of war on the India station.

Foreign Office, December 13th 1837.

Sir,—I am directed by Viscount Palmerston to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 7th instant enclosing a memorandum of Queries which you had been requested to put to his Lordship on certain subjects connected with the present state of the relations between this Country and China; and Lord Palmerston desires me to transmit to you the enclosed memorandum which contains such information as it is in his power to give in reply to your questions.

I am, Sir,
Your most obedient humble Servant.
(Signed) J BACKHOUSE.

To Alderman Copeland M. P.
ALDERMAN COPELAND'S.

QUESTIONS.

An Edict was lately issued by the Chinese Authorities at Canton directing certain British Merchants resident there to quit China.

Has the Government received any official information on the Subject?

LORD PALMERSTON'S.

ANSWER.

"The Chief Superintendent of British Trade in China states in a Despatch dated February 7th 1837. (received 23d June) that the Government of Canton had issued an Edict, requiring that, at the expiration of certain periods therein specified, several foreign merchants should depart from China, among the persons named were the following British Subjects.

Mr. Jardine. Mr. Dent. Mr. Innes. Mr. Turner, Mr. Whiteman, (or Wetmore,) and Framjee, Meerwanjee, Dahadhoy, Parsees.

Captain Elliott states that this step was taken with a view to put a stop to the trade in Opium; in which the parties threatened with expulsion are reputed to be extensively concerned; but he expresses it as his own belief; that no such measure will be actually enforced. But he says that if it should be attempted, he will offer every opposition possible to its being carried into effect, and that he cannot think there will be much difficulty in averting any serious disputes on the subject."

QUESTION.

And, if so, is it in contemplation to adopt any, and what, measures in consequence?

ANSWER.

"Nothing further having been since received from Capt. Elliot on the subject; although Dispatches have arrived from him dated the 13th June last, it may be inferred that nothing further had passed with respect to this Edict."

QUESTION.

Are any Ships of war ordered or about to be ordered to proceed to China, and for what purpose?

ANSWER.

"The Admiral commanding on the East India station has received Instructions to cause one or more of the Ships under his orders frequently to visit China, and he has also been instructed to take an early opportunity of visiting China in his Flag Ship.

The objects of such periodical visits of Her Majesty's Ships were to be the general protection of British interests in China, and the rendering assistance to the Superintendents in maintaining order among the crews of British vessels resorting to that country."

Opium Trade.

It will be seen from the translation of a governmental document that the court at Peking has again been busy with the Opium question, and that those who in future shall be concerned in the Opium trade shall be punished severely even to the taking of life. The present document seems to have been circulated by the court to the several provincial Governments, with the object of obtaining their views of the subject. The Chinese seem to think that the Emperor is really in earnest with the threatened stoppage of this traffick, and we have been told that the appearance of this document had, for a time at least, kept back the buyers.

Report to the Emperor from an officer of the Household. *

Hwang Tsoutsze, an officer of the Imperial Household, kneeling, presents the following report: and looking up humbly begs to recommend the adoption of the most energetic measures to prevent the exportation of silver bullion and the introduction of Opium. (literally to stop the leak.)

Your slave, oh mighty potentate, has pondered deeply, respecting the measures requisite to effect a reform of this abuse in the internal affairs of the country. For myriads of ages, during which the people have had sufficient both of food and raiment, the records have been consulted. Your slave has given his whole mind to the consideration of the subject.

The revenue of the country is now insufficient to meet emergencies. Very few of the people are wealthy, and bad customs have been gradually accumulating. Every succeeding year is worse than its predecessor. To what cause is all this attributable? Where are the sums required for your Majesty's expenses while visiting the various temples? Where for your travelling expenses? Where for repairs &c? There is nothing can be done without money; and to meet all the calls for it immense sums are required. In the reign of Keaking affairs wore a better aspect than they do now. The mansions of the literati and nobles and the expensive habits of the merchants &c. bore witness to the national prosperity. The present can no more be compared to those times, than earth can to heaven. It does not consequently follow, however, that the most extravagant man is the richest, or vice versâ.

Your slave has noticed of late the encreased value of silver. Sixteen hundred copper cash and even more can now be got for a tael. It is ridiculous to suppose that the ore is hidden, in the country: the fact is, it has oozed out, into the hands of the outside barbarians.

When Opium was first introduced into the country, our late Emperor, of blessed memory, clearly perceived its pernicious tendency, and issued the most strict and repeated prohibitory orders. The officers of state could not then have foreseen the dreadful consequences of its introduction: for had they been apparent then, truly, more rigorous prohibitory measures would have been adopted. Formerly, when a foreign vessel entered the port, the sawsy Hong merchant gave a bond that she brought no Opium. This is also now the case, but it might as well be otherwise, for there is not a single vessel arrives but has Opium.

Prior to the 3rd year of Taou-kwang millions of taels of silver were sent out of the country. At first Opium smoking was confined to a set of degraded wretches who coveted secrecy, but afterwards, persons of the highest rank, magistrates, gentlemen, merchants, peasants, women, monks, nuns, and even Taoutse priests adopted the practice; and the sale of Opium is now a regular branch of trade. Even to Moukden, the most important hold of our dynasty, has the vice penetrated.—The importation of the drug has gradually increased to an enormous extent. There are receiving ships, which do not enter the port, but anchor about Lintin, the Ladrone, Hongkong &c. Traitorous merchants in Canton, connived at by the people of the guard boats, take silver out and bring the Opium in, in ramping dragon's and 'fast crabs.' From the 3rd year of Taou-kwang to the 11th, 17 millions of Taels were thus exported. From the 11th year to the 14th upwards of 20 millions, and from the 14th year to the present time 300,000 (Quere 30 millions?) Besides this several millions from the out ports Fuh keen, Teeen keang, Shan ting, and Tsun tsun. In fact, there is no supplying the insatiate wants of the barbarians. The noxious drug has vitiated the whole empire. Day after day, year after year, does the practice encrease and truly your slave knows not what it will lead to.

The taxes which are collected in cash from the several counties, cities, and districts amount to a very large sum. When they are all collected, a report of the amount is made to Government, and the cash exchanged for silver. On this exchange there is now a heavy loss; formerly there was gain in the transaction, but now the collectors are always obliged to make up the required sum out of their own pockets. The salt merchants in the different cities receive payment from the hawkers and detailers in copper cash, but are obliged to pay the duty in silver. Formerly these cash were at a premium; now, every body shuns them. In three or four years hence silver will be still dearer—how will the Officers then manage about the taxes? How well they manage to make up the required amount for Government? And in case of an emergency how is the required money to be raised? Your slave has thought deeply on this subject: sleep has for saken his couch.

In every part of the Kingdom is the traffic encreasing: for the prevention of which various measures have been proposed; some recommend the strictest guard being maintained on the coast to prevent and cut off the trade. But where are we to find officers for this duty? All are not equally sincere in their exertions. The annual amount of the Opium imports is several millions of taels. Supposing One in (thousandth part) of every tael were given to the Officers on the preventive service, the bribe would amount to millions of taels. With this temptation,—who would not err, notwithstanding all their promises of zeal. The coast embraces an extent of many thousand le and affords plenty of inlets and outlets for the trade. This remedy therefore would not answer.

It has been said that by cutting off all communication with foreigners and stopping the trade, we should strike at the root of all the evil. The foreigners bring Clocks, and Watches, Woollens, and Camblets and take away Rhubarb, Raw Silk, and Tea. The whole amount of which trade is not more than 10 millions of Taels. The profits on this cannot exceed a million. This trade is principally barter. On the Opium trade however the profits are ten times larger and consequently the barbarians, endure more in it than in the former. Even if we cut off the whole trade and prohibit their coming it will be of no use. They need not bring their ships inside, but can anchor in the outer waters; whither the drug will not fail to entice purchasers. The smokers of the Interland, cannot live an hour without the drug which traitorous barbarians find means of bringing to them. It is really difficult to stop the practice. The fault not resting with the foreigners, but with the natives, this second proposed measure will not answer.

Some propose that those who bring the Opium here, the foreign ships, and those who melt and retail it, should be apprehended and severely punished. Now, either this would check the trade, it would not entirely destroy it. The law awards the punishment of transportation to the first mentioned offenders, and strangulation to the latter. How many of such characters are found in the country; yet we never hear of their being punished.

Large dealers have furnaces in Canton, from which the drug regularly flows into the country. They guaranty, to those who come from other cities to buy, the safe delivery of their purchases; this they are enabled to do by bribing the Custom house people, who allow it to pass unnoticed. The smoking houses are kept by a set of debased and traitorous runners and soldiers. They entice the sons of respectable people to their haunts, and make use of their names to attract others. These haunts are either in large houses or hongs; and there are always, domestics and secretaries of the local magistrates, who also smoke, who shield the respectable visiters from detection. The third remedy, proposed, for the evil, will therefore not answer.

Others again propose, that the poppy should be cultivated and Opium manufactured in the country: which would both remove the necessity of buying the foreign drug, and put a stop to the export of silver. It is not at all certain however that the native drug possesses the same exhilarating properties as the foreign: the dealers would therefore mix it with the latter, to encrease their profit. This mode therefore is of no value.

It thus appears that we cannot stop the evil: but your slave denies that we cannot stop it; no proper means have yet been devised. The large export of silver is consequent on the large number of dealers in Opium, of which a large import is required to meet the wants of the numerous consumers. Were there no consumers, there would be no buyers; and were there no buyers, no Opium would be brought for sale. It is therefore clear that the smokers should be prevented. Your slave would earnestly recommend the issue of a severe prohibitory edict: allowing a term of one year, commencing on a certain day of this year and ending on the same day of the next, for all smokers gradually to break themselves of the habit. The most confirmed can easily manage this. If after that period, they still, in defiance of the laws, continue the practice, they cannot complain, however severely punished.

The ancient laws awarded the punishment of the cangue and the bamboo to all smokers; and to those who concealed the sellers from justice, 100 blows and three years transportation. These punishments however do not involve life; and many would rather bear them, than the pain of giving up the practice. But punishments remedy this, for life is worth having at whatever cost. Your slave has heard it said without the existement of Opium, the accustomed victim dies: be it so, but is it not better to die comfortably in ones bed, than to be dragged out to a public execution? Should your Majesty but act with rigour to all smokers, they will tremblingly perceive that you are bent on destroying the practice.—If a suspected smoker is apprehended, and brought up, after an interval, for examination, the symptoms will betray him; and on the other hand an innocent man, accused by some malignant enemy, will always escape, for the tests are sure. The guilty being so easily distinguished, there is no fear of injustice.

Your slave finds in the Yuwane Tuywan-che the following paragraph.

"The natives of Java were once very valiant and "warlike, but the red-bristled (English) having "taught them to use Opium they degenerated into "a weak and pusillanimous race, when their country became an easy prey to the red-bristled."

Should a red-bristled be discovered smoking Opium, the laws of his nation decide, that he shall be tied up to a stake, and in the presence of all his countrymen shot by a cannon into the sea: thus none dare use it. All the Opium that comes to China is brought from the English countries, where the smoking is punishable with death; consequently, altho' they are dealers in it, none use it. Your slave finds that the vessels which come from Bengal pass close to Cochinchina; the natives of which country were taught by the red-bristled to smoke Opium; but the Government seeing thro' the daring scheme, adopted the most energetic measures to prevent the practice gaining ground. The punishment awarded is death; without the least mercy.

When even the outside barbarians see the necessity of prohibiting the custom, should not you, supreme Emperor, awe the offenders with your dreadful anger, great and majestic as the thunder and lightning? The very dullest would then perceive the enormity of the crime. It is not to be supposed that the whole of the vassals are sincere in their endeavors, many of them fear to act, lest the populace should call them tyrannical; others seeing the great exertion requisite to stop the practice and the great number of smokers, procrastinate and delay acting. But the term of one year, would be sufficient for all purposes. Your majesty's sacred will should be couched in terms commensurable with the importance of its object. The officers receiving your majesty's stern and decisive command would rouse themselves, and earnestly proceed in the execution of their duty; which would so frighten the people, that at the expiration of the year there would be little occasion to punish: for out of every ten smokers eight or nine would have cured themselves of the habit. Then by your Majesty's care the old hands would be regenerated and fresh ones deterred from learning the vice. Your Majesty's edict should also direct the several high officers of the provinces to provide gratis proper tonics to lessen the consequences of breaking off the habit. The officers should command the local magistrates of the several districts &c., to make the head man of every street explain to the inhabitants that after the term of 1 year every five householders would be required to enter into a bond, whereby each became responsible that his neighbour would not use the drug, and each became bound to inform against him, who infringed the bond, that he might be dealt with according to law. Should any concealment be discovered, the actual smoker should be punished with death and the five sureties dealt with as the law directs. In so populous a city as Canton, however, where numberless visiters are always going and coming, it would be difficult to adopt the plan with them (the visiters.) The householders on whose premises smoking was allowed should suffer the same punishment as one who harbors robbers. Should any Government officer, literary or military, high or low, be discovered smoking, thus breaking the laws it is his duty to maintain, he should suffer even a more dreadful punishment than the common people. Besides his personal punishment, his whole family should be prevented from enjoying any literary honors. Those local officers who exert themselves in maintaining the laws, and apprehending offenders, after the expiration of the year, should receive promotion, as for exterminating robbers. But in case of the public officers, the relations, secretaries &c. and dependants, be found using Opium, they should be apprehended and dealt with according to law, and the officers themselves degraded. Should any of the troops stationed throughout the country, whether Tartar or Chinese, be guilty of the vice, their officers should be also degraded as in the above case. The laws should be the same for both rulers and people.

Even in the hamlets and alleys of the smallest villages, should this edict be posted up, that every man in the kingdom might know, how the great emperor, in his nourishing kindness, wished to preserve the lives and property of his subjects. Thus old smokers cured by the severity of the laws would hasten to given up the habit. This would effectually destroy the traffic in Opium, and prevent the export of Sycee Silver, which would not then become dearer.

These are the humble views of your slave, but whether right or not he does not presume to say: but prostrate entreats the sacred glance on this his respectful report.

The Imperial will has been received.

"It is recorded."

* It is owing to this rather long document, for the translation of which we are indebted to a friend whose other avocations did not permit him to finish it sooner, that the issue of our this day's paper has been delayed a few hours. The curious views of the writer of the document, and the recommendation to the Emperor to imitate the barbarians in their criminal jurisprudence, of which he affects a knowledge, by telling him that Opium-eaters are shot into the sea from guns by the English, are worth recording, though we do not think that this document will have much influence upon the Opium-trade.

The Great Western Steam Ship.

This magnificent vessel is now lying off Blackwall. She is destined for New York, as a packet vessel, and is built expressly for that purpose. Perhaps we do not exceed the truth in stating, that no specimen of naval architecture, whether considered in the elegance of her build, the beauty of her proportion, the strength of her scantling, or the splendid decorations of her interior, was ever put together, and sent forth to cope the broad bosom of the Atlantic; she sits like a duck upon the water, and to the seaman's eye, although he may regret the want of the tall, tapering spars, which add so much to the beauty of naval architecture, yet her hull appears perfection. She is by far the largest vessel to which the power of the steam engine has hitherto been applied, and measures 1,340 tons; her length is 242 feet, and her breadth of beam 40,—her depth, from the bottom of the hold to the ceiling of the upper deck is 44 feet, and care has been taken that the strength of her timbers should be in full proportion to the enormous size of the fabric, which has not been the case in too many of the passage steam boats, and indeed of many other vessels in the mercantile navy. She has four masts—the fore-mast carries square yards, and has topmasts and top-gallant-masts; her main-mast has a very large main-sail, with gaff, and top-sail yards; and her mizen and stern-mast are rigged in the same fashion; and though the spars to the eye, from being unaccustomed to so many, may at first appear unseemly, yet the hamper being fitted in a truly seaman-like manner, there can be no doubt when she spreads the cloud of canvass which they will enable her to do, they will render her appearance as imposing as they will add to her speed. She carries engines on 450 horse power. The strength of these are calculated on the known fact that the power of a single horse, when exerted, will compel or raise a weight of 33,000 pounds, drawn over a pulley, at the rate of a foot a minute. The steam apparatus, which was fabricated by Messrs. Maudsley & Co., amounts to the enormous weight of 500 tons; the boilers weigh 150 tons, and the piston cranks 17 tons each. The cylinders of her paddles are 39 feet in diameter, and the stroke is 13½ feet—a most ingenious piece of mechanism has been constructed, by which the number of strokes made by the wheels can be counted; it is in the form of a dial on which they are reckoned. When two million evolutions have been made the clock requires winding up—by this means (reducing the number of leagues into feet upon the whole distance across the ocean, and the progress made by each progressive action of the wheels,) the time in which the voyage can be effected, may be pretty accurately estimated, which is it supposed will not exceed fourteen days. The amount of coals to supply to engine and for which she has ample room is not less than eight hundred tons. The length of the engine room is seventy five feet, and the whole is so well arranged that every part of the machinery may be approached with the greatest ease, and every nut and screw appertaining to the gigantic mass brought into instant and minute observation. The state cabin has a length of eighty two feet, and the recesses in the centre, which extend in length twenty six feet, have a breadth of thirty-four. The Width of the other part is twenty feet, the difference being caused by the cabins, or berths, which are by this means gained laterally. The whole of this apartment is splendidly fitted up; indeed the coup d'œil, when first entered, has the appearance of a fairy scene. Let the reader picture to himself a long perspective of eighty feet, of proportionable breadth and height, artificially made so by the aid of plates of glass. The walls of this chamber are divided by pilasters, coloured white, the capitals and bases enriched with gold, and heavily encrusted with gold, into thirty-eight panels, each panel occupied by a painting executed by skilful artists in the style of Watteau, the brilliant colours of which harmonize with the chasteness of the ornaments which surround them. As the top and bottom of each panel are smaller paintings, showing emblematical devices of the march of the different arts and sciences, from the first rude shaped log which sailed to fetch the fleece from Argos, to the majestic power they now ornament, from the infant steam kettle of Lord Herbert of Cherbury, to the gigantic engine which carries that vessel in triumph through the winds and waves The second cabin is also very long, and is most tatesfully ornamented. The officer's mess room is 20 feet long, and the number of berths made are 120 of the first class, besides accommodation for servants, There is also in the cuddy a smoking room, a most excellent regulation. Upon the whole, this vessel does honour to the Company whose property she is, and to the country that sends her forth.—Sunday Times, March 25.

CANTON PRESS.

Saturday, 21st July.

The Admiral of the Boat' ay station, Sir Frederick Maitland, G. C. B., has at length arrived in H. M. S. Wellesley, accompanied by the Algerine Brig of war. They have, we understand, anchored off Tongkoo bay, at some distance from Hongkong, for the sake, we presume, of not appearing to protect the Opium shipping at the latter place. Nothing has yet transpired as to the object of the Admiral's visit to China, but the Wellesley, 84, having, we hear, only about half her complement of guns on board, we are inclined to suppose that, if the Admiral is to hold any communication with the Chinese, (and this we much doubt) it will be only com pliln ery. We hear it said that the Admiral intends to leave China again in October. This lengthened stay will give an opportunity to the Lyrne expected to return from Manila, and the Algerine to survery some parts of the Chinese coasts.

The Chinese authorities it will be seen from the following translation of a Chop from the Governor and Hoppo are by no means delighted at the visit of these men of war, and have already ordered them forthwith to proceed again to sea. The circumstance of another "barbarian eye" being on board seems to puzzle them greatly, and they give order, that this officer be neither permitted to land at Macao nor proceed to Canton. The description of the force of the two vessels is amusing, and, according to the Chinese pilot, the Ships are but poorly provided with small-arms and powder.

Wán Hoppo of Canton, &c. &c., proclaims to the Hong merchants for their full information.

On the 25 h day, of the 5th moon, of the 18th year, of Taou kwang, (16th July. 1838.) I received a communication from the Vice-roy, which on being opened was found to contain as follows.

"On the 24th day of said moon and year, it appears that Hoo ching Kwang, the Tung che kwan min foo of Macao, (i e. the mandarin, of Casa branca) petitioned to the following effect."

"On the 22nd day of moon and year as above, it appears that the pilot Mok ching ying petitioned me saying."

"On the 21st day of moon and year as above, "(12th July, 1838.) there was an English man "o' war called Me leen (Maitland's ship?) which, "running up to Tung k o on the ocean's surface, "cast anchor. I immediately demanded the reason of their anchoring there, the number of "guns, men, and military weapons which she carried "&c. When the Captain of the said man of war "replied, "that his ship had came from their "native country, and had on board a foreign superintendent called Ma-te-lun (Maitland) (N. "B. the expression here used is É mán, which in the case of Lord Napier was translated "Barbarian eye") who was coming to Macao to "examine into matters relating to the merchant"men of his country, who came to Canton to "trade; that the ship brought foreign women and "female servants, that of men and boys he had "on board five hundred; great guns, seventy four "muskets, three hundred; cutlasses, three hundred; "gunpowder, one thousand five hundred catties; "one thousand five hundred balls," and other "words to that effect, all of which it is proper that "I communicate clearly to your worship." "and "on the same day it appears that the pilot Tang "king hway petitioned me saying."

"On the 21st day of the year and moon as "above, there was an English cruizer commanded "by Thomas, which came up to Tung koo on the "high seas and cast anchor. I immediately demanded of them their reasons for so doing, their "complement of men, number of guns, &c. &c. "When the Captain said: That his ship had "come from England and that he was following "or accompanying the foreign superintendent on "board of Me leen's (Maitland's) ship, that he "had on board eighty foreign sailors, ten great "guns, forty muskets, forty cutlasses, five hundred "catties of powder, five hundred cannon balls, "&c. &c.!"

"Now all this coming before my humble tribunal, I, the Tungche keun min foo, besides issuing my orders to the English superintendent Elliot, to communicate the same to this foreign chief "Maitland, that he respectfully keep the laws and "prohibitions, that they do not on the sly get into "their boats, and go up to the city, all of which is opposed to the regulations, that he must also keep "in his soldiers and not allow a single one of them "to go ashore to raise rows and disturbances.—I "have also communicated with the civil and military "district officers, that they dispatch their soldiers "and police runners in all directions, and get their high sea cruizers under weigh and proceed to the "place where these two foreign men of war are at "anchor and with incre.sed vigilance prevent any "infraction of the laws, that these prohibit and "cut off any fishing boats or tanka boats from giving the men of war any assistance, that they do "not allow the men of war illegally to enter the port "(of the Bocca Tigris) but urge them to make "haste and go home, as they will not be allowed "to loiter about here breeding mischief; and besides "waiting till these men of war make any fresh movement which I shall communicate with flying "haste, I now take all these particulars which have "been reported to me respecting these said two foreign cruizers and lay them before your excellency "to be examined and decided upon in a respectful "petition" &c. &c. &c.! and at the same time Pang "pang hwuy, the temporary residing Che heen "magistrate, (or Tso tang of Macao) and Seaou "chaou keun, the acting major of the Heang shan "hse's left camp, have reported to me circumstances of like import."

"Now all this coming before me, the Vice-roy, "besides giving replies to these respective petitions "that, with increased diligence, they guard against "any infraction of the laws.—I find that after the "English Company was dissolved, the said country "sent a foreign Superintendent, called Elliott, out to "Canton to take care of matters connected with "their merchants and sailors. He petitioned me "and I sent my report duly to the emperor as is recorded. Now, how happens it, that we have here "again a superintendent Maitland coming to examine into the state of trade and shipping? The "business of these foreigners is difficult to fathom, "it really fills me with doubts as to what may or "may not be the object of this foreigner coming "hither. Whether he is to remain outside and investigate, or whether he aims at getting into port "to conduct matters, it does not appear that the "reports of these mandarins say anything upon the "subject! This is very barefaced! Command them "again to investigate most minute'y on this head, "and let us have a report upon it with flying speed "that we may examine and decide. Let there not "be the least playing nor a moment's delay! Also "communicate to the military commander of Heang"shan heen, and of the Ta-pàng-camp and those of "the Admiral's (not Admiral Maitland's) centre "division sternly to command the high sea cruizers, soldiers and police runners, to go forward to "the place where these said two foreign ships are "at anchor, and with increased vigilance keep "watch over them: they must thickly and rigorously keep cruising about, they must not permit any "of the people from the men o' war to get into their "boats on the sly, and stand up to the City or over "to Macao, neither can the foreign soldiers be allowed to go ashore getting into rows, but they "must be urged to make haste and go away home "to their country, they will not be permitted to "loiter about, neither may they bolt into Camsing"moon to anchor; fishing boats and tanka boats are "not to be permitted to run up alongside to give "them any assistance, or to leak out (the precious "metals), compradores and people of that class may "not buy prohibited articles for them, which will lead "to unpleasant investigations; at the same time "writing to the treasurer that he confer with the "judge and that we all act in concert in keeping "upon watch; besides all this it is proper that "address your excellency the Hoppo, that the circumstances be examined into and that the decree "be put in force &c &c.

Now this coming before me, the Hoppo, let it be done accordingly. I find that these two foreign men of war are anchored at Tang-koo on the ocean's surface. It lately appeared that the Tung-che-keunminfoo of Macao and the mandarin in charge of the port of Macao have sent us petitions containing the sundry particulars as stated in the foregoing communication of the Vice roy to me. Now, uniting all these circumstances, I issue this edict and when it reaches the said Hong merchants, let them reverently and submissively take up all the particulars of the Vice-roy's communication and enjoin them upon the said foreign superintendent Elliott, that he cause these two men of war speedily to get under weigh and to return home, they will not be allowed stealthily to get into their boats and bolt up to the City, or over to Macao, neither will their foreign soldiery be permitted to go ashore breeding disturbances, nor may they go into Cum sing moon to anchor.

And do you (the Hang merchants) make note of the date when these two men of war got under weigh, and report the same to me.

A special edict.

Taoukwang 18th year, 5th moon, and 27th day.

Canton, 19th July, 1838.

By the Mary Ann from Calcutta, 3d June we have received accounts of the fourth Opium sale which went off as follows

1400 chests	Patna, average-	702. 9. 3
400 "	Benarer "	552. 2. -

The 5th and last sale of this season was to take place end of June.

The Brooklyn's arrival from Chile 19th April has enabled a friend to oblige us by the following extracts from his letters: Valparaiso, 7th April 1838. "The war with Peru is still continued—the expedition of January returned, having captured one of the enemy's ships, the Confederacion, on board of which was Gene al Vallivian, a Bolivian General, who escaped to a French man of war in our Bay, 21 hours after his arrival. Since then the fleet has been again preparing for sea, and will sail for Callao immediately—our government having declared the port of Callao, Chorrillos, and Ancon blockaded from the 18th April. Santa-Cruz has, on the other hand, declared a blockade of all the ports of Chile after the 16th of August, by which time, it is said, he will have force sufficient to make it effective.

"Chile can make her blockade effective, and the English and American commodores, who have left recently for Callao, have decided to respect it, but the French man says he will not.

"Thus, you see, our affairs are still in a very critical state, nor can an opinion be formed as to when they will be again settled."

Another correspondent says: "The same stagnation has continued in business throughout the past month as heretofore, and there is no visible prospect of improvement, as everything depends upon the restoration of peace with Peru, of which we can as yet see no signs.

From England news to the 31 April have been brought by the John Bull from Liverpool, which vessel made a quick passage of 105 days only. The papers we have seen contain nothing of importance.

By the arrival from the Straits during the week we have received the Sing. Free Press to the 2 th, and Penang Gazettes to the 26th, June. From the former we see with pleasure that at a general meeting of Singapore merchants it was resolved to present Capt. Stanley, of his H. M. S. Wolf, with a stoord value 100 Guineas, for his successful exertions in the suppression of piracy.

We noticed, some weeks ago, that a few of Aesop's fables had been published in Chinese, and had had considerable success among the Chinese readers. In consequence another small publication has just appeared, containing 21 of these fables. We are glad to see these labours continued, and think that these popular fables will soon be as familiar to the young Chinese as they are to our schoolboys. The little volume is neatly printed (woodcuts) in 8°, containing 18 pages. The ostensible Editor is a teacher of the Chinese language of the name of Mun Mooy Sien Shang.

The Hong-debts.

The following correspondence has again taken place between the creditors of the Kin-qua hong and Linchong, its manager. The question as to the settlement of the claims is now reduced to a very narrow compass, viz, whether the creditors will allow of the proposal that the usual interest should be charged only to the 30th June last year, instead of to that date this year, and whether they will consent to wait for the payment of the interest of 5 per Cent on the whole of the claim until the 11th and 12th years instead of its being paid up annually. We do not hear that this last proposal of the Kin-qua hong has yet been answered by the creditors, but fancy that, if ultimately they are obliged to agree to those terms, it will be with considerable reluctance, the offer now made being much less favorable than the demands hitherto made by them.

Letter from the foreign Creditors to Linchong, Manager of the Tremo Hong.

Sir,—We were favored on 24th ultimo with your circular letter without date.

After briefly adverting to, what you deem, the causes of your hong's insolvency, you propose to discharge, the principal of your debts to foreigners (which you estimate at 11 lakhs) in ten years; and to pay in the 11th or 12th year simple interest thereon at the rate of 5 per cent per annum. That to enable the hong to accomplish this, the other Hong merchants have engaged to assist you with the sum of $100,000 annually.

In reply to this proposition we beg to say that the main objection we have to it, is the novel mode you propose of paying the interest: namely, that payment thereof shall not commence until the 11th year: but besides the unmercantile nature of this mode, involves such an unprecedented length of time ere the whole could be paid, that we are compelled to withhold our assent to that part of your proposition. But to the term of ten years we will not object, provided the interest be paid year by year.

Our proposition is therefore as follows: that the several claims be made up to 30th ultimo with the customary interest, and that the amounts then shewn to be due, be paid in ten years, in equal instalments, with interest paid annually at the rate of 5 per cent per annum.

We shall of course require a letter from the Cohong confirming the above settlement.

We remain &c.,

(Signed by the principal Creditors.)

July 7th 1838.

Letter from Linchong, in reply to the above.

A respectful reply,

I received on the 8th instant your reply to my former letter.

My gratitude is due to you all, benevolent elder brethren, for your condescending consideration of the circumstances of my poor hongs difficulties; as well as for your obliging compliance with my proposal to pay the principal of your claims in ten years. No words can convey to you the intensity of my gratitude.

With regard to your proposal that interest shall be paid up regularly with the principal, I am sorry, after repeated consultations with my brother hong merchants on the subject, to be obliged to withhold my concurrence. Even the promised assistance of the other hong merchants of $100,000 annually, is far (from sufficient to satisfy the claims against me; and if you insist on the interest being regularly paid up with the principal, truly I know not where the necessary funds are to spring from. The claims upon the hong for contributions, fees to government &c., are now pressing so heavily that I am put to my wits end to meet them. If therefore I have such difficulty in satisfying these unavoidable claims, how is it possible to provide for the payment of interest? (were I to agree to your proposal) I should be obliged in the very first year to forfeit my word; and thus ever afterwards lose the confidence and merit the reproaches of my benevolent elder brethren. I beg therefore again to request your assent, to the proposal contained in my first letter to pay the interest in two years after the expiration of the ten years term; for it is really impossible to comply with your wishes in that particular. I have held repeated consultations on this point with my brother hong merchants, but we discover no other way of settling this matter. In my first letter I stated facts in their true light; there was neither evasion nor glossing over.

Your proposal that the accounts should be made up to 30th ultimo with customary interest is reasonable, but in consideration of the following circumstance, I beg, gentlemen, to solicit your consent to the following mode: namely that the accounts shall be made up to 30th June 1837, with the customary interest; and that on the amounts then agreed, interest of 5 per cent per annum be allowed, commencing from the 30th June of the present year and to be paid in the 11th or 12th years (as before proposed.) Thus my poor hong need not sink under the weight of its difficulties. In the latter months of the 16th year, the difficulties of the hong began, causing irregularities in money transactions, and inability to pay its debts. It was then my earnest wish, to have made a clear exposé of the involved state of the hong: but there were others to be consulted in this matter. It was decided that Hingtae's affair should be settled ere ours was discussed: and had the former been decided in the 5th or 6th months of last year, truly our hong's would not have remained till now unsettled. I am now in the greatest distress and difficulties, but, with the distinguished patronage of my benevolent elder brethren, I hope to escape bankruptcy. During the whole of last year I forced myself to make some efforts to reestablish the credit of the hong, which, however, was more like a broken one, than otherwise.

By agreeing to my proposal, you will gain my eternal respect and gratitude. Confident of your kindly feelings towards me, I presume again to trouble you with my petitions, and beg a reply at your earliest convenience.

In presenting this letter my hopes are confidently excited, and again requesting your favor, I wait your reply. It is for this I write, and with compliments remain &c.

COMMERCIAL REMARKS

IMPORTS.

Cotton Manufactures.—The further heavy imports per George and John Bull have induced sales at even a further reduction, still so many parcels are forced on the market, that the dealers have taken the alarm, and show less disposition to purchase. Cotton Yarn, continues without enquiry, and the inferior kinds cannot be disposed of at almost any price. A small sale was reported yesterday of about 50 bales fine Water Twist No. 18 @ 32 at $37. Chintzes and Handkerchiefs, unless of very favorite patterns, and proper dimensions, cannot be sold except at a sacrifice.

Woollens.—The demand for Spanish Stripes, is dull, but without any material alteration in price; the importations are still very moderate. Longells, a sale of 1000 pieces was reported yesterday, but we could not learn the exact rate, but we believe it was under our quotation, and there is so little demand just now, and the markets in the interior are said to be so unfavorable, that, if sales are forced, further reductions must be submitted to. There has been no sale of Camblets which are very depressed, but we do not hear of any further supplies by the last ships.

Metals.—There are two or three parcels of Iron by the late arrivals, and the dealers are in consequence not offering within a [illegible] dollar of previous rates for the small rod. Lead continues very dull.

Rice.—without alteration.

Straits Produce.—Pepper dull at our quotation of 6½. Tin, a small supply would sell readily. Rattans in good demand. The price of Betelnut is nominal, no new having yet arrived.

Sandalwood—has further declined, as, in addition to importations from Bombay and Madras, nearly 4000 Piculs are said to have arrived at Macao from Timor.

Cotton.—The brokers have at length commenced purchases, and a sale of about 3000 bales fair Surat was effected two or three days since at 9. 3. and this price, up to 9. 5 @ 9. 7 for Broach seems to be the rate at which they are expected to buy, although they do not come forward with any spirit. None of the lower grades have yet been sold. We hear that a sale of 1000 bales ex Premier of Bunda was made yesterday at about 11 T., some junks, about sailing, requiring a small supply for the Chin-chew market. Nothing yet done in the Madras staple.

Opium.—Malwa in the beginning of the week had declined to 605 @ 610, but some considerable purchases for the junks caused an advance to its former quotation, but there is no enquiry again. In the new Bengal drug there has been very little doing, and old Opium is nearly unsaleable. The deliveries to the 15th were, Patna, old, 33. new, 279; Benares, old, 39, new, 173; Malwa [illegible]; Total 984 chests.—Turkey quite nominal and without enquiry.

The 4th Calcutta sale took place on the 28th May of 1400 ch. Patna, aver, 709. 9. 3
600 ch. Benares, ,, 539. 9. – the advance being supported by the Bombay purchasers.

EXPORTS.

Nankeen Silk.—No further information has reached of the extent of the Nanking crop, but the weather is reported to have been very unfavorable.

Tea.—We have heard of no transactions during the week. The following is the cargo of the Volunteer despatched for Liverpool last week. Congo, 1473; Hyson, 66; Young Hyson, 14; Hyson Skin, 19; Twankay, 166; Gunpowder, 23; Imperial, 9; [illegible] Total, 1879 Piculs, making the whole of the teas shipped for Great Britain since the 1st inst.: Congo, 8060; Caper, [illegible]; Souchong, 209; Hongmuey, 70; Pekoe, 116; Orange Pekoe, [illegible]; Hyson, 1339; Young Hyson, 326; Hysonskin, 103; Twankay, [illegible]; Gunpowder, 311; Imperial, 265; Total 13,[illegible] Piculs.

Freights.—The Sidney and Berkshire are both reported to be freighted at £5 @ 5. 10, and we doubt if there can be much more tonnage offering.

The poor laws in China.

From a Correspondent.

The great Emperor's compassion pervades the whole earth, and is most strenuously exerted in the Central Kingdom. This is on record, and may be considered as the basis of the poor laws, though it applies with equal force to distant foreigners who certainly would starve without the teas and rhubarbs from the Celestial Empire.

Now there exists a negative and a positive compassion, and the former falls to the share of the poor. Let us however not imagine that there are no laws enacted for their relief; on the contrary, they are as numerous as any other class of regulations. Funds are assigned for the maintenance of the destitute, duties levied on purpose, and the finest pieces in the Chinese language written expressly to prove, that there is nothing more meritorious than to assist poor sufferers. Unfortunately, however, charity remains on record, and, being there safely lodged in company of edicts, proclamations, prohibitions, etc. very seldom finds time to leave it's fixed abode and visit the hovels of the miserable.

We do not scruple to say, that there are proportionably in China more paupers than in any other part of the world. The principal reason we seek in the enormous population which exceeds the means of subsistence. In all haunts and corners hundreds of wretches may be found in a state of absolute starvation or feeding upon the most loathsome garbage. Yet they utter few complaints and are less importunate in asking alms as their miserable state would lead us to suppose. For supporting this great bulk no provisions are made, though there exist a few poor-houses and hospitals to which some favored individuals are received. Benevolent gentlemen distribute occasionally on cold winter days warm jackets and soup to the suffering multitude. This is done in imitation of the great Emperor who does the same on a larger scale in Peking. In time of calamity the public granaries are opened and advance of grain is made to supply the immediate wants of the populace. We have also seen that the first days after a tyfoon congee was gratuitously distributed by the mandarins to shipwrecked mariners and other poor people. This is the sum total of what is done towards granting relief; otherwise the unalterable law—either work to gain a livelihood or starve—remains in full force. Could we make up a correct estimate of those who meet thus their doom, the number would be appalling. Bystanders will view the sufferers who are in the last gasp with total indifference, and will rather consider their death a riddance than a calamity.

The Chinese Navy.

From the same.

Having seen the men of war at Canton, we have had a view of the best part of the Imperial navy. The vessels are here better manned, the cannon of superior cast, and the whole construction is first rate. The largest of them do seldom carry more than 20 guns, which are either thrown on deck or mounted upon a paltry carriage. How they manoeuvre in a pitched battle we do not know, though a diffuse naval code for the guidance of the officers is in the possession of the commanders; the great question is whether wind and waves will permit to act accordingly.—All the ports of the coast as far as the Yang tsze keang have their stationary navy, but the principal stations where High Admirals command are Canton, Amoy, and Ningpo. They have under their immediate command often no less than 18 vessels of various dimensions, the least carrying 4 guns. It is not unfrequent to see on board an Admiral's junk from 200 to 300 men, who are crowding the deck to suffocation. Add to this the river navy, which is far better equipped and more numerous than the marine, especially on the Yang tsze keang and other large rivers, and we shall come to the conclusion, that China has the largest navy in the world. Its object is to maintain peace on the high seas and not to wage wanton war. Such a laudable object does not require those mortal arms which barbarians have invented for their mutual destruction, and in the waters of the Central kingdom crackers and squibs are more serviceable, than congreve rockets and chain shot.

Whilst the men of war of other countries traverse the Ocean, the Chinese are far better employed. During the greater part of the year they stay in harbour, and, when cruising, they never go out of sight of the land, and do not exceed their jurisdiction, which perhaps extends about 80 miles along the Coast. This makes them acquainted with all the creeks and islands about and they retain their domestic habits. Direful however is their lot when they are blown off the land, and utter despair the consequence. In such cases they either give themselves up to the direction of the winds, and float about until they reach the shore, or steer courageously towards the South where they must hit upon some island or the other.

The Chinese language.

From the following extract it will appear (Staunton's Embassy of Lord Macartney to China) that much inconvenience was experienced at the time of the sitting out of the Embassy, by there not being a single Englishman found able to act as interpreter, although England had at that time, without interruption almost, been carrying on for upwards of 150 years, an annually increasing trade with China. Two Chinese were at last found in the Mission College of Naples, who went as interpreters with the English Embassy, but here also much embarassment must have at times been felt, from these Chinese speaking only Italian, and understanding Latin. Lord Amherst's embassy was more fortunate in having the services of the justly celebrated Doctor Morrison and of Sir George Staunton. Some of the Company's supercargoes here, after that period, there were always, who studied the language, and some even became well acquainted with it. The acquisition of a language so very important to the English, not only on account of the British trade of Canton, but also as being very likely to be soon needed on the north-eastern frontier of India, has singularly enough, until lately, not been encouraged by the British Government, or public whilst in other countries, which have no relations with China, as France, Prussia, Bavaria etc. there are professorships for the Chinese. One has, it is true, in the last year, been endowed in the London University, but the emolument, 50 £ per annum, is so very trifling that but few would devote much time to the obtaining of it. To this appointment must be added the two situations of Chinese Secretary and translator, and Assistant Chinese secretary and translator, of H. M. Superintendents of trade in China. One of these three places is the only reward the Government can at present give to a Chinese scholar, whilst the expense and loss of time to acquire the language sufficiently to fill one of these situations must naturally be very great. It is therefore not to be wondered at that there are not many English inclined to devote the best part of their lives to a study which must naturally remain unproductive to them of emolument, on the contrary, it is rather a matter of a tonishment that any such students are at all to be found; but there are three or four now in Canton well versed in the Chinese language who deserve all credit for the readiness with which they allow their neighbours to avail themselves of their knowledge. Of the American nation a good many among their missionaries have studied Chinese, and their students would; on counting, be found to outnumber the English. The superiority of the former over the latter in this respect is chiefly owing to the exertions of the individuals sent out by the missionsocieties, and to the great activity of the latter to send missionaries to every part of Asia.

The following is the extract from Sir Geo. Staunton's book:

"One office more was still vacant, which was as necessary, as it was difficult to fill up; that of Chinese interpreter and translator. No man capable of that employment, then existed throughout the British dominions. From what is mentioned in the first chapter, less susprise will be felt that the supercargoes of the English East India Company return, after several years residence in China, without having made any considerable proficiency in the language. One man, Mr. Flint, who had been an exception to the rule, and continued his attachment to the country, tho' he had been imprisoned, and afterwards banished by the Chinese government, for attempting to reach Peking, was lately dead in England. Another, of the name of Galbert, a native of France, who had long resided at Canton, where he applied with great assiduity to the acquisition of the Chinese tongue, was to have been employed as interpreter on a preceding occasion; but died before the present.

"It was by no means advisable to depend on finding fit persons at Canton for serving in that capacity. Some of the natives there had just enough of an European language, either Portuguese or English, to interpret for foreign merchants in mere matters of sale and purchase; but would be embarrassed to make out a conversation upon any other subject; nor is the dialect of the Chinese usually spoken by them, intelligible at Pekin; and experience had taught to doubt as much of their fidelity as of their knowledge. Recourse, therefore, was rather to be had to a search upon the continent of Europe, for such trust-worthy persons, returning from China, as had happened to acquire the language of the mandarines, during their residence in that country; or for the few Chinese who had left it and had since learned any of the European languages; if either such were any where to be found. It was known that, of the missionaries who are publicly tolerated at Pekin, under the immediate protection of the Emperor, it seldom happens that any are, afterwards, allowed to leave the country; but others, who penetrate in disguise into it, have occasionally returned home. Some Chinese men of letters had found their way to Rome, where they were employed in the care and examination of Chinese books and manuscripts in the Vatican; and zeal for Christianity had founded a college at Naples, dedicated to the education of young Chinese, whom the European missionaries contrived to get away from China.

"Among all these, whether any were fit and willing to be employed, upon the present occasion, was, indeed uncertain; but it was the best resource. And, accordingly the intended Secretary of the Embassy set out in quest of such, in January, 1792. He directed, first, his route to Paris, where two found ations for foreign missions still subsisted, the Maison de Saint Lazare, and the Maison des Missions Etrangeres. The former was said to contain, at that time, none who had ever been in China. At the Missions Etrangeres was one, who had returned, near twenty years before, from thence. He retained but a faint remembrance of the language, and was not disposed to visit that distant country again, upon any terms."

Burmah.

All the accounts, which reach us from Burmah, represent the country as being in a very disturbed state in consequence of the young Prince having been put to death—we say having been, because we cannot discredit all the testimony to the fact that is brought forward, but the idea is very prevalent among the natives of this place, and it is also said to prevail at Rangoon, that he is alive and has made his escape from his Uncle's hand. We much fear that the wish is father to the thought, for there is no doubt that the young Prince possessed the affections of the people—not from any personal qualities that he can ever have evinced to entitle him to them, but from the fond idea, that has always been entertained, that he was destined, to rule over them in peace and happiness. It does not appear that any ideas of glory were ever attached to his future reign—on the contrary, it was prophesied of him, that he was to reign by the support of Kullas or strangers. There is one circumstance connected with the death of the Prince that certainly excites our surprise, and in some degree gives colour to the idea that he may be still alive, it is, that the fact appears to have been known in Calcutta as soon, if not before, it was known at Rangoon. It had been reported there, via Arracan, before the Steamer Ganges quitted, and it was not known, at least publicly, till the 27th ult. We are puzzled how to reconcile these facts. We remember a report being brought down from Arracan some time last month, that the Prince had disappeared from the Court, but the report was never confirmed in our own neighbourhood, and we paid no more attention to it. We cannot imagine the people of Rangoon to have been so completely mystified on so important a subject, that not even a rumour of it should have reached them if the Prince had really escaped, and we can give no credence to the report.

We have not heard that we are to have any more of these senseless Commissioners of Enquiry into the outrages committed on this frontier at the beginning of the year. The last officers appear to have reached Rangoon in safety, notwithstanding the denunciations of the Governor of Bileng, and to have made their report, in which they are said to have ascribed their failure to the opposition of the frontier officers. The senior of the Commissioners is, we believe, ordered up to Court with the report. All this manoeuvring and show of giving us redress confirms us in the opinion we expressed from the very first, that all was hollow and insincere. When the first Commissioner was appointed, the Viceroy of Rangoon was loud in his assurance of executing speedy and summary justice on all who might prove to be concerned in injuring us, and now that it is manifest whence these injuries originated, he cannot or will not perform his promises. We suppose these voluntary assurances of the Viceroy must have imposed on Captain Blake of the Lyra, who was present when they were made, and induced him to pass them on as genuine to the Madras Government. Experience is necessary to judge of the value of Eastern assurances—Captain Blake can have had none, and no doubt considered the word of a man of high rank to be good and sterling. Alas! such word is too often found to be the veriest pleerust

Maulmain Chronicle, May 19.

By the last accounts from Rangoon we learn that the late Heir Apparent to the throne has at last met with that fate that all, who have any acquaintance with the Burmese character, must long have anticipated for him. A charge of High Treason appears to have been laid against him about the middle of last month, followed closely by the execution of himself, his wife, and several of is followers. The following is a translation of a proclamation issued regarding the charges brought against the young Prince.

Mying-yo-Bo Nga-A, an officer of Nyoung-yan-tsa, having collected near the river Doung-yo on the north of Mya-doo-Mya, about 3,000 men, letters were sent to the towns north of May-doo-May, and to places under the jurisdiction of Kau-leng-Myo; summoning the people to join them, on which they should have an assurance of peace.

Mying-yo-Bo Nga-A and his adherents sent a messenger to ascertain the truth concerning the state and condition of Tshan-shee Bo. Toung-gyee-Bo and the forces with them; the former also sent Shua-hlan-Bo to the house of Nyoung-yan-tsa. These are facts ascertained in a secret manner by Shuatsoung, a servant of the King's son, Po-kan-meng, and reported by him to the King's Court.

On this report being made, Shua-hlan-Bo was sent for, but had concealed himself.

Nga-tsein, the private minister of Nyoung-yan-tsa, having been summoned, confessed what he knew to affairs. The private minister Nga-boo, register of orders Nga-too, Nga waik, Nga-ong, secretary Ngo-hmon, Nga-bai, Nga gyee, Wengtat-bo, Nga-pwa, Nga-twon-pau, Nga-pa-to; moreover, the nurse Me-o, and female attendant Metsau-oo, held secret counsel with Nyoung-yan-tsa, and with them were more than 1,000 men. Tshanshee-bo Nga-vay, Toung-gyee-bo Nga-myat-ya, and the former Governor of Mo mick-myo, Ngayowi, assembled more than 2,000 men intending to make war, and if not successful, determined to retreat to the northward. While this was determined on at Mengala-kyouk-myoung, Nyoung-yan-tsa became ill, and the movement was postponed.

On the return of the Court to Amarapoora, as at first intended, Mying-yo bo Nga-A, Tshan-shee-bo, Nga-vay, and Toung-gyee-bo Nga myat-ya, having in readiness a body of 3,000 men, were, on the approach of Nyoung-yan-tsa, to march to meet him—this was made known to him on the 14th day of the waxing of themoon Tan-goo, by Shua-hlan-bo Nga-hmain.

Astrologers appointed the 10th of the waning of the moon (Tan-goo) as a propitious day for the movement.

On the day appointed, elephants, horses, and men were prepared, and Tshan-shee bo, Nga-myat ya, and the former Governor of Mo-mei-myo, Ngayowai, promised to carry the undertaking through to the end.

The following are the names of the persons, who appear by a certain mark affixed to them, to have been executed: The Heir Apparent Nyoung-yan-tsa, his wife Me Tsoung-oo, his nurse Me-o, the former Mya-toung-sta, Tshan-shee-bo, Nga yay, Toung-gyee bo Ngra-myat-ya, and the former Akhyok-woon.

We are not in possession of sufficient details relative to this transaction to offer any opinion as to the validity of the charges brought against the Prince. The whole affair has a very suspicious appearance and we shall make no farther comment on it at present.

Among other items of intelligence from Rangoon, we notice, that the new A-ye-paing at that place has of late assumed some high airs unpractised by the highest even of his predecessors. Captain Roy having occasion to seek an audience with him, was called on to place his shoes below the steps of the Vice royal Palace. He preferred giving up his audience to subjecting himself to this humiliation. Measures appear to have been in progress at Rangoon for forming a Government Monopoly of the timber, but we have not been made acquainted with the details of the plan.—Maulmain Chronicle, 5th May.

Port Phillip.

From the Sydney Monitor, April 16.

We have received two numbers of the Melbourne Advertiser, of dates the 19th and 26th March respectively. It is printed every Monday, on a sheet of post paper. The typographical department is in a primeval state; but every thing must have a beginning. As the establishment of the Press at this new and interesting settlement is an era in its history, every topic under editorial discussion deserves to gain publicity, we therefore present our readers with the "leading article" contained in the paper of the 26th March.

The dreadful depression under which V. D. Land now labours, should cause the vigilant and enterprising colonists of Port Phillip, to search into and examine the reasons why such distress exists; and when found, to carefully guard this gigantic but youthful co'ony from the paralizing effects that are, day by day, developing themselves amongst our friends and relatives in that fertile land.

Our ideas on this subject are, that a part of the mischief is occasioned by the baneful and highly impolitic Insolvent Law, a law that actually holds out a bonus to the dishonest, for any person may, under that stupid piece of (mis) law making, gamble away his estate, he may throw his creditors' money away in giving balls, feasts, or in any other wasteful manner, are even riotously spend it in drunkenness and debauchery, and let this be ever so well known to the creditors, and what redress have they—none—none whatever. But there is another cause which, in our humble opinion, has greatly hastened this crisis, and it is one that no writer, we have met with, ever called public attention to, it is the folly of the merchants and dealers in setting men up of no fixed or known principles, who have no funds. One merchant starts a man of this sort by reason of some plausible tale, others see a fine show of goods on sale by Mr. Plausible, and then goods pour in from various parties, all eager to force credit upon a little above appearance; this puffs up the pride of the on credit living shopman, he launches into wasteful expence, drinks his Champaigne, treats to a cigar, horse, and a thousand very obsequious to his creditors, until he has run himself fairly aground, and then he declares himself—what? why! insolvent; and then pays from sixpence to two and sixpence in the pound. If there are others of this class who do not fool away the money they sell other people's goods for; but, on the contrary, they very quietly put by, from day to day, the greater part of the proceeds of the goods sold, fill their books with a few real and a great many fictitious debts, they then get a friend to step forward as provisional, or permanent assignee, pay about one or two shillings in the pound, and in a few weeks or months set up again under cover of a friend, and then start a grad, a chaise, or curricle, and put their creditors at defiance, for there is no clause to compel the insolvent to account for waste, let it be ever so evident. Fellow colonists pause each of you, individually, and weigh well before you assist to bring about such a vile consummation in this new, fertile, and rapidly rising settlement.

Here employment and high wages are courting the acceptance of every useful citizen, and no man need remain unemployed if willing to render himself useful. For proof of which, only look at the wages of labourers and artizans; a common labourer gets from 15s. to 20s. per week and board and lodging, and artizans, from twelve shillings to one pound per day. Then what really industrious man need be poor? the answer is self evident—none.

Steamers in the Straits.

The Steamer Diana left the roads yesterday morning bound for Malacca and Penang, with the Hon'ble the Governor on board. We have certainly reason to be thankful to Lord AUCKLAND for sending a Smoke-Ship to the Straits—if he will only be pleased to let her remain there—for she not only checks a pirate prahu one day, sends destruction among a fleet the next, and lands a batch of prisoners here a few hours after, but straightaway she speeds up the Straits to Penang for the Recorder, that the rogues may have a full Bench to try them, and they are in presence of their judges almost before the shot of her guns has ceased to ring in their ears! To be more particular—on the 16th of May the Diana attacked and sunk off Sangora a Malay pirate prahu, killing all the crew 9 in number, except two, whom she made prisoners—releasing from slavery at the same time four Siamese whom the pirates had just captured—on the 18th May she attacked the Lanoon fleet, with results which are already well known to our readers, and on the 23rd anchored in the roads with her prisoners. On the 26th she started for Penang, and landed Sir Wm. NORRIS here on the 3rd of June—on the 7th a special Session for the trial of the pirates was opened, and by the 9th they were all convicted. This we think affords a signal example of the advantageous and useful purposes for which Steam vessels may be employed in the Straits, and makes us anxious of seeing the advantages of Steam navigation extended, and its powers more rationally employed in every direction around us. By means of Steam vessels our influence throughout the Peninsula may be strengthened, so as at all times to be used with benefit and effect—while commerce must increase under the security which it is the means of affording. Even the King of Siam quakes at the thought of an English Steamer visiting the outskirts of his dominions—and the establishment of a more extended Steam navigation in this quarter, appears to us to open out prospects, both political and commercial, embracing the most happy results.

The Honorable Company's Steamer Atalanta came to Anchor in the Harbour about ½ past one P. M., and her packets were landed shortly after two o'clock.

The Gazette of April 10 contains a proclamation on the subject of the coronation. All the 'ceremonies that have heretofore taken place in Westminster Hall" are to be dispensed with; and "such part only of the solemnity and ceremony as is usual upon the coronation of Kings and Queens of this realm, solemnized in Westminster Abbey, shall take place." There will, therefore, be neither banquet nor procession. The alleged cause of the curtailment is a desire to be economical. The arrangements have been directed to be "as much abridged and as economical as might be compatible with a strict regard to the solemnity and importance of the occasion."

The Earl of Durham with his family and suite arrived at Portsmouth on the 23d April preparatory to his embarkation for Canada, and the next day his Lordship accompanied by the Countess, their daughters, and several attachés proceeded on board the Hastings 74. On his arrival on board, the Hastings immediately got under weigh, was taken in tow by the Lightning, and towed round St. Helen's, from whence she made sail with a fair wind for Quebec. His lordship was attended at his embarkation by the Earls Radnor and Dundonald; Admirals Sir P. Durham, Plumming, Sir T. Briggs, and Bouverie; Captains the Hon. F. Grey and A. Ellice; and the Lieut.-Governor, Sir Thomas M'Mahon, &c. &c. Her Majesty's steam frigate Dee, was to have proceeded with the Hastings for the purpose of expediting her passage up the river St. Lawrence, by towing her through some of the intricate parts; but in proceeding out of the harbour to Spithead, she, in going through the Swash passage, grounded and was left hard and fast.

The Dee had 50 sappers and three engineer officers on board for Quebec. The Brigantine Charybdis, Lieut. the Hon. R. Gore, sailed with the Hastings, and goes with her to Quebec.

The Apollo and the Inconstant, Queen's ships, sailed at the beginning of the week from Portsmouth, for Canada, with the Grenadier Guards.

The Earl of Gosford has been received with marked attention by the municipal authorities in New York.

The year ended 5th April shows a decrease, as compared with the previous year, of 2.332 36l.

On the quarter ended 5th April, as compared with the corresponding quarter of 1837, there is a decrease of 492 420l.

The decrease on the year is in—Customs, 1,951, 658l.; Excise, 1.049,557l.; Stamps, 2 9.114l; Taxes, 54 811l.; in the Post Office there is an increase of 2-,743l.

The decrease on the quarter is—Customs, 3'4 835l.; Excise 128,520l. On Stamps, there is an increase of 29.732l.; Post office, 2 000l.

The two great Steamers the Sirius and the Great Western have sailed for America, the former from Cork and the latter from Bristol, on their experimental voyage.

The London and Birmingham rail-road has been at length opened, and thus these two great Cities together with Liverpool and Manchester are united four in one.

A final decision has at length been given by Lord Brougham in the cause of Small v. Attwood being against the Iron Company; this case has occupied the "Gentlemen of the long Robe" about 12 years, the costs it is said amount to £150 000, and the Property involved was from £5 to 600,000

FRANCE.—The independence of Hayti has been finally recognized by the Country, the Blacks engaging to pay 68,000,000 francs in annual instalments by the year 1867. The question of Bankrupt laws, Beet-Root Sugar, and Railroads have occupied the Chamber of Deputies for some time past. The Ministers and the Committee are at variance on the construction of the latter project, in fact the former are in a state of great embarrassment from the opposition they meet with in the Chamber of Deputies.

PORTUGAL.—The firmness of the Queen has completely quieted the Rebellion; the new Constitution was signed by the Cortes on the 20th Ulto., and a deputation waited on the Queen with a copy of it when her Majesty named the 4th April for its consideration, the Government were gaining strength daily.

SPAIN.—Vera a Town of some importance to the Carlists, as through it were principally conveyed the supplies furnished to the faction since the capture of Irun and Fontarabia, was taken on the 14th, after a second attack, by the Christinos. General Fiinter has resigned his Command under Espartero. Don Carlos and his Chiefs are also said to have quarrelled.

TURKEY.—The Sultan's ardour to attack Mahomed Ali seems to be altogether subsided and will end in stationing an army of observation on the Confines of Syria We learn from Circassia that the Russians have been entirely routed at Shushen; 7,000 of the natives having almost in despair collected instantaneously, obliging the invaders to re-embark with great loss Mr. Young who had gone over with Messrs. Bell and Longworth had returned and his Companions were shortly expected.

EAST INDIES.—If proofs were before wanting of Mr. Waghorn's usefulness to the cause which he has so long advocated and followed, we feel convinced that the public will no longer have any doubt of that Gentleman's claim for support when it is known that for several months past the letters sent thro' his agency via Marseilles have reached their destinations many days before the Mails. The Letters 1st March from Bombay, 17th February. Calcutta, and 18th that month from Madras, arrived in England on 18th April whereas the Government Mails of same date have not yet come to hand, nor can they be expected for a day or two.

CANTON PRESS.

Saturday, 28th July.

The Sylph from the Sandheads, 22d June and Singapore 10th July has arrived during the week, bringing Calcutta dates to the 18th ulto, and the Sing. Free Press of 5th July. The Antonio Pereira left Singapore on the morning of the tenth, and was afterwards seen by the Sylph not far from Pedra Branca, but her nonarrival here has caused serious apprehensions to be entertained for her safety, and we understand that high premiums have been asked to insure her freight. We hope, however, that by going too near the land, she may have met with light and baffling winds, by which her arrival has been retarded. The weather in the China Sea, though rainy and squally, has not been heavy. The Waterwitch arrived at Singapore on the 9th, and when the Sylph came away, a vessel supposed to be the Cowasjee Family was standing in.

The Hero from Bombay has brought the overland mail with dates from England to 26th April. We take from the Bombay Courier Extra of 4th June such extracts as are of political interest. The news from the United States via England reach to the 30th March. The Canadian insurrection was completely quelled, and some American bordesers, who had invaded the Canadian territory, had been driven back with great loss. The Canadians had taken and destroyed the Carolina steamer, a vessel under American flag, which as alleged had been guilty of piratical acts, and of assisting the Insurgents. This circumstance has given rise to a correspondence between Mr. Fox the British Minister in the United States, and the Government of that country, the statements of the opposing parties being contradictory, as may be expected. In commercial circles considerable excitement prevailed, owing to complaints having been lodged against the Phoenix bank, of usury and extortion, with a view of depriving it of it's charter. In the statement of this affair, we have seen, it is said that most of the banks have been guilty of similar acts, and the issue of the complaint against the Phoenix may materially affect the existence of other banks also. The commercial advices from England are any thing but favorable. The demand for manufactures from North America had been very limited, and produce, such as Cotton and Silk had in consequence declined materially in price. The great April tea-sale, beginning on the 2d April was going off but languidly at a considerable reduction in prices, particularly of green teas. Consols 24th April 93¼.

Some weeks ago we published a statement of the deliveries and stock of Tea in England of the last year; we now again insert one shewing the comparative quantities of 1836 and 1837, from which our readers will see, no doubt with regret, that there has been in the last year, instead of an increase, a falling off in the consumption of 1,151,000lbs This decrease is probably partly owing to the commercial distress of the past year, but not altogether; the chief cause of the slight increase of the consumption, since the Company's monopoly ceased, is to be found in the high indiscriminating duty of 2s. 1d. per lb., a duty which is within 1½d. per lb. as much as was paid during the Company's time when 9 per cent were levied on the sale price at the India house, which price afforded the Company a profit of fully 100 per cent upon the capital laid out in China. The free traders are and must be content with a much smaller profit, which, we will suppose, on an average, to be about 10 per cent; it follows therefore that they do sell their teas about 45 per Cent cheaper than the Company did, but in lieu of the 96 per cent duty the consumer then paid, he is now burthened with an ad valorem duty of 17½ per cent, an increase of taxation as unjust as it is injudicious, and altogether contrary to the promises of government to the free-trade, which were, that the duties should not be more than what they were under the Company's time. What however has been the fact? Taking the duties of last year, unfavorable as it has been, with upwards of one million lbs. of teas deficiency in the consumption compared with the proceeding year, we shall find them to have amounted to £3 912,100.—During the Company's time they did not exceed on an average £3.300.000—; the free-trade consequently contrary to the express promise of government, pays about £ 600 000—more of duty than the tea-trade did under the Company, and it is therefore not to be wondered at if the consumption has increased much less than was anticipated, since all the advantage the consumer has derived from the soi-disant liberal measure of the government in throwing the China trade open to the general trader, is the great competition which now exists and the superior economy of the private trader, by which the original sale price has been lessened; whilst the per centage of the duty has risen in the same degree as the price has fallen. But the manner in which the duty is now levied appears to us more objectionable even than it's amount; all teas, no matter of what quality, pay 2s. 1d. per lb., whilst their cost price varies from 8d. to 4s., thus obliging the poor man to pay a duty of 300 per cent, whilst the rich pays only 50 for his finer tea. The consequence has been that the Bohea tea, a common quality, making however a very wholesome beverage, has been driven altogether out of the market, and none but the better qualities can now be shipped; the poor man in England is therefore obliged either to go without his tea, or to use but very little of it, whilst if the cheap tea were still imported into England and paid an ad valorem duty as it did in the Company's time of 96 per cent, consumption of it would probably be immense, as being within the range of most people's pockets, whilst the revenue would be a gainer from the greatly increased consumption, even at the lower rate of duty. The bulk of Teas now shipped are ordinary and middling Congous the cost price of which here, on an average, may be equal to about 1s. 4d., at the most, and this at prices, which, thanks to the interference of the Company's Finance operations here, are fully 25 per cent higher than they were during the time of the Monopoly—this tea is drunk by the mass of the English people, who have to pay full 150 per cent duty; the price is therefore so much enhanced as to allow them to use tea only with the greatest oeconomy, and, probably, frequently to prefer other and more noxious beverages to this, merely because its price places it beyond their reach. An ad valorem duty would, no doubt, raise the price of the finer qualities, but this would not affect their consumption, the article of tea being but a small part of the expenditure of a family in good circumstances, and a trifle more paid for it would not be felt in proportion to the relief that would be given to the poor by lowering the duty on an article which forms one of their chief comforts and no inconsiderable proportion of their daily expense.

It has been stated that to levy an ad-valorem duty would be almost impossible, owing to the difficulty of valuing the teas, and that the trial made during the first two years of the free trade of levying the duty according to a certain classification had proved a failure; but we believe that the fault was chiefly in the manner in which that classification was made, and the difficulty arose mainly from the nomenclature of the teas here and at home, some calling one tea Bohea which others insisted to call Congou, and to levy duty on accordingly. The fact was that in this instance, as the Bohea improves in quality, it will be called fine Fokien Bohea, and a shade better classification therefore was unjust where Boheas were taxed at 1s. 6d., and Congous at 2s. 2d., per pound, by which often an article, which differed in nothing from another, but being of a trifle better quality, having cost perhaps here a halfpenny more per lb. became liable to a duty of 8d more per lb. The fairest way of levying the duty appears to us to be according to Invoice, and we should think that no insuperable ob-tacles could oppose themselves to it, seeing that the same method has successfully been followed, with other articles, in the United States. Frauds certainly may, now and then, pass undetected, but these can only be to a trifling extent. The East India and China Association in London has in many respects been active in protecting the interests of the China trade; we hope they will give their attention towards remedying the evil of high and and unequal duties, which now presses so heavily upon our trade; any alteration in the present system, we are well aware, it will be difficult to effect, but much good may be done by persevertingly advocating, and agitating for, a change.

The new Hoppo having reached this land of promise, has, as usual, begun the duties of his new office, by squeezing the trade as much as possible, and by attempting to extort higher than the usual duties on white Cottons. These are, by the Chinese, considered to be of three qualities, 1st, 2d, and 3d, and payed duty accordingly, and brown Cottons were considered to be always of the 3d quality and valued as such for the duty. The new Hoppo has, we understand, raised the 2d quality to the dignity and expense of the first, and the third and brown cottons to that of the 2d class. To counteract this extortion a deputation of foreign gentlemen went on Thur-day last to the City-gate to deliver a petition to the Governor complaining of these practices of the Hoppo After having waited some time within the gate, the proper person to receive such petitions arrived; no answer has yet been received.

The British flag again is unfurled in Canton, since the arrival here of Capt Elliot, H. M. Chief Superintendent of Trade on Wednesday last. Conjecture is busied to ascertain what may be the motive for this extraordinay visit, after the declaration of Capt. Elliot contained in a circular dated 29th November last, that the Governor having declined to accede to conditions which Capt. Elliot had received from his Government, concerning the manner of his intercourse with the Chinese authorities, all intercourse between them had necessarily ceased. On the 1st of December all the British resident merchants met in the (former) Company's garden to see Capt. Elliot embark for Macao, as a mark of their approval of this step taken by the Superintendent, and acclamations of joy were uttered when the boat pushed off. We are not aware that the Chinese authorities have since become less averse to treat with Capt. Elliot on his own terms, and must suppose that this functionary has cogent reasons for the step he has just taken, as, without them, the Chinese would have new reason for scoffing at and ridiculing the acts of H. B. M. accredited agents. Let us just take a review of the acts of this commission since it came to China. Lord Napier came to Canton against the will of the Canton authorities; these insisted on his leaving again, but he declared that he would remain in Canton unless driven out at the point of the bayonet, and he refused to receive all communications that were not made to him by the proper officer, and not through the Hong-merchants. The Chinese remained firm in their determination to employ the Hong merchants exclusively as the means of communication, and Lord Napier, seeing that the continued stoppage of trade, and consequent losses suffered by the merchants, began to thin the ranks of his friends, was at last obliged to inform the Chinese authorities that he was ready to return to Macao. Most of our readers are familiar of the indignities this nobleman suffered on board the Chinese boats, and of his untimely death, accelerated, no doubt, by the unfortunate issue of his mission. After this, the Commission, instead, as they ought to have done, of dissolving itself and returning to England, proceeded to fill up the void occasioned by Lord Napier's death, taking care that, though their occupation was gone, the salaries should remain in full force, and remained idle at Macao, until the establishment was reduced to its present footing, the Chief Superintendent continuing to act under Lord Napier's commission. After having remained in Macao, without any intercourse with the provincial Government, about two years and nine months, the Superintendents, after having applied through the Hong-merchants for a Chop, arrived in Canton on the 12th April last year, and whatever communications they had with the Canton authorities was through the usual channel of the Hong-merchants, thus relinquishing the point Lord Napier had so strenuously insisted on, and acknowledging Chinese diplomacy to have got the better of them with regard to this point We, at the time, much regretted that this step had been taken, but supposed that it was in consequence of orders from the Government at home that they had yielded to the Chinese. This seems not to have have been the case, to judge at least from the subsequent orders Capt. Elliot declared to have received, and in consequence of which he declined communicating with the local authorities through the Hong-merchants, and retired to Macao in consequence. The shouts in approbation of his departure have hardly ceased to ring in our ears, when lo! long before the Government in England can have been apprised of this step, or have approved of it, behold him again in Canton! What can the Chinese possibly think of such contradictory conduct? Will they not have good reason to laugh at such inexplicable efforts at diplomacy? And will not the British here, a contre cœur, agree that the Chinese are in the right?

We do suppose that the Superintendent's visit must have been caused by the Admiral's arrival, and hope (however moderate our expectations may be) that by some splendid result it will shame into oblivion former acts which to our uninitiated eyes looked very much like egregious blunders.

We hear that during the late rather heavy squalls near Macao a considerable number of Chinese boats has been upset and that a good many of their crews have been drowned.

DIED.

COMMERCIAL REMARKS

IMPORTS.

COTTON MANUFACTURES.—Large sales of LONGCLOTHS, were made in the early part of the week at very reduced prices. White at from 5 to 4½ and grey at 4 @ 4½, and as holders are forcing sales, there appears little chance of an improvement for the present. COTTON YARN, none but of good quality is at all saleable and this at very low rates. The only sale reported was of about 100 bales part Water part Mule Nos. 18 @ 40 at, we believe, $ 34 @ 35, good Manchester yarn—the market is quite overstocked already.

WOOLLENS:—there has been no transaction in SPANISH STRIPES, and prices remain much the same, without much enquiry. LONGELLS, we have heard of no further sale, and purchasers shew no disposition to come forward at even our present reduced rates. CAMLETS, no enquiry whatever for either English or Dutch.

METALS.—IRON, in the expectation of further arrivals the dealers are unwilling to buy at the present quotations, so quickly is this market influenced by even moderate supplies. LEAD, without improvement in price or demand.

STRAITS PRODUCE.—PEPPER and TIN, without alteration. A small supply of BETELNUT, is reported to have arrived in a small Dutch Schooner from Singapore which will fetch perhaps 3½ @ 4. The probable extent of importation will regulate the price when the regular season's supplies come on.

COTTON.—Sales have been made of Bombay Cotton during the week to the extent of 5 @ 6000 bales at from 8 @ 9. 7 for the best quality, and at these rates there is a fair demand. Some parcels of Bengal have been sold at about 11 @ 11. 2 for Banda and 10 @ 10. 5 for Jalone, and Cutchera at 9 @ 9. 5, the quantity here being very small. We hear of one sale of Tinnevelly, the only parcel we believe, of the old stock in the hands of the Chinese at 10 5. None of the Anna Robertson's cargo is yet brought forward.

OPIUM.—The demand for Malwa is again more languid, but without any alteration in price. For the Bengal drug there has been a little more enquiry and sales to a moderate extent have been made at an advance of 10 @ 15 for Patna; this may be partly attributed to the impression that some accident has happened to the Antonio Pereira. No improvement in the old drug. The Lintin deliveries to the 22d were. Patna, old, 64 new, 452; Benares, old, 38, new, 193; Malwa, 449; Total 1197 chests.

EXPORTS.

NANKIN SILK.—About 200 bales of the new Silk were reported to have arrived yesterday, but we have been unable to ascertain any thing of its quality, nor of the produce of the second crop; the cost is said to be above 500 $ per Picul.

TEA.—The new Hung mueys begin to arrive, but are nearly all of very indifferent quality—the prices asked for them are extravagantly high so that with the late intelligence from England there seems to be little chance of their speedy settlement.

EXCHANGE.—The Superintendents advertised £ 750.—Navy bills at 30 days sight, which, we hear, were taken at 4. 3½.

FREIGHTS.—£ 5.—may be considered the rate, but the market will be pretty well cleared of teas by the ships now loading.

ART. II. Notices of the city of Borneo and its inhabitants, made during the voyage of the American brig Himmaleh in the Indian Archipelago in 1837. From a Correspondent.

WEDNESDAY May 10th, 1837. At 11 o'clock, A. M., we were sailing southeast by east, with Labuan Island to the northward, when a prahu approached us. A boat was sent with Mr. M. to speak this prahu, which he found commanded by a person whom he had formerly known at Borneo, and who manifested great joy at meeting with him. Mr. M., it may be well to observe here, is an Armenian who has resided two or three years in the city of Borneo as the commercial agent of some Armenian gentlemen in Singapore, and is now employed by captain F. as his interpreter and commercial assistant. The commander of the prahu was received into the small boat, and was soon with us in the brig. Mr. M. informs us that the name of this man is rája Muda; that he is captain of the Illanun pirates, who live near the north end of the island, at Tawarun; that he is on good terms with the sultan of Borneo; and that although a pirate, he does not injure the people of Borneo or their friends. Our captain requested him to act as pilot to the anchorage and then to the city, which he agreed to do. his prahu being taken in tow. He was well dressed, and not bad looking, and our first impressions in respect to him were rather favorable. It was not long before he informed us in a boasting way, that he had recently captured ninety Castilians, that is, natives of the Philippines subject to Spain and sold them at Borneo. At half past 4, P. M. we left the Himmaleh in rája Muda's prahu, manned by twenty-two men, sixteen of whom were rowers. Their oars were small, and the men weak, as compared with Europeans. They entertained us with their singing, which was new and strange to us, but not so distitute of musical skill as much of the singing heard in this part of the world. One person would commence the air, while the others rested for a moment, with their little oars high out of water; next they would all give three strokes with their oars as an accompaniment; then rest again, while the song went forward; then all would row and shout for a few moments with all their might. At 7 o'clock we passed Pulo Chermin (Looking Glass Island,) a small island in the river's mouth, and proceeded up the river with only light enough to show us the dark outline of the high banks. It being low water, we were aground in the mud three or four times, but were soon off again. We passed several boats, by some of which we were hailed, and went near a small fort, the guards of which, if there were any, were probably asleep. It was midnight when we reached the town. We proceeded to the house of pangeran Muda Hasim, where we were welcomed by several young pangerans, his brothers. The house is larger, though but little better, than the common Malay houses. The furniture consisted of a Chinese bamboo settee, three or four chairs, and a mat upon the floor. The value of all the furniture in the room, at Singapore prices, would be 8 or 10 dollars. After waiting half an hour, Muda Hasim made his appearance, a small man, with a genuine Malay countenance and form. He received us after the European manner, seemed at first a little embarrassed, and consequently was reserved. He offered us tea poured out by himself in the Chinese fashion, and knew enough of our customs to chew his betel without presenting it to us. After a little time he proposed going with us to call upon the sultan. Two boats were called, and in a few minutes we were mounting the ladder to the sultain's house, which, like all the houses here, is built upon stakes over the water. An open door gave us a view into a dimly lighted hall, on the floor on which a number of men were sleeping. Passing by this door to the right, we were shown into a small verandah furnished with settees and chairs, like the room we had left. Here, after some waiting, we had a long and tedious interview with the sultan, who inquired our names, our country, our business, and offered us tea and betel, It was nearly day light when we were told that beds were ready for us. These beds were found to be the common mat and pillow, with the oddition of a rug spread under them. A number of persons crowded around us to see us lie down to our sleep, and when these had gratified their curiosity, Muda Hasim came to look at us and take leave. And last of all came the sultan, who wanted us to feel his pulse. All of them appeared to be in good humor. From the time of our leaving the vessel, I had felt that there was sufficient promise of safety to authorise the step we were taking, and yet there was some lingering apprehension of danger. We had come to a place which a few years ago was notorious for piracy; and though its reputation was now much better, we knew not yet the ground upon which this better reputation rested.

May 11th. It was arranged last night that I was to start at sunrise with raja Muda, who was on his way home, and who in passing was to leave me at the brig, where I was to take our own boat and return with the presents, which the captain had ordered for the sultan and the chief pangerans. I did not get away till near midday. And now commenced a new scene. Had I known before the circumstances in which I was about to be placed, I should have hesitated before putting myself so much in the power of these pirates. I was quite alone among them, except that I had with me a man sent by Muda Hasim to act as pilot on my return. I remembered having heard at Samboangan that it is common with the Illanuns to capture white men for the purpose of obtaining a ransom for them. I perceived that raja Muda, being on his way to his own country, might, if he pleased, pass by our vessel without leaving me, and without the fact being known, at the vessel, or at the city, short of two days. Fears of this kind, however, did not prevent my admiring the fine scenery of the river and its banks. The breadth of the river is about half a mile. The banks are from 50 to 250 feet in height, in some places nearly perpendicular, in others ascending gradually at an angle of 20 or 30 degrees with the horizon. They are covered with forest or with coarse grass. Saw but few houses. A mile and a half below the town passed the small fort. It has five iron cannon mounted upon it, and is guarded by one man and his family. The men with me pointed to an elevated position on the river's bank, on which they said there were other and larger guns. The course of the river, for four or five miles below the fort, is nearly straight. Near the town it makes a right angle, another at the fort, and near the mounth there is a slight bend. The heat was oppressive, and as I had not slept the night before, I lay down by the side of rajá Muda, under a kajang awning, and was refreshed by an hour's slep. After this I amused miself with learning the numerals of his language, (the Illanun), and the names of a few objects. Some of the words are the same. R ja Muda told me he had been in Mindanao, and that the language of that island is so much like his own, that he can understand it. The Illanuns of Borneo are doubtless a colony from Mindanao, and their language probably differs from that of the parent country only in the mixture with it of Malay words. It is hardly necessary to say that many of them, besides their own language, also speak the Malay. This Illanun colony, as I was informed afther returning to the town of Borneo, has existed for ages. It comprises three towns or rivers: Tampasok, Tawaran, and Pandanan, situated near the lofty mountain Kini Balu. A town, on this coast, generally implies a river of the same name, and a river almost as frequently implies the existence of a town. Raja Muda is a great beggar, and in order to keep him in good humor, and to strengthen the motives for leaving me at the vessel, I promised that on our arrival he should receive several of the articles which he asked for. Although we had tide, and, a part of the way, wind in otr favor, we did not reach the Himmaleh till sun. set. The men immediately made their way on board, and went about examining everything, particularly the guns and cutlasses. Raja Muda received with satisfaction the articles that had been promised him. The mate, not considering it safe to have on board such men, ordered the pirate prahu and all its crew to leave the vessel, and to keep at a suitable distance during the night. Raja Mda alone was allowed to remain. He was mortified that his followers should be thus treated, and seemed now to be ashamed of his profession. By this contrivance of the mate, he was a prisoner, and a hostage for the good conduct of his men. He wisely laid his kris upon the cabin table, and did not go near it again while he was on board. At 9 o'clock in the evening I started for the town in the small boat, with five of our crew and the Malay man who had come with me to act as pilot in returning. We stopped a few minutes at Pulo Chermin, the small island in the mouth of the river. Formerly it was inhabitid and cultivated, but is so no longer. Brought away some stones, which on examination by day light, proved to be sand stone. At the dawn of day were at the sultan,s.

May 12th. Ascended the river about two miles in a gobang (a long narrow canoe) with two young pangerans, brothers of pangeran Hasim, and several of their servants. Went on shore, and passing over two or three hills, came to a retired valley in which were several small pepper gardens belonging to Chinese. We saw two of these Chinese, one of whom has turned Mohammedan. Both were very ignorant. They speak Hokkèèn, and one can read a little. They say there are only forty Chinese in Bruni. We saw a men from the Philippines, who was probably stolen from his own country and sold here as a slave. The sorrowful tones of his voice could not fail to interest, and especially when he said, in Spanish, that he was a Christian, and very miserable. I desired much to know more of his case, but could not in Spanish inquire into his history, and to do it in Malay did not seem prudent, as slavery here is a 'delicate' subject, and as we are constantly watched. I sat down to rest in a Chinese house, and the two pangerans began to examine my pockets. They must see everything, but it was only to gratify their curiosity; for when I offered each of them a rupee, they declined, saying, I might give one to one of their followers standing by, but not to them. as pangerans (noble) must not work, nor receive money, according to the adat Brunt (law of Borneo). There was an apparent delicacy of feeling and a polish of manners in these young chiefs, which brought to mind Burke's 'Corinthian capital,' and his praise of 'the unbought grace of life.' But I had afterwards to learn that the capital was no better than the shaft or the base. From the tops of the hills we could see a part of the town, and portions of the rivers, a limited but beautful landscape. The rocks and stones were all sandstone. In the afternoon we saw at the sultan's the chief imam or priest, who is a native of the town, but has lived 25 years in Mecca, and consequently has much of the Arab in his exterior, and probably as much in his habits of thought and feeling. Like all the higher classes, he wears a kris, but his kris (dagger) differs altogether in shape from the common Malay kris, this peculiarity being one of the badges of his order. His age cannot be less than 60 years. His stature is five feet six or seven inches, which is three or four inches above the ordinary height of his countrymen. In his manner he is grave and dignified, and his countenance is not without indications of thought. He wears the Arab dress. His boat differs from the common gobang, being broader, and approaching nearer to our ides of a boat than to the long narrow canoe of Bruni. The imam's boat is also distinguished by covering over the middle part. While sitting at his ease under this covering, the old man was pounding in a small mortar his betel and gambir, a custom not unusual, it is said, among those whose teeth have lost their power. A beautiful evening. The moon is shining brightly. Not a ripple upon the water. The river is like a broad clear mirror, over which the little gobangs are gliding smoothly and silently, as if self-moved; for instead of oars are used a light kind of paddles, which are skillfully managed, so that the boats move as noiselessly almost as the fish. From a little distance we hear singing, which comes sweetly upon the ear, and accords well with the beauty and softness of the scene. On such a night why may not the gobangs of Bruni be thought to rival the gondolas of Venice?

The sultan calls us away from our musings, to walk with him on the other side of the house and admire his strutting. The character of this man deserve notice, but I defer speaking particularly of him until I shall have had opportunity to observe him more closely. Chinese Repository for July.

Lighthouse in the Straits

From the Singapore Free Press, 19th July.

It appears to have been generally believed of late that government was about to erect a Light-house on some one of the islands in the western entrance of the Singapore Straits; and, from all we can learn, this important aid to navigation is not now likely to be long wanting to the approach from that side. The opinions of nautical cognoscenti, as to the most advantageous site, seem to have been divided between Barn Island and the Coney, and Alligator Island has we understand also been suggested—but it was doubted whether the Coney, which seemed to have the preference of the majority, besides being more appropriate as the point from which all the bearings are given in the surveys, presented a sufficiently solid surface for the foundation of a light-house, and suitable buildings for the use and convenience of the establishment which it would be necessary to appoint to the charge of it. From the survey executed in the course of the week by the government surveyor, Mr. COLEMAN, this would seem to be the case—the islet or rock of the Coney possessing only a superficies of about 70 feet by 22. This would no doubt be sufficient for the light-house itself—but, as its superintendence, when completed, must necessarily be confided to some competent and respectable individual, what European would in this country consent to domesticate himself on this "rock of the ocean" in consideration of any emolument the appointment was likely to offer? This objection does not, however, apply to Barn Island, which is abundantly spacious, affording room for exercise even on horse-back, and the means of allowing the superintendent of the light-house an opportunity of varying his solitary occupation with the pursuits of gardening or planting. Besides these advantages Barn Island possesses also that of being much higher than the Coney, being 70 feet above the level of the sea, while the elevation of the latter is only about 30 feet. Alligator Island is about 100 feet in height, but has not been so generally recommended for the advantages of its position as the two others; and as the circumstance of the bearings being given from the Coney seems the only point in favour of that islet over Barn Island, it appears not unlikely that the latter will be the site finally fixed upon for the erection of the proposed Light-house.

It will probably with a good many of our mercantile readers here appear to operate as some qualification of the advantages derivable to the navigation of the Straits from the erection of a Light-house, to understand, that government proposes to levy Tonnage dues on the shipping anchoring in the harbour, to provide a fund for maintaining it. The scale of the proposed Tonnage-dues, however, does not correspond with that which was adverted to in our number of 26th October last; as understood to be then in the contemplation of government to adopt—but as we have not yet had the means of making ourselves acquainted with the full particulars of the intended impost, we shall defer our remarks on the subject until our information is more complete.—

United States.

From our Private Correspondent.

Galignani's Messenger, 27 and 28th April.

PHILADELPHIA, APRIL 2.—By the vote in the Senate in favour of Mr. Van Buren's Sub-Treasury Bill, by a majority of 2. that great measure of the Government was tran-mitted down to the House of Representatives on Saturday week. On Tuesday a motion was made to lay it on the table, and, after a most stormy debate, that motion prevailed by a majority of 106 against 98. The Washington Globe (the Government organ) states that of 32 absentees. 22 were in favour of the bill; and that, therefore, it was not a test vote, as it will be called up again. Perhaps it may. But why were these 22 members absent, when the Government was beating up all its forces? The answer is obvious—Because in most cases neither they not their constituents favoured the measure. I will again state, for the information of your readers, that the Sub-Treasury Bill proposes to take from all Banks the power of becoming depositaries of the public revenue; to establish a treasury, and vest that power in individuals, and agents and receivers, in different parts of the United States. The bill is opposed on the grounds that individuals are not so safe as the Banks; that to pass it into a law would be to give the Federal Government too ample a possession of the purse as well as the sword; while it would confer an extent of patronage on the Federal Executive, that would be absolutely dangerous, if not fatal to public liberty.

Although hundreds of merchants from the vast and fertile regions and cities of the west now crowd our Atlantic sea-ports, for the purpose of making their spring purchases; yet considerable gloom prevails in the market, both of money and merchandize, owing to the state of domestic exchange. They are every day getting worse and worse. Money from the southern and western states costs a discount of from 15 to 20 per cent, to be rendered at all available, either in Philadelphia or New York. Surely this is a sad state of affairs between cities and states of the same nation, and under the same general government! I predict that, sooner or later, a National Bank must be established as the only remedy for this frightful difficulty. Apropos of National Banks—the stockholders of the United States Bank have just presented their President, Nicholas Biddle, Esq, the eminent American financier, with a service of plate which cost 20.000 dollars, one hundred thousand francs! as a tribute of respect for his great abilities in the government of that institution.

A new speculation is now all the rage in the United States, which promises, at no distant date, materially to affect one of the great national resources of wealth in France. I allude to the cultivation of silk. Mulberry plantations and nurseries are forming in hundreds of locations throughout the middle and southern states; trees of the moris multicaulis are being raised by millions, and in New England several silk-manufactories are already in operation. I have seen specimens, and can vouch for the excellence of the silk thread, as well as of the quality and texture of the manufactured fabric. The climate is admirably suited to the growth of the trees, and any one who is acquainted with American enterprise will at once foresee that within a very few years silk will add one more to the already numerous and great resources of the Republic. The silk manufactures now imported into the United States are valued at 16,000,000 dollars per annum, chiefly from France. This, however, will in all probability diminish from year to year; and it is a general belief that before many years have elapsed, the United States will be an exporting, instead of an importing, silk country.

You may judge of the condition of the New York banks to resume specie payments by the fact that, on the 1st of March, their circulation was 11,107, 850 dollars; their deposits etc., 17,912,060 dollars; their loans and discounts 52,288,288 dollars; and their stock of specie only 4,092,793 dollars!

There is no talk of a resumption of specie payments in any of the cities south of the Potomac.

"By the London packetship Ontario we have accounts from New York to the 6th April. The exchange on London had declined to 104, and some bills had been sold so low as 104. Stocks were failing daily; the shares in the Phœnix Bank were at 88, being a reduction of 20 per cent, since the charges of usury were prefered against that establishment, United States Bank shares 113; Specie 12 to 2½ prem., but sales had been made at 1½. They state, "The continued fall in the exchange is causing large shipments of specie from the West Indies and South America to this port for the purchase of bills; the present rate of good sterling bills is 104, and few buyers at this." The Boston Post mentions the arrival of two agents of the United States Bank in that city, for the purpose of conferring with the banks there on the subject of specie payments; the agents, is it said, will use their influence against the measure. The amount of Treasury Notes issued up to 1st April was 7.467,340 dollars, and the receipts for duties, land, etc. up to that time were 3,500,000 dollars. These papers bring no news from Canada of the least interest, but are principally occupied with an exceedingly long speech of Mr. Webster's on the sub-treasury scheme, and editorial comments thereon. This speech seems to have excited great interest at Washington.—(Ledger

CORRESPONDENCE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE CANTON PRESS.

My dear Sir,

The following letter, which I found in Celestial-Purity street, struck me as so irresistibly droll and ridiculous that I resolved, instanter, to make a translation pro bono publico—i. e. to fill up a column of your paper.

I beg to assure you, however, that I not only disbelieve all the assertions therein made and despise the superlative style of the writer, but entirely disagree with him, as to the motives of our Superintendent (whom he maligns in most detestable terms) in returning to Canton. In fact I am quite in the dark respecting the new system of diplomacy adopted by our head men at home; visions of an admiral's family—shops in China Street—Ivory and lacquered ware—and government footmen, did at one time haunt my brain; but they are dispersed.

"Horrible, horrible, most horrible."

TRANSLATION.

There is a flowret in the garden of the heart which exhales its luscious fragrance and vivifying sweetness to nourish the life of thy slave, oh! exalted Chief, virtuous elder brother. This flower is called friendship: with the hoe of memory have I tended, and with the tears of affection watered it; and have plucked its fairest bud for thee. Myriads of fairies guard it safely to thee, and the lady Goddess of the moon plant it in the sacred regions of thy belly!

Since thy dragon glance last honored my filthy page, strange and ominous occurrences have been manifold—I will pass over all such as you may have heard of at the Court; such as the daring increase of barbarian pirates on the Canton river, and the diabolic flowing in of the black mud. The son of heaven is at length aroused: let the demons quake!

Six moons have flown by since the eye of the red bristled village of the outer Ocean (I presume that England is the country meant by this flattering cognomen. Translator,) trembling at the threats of our enlightened government, if he did not stop the smuggling of the hellish venom (Opium!) clandestinely sneaked out of the provincial City and escaped to Macao. I have been told, tho' I can hardly credit it, that this rash demon, actually demanded direct communication with the inner cabinet: and apprehensive lest the annihilation, so justly deserved by his daring, might fall on his head, he precipitately fled from his factory. If true, he has surely arrived at the very acme of presumptuous insolence. I am inclined, however, to attribute his absconding to the former cause, more especially as the said eye owns a large decked sampan, which it is ridiculous to imagine, is not engaged in the piratical smuggling of the mud.

Two months ago, the vigilance of the Gaou-mun (Macao) division of the central squadron, under the command of Admiral Chang, was awakened by the appearance of a war ship hovering about outside the Ladrones. Notwithstanding the strictest guard, the said war-ship managed to sneak into the Roads, one dark and stormy night, unperceived. At break of day, the Admiral spied her and, truly his rage was awful. It was only by the humble prayers and tears of his secretary, that he was deterred from opening the thunders of his artillery, and sinking the war ship, with all her demon-crew. In the middle of the second watch he sent to order her away, but, his heart moved with compassion at the weak and fatigued state of all on board, he consented to their remaining three days when, in obedience to his orders, they hoisted their sails and went away. About a month after this a fire dispatch was received by our friend Tang, stating that another war ship, of the red bristled country, of immeasurable size, but supposed to be within a chang or two of the Island of Heang, had arrived in Macao roads accompanied by a war-ship's child (Quære Brig?) That the larger one, carried 72 guns on each of her nine decks, and five thousand sailors and the smaller one ten large guns and five hundred men; besides, spears, bows and arrows, long knives, and gunpowder.

Upon receipt of said dispatch old Tang sent down a linguist, with a strict edict commanding the war ships to depart. The linguist Woo-tsang, on arrival at Macao, immediately confronted the eye commanding the large ship and with inexpressible dignity of voice and magisterial comportment desired him to go away, at the same time handing him the edict. The eye, who is an aged man, seemed as if thunder-struck, and dared not, for the life of him, answer a word. His apprehension so mastered him that he did not even presume to receive the edict. The linguist further ascertained the object of his coming, which is as follows. The head man (King. Tr.) of the red bristled nation, apprehensive lest the daring of his slave (the first mentioned eye) might embroil him with the son of Heaven, has sent this new sea-eye reverently and submissively to petition for the celestial pardon, and sternly to rebuke the aforesaid reptile, for his horrifying presumption.

Ten days after this, the land eye, his purser, second purser and linguist, came up to Canton, without even petitioning for leave, and hoisted his country flag. Nobody can tell what he is come for, but it is very reasonably supposed, that he has come to petition the hong merchants to intercede for the sea-eye who wishes to stay a month in the inner waters. Not having succeded, he intends, to night, to make his escape and remain at Macao.

My messenger is waiting, so I must tear myself from the contemplation of your exalted character, and looking up present my compliments.

To Choo, exalted man, virtuous elder brother, may he live a thousand years.

Your stupid younger brother Ling prostrates himself before the board of your honour and presents this letter.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE CANTON PRESS.

Dear Mr. Editor,

Some time ago, when the arrival of Admiral Maitland was still matter of expectation, I felt gratified, as you express yourself, with the prospect of increased attention to British interests in China. When I read the announcement of the Wellesley's appearance and anchoring in Toon koo bay, I commended the discretion of the veteran officer in thus avoiding, as you say, "the appearance of protecting the Opium shipping." The satisfaction I was disposed to draw from this discreet conduct was however somewhat lessened, when I turned back to your first page, and read that the superintendent had announced to Lord Palmerston his determination to resist, "by every opposition possible" the enforcement of the edicts, banishing from Canton the obnoxious owners and agents of the said shipping. I was thus led to speculate on what might happen, should these edicts be served, and the Admiral be called in, "to offer every opposition possible," (by a 74 &c.) to any disturbance of the principals in a traffic, from which traffic itself and its secondary agents, he deemed it necessary, while below, to withhold the smallest countenance.

I was still musing on the reasons why this trade should stand so ill at Toon koo, and so well in certain other places, when the superintendent appeared among us again, unannounced and, unexpected, and, it would seem, to the great dissatisfaction of the residents. I was in the act of bespeaking for him that respect for his yet unexplained steps, which is due to so able an officer, when the report became general, that the efforts of the Viceroy to prevent the Admiral's entrance within the Bogue, and particularly the firing on the Bombay passage boat, had given great offence, and would not improbably bring on collision, stoppage of trade, bloodshed, &c.

Such, Mr. Editor, is the present state of our gratified expectations. Now, under these circumstances, I wish particularly that the friends of peace among us, would take into timely consideration, the case of the conflicting officers. With the instructions, the feelings, the position of Admiral Maitland, we may be unacquainted. But it is well known to us all, that the present Viceroy has before his eyes, while issuing the edicts so offensive to his opponent, the fate of his degraded and dying predecessor, whose only crime it was, that he suffered Lord Napier "to steal up" to Canton, and thence to command the passage of the batteries. We all remember how "ridiculous and detestable" the Emperor pronounced the forcing of the Bogue, and we cannot have a doubt that the rank if not the life of the present Viceroy would pay the forfeit if he failed to execute the Imperial orders for the exclusion of the squadron. The inference then is easy, if Admiral Maitland could place himself in the circumstances of his opponent, he would pity rather than resent the measures taken to shut him up on board the Wellesley. Most annoying to him it must be, to find his mission of conciliation met by such rough courtesey; but he is lately from India, and must know enough of British conquest, armed occupations &c, to have done wondering why the still independent courts of the East cannot toast "the British army and navy."

I do not mean, Mr. Editor, by these remarks to trace out a course for you, though I do protest, as an individual, against all hasty, all hostile measures. As for the immediate occasion of the explosion, the admiral at Toonkoo, can have no sympathy with the smuggling boats, which are daily running the Bogue, getting and returning the fire of the cruizers, and perhaps the worst compliment the Viceroy has paid nine, is to suppose that he or any body under his command, would be found on board of them. It is, in truth, a singular fact, about these boats, that we are at one moment taunting the Chinese with permitting them to run at all, and the next, indignant that they be brought too, to enable the authorities to carry out an imperial direction.

We much fear that after what has passed, the alarmed Viceroy will not be able to compose himself to any useful correspondence. Still we have no doubt, any supplies, the Wellesley may need, will be granted on a proper application. With these on board, we sincerely hope the admiral will seek an open harbor at the north, where a blow struck, if blows must come, will tell, not on a poor subordinate doing only his duty, but on the real, the responsible, the Imperial master.

Saturday, 4th August.

THE SHIPS OF WAR AT TOON KOO.—We stated last week, that H. M. Chief Superintendent had suddenly made his appearance in Canton, contrary to his intention, as expressed by circular, dated 29th November last, to discontinue for the present all intercourse with the Chinese Government, because he found it impossible to carry it on according to the instructions from his Government. Soon after his arrival we heard that the secretary and treasurer, and the Chinese secretary and translator, had taken a communication from Capt. Elliot to the City-gate; we also heard that either from a want of address on the envelope of the letter, or from some other alledged irregularity, this letter was not received. Capt. Elliot had however repeated interviews with the Chief Hong merchants, but what the object of his visit may have been did not transpire, and has remained until now a secret to our community, though, if of any importance, we conceive, it would have been Capt. Elliot's duty to have communicated it to his countrymen here, who have so heavy a stake in the country that the timely knowledge of any possible alteration in the diplomatic relations with China, if such be contemplated, must be of the highest importance to them, without even considering the advantage Capt. Elliot would derive by such communication from the experience of his countrymen in Canton, whose acquaintance with the Chinese during a great number of years would no doubt render their advice valuable. Nothing having transpired as to the Superintendent's motive for his visit we are, with a great many of our neighbours, inclined to believe that nothing of any importance was intended to be transacted with the local authorities, and if our belief on that head be correct we cannot but regret that the dignity of English diplomacy has again been exposed, without sufficient grounds, to Chinese supercilliousness. Capt. Elliot's visit was, however, of but short duration and it is said that the news of the treatment of the Bombay schooner at the Bogue hastened his departure, that he might consult with the Admiral, Sir Frederick Maitland, and he left Canton accordingly for Toon koo bay on Tuesday at noon. The following are the particulars of what happened to the Bombay. When opposite the forts at the Bogue on Saturday night last, a mandarin boat fired a musket towards the Bombay to bring her to; this not being heeded, and the vessel continuing on her course, the Forts simultaneously opened their fire upon her, with such good aim that several shots touched the water so near her as to throw the spray upon the vessel. We are told that some of the shots were of heavy calibre, and would probably, had they struck the boat, have injured her materially. It was therefore thought wisest to heave to; and on the Chinese war-boat approaching, an board of which there was a linguist from Canton, inquiry was made whether any of the officers of the British ship of war or their ladies were on board, as they had orders not to let any of them pass; their questions being answered in the negative, the Bombay was allowed to continue on her way to Canton without further molestation, and she was not even searched for Opinm, of which she happened to have none on board. Since then several other boats have experienced similar treatmen, the officials at the Bogue being most anxious to intercept any officer that may belong to the British men-of-war, and unheeding apparently the other contraband that may be on board. On this news reaching Canton, Capt. Elliot as we have said, started in the Queen's cutter to have an interview with the Admiral, and the Canton community entertain no slight anxiety as to whether Admiral Maitland will consider the treatment he is receiving at the hands of the Chinese authorities as sufficient provocation for any hostile acts towards them. That Adm. Maitland has the power to punish the Chinese by demolishing their forts at the Bogue, no one doubts, but no one, we are certain, wishes for any such display, nor, do we think, has the provocation, though we allow it to be vexatious enough, been sufficient to warrant any such hostile act. On weighing all circumstances of the case we are inclined to think our Correspondent S. S. correct in his suggestion that, not the wish to insult, but fear of the consequences, has rendered the local Government of Canton thus zealous in preventing the officers of H. M. ships coming to Canton. The proceedings of Lord Napier, and the acts of the Imogene and Andromache are still too fresh in the memory of the local authorities, and the punishment on that occasion which some of them suffered through the Imperial displeasure, too threatening in prospectu, that they should not use all means in their power that may prevent a similar disgrace. But why did not the Chinese send some of their naval officers to Admiral Maitland to enquire of him the object of his mission? why does the Governor act merely upon the very imperfect report of the Pilot? If this had been done he would probably have been informed that it was the custom for the British Government to send ships of war to all places where considerable trade was carried on under the English flag, in order to protect it. and of this the Chinese must be partly informed, since, during the French war, the Company's fleet used always to sail hence protected by one or more ships of war. Whether the visit of the Admiral has any other object than merely this, we know not, but we believe it has not, unless it has some connexion with the state of affairs in Burmah, where the Chinese may possibly become formidable enemies to the East India Company; this is one of the conjectures, and, if it should be right, any hostile act committed here might possibly considerably improve the means of the Burmese to resist the British in case of war.

We publish in this number the correspondence that has taken place between the foreign merchants and the local authorities on the subject of the attempt made by the new Hoppo to tax them higher than heretofore, to which we alluded in our last. Though the answers from the functionaries are not as favorable as could be wished we are glad to be informed that the petition of the merchants has practically had a good effect, and that cotton-goods have since been passed at about the same rates as formerly.

We are told that the heat this summer here is greater than any remembered by &c. Our personal experience is but a few years, and during that time we certainly had no opportunity of seing the thermometer point at 95 and 96 deg., as it does now and has done during the last four or five days. Much fever and sickness is said to exist in consequence.

The following ridiculous edict has been issued against the frequency of foreigners proceeding to Macao in chair-side-chop-boats. We cannot understand why the Chinese should object to a practice which gives emoluments to their officers, a practice which is as ancient, we believe, as our intercourse with China, and which has of late only become more frequent in proportion to the greater number of foreigners now residing here. This is, we suppose, one of the Edicts which are not meant to be obeyed, Edict from the Hoppo.

Yu, Commissioner of Customs &c. &c. at the Port of Canton, proclaims to the Senior Hong-merchants for their full information.

It is authenticated that formerly, foreigners seldom performed more than ten annual journeys to or from Canton when it was no difficult matter to prevent smuggling, but latterly they have been unceasing in their applications for pass-ports, thus increasing the business of our Office, and exciting suspicion that they are engaged in smuggling. If therefore I do not check them directly, they will soon exceed all bounds. Considering the circumstances I issue this edict strictly prohibiting the practice. When it reaches you, the Hong-merchants, instantly accord obedience, and inform the foreigners that hereafter they will not be permitted to come and go at will, unless upon very pressing and urgent occasions. Thus all unhappy consequences will be prevented. Do not imagine I am trifling with you; for if you do, surely you will not escape unpunished Intensely tremble. A special Edict.

6th moon, 5th day. (25th July.)

Duties on Cottongoods.

Yu Hoppo of Canton &c. &c. proclaims to the Hong-merchants for their full information.

Whereas on the 6th day, of the 6th moon, of the 18th year of Taoukwang (i. e. the 26th July 1838.) the English merchants Jardine and others having presented a foreign petition in Chinese characters to the following effect:

We humbly beg to state that Jacob's ship having come up to Canton with several thousand pieces of White and Grey longcloths to our address, on the 4th and 5th days of said moon (24th and 25th July) we reque ted that these goods might be duly examined for duty, but the persons dispatched from your Excellency's public office, have not conformed to the old rules, but have erroneously viewed the second quality as first quality and levied duty thereon, and in like manner have they charged the duty of second quality longcloths, on our course Grey longcloths.

Formerly we were indebted to the previous Hoppo Wan, for nciaiy examining certain longcloths with his own eyes, and musters of these were sent to the Consoo House there to be treasured up as a standard by which to levy first and second quality duty, all Grey goods being taxed as third quality. What we say is quite true and proof may be given. But now these goods are taxed in a confused and disordered way, which causes our blood—earned capital to suffer, and such being the case, how is it possible to remain quiet under like extortions! We therefore pray that your Excellency will cause your people to tax our goods for duty justly, and our thanks will be without end.

Yu, Hoppo of Canton &c. &c. to the Hong-merchants for their full information.

Upon the 6th day, of the 6th moon, of the 18th year of Taoukwang, it appears that the English merchants Jardine and others, petitioned saying (here follows a copy of the petition.)

Now, this coming before me, the Hoppo, it appears that the said foreigners Jardine and others having got foreign longcloths on board Jacob's ship, request that the duties thereon be levied according to the musters examined and settled by the previous Hoppo. Now I, the Hoppo, find on examining the old document, dated 7th moon, and 16th year of Taoukwang, it appears that at that time, the Hong-merchants, in behalf of the foreigners Fox and others, handed up two pieces of bleached longcloths, upon which seals were put, and they were given to the Hong-merchants to be deposited in the Consoo House, to be compared with other goods when levying duties. Afterwards the former Hoppo on examining into the matter, found that the musters handed up to him were not to be used as a standard of quality when examining cargo, because the said foreigners had got a piece woven for the express purpose, which they falsely called first quality, and then they took a piece of first quality cargo, and called it second quality, thus playing a very crafty game. These two pieces alone were not sufficient for a proof or a standard, so on the 25th day, of the 5th moon of the present year, he took these said two pieces of cloth and gave them for consumption, at the same time publishing an edict commanding the Hong-merchants to impress it upon every foreigner that he might obey accordingly, all which is recorded.

Now, I, the present Hoppo, have just entered upon my official duties, it appears to me that in levying duties, I must follow the rules prescribed, I must not on the one hand allow people to call goods course or fine as they may please, neither will I allow myself to be led astray to show compassion by fine words. I find then that in the book of the Customs it is set down, first quality foreign longcloths must pay, every piece, duty 5 mace, second quality, 2 mace 2 candareens, and coarse cloth 5 candareens. Therefore it is that the fineness or corrieness of this cloth governs the revenues us to whether they shall be light or heavy; how can we allow the least confusion or change! Now that these said foreign merchants come whining and annoying me, proper it is that I should make known what is just! Hereafter, all foreign merchants who may have long cloths coming to Canton, we must when examining these goods, take every kind of them and scrutinize them most carefully, and then we shall order musters of 1st and 2d quality and coarse cloth to be selected out, and handed up to our board when we shall again examine them and, having stamped them, we shall give them out to be stored up, to serve as a guide infuture for levying duties thereby. We will allow no contradictory discusions and thus the matter will be settled on a just and fair basis.

In relation to the said foregoing petition, besides communicating with the Vice-roy on the subject, I unite the circumstances and now issue thise dict. When it arrives before the said Hong-merchants, let then impress it upon the said foreigners that they obey accordingly. Do not oppose! A special edict!

Taoukwang, 18th year, 6th moon, 7th day.

Canton, 27th July, 1838.

Tung Vice-roy of Canton &c. proclaims to the Hong-merchants for their full information.

On the 6th day of the 6th moon of the 18th year of Taoukwang (26 July 1838) the foreign merchants Jardine and others presented a petition—saying—

Now this coming before me, the Viceroy, I find that foreign longcloths have been divided into different qualities for the duties. Hitherto there have been old regulations, and if the former Hoppo examined into the matter and fixed the qualities of longcloths and deposited them in the Consoo to serve as musters by which they have been guided—what is the use of now making fresh differences! Whether it be that the foreign merchants want to take fine and pass it for coarse, scheming thereby to lighten their duties, or whether it be that the Hoppo's people sent out to examine goods, don't understand the qualities, there ought to be communication made to the Hoppo that he examine into the merits of the case, and at the same time show compassion to the men from afar and pay attention to the revenues of the country.

Besides making such communication to the Hoppo, that he with justice examine into the subject and act accordingly, I hereby issue this edict and when it reaches the Hong-merchants let them impress it upon the said foreigners, and in future, if they have any like complaints, let them go to the Hoppo himself and not trouble and annoy me about them. A special edict.

COMMERCIAL REMARKS.

IMPORTS.

COTTON MANUFACTURES.—There is no improvement in LONGCLOTHS, and sales have been checked by disputes with the Hoppo's officers as to the duty, they attempting to rate all white cloth as first quality, and a proportion of the Grey as No. 2; the question is not yet decided. COTTON YARN, continues in the most depressed state, and it is almost impossible to effect sales at any price, so heavy is the stock here and expected

WOOLLENS,—without much alteration, but if any thing SPANISH STRIPES rasher lower. LONGELLS have further declined and we have heard of sales of 2 @ 3000 pieces, assorted colors which will not yield more than 8½ @ 8¾. Scarlets are also lower. CAMLETS: the new Hoppo insists upon levying the old rates of duty, which for English would be about 16 @ 17 and for Dutch upwards of 20 $, but it is expected he will be induced to modify this—if acted upon $ 5 @ 5 must be taken from our quotations.

METALS.—There has been no sale of IRON reported. LEAD is rather firmer.

STRAITS PRODUCE.—The small lot of BETELNUT, about 1000 Piculs, per Dutch Schooner, has been, we believe, disposed of at 3½ @ 3¾. We hear of no change in PEPPER and TIN. RATTANS continue in fair demand.

COTTON.—Sales of several parcels, of Bombay of the different qualities were effected in the early part of the week at previous rates, but the market is rather dull within this day or two. The Bengal remains without alteration A sale of Madras was reported yesterday of old Tinnevelly, not first quality at about 10 T., and some at 10.5. we believe.

OPIUM.—There has been some little fluctuation in the Malwa market, caused principally by parties anxious to realize for remittance by the vessels under despatch, and sales were, in the early part of the week, made at 605 @ 610, but it has again recovered with some demand. The new Bengal drug has been in brisk demand, from the Antonio Pereira and other vessels keeping out, and the stock having been a good deal reduced. The rise in the new has been favorable to the old, which is now saleable in small quantities. Turkey is quite nominal. The Lintin deliveries for July (see aboxe) are, under the present circumstances of tne trade, very large, and must we think include some of those on the coast.

EXPORTS.

RAW SILK.—Further quantities are close at hand, but the present ideas of the holders are quite extravagant—they talk of $600.

TEA.—There has been nothing doing during the week. Exports to Great Britain since the 1st June, Congo 21,677; Caper 466; Souchong 924; Campoi 32; Ankoi 125; Hongmuey 411; Pekoe 408; Orange Pekoe 991; Hyson 4,452; Young Hyson 1,796; Hyson Skin 920; Twankay 3,936; Gunpowder 1,274; Imperial 930: Total of black teas 25,031; and of green 13,311 Piculs, not including the Permee's cargo. Export of silk 1000 Piculs.

EXCHANGE,—on England 4s. 6d. @ 4s. 7d., and not many bills offering. Some Treasury bills have, we hear, been negotiated at rather above 4s 4d.

ART. II. Notices of the city of Borneo and its inhabitants, made during the voyage of the American brig Himmaleh in the Indian Archipelago, in 1837. From a Correspondent.

From the Chinese Repository for July.

May 13th. At sunrise our captain goes with pangeran Muda Hasim to visit the vessel, and to complete the arrangements for trading, while we ascend a branch of the river different from the one we went up yesterday, to see the country and the people. After proceeding in a northerly direction some two miles, went ashore, crossed some low hills, passed through woods, and came to several houses inhabited by people called Kadayans. Entered some of the houses, and met, with a kind reception. The Kadayans are said to be a race distinct from the Malays. They are however Mohammedans, and speak the Malay language and no other. If they were originally a different race, the difference is not now apparent. The houses were in the midst of woods, and there was little appearance anywhere of cultivation. We saw one pepper garden only, and that a small one. Cows and goats, however, were abundant, and the former particularly were fat and fine looking. We saw the sago tree, called by the Malays rumbia. It is a palm, resembling the gomuti in its size and proportions, and in the conformation of the trunk, while the large leaves upon the top are more like those of the cocoanut tree. Our walks through the forest showed us that the same beautiful and luxuriant vegetable world, which we had admired in Celebes, the Moluccas, and Mindanao, was still before us. Returned through the thickest of the town, and were gazed at with eager curiosity, as would be natural in a place where white men are rarely seen. By our attendants we were told that raja Muda is a very bad character, and that within the last month he has sold here in Bruni a hundred captives This story accords with the others we have heard of this man, and with his own confessions and boastings. It was near midday when we arrived at the sultan's and soon after our breakfast was ready. It was placed upon an old stand about two feet square, which appeared to be of Chinese workmanship. A few plates, some rusty knives and forks, and two or three spoons, were mustered for the occasion. But though our table and its furniture were of an humble description, and though the food consisted of rice and curry and a little fruit, the whole was in good keeping with our other accommodations, and we made a su stantial meal, eating our meat in gladness, and wondering more that we fared so well among such a people, than that we fared no better. Several persons, and among them the sultan, came in to see us eat, all of them in good humor. These people are far enough from being shy and reserved.

The room in which we eat and sleep, if room it may be called, is a recess about fifteen feet square, in the sultan's rumah bichara (council hall,) situated immediately behind the throne. The hall is 20 paces in length, and 10 in breadth. The central part is elevated 1½ feet above the common level of the hall, occupying nearly half its surface, being 45 feet long and 15 feet broad. It is furnished with bamboo mats, and at night serves as a sleeping place for ten or twelve retainers, who seem to act as a guard. On the end of this elevation, opposite the front door, is the throne, which resembles somewhat a large bedstead, with a canopy over it, but without curtains. The footstool is composed of a large plank of black wood, a coarse kind of ebony, the breadth of which is three and half feet. The tree which furnished this plank was a production of the country. From the sides of the elevated part of the hall, pillars rise to support a canopy made of cotton cloth. The throne which has been spoken of, is called patrana, and on this is placed a seat or chair, which receives the name of singgasana. The floor of all parts of the hall, like all floors in Bruni, is made of nibong slits as broad as the hand, and placed about an inch from each other, thus leaving a space through which the water from beneath may be distinctly seen. At high tide the water comes up within a foot of the mats upon which we sleep, so that our beds seem to be in some danger at times of being wet, as well as hard. The residence of the sultan, besides the hall here described, is composed of two other houses about the size of this one, and two or three smaller buildings. The whole of these houses, at Singapore prices, probably would not cost over a thousand dollars. It excites a smile when one hears such an establishment dignified with the appellation of astana, palace. It is miserable compared with the residence of the sultan of Ternate. We are not, however, to infer from this that his highness of Bruni is inferior in power and greatness to his brother of the Moluccas. The latter owes his splendor mainly, probably, to Dutch influence and a Dutch pension. Bruni has the reputation of standing in the first rank of Malayan kingdoms. The name Bruni is applied both to the town and to the state. The sultan, sometimes, instead of Bruni, says Burneo, from whence doubtless comes our word Borneo. The name given to the island, by those of the inhabitants who know that it is an island, is Kalamantan.

Sunday, May 14th. While we were washing and shaving, one of the many who were standing by, said to the others that all this cleansing, as well as the reading of books, was on account of its being Sunday. Poor creatures! They have scarcely a conception of spiritual existence, and of what it means to worship God "in spirit and in truth." Every thing we do or say is regarded with curiosity or suspicion. Curiosity, however, is the predominant feeling. Suspicion is sometimes mingled with it, but in a less degree than I was prepared to expect. Whether we read or write, or converse together, or walk up and down the house, we are asked again and again what we are doing, and why we are doing it. Their notions about medicine and palmistry, which they class together, are very crude and superstitious. They hold out their hands, and desire to know how long they are to live. We tell them we know nothing about such things. They point to their pulse, wishing us to feel it and tell them what disease they have. They ask for medicine for their wives, whom we are not allowed to see, supposing that there is no necessity for a physician's seeing his patient. In the afternoon they were weighing pepper in the hall, which had been brought in by some of the sultan's subjects. Weather hot and oppressive.

May 15th. The sultan, seeing my cloak, put it on, and was greatly pleased with it. He of course begged for it, as he does for most things to which he takes a fancy, and was offended when I declined giving it to him, and went away. Another pleasant excursion to the hills, to the northeast. The branch of the river which we first ascended is called Takoyong. A fine view of the town, and of the country toward the north for many miles. There is little appearance of cultivation, though the soil is good. The hills and valleys are thrown together irregularly, and the face of the country is not unlike that of the island of Singapore, except that the hills are higher than those of Singapore. This remark refers only to the region within a few miles of Bruni. At a distance are lofty mountains rising in successive elevations, and a country unknown except to the Dayaks. Before returning we ascended another branch of the river, which has the name of Kiangei. The scenery is well worthy of being admired. The river is narrow, and pursues a winding course between hills, which are high and bold on each side, and covered to profusion with whatever is beautiful or splendid in the vegetable world. With the loveliness and wealth of nature thus before him, one feels that he is surrounded by life, that an August Agency is near him, that 'mountains and all hills, fruitful trees and all cedars,' speak forth the Creator's praise—

His presence, who made all so fair, perceiv'd,
Makes all still fairer.

We went within hearing a water-fall, but could not proceed farther with the boat, on account of the shallowness of the water, nor did we succeed in an attempt to penetrate to it on foot through the jungle. The rocks (and we saw the rock in many places both on the tops and sides of the hills, as we were walking, and on the steep banks of the river as we passed in the boat) are sandstone,—most of it loose and crumbling.

May 16th. Not being able to obtain a boat, we were obliged to remain in the place, not the most agreeable of places, but the best in Bruni for seeing the people and becoming acquainted with their character, it being a place of much resort, and particularly for the higher class. Almost every day several tens of pangerans call here. The whole number of these persons of noble blood, in Bruni, is according to one informant, 500. But this is probably an exaggeration. Pangeran Muda Hasim, the minister, or vizier, is brother to the sultan's mother. Owing partly to his wealth, partly to his office, and more than all to his character, he is a man of commanding influence, and is virtually the sovereign. He has around him thirteen brothers, upon whose influence he may depend, as their interests are bound up with his own. Pangeran Yusu is also an uncle to the sultan, being the brother to the sultan's father, the former rajа. It should be observed that they call their former chiefs, who are dead, rajas, while the reigning chiefs only received the title of sultan. Yusuf is distinguished as a merchant, being superior perhaps to Hasim in this respect, though in no other. Pangeran Mumin, another merchant and great man, is married to the sultan's sister. These three chiefs and the sultan have in their hands a large portion of the commerce of the town.

The sultan continues his foolish tricks and talk, and marches about the house with only a sarong for a covering. He cannot be persuaded to wear more clothing, although we assure him that nothing else will relieve him of a rheumatism of which he is often complaining. He usually makes his appearance about ten o'clock in the morning, and from that time till ten or twelve at night he is most of the time walking about the premises, or sitting in a small verandah, where he receives visits and spends much of his time. This verandah, or presence chamber, is furnished with a Chinese bamboo settee worth a dollar or two, and three chairs, obtained probably from Macao or Singapore. In one of these chairs, Omar Ali Saipuddin (for that is the name of the sultan) is often to be seen cutting his toe nails, and trimming the scabs upon his feet. It is amusing to see him come from his little verandah, only forty feet distant from us, to our quarters behind the throne, acting like a boy or a monkey, and yet gravely followed by a man bearing his kris, and by another with his betel and siry box. Saw him take out his filthy mouthful of betel, and give it to one of his attendants, who immediately, with all reverence transferred it to his own mouth, as a special favor from his highness. These people must have a high regard for their head men to be able to maintain their respect, as they seem to do for this man. Whether he is really deficient in natural powers, or whether his childishness results from his having been shut up all his life with his women and slaves, it is not easy to determine. Perhaps nature and education may both have been in fault. Custom requires that he shall not leave the palace, except he go in state with a numerous train. He therefore seldom goes out. And Hasim the minister is probably not unwilling to have it so. It may be even that his counsels and contrivance are directed to the preventing of locomotion on the part of his master. Whoever approaches him, must assume the squatting posture, and fix his eyes upon the ground. The highest chief must not presume to stand before him, or to look in his eyes. He allows us, however, to do both, though he sometimes puts on a look which seems to say that it is strange any one should have the audacity to look at him. Saw a woman whom he had occasion to call for, approach him. The moment she came in sight of him, around the corner of the house, she placed herself upon her hands and knees, and then, edging her way forward with eyes not once lifted from the ground, she came near enough to listen to his words, to which she replied by the usual word patek (your slave), and then retired in the same crouching manner. I never before saw man or woman assume a demeanor so humiliating. The sultan is about 40 years of age, and has more of the Caucasian than of the Malay in his features. There may be Arabian blood in his veins His color is the dark brown of the Malays. He pretends to some knowledge of the Chinese language, but it turned out on examination that he has only learned to count in Chinese, and his pronunciation of the numerals, even, is so imperfect that a Chinese would scarcely understand him.

Assam.

From the Friend of India, May 31.

PROGRESS OF TEA CULTIVATION IN ASSAM. We are gratified to learn, that the first supply of Tea manufactured at Suddiya, is now under despatch, for England. It has passed in Calcutta as good Souchong, and the gentlemen in Assam have drunk it as good Hyson. It goes home, however, as Black Tea; for though there has been all along a conviction in the minds of the gentlemen in that country, that it was Green Tea, yet as the manufacturers understood only the manipulation of Black Tea, it is under that designation that it is exported. We understand, however, that Mr. Bruce's Assistant, Mr. Crose, having hit upon a plan of manufacturing Green Tea at Suddiya, has sent a sample of it to Capt. Jenkins, who is reported to have been highly gratified with its excellence, and to have considered it as altogether deciding the question, whether Green Tea could be manufactured in Assam. It will also decide the question, whether good Tea of both kinds can be manufactured from the same plant. That this is the case we think from the evidence which has been adduced there can be no doubt. The Bishop of Cochin China has assured us, that Tea grew plentifully in the gardens of his Mission, and that both kinds of Tea were manufactured from the same tree. We should be sorry, therefore, for the impression to go home that Black Tea alone can be raised in Assam. The Green Tea makers have already left Calcutta for Assam; but the present season has been lost; before their arrival the best crop of leaves will have perished.

We learn that the number of patches of land on which Tea has been found, has been so greatly increased, that the cultivation and manufacture of this article on a large scale might be commenced, without delay. The sole drawback is the possession of the whole of Upper Assam by Poorunder Singh. In an evil hour did the former Commissioner consign this large and productive region to the tender mercies of a slothful despot; and it must be a primary object with the authorities to rescue it from its present neglected state, and give it the same chance chance of improvement with the rest of Assam.

If Tea should be cultivated with vigour, a want of labourers will be experienced at first. The population has been reduced by a series of calamities to so low an ebb, that the present inhabitants would be insufficient to carry forward the enterprize. We must therefore, look to the source from whence the coolies are drawn, whom we are now sending into a distant slavery. Here, in their own native sun, and under the protection of the East India Company, is the field for emigration. If the hive swarms, then instead of allowing them to be transported like slaves to the Mauritius, New South Wales, and Demarara, let them be invited to resort to the valley of the Burhampotora, and set diligently to the cultivation of Tea, and thus contribute to their own happiness and to the improvement of the empire. Till Assam needs no more labourers, we can have none to spare for the Slave Islands.—Sing. Free Press 12th July.

CANTON PRESS.

Saturday, 11th August.

Has the Admiral's visit any specific object? is still the question generally asked and the common topic of conversation. Lord Palmerston, in answer to enquiries, has stated that the Admiral's going to China was to protect the trade here generally, should it require it, and we are much inclined to believe that nothing more is intended, and if so, our community would have had every reason to be glad of this visit which must impress on the Chinese the conviction that the British merchants, here are under the protection of their Government, had not the movements of the Superintendent since the arrival of the Admiral and the latter's moving to Chumpee, caused much apprehension among the Chinese, and consequent warlike preparations. The Superintendent, contrary to the orders from his Government, according to which he was to hold no communication with the local authorities of Canton, if this could not be carried on his own terms, viz., without the interference of the Hong merchants, did again come to Canton, though no concessions on the part of the Chinese have since been made, and sent the Secretary and the Chinese Chief Secretary and interpreter to the City-gate with a letter intended for the Vice-roy but without superscription; this expedient was to ensure it's reception, since it was sure to be refused had it been superscribed merely as a letter to the Governor; it's reception might, on the other hand, be obtained by calling that communication a respectful petition—this latter, we believe, was considered infra. dig, by the Superintendent, and the ruse of a blank cover was resorted to, but, as might have been expected, without success, the Secretaries being obliged, after some waiting at the City-gates, and some unsuccessful negotiation with the mandarins, to return with their letter. The contents of this letter, which would, no doubt, reveal the cause of Capt. Elliot's visit to Canton, remain, much to the annoyance of the curious in diplomacy, a profound secret. A day after the attempted correspondence, news reached Canton of the treatment the Bombay Passage boat had experienced at the Bogue, the details of which we gave in our last, and other boats that have since reached Canton have also been subjected to search for officers from the ships of war, and their ladies. The Chief Superintendent on hearing this news, left Canton again, and proceeded in H. M. Cutter to the Admiral then at Toong-koo bay, who, soon after, changed his anchorage by proceeding to Chum-pee, a naval station of the Chinese, and where several English ships of war have anchored before. On this coming to the knowledge of the Vice-roy, the three Senior Hong-merchants were immediately sent off to Macao with, it is supposed, some communication for the Admiral, though it seems odd that they did not go direct to Chum-pee, which would have saved them time, whilst now, by their manoeuvres, having proceeded from Macao to Chumpee, they have not met him at all, he having gone to Macao, thus again missing him. Preparations were also made by the Chinese, we are informed, to resist the passage of the men of war through the Bogue, should this be attempted. We hear of a great number of soldiers having been sent down to reinforce the garrison of the Forts, and likewise of a number of junks being got ready to be sunk off second bar so as to render the passage there impracticable. Whilst all these preparations were said to be going on, and those few, in possession of the facts, fretting a good deal, Canton has remained perfectly quiet, business continuing as usual, nor do the people generally seem to have known anything about these proceedings, or, if they did, their apprehensions have not been roused. Now, however, things seem once more to have assumed an amicable appearance. At Chum-pee, we understand, the British Admiral caused a letter to be delivered, for the Vice-roy, on board of the Chinese Admiral's junk, and an interview between these two naval officers is said to have taken place. This letter has probably been forwarded to Canton, and the British Ships of war have left Chum-pee, and gone to their former anchorage at Tung-koo bay, the Admiral having returned to Macao. It appears to us that all this alarm evinced by the Chinese has probably arisen from the fear entertained by them, that the new barbarian eye, having, as the pilot reported, two ladies with him, and female servants, was come to establish himself permanently at Canton, with the whole of his establishment. They have since been undeceived on this head, and will no doubt shew, henceforward, a more friendly disposition. If the firing on the Bombay Passage boat has caused the Admiral's appearance at Chum-pee, and if she has been made the object of complaint against the Chinese, we should much regret it, it being by far preferable, on many accounts, that these boats should contend alone against the opposition of the Chinese, than be endangered by the, no doubt, well meant official assistance of the British Superintendents.

The two weekly Newspapers which have, for some time, been published in Portuguese in Macao, have ceased to exist. The one (the Macao Chronicle) some months ago, discontinued it's publication from want of support, and the other (O Macaista Imparcial) was suppressed a few weeks ago by the Governor, and is not allowed to appear again unless subjected to a censorship. We do not approve of the strong hand of force and authority to be employed in the suppression of liberal institutions particularly such as a Free Press, but that this latter is very liable to abuse in a small community which cannot afford to pay for hearing both sides of the question, will not be denied, and it may under the circumstances probably be prudent to allow a newspaper to appear subject to a liberal censorship only, and we hope soon to hail the reappearance of O Macaista. This paper, as may be supposed from the punishment it has suffered from the Government of Macao, was much opposed to the present Governor and his measures, nor did it always remain within due bounds of moderation, and from it's violence, we are afraid, has occasioned much ill will among parties at Macao. On it's reappearance it will, we hope, tread in a more sober path.

We hear that H. E., Admiral Maitland, has ordered H. M. Brig Algerine to proceed in search of the Antonia Pereira, supposed to be lost somewhere between Alacranes and the coast of China. This supposition has obtained additional strength from a report at Macao of some masts and spars and other parts of a wreck having been seen, some say on the coast of Hainan, others say on the China coast to the westward of Macao. This report is however much too vague to deserve much credit.

We see in the last Canton Register an address by the Hong merchant Mowqua to the foreigners requesting them that they will not permit any of the commanders or officers from the British Ships of war to come to Canton in any of the Ships for which he has become security, reminding them of the hardships Hingtae suffered for Lord Napier's coming to Canton in a boat belonging to a ship secured by him.

Our readers will find below the Correspondence that has lately taken place between Messrs. Dent & Co., as creditors of the Kinqua hong and the Hong merchants and Governor. We doubt that the creditors will be able to obtain better terms than have now been offered, and the only good that, as we can see, has arisen from this correspondence is, that the Governor takes cognizance of the promise the Co-hong have made to assist Linchong with 100,000 dollars annually in the liquidation of his debts, and that probably, if at any future time the Co-hong should deny such a promise having been given, they may be compelled to make it good by the creditors appealing to the Viceroy.

The Greyhound, passage boat arrived here on Thursday morning from Hongkong, after she had been boarded at the forts by some military officers, who took down the names of the crew and then provided the boat with a passport for Canton, on which she departed, though not till after her letter bag had been most scrupulously examined, and three letters been taken therefrom, for which these officers gave a receipt to the tindal. The reasons why these three letters were selected from the others was, that they had written, on the outside, the direction in Chinese, and were probably suspected to contain some information respecting the Admiral's movements. The parties to whom these letters were addressed, immediately drew up a petition to the Viceroy to remonstrate against such proceedings, and the Hong merchant Tinqua took charge of it, but, before taking it to the Viceroy, went to the Hoppo's office where these letters were, and where, after some delay, and much anxiety displayed to know their contents, they were delivered to the Hong merchant with the seal unbroken.

By the arrived of the Maulmein from Calcutta, 3rd July, Sandheads, 7th, we have been put in possession of the following.

The Ann arrived in Calcutta on the 25th, and the Ariel on the 30th June.

The fifth and last Opium sale of the season took place on the 29th June, and went off with considerable spirit, owing to the accounts from China brought per Ann; the following are the particulars,

	chests sold	highest	lowest	average
Patna,	2219	1040	965	989.6
Benares,	1438	980	870	913,1

The quantities estimated to be brought on to China immediately are per,

Altarand	4 @	500
Maulmein		300
Ann		500
Forth		800

leaving about 4000 chests in the godowns.

The price of Opium in the Bazar had risen to 1190 for Patna, and 1005 for Benares, and was represented to be still on the rise.

The market was overstocked with treasury bills selling at 2s.-1½d.; Private 2s. 2½d. Freights to England £4.10 @ £5.—having fallen in consequence of the news from Burmah.

The Imogene, Virginia, and Bolton, were to leave Calcutta immediatly for Singapore and China.

The King of Burmah has consented to receive the new Resident with all honors.

No Singapore papers have yet reached us by the late arrivals.

We hear the following bit of gossip respecting Opium—it is said that an influential house in China promised the Captain of the Ann five thousand rupees, if he got here before the Ariel and communicated to their Agents here the advance of prices on Opium in China. The Ann did beat the Ariel, and the Agents here got the news in time to make large purchases in Opium the day before the sale at the low prices! by which clever arrangement a very considerable sum will be realized.—Calcutta Courier, July 2.

Burmah.

From the Calcutta Courier, June 28.

BURMESE AFFAIRS,

We have advices from Rangoon to the 2d of this month. The following extract from a letter shews at least, the good understanding which the Governor of Rangoon is desirous of keeping up with the English:—

'I have the pleasure to inform you, that on Tuesday the 28th instant, the Woondock or Governor of Rangoon, being the first instance of the kind, visited the Christopher Rawson, escorted by Captains Major and Tapley, with about two hundred followers carrying gold swords, umbrellas, &c. &c. where he was received by Captain Edwards and officers with all due honors, and entertained with a splendid repast and took his place next to Mrs. * * * with great gallantry of manner, and was assiduous in his attentions to that lady throughout his visit, being particularly charmed by her playing a tune on the piano.

During the time the Woondock sat at table, great order was preserved, though they made a trifling mistake in using the finger glasses for preserves, and disturbed etiquette a little by throwing the bones of the fowls, &c., under the table; but no sooner did the great personage retire from the table, than a most furious attack commenced upon the eatables; legs, wings, necks, Jams, Jellies, &c. &c. went from hand to mouth with the most astonishing alacrity and was thrust down their ample tunnels in the most wholesale and indiscriminate manner. His Excellency visited every part of the ship and was very curious in his enquiries, and departed very much gratified with what he had seen and the manner in which he had been entertained; and invited the whole party, amongst whom were several visitors, to a nautch or dance on the following Thurday, where they were agreeably surprised by a complete English dinner being set out in good style, and afterwards regaled with sweetmeats, fruits, and wines, of every description, whilst the dancing was going on. In short, every thing was conducted with the greatest hilarity and good humour. Nothing could exceed the kindness and attention of the Woonduk.

It may be here remarked, that the Woonduk has in every instance behaved with the greatest consideration in all matters which have been referred to him regarding the interest of our merchants, and is always open to conviction when things are properly represented, which it is but justice to say, has always been the case with our present acting resident, who has taken infinite trouble to preserve every thing upon an agreeble and amicable footing.'

Opium boats at Whampoa

We have seen another edict from the Governor ordering all boats leaving Canton or Whampoa to apply for Passports, but as it contains no new feature we shall content ourselves with giving an abstract of its contents. It commences with a report from a Captain in the Imperial Navy to the following purport: namely: that having received orders from H. E. to search all boats passing between Whampoa and Canton to ascertain that they did not smuggle Admiral Maitland or any other contraband goods, he stationed his men in convenient spots, and obtained the assistance of two linguists well versed in the barbarian dialect. That on a certain day of the present month, he stopped a boat not having a passport, but having examined her thoroughly and found that Maitland was no where stowed away, and that she was not smuggling, he, the captain, thought it advisable to let her go. He also quotes several other instances of his vigilance, and concludes with requesting the Governor to reiterate his orders to the Hong merchants, to make all barbarians travelling between Canton and Whampoa apply for passports. This he does; and moreover hints to the above envied body that if his orders are not strictly obeyed they shall suffer no doubt in pocket.

The passport, which is sealed with the Hoppo's stamp and counter-sealed with that of the Commandant of the Bogue Fortifications, is somethiug similar in appearance to the grand-chop of a ship. It begins "Whereas it is ordained that &c., &c., (nearly a copy of the words used in the edicts on the subject) and concludes with a kind of certificate that the boat &c., with so many hands on board, having presented her passport, was duly examined, and, having found to have no contraband goods on board, was allowed to pass.

Kin-qua Affairs.

TO HIS EXCELLENCY THE VICEROY OF KWANTUNG AND KWANG SZE.

&c. &c. &c.

A Respectful address,

When we addressed your Excellency in common with some other creditors of Hingtae's Hong on the 21st March, your Excellency was reminded that there were other Hongs also indebted to the foreigners, and that we had urged the Security Merchants to arrange for payment of their debts at the same time with Hingtae's, that we might know with whom we could trade safely in future and with whom not.

The only one of these Hongs who is indebted to your petitioners is Kinqua's, who besides owes a considerable sum to Mr. Whiteman, whom your Excellency ordered away from China last year, and who left us to recover his claims. Both Mr. Whiteman's claim and our own were incurred chiefly by our foregoing to urge Kinqua to pay our balances, and even assisting him further, more than two years ago, to enable him to meet the pressing demands of the Government at the time for his duties, as is well known. On occasion of Hingtae's bankruptcy we forbore to petition your Excellency about Kinqua out of consideration for the old man then in the last year of his long life, and at the urgent request of some of the elder Hong merchants who hoped that the Hong might be carried on.

Old Kinqua died subsequently, and we delayed to renew our claim until after his funeral, when we wrote to the Hong merchants to state; that, having great respect for all the members of Kinqua's Hong, we had no wish to force it to bankruptcy; and that, if the Cohong would give us their joint assurance for the early payment of Kinqua's debts, we would forbear to address your Excellency upon the subject. We were answered that Kinqua would himself propose an arrangement in which the other Hongs might have occasion to assist him; but that they could not give us the security for it which we required. Up to this time, however, we have received no such proposal from Kinqua, and we feel bound therefore to address your Excellency upon the subject and respectfully to intreat your Excellency's interference to procure the payment of our claim and Mr. Whiteman's upon Kinqua.

They are of earlier date than those on Hingtae, and have in no way originated, as your Excellency said of his, in taking advantage of Kinqua's necessities; but, on the contrary, in an effort to sustain the oldest and one of the most respectable of the Security merchants.

We have the honor to be,

Your most obedient humble Servants.

DENT & Co.

Canton, 7th May, 1838.

TO MR. DENT.

FROM THE HONG-MERCHANTS, IN ANSWER TO MESSRS. DENT & CO'S NOTE REGARDING THE DEBTS OF KINQUA'S HONG.

A respectful reply. We have received your note, and have made ourselves thoroughly informed as to its contents.

As regards the foreign debts of King-qua's Hong, King-qua himself declares, that he will pay them by ten annual instalments; and that, as to the interest accruing, he will, after the ten years, when the whole of the capital shall have been paid, arrange with you personally as to the number of annual instalments in which the interest shall be paid:—that should he seek to conform to your proposition to pay the interest each year together with the principal, the greatness of the amount would put it really out of his power to do so.

In reference to our yearly assistance of him, it is quite an act of friendliness, nor is the amount by any means small. Though we may desire to give still further assistance, yet our power of doing so will utterly fail. And seeing that, so long as the Hong continues in being, the affair is its own, we cannot come under any security for the money. We trust therefore that we shall be excused. For this purpose we reply.

With compliments, &c. we are

(Signed) HOW-QUA,

and nine other Hongs.

29th July, 1838.

TO HIS EXCELLENCY THE VICEROY OF CANTON,

&c. &c. &c.

The accompanying address to your Excellency regarding King-qua's Hong-was prepared on the 7th May last, but was not then forwarded, as hopes were again held out to us of an early settlement of that Hong's debts. The propositions however made to us by that Hong are so very unsatisfactory that we are at length most reluctantly compelled to apply to your Excellency.

We submit for your Excellency's full information a Copy of the Proposition from King-qua's Hong to the Creditors, their answer to the same, together with Kingqua's rejoinder, also our letter of the 16th July to the Hong merchants with their reply.

This correspondence will shew your Excellency that the Creditors are ready to accede to most unfavorable terms from an unwillingness to break so old and respectable a Hong. In the event of its bankruptcy we should have a right to interest at the rate of 12 per cent per annum up to this date, and the payment of the whole in four or five annual instalments, Manhop's debt having been paid in six and Chun-qua's in three years, and the Hong merchants now propose to pay Hingtae's in eight and a half years a debt contracted under very different circumstances from that of Ting-qua's. The proceeding therefore of the Hong merchants is the more unaccountable, who originally led us to expect an early and favorable settlement of this Hong's debts, but now, instead of shewing any disposition to meet the liberal feeling of the Creditors, have sent us the above unsatisfactory answer to our letter.

Referring you particularly to our Letter of the 7th May, we confidently rely on your Excellency's sense of justice to order an immediate adjustment of our claims, more especially as a considerable portion of them are on account of Mr. Whiteman, who was ordered away by your Excellency, and left China in 1837, now upwards of a year and a half.

We have the honor to be etc.

(Signed.) DENT & Co.

THE GOVERNOR'S REPLY.

TO MESSRS. DENT & CO'S PETITION RESPECTING THE TEENPO HONG.

Tsaz. President of the Board of War, and Governor of the two Kwang provinces, proclaims to the Senior Hong-merchants for their full information.

On the 14th day, of the 6th moon, of the 18th year of Taoukwang, I received the following petition from the foreign merchant Dent:

(here follows she petition)

This coming before me, the Governor, I have examined and find that Leang Shinghe of the Teenpo Hong owes the foreigners 1,100,000 dollars. This he acknowledges in a letter to them, in which he proposes to pay the principal in ten years; and such amounts of interest as may be agreed upon, in two years after the principal is cleared off. This proposal is truly most reasonable and shows that he is very different from those who wish to cheat and deceive. The Hong-merchants seeing the poverty of Leang Shinghe have agreed to advance him the sum of $100,000 annually, to enable him to pay his debts: thus neither foreign nor Chinese Creditors can complain of having no guaranty for their claims.

The good intentions of Leang Shinghe exceeded his means, and, truly, the Hong merchants deserve great praise for assisting him. Now, you foreigners, altho' your claims, which were as lost money, have been secured, have yet made no change in your hearts, but continue to insist upon the interest being paid up with the principal, and, because the several Hong-merchants cannot comply with your wishes, you accuse them of injustice and unreasonableness. Every man is responsible for debts contracted by himself, but allowances should be made for those who are unfortunately obliged to pay the debts of other men, and you should not so pertinaceously refuse their offers. I fear you are rather blind to your own faults.

I, the Governor, treat both natives and foreigners with equal justice and benevolence. Truly, I will not allow the foreigners to suffer from the injustice of others, but I will not make crooked the straight and even path of justice to gain their good will. Considering the circumstances, I issue this Edict. Immediately on receipt of it let the Senior Hong-merchants, in obedience thereto, transmit a copy to the foreign merchant Dent, to whom they must carefully and clearly explain its contents. All must be guided by reason and equity: let the several Hong merchants, conjointly with Dent, deliberate and form some equitable arrangement, of which let me be informed, that I may act accordingly.

Leang Shinghe, it is true, is very ill off, but are those, stained with avarice and dishonest, to be compared to him? I sincerily hope that, your claims being sufficiently guaranteed, you will accede to his terms. And you Senior and other Hong merchants, who have displayed such kindly feelings towards him, do not relax your exertions to support him. Not the least inattention to this matter will be permitted, nor may the foreigners again trouble me with their petitions.

Another petition was also presented by the said Dent, but as its contents were nearly similar to the present, one reply will serve for both.

Do not oppose.—A special Edict.

August 5th, 1838.

A MEETING of the Creditors of Hing-tae and King-qua's Hongs will be held this day at 12 o'clock at Mr. Turner's house, to take into consideration their last propositions for the payment of their debts.

COMMERCIAL REMARKS.

IMPORTS.

COTTON MANUFACTURES.—There have not been many sales of LONG-CLOTHS during the week—indeed the demand has been a good deal checked by the large quantities of damaged goods forced on the market. In COTTON YARN we hear of no transaction, prices are quite nominal.

WOOLLENS.—One or two parcels of SPANISH STRIPES have been disposed of during the week at 1. 25 @ 1. 35, and the market is rather flatter. About 5000 Ps LONGELLS are reported in the sales, the general assortments at not better than 8½, and one lot with a large proportion of scarlet and purple at about 9 $.

METALS.—Now much as before. LEAD has advanced from ¼ to ½ dollar, the supply of native lead having latterly been rather short.

STRAITS PRODUCE,—a further importation of 5000 Piculs of BETELNUT has been reported, and our quotation of 3½ will with difficulty be obtained. PEPPER has advanced a little, as also TIN, the supplies being moderate. RATTANS without alteration.

RICE—the crop, it is now ascertained, has not yielded so well as appearances promised, and the price has advanced from 10 @ 15 cents.

SANDALWOOD,—has further declined, and the best quality of Indian would not bring more than 16 $.

COTTON.—The sales since the market reopened are reported at about 40,000 bales, and the deliveries from the warehouses 20,000, and for a time therefore the demand may be expected to be languid. Bombay could not now be sold within 2 mace of previous rates. Bengal and Madras are better supported, the supply being short.

OPIUM,—further arrivals from Bombay have kept the Malwa market down, and sales have been made at our quotations. The Bengal has, on the contrary, been advancing, the stock being much reduced. Since the arrival however of the Maulmein there is less demand, although the high prices at the last sale must tend to support the market. It consisted of

The Attaram is also reported in. The deliveries to the 8th are large being Patna, old 89, new 189; Benares, old 13, new 93; Malwa, 532; Total 916 chests, partly it is said in consequence of the dealers in Canton being anxious to supply themselves from an apprehension of a stoppage of the trade.

EXPORTS.

TEA.—We have no transactions to report. Shipped to Great Britain since the 1st July: Congo 24,951; Caper 466; Souchong 1,211; Campoi 122; Ankoi 125; Hongmuey 443; Pekoe 488; Orange Pekoe 1,400; Hyson 4,470; Young Hyson 1,796; Hyson Skin 1,024; Twankay 3,998; Gunpowder 1,512; Imperial 991 Piculs. Total of black teas lbs. 3,894,133; of green teas lbs. 1,838,800.

RAW SILK.—No further supplies have been brought down, and no transactions, the holders demanding such high prices.

ART. II. Notices of the city of Borneo and its inhabitants, made during the voyage of the American brig Himmaleh in the Indian Archipelago, in 1837. From a Correspondent.

From the Chinese Repository for July.

At a short distance from the house saw an alligator, lying at his ease in the water. He remained in sight a few minutes, then went down, and soon after made his appearance again upon the surface. Several men have been employed every day in one part of the large hall which we occupy, in making gobangs. They work rather ingeniously, but not fast. Their tools, which are of a simple kind, and easily made, are a large heavy knife or cleaver, and a hatchet, the iron part of which is fastened to the handle by a king of basket work made of rattans, and so contrived that it will turn it its socket, and thus form an adze or a hatchet at pleasure. One man has been at work most of the day in making a small board, which he first split from a log of wood by the help of wedges, and is now hewing smooth. This is their only way of making boards, and they are consequently clear and little used. Learned from some of the pangerans about us, that the sultan has three wives and about 100 gundik (concubines), and five children, three daughters, and two sons. The sons, though some 13 and 15 years old, are not allowed to go out. Pangeran Hasim, it is said, has one wife and eighty or more other women. All the higher chiefs have, as we learn from all quarters, large harems. Licentiousness is one of their great vices, and a vice of which they are proud. The women, as is usual in Mohammedan countries, are kept in strict seclusion. Women of the lower class, such as market women, go about freely, but no others.

May 17th. Visited pangeran Muda Hasim. His brothers went through the usual process of examining our pockets and cloths. They must pry into everything. Go where we will, and do what we will, we are always beset with these lookers on and askers of questions. Most of them are beggars. But they do not want money. Indeed the precious metals are not known here as coin, pieces of iron being used instead. Their begging is for clothes, handkerchiefs, combs, brushes, scissors, penknives, needles, shoes, stockings, umbrellas, looking-glasses, paper, lead pencils, Chinese ink and pencils, cologne water and perfumed oils, soap, segars, biscuit. And in addition to these, cotton and sil k, particularly satins, bombazette, camlet, and broadcloths, please them. They do not look so much at the fineness, as at the strength of cloths and of the various articles which they wish to beg or buy.

When Hasim entered the room, his brothers immediately left the chairs and settee, and seated themselves, on the floor, a rule which the highest pangeran, Hasim himself not excepted, observe in the presence of the sultan. Muda Hasim, though he cannot be called a wise or good man, is evidently much superior to the great body of his countrymen. His questions and allusions evince thought and good sense. He has some knowledge of most of the ports in the Archipelago, and of the character and relative strength of the Dutch, Portuguese, Spanish, French, and English, nations. Of America he knows almost nothing. One of his chief men said to me that the Dutch formerly desired to obtain possession of Bruni, and inquired whether they still had such views, and whether they are sufficiently powerful to conquer Bruni. The reply was, that as to their wishes I knew nothing, but that there was little doubt as to their power. Hasim gives the same account of the Chinese here as has been received from others. They are but a handful. There are a few natives of Hindustan, perhaps twenty, and one Parsee, a merchant of some property, who from policy, probably, has become a Mohammedan, as is the case with the some of the Chinese. There are said to be no Arabs, though there are two or three hundred haji, that is, persons who have visited Mecca as pilgrims, and who in consequence are much respected.

May 18th. Spent some hours in looking over Marsden's dictionary with a pangeran, comparing Marden's Malay with the words used in Brunî. It is a good school for learing the language. One may at almost any time find some one about him who will act as his teacher for a short time, and when this one becomes tired, another may be obtained. From other pangerans obtained scraps of information respecting the Dayaks of this part of Borneo. They gave the names of no less than twenty-one different tribes who use the sumpitan, (blow-pipe), and cut off heads—the distinguished peculiarities of Dayaks. They call them the subjects of the sultan, but from the fears which the Brunians have of these mountaineers, it would seem as natural to conclude that Bruni is subject to them, as that they are subject to Bruni. To repeated inquiries and cross questions, whether they had themselves seen men from all these different tribes, and whether they are distinct races, they replied in the affirmative. But any one who has had experience of the ignorance of the Malays, and of the indefiniteness of their notions in regard to matters a little removed from their every day business, understands that the answers which he receives to his questions he is not to put down as points settled. I endeavor to get information from them by familiar conversation, without putting any direct questions, and never rely upon anything until the evidence from testimony and circumstances has accumulated to a considerable amount. A man of some intelligence for a Malay, says that the number of Dayaks in this region is thirty or forty thousand, and that they have the same customs and character with the Dayaks of Sambas, but different languages. The term Dayak, though understood, is but little used here. The more common appellation given to the aborigines are Murut, and orang gunung (men of the mountains). The names of the twenty-one tribes, as written down from the mouth of two or three pangerans, are these: Murut, Kayan, Bisaya, Tabun, Punan, Daya, Tatow, Kanawit, Siting, Bukatan, Sundaya, Dali, Biung, Taring, Kajaman, Agis, Tagar, Duaun, Bajow, Narun, Milanow. All these they say are kafir (infidels), and cut off heads. Their food is rice, sago, hogs, cows, and reptiles. Their dress is a cloth or bark around the loins. They sometimes come to Bruni bringing wax, rice, and fruits, as a kind of tribute to the sultan. The names given above are perhaps not all the names of so many distinct tribes, but rather a collection of the names which these pangerans have heard applied to the inhabitants of the interior. The only Mohommedan race besides the Malay is the Kadayan. These people we have seen repeatedly both at the sultan's and at their own houses. They do not differ from the Bruinans more than men of the city and men of the country commonly do. Still the Malays persist in calling them a distinct race. If so, they are probably a portion of the original inhabitants of the country, (Dayaks) whom the Malays have subdued and converted. Called on Muda Hasim. In his verandah saw two men with their feet in the stocks. The crime of one was theft, that of the other witnessing the theft without making it known. The thief, it is said, is to be put to death, the usual punishment for this crime. In the afternoon went to the hills. Saw several houses of the Kadayans. The women were at work pounding paddy and carrying water. In the evening, it being the eve of their holy day, that is, the evening previous to the hari jumat, or Friday, we had an opportunity of witnessing their sumbayang (worship). It commenced in the sultan's verandah about 9 o'clock, with singing, accompanied by tamborins. The music was the best I have yet heard among the natives of the east. After an hour or two of rather monotonous singing, they became more animated, and commenced a very singular chanting, and bowing at the same time in a manner equally singular, to keep time with the tune. The chanting was occasionally varied, and with it the motions of the body. The excitement went on increasing until they were exhausted by this chanting and bowing. A young pangeran who took part in it said that it made his head ache. There were two priests present, and the sultan was a part of the time among the worshipers. When asked what was the meaning of all this, they said it was 'praising Tuhan Allah.' The language used was Arabic. The name of Mohammed was occasionally to be distinguished. The worship, if worship it might be called, was continued till midnight.

Chinese Emigrants.

From a Correspondent.

The number of Chinese who leave annually their country for the Indian Archipelago is very considerable. But though these emigrants come only from a few distrists, this absence is never felt, and the new born soon fill up their ranks. During the Ming dynasty, when navigation was beset with dangers, the offspring of ignorance, few junks visited the southern regions, and the number of colonists who remained behind was very small. When, however, the Tatars invaded China and the people of Fokéen refused to the last to bow under a foreign yoke, the inhabitants left out of mere spite their homes and settled in Java and the adjacent islands. From that period the tide of emigration appears to have set in very strong in that direction, and several thousand individuals from the southwestern maritime districts of that Province and the neighbouring countries of Kwangtung went in search of gain to those remote regions. At first Government took no notice of these movements, but at the beginning of the eighteenth century a military officer, who had formerly visited Batavia and Manila, sounded the alarm, and since, in his opinion, the safety of the Empire was compromised by these settlers, a stop was put to the whole trade. From that time it became entirely a smuggling affair, until Keënlung, informed of those irregular transactions, pronounced the commerce to southern Asia free. We have this curious edict in our possession, and it is well worth the perusal, as having emanated from such an antinational monarch. There were however some conditions made. First, the junks had to import plenty of rice, an order which they never obeyed, because a cargo of rice would not pay. Secondly, the merchants were allowed to stop there for three years, but not longer, and so also the colonists. After the expiration of this period they were to return and enjoy all the priveleges of Citizens who had never left the Celestial Empire for the dark regions of the barbarian. It has often been asserted, that the great Emperor does not extend his paternal care to those undutiful children, who can forsake the tombs of their ancestors in order to gain a mere pittance, but this proclamation indupes us to change our opinion. For, whereas Heaven's son, by dint of great expansion, permitted these poor wanderers to regain their civil rights, it was not more than proper, that they, during their abode in foreign climes, should obey the laws implicity, live quietly and peacefully and never give the Barbarians any cause for stirring up strife. They are moreover not to enter with them upon any intimate relation, or to marry their women, all of which is unlawful—which is on record.

Since then we believe, no new edicts have been issued against emigration, whilst the Dutch and Spanish Governments have done every thing in their power to prevent the increase of Chinese adventurers. We have often wistfully looked to China as the region from whence those beautiful spots in the Archipelago will be reclaimed from their primeval wilderness; but those resolutions rather damp our joy. One thing, however, is certain, that no nation on the face of the globe is better calculated than the Chinese to act as sturdy agriculturists under a vertical sun. What are those islands, without any trade or industry, and how much on the other hand does a colony inprove, where the central nation has free scope to extend itself. Though we certainly believe, that far the greater part of the emigrants are the mere scum of the nation, yet do we find very substantial burghers among them, who prove an honor to the community to which they belong. Whatever may be the disadvantages of their becoming too numerous, they are fully balanced by the benefits which their labours confer upon the country they inhabit.

Yet notwithstanding the Imperial permission, rich emigrants on their return to China are liable to be denounced as traitors, and to be most severely squeezed. The general principle which applies to all Chinese regulations appears to be, that, whenever they clash with the interests of the guardians of the laws, they become null, how excellent soever. Rich individuals therefore, who bring their treasures to the flowery Empire, are very careful to escape public notice, and occasionally appease the magistrates by heavy bribes. We know one instance that a very wealthy merchant who resided for many years in the straits, took his whole family, including several Malay slaves and a nun ber of children, to an Eastern district of Kwantung without attracting any notice. Many, however, are not so happy and have severely to suffer in their purses, so that they are very anxious to revisit the places where their property is secure and no grinding tyrant robs them of their hard earned money.

Tea in Assam.

An "Account of the manufacture of the Black Tea as now practised at Suddeya in Upper Assam, by the Chinamen sent hither for that purpose with some observations on the culture of Tea in China and it's growth in Assam." By C. A. Bruce Esq. Superintendent of Tea culture, published at Calcutta, has been obligingly lent us, and we give an extract from it below. The friend to whom we owe the loan this pamphlet, informs us further that twelve large chests of Pekoe and Souchong have already been sent from Assam to England on trial. It is supposed that the Teas of Assam will not for some time be able to compete in quality with the superior teas of China, but the inferior qualities can be furnished in Assam to any amount, and at a very cheap rate. Thus (our correspondent continues) we poor barbarians may still be enabled to escape the threatened doom of falling victims to constipation and blindness, because unable to obtain Teas and Rhubarb from the Celestial Empire.

A DIALOGUE BETWEEN MR. C. A. BRUCE AND THE CHINA BLACK-TEA MAKERS.

"Does the China Tea plant grow mostly on the mountains of China or in the vallies? "Almost seven parts grow on the mountains and three in the vallies." Does the Tea plant grow amongst the snow? "Yes." Does not the snow kill or hurt the plants? "It hurts them very little, it may kill some of the old trees, but often new shoots come up from the old plants." To what age does the Tea plant attain in your country? "Generally, about fifty years, but some only live ten." How do you plant the Tea seeds? "I dig a hole about four fingers deep and eight inches in diameter, and put as many seeds as I can hold in both hands into it, then cover it up." How long is it before the seedlings come up, and in what months do you put them into the ground? "We sow some in November and December, and some in January; when the rains set in they come up." When are the plants fit for plucking? "Sometimes in the third, and sometimes in the fourth year, according to the soil." How high are they in the third year? "From one to two cubits; a great deal depends on the soil." If you were not to pluck the leaves, would the plants grow higher? "To be sure they would; it is the constant plucking of the leaves that keeps the plants low." How many of the seeds that you sow come up in general? "If good seeds from ten to twenty." Do you allow them all to grow in the same place, or do you transplant them afterwards? "We allow them all to grow, and very seldom transplant; if we do, it is performed in the rains, and from four to six plants are put close together, so as to form a fine bush." At what distance is one Tea bush from another? "From three to four feet apart are small ridges of earth, eight inches to a foot high, a hollow space being left between to draw off the rain water; the bushes are at equal distances from each other, and in straight lines." Do you ever dig trenches to prevent the plants being washed away? "Yes, we are obliged to dig many; the shape and form of the trenches depend upon the ground and situation." What quantity of manufactured Tea do you think each Tea plant produces in one season? "This varies very much; some plants only produce two rupees weight, while others produce a pound and a half; but about a quarter of a pound, all round, I should think the first crop; the second crop a little less, and some people never take the third crop for fear of killing the trees." Do you always manufacture the Tea in China, in the same way as you have the Assam Tea? "The same." Do you know how to make Green Tea? "No." Do you ever put anything to the Tea to give it a flavour? "Never." Do you ever sow or plant in the shade, or have you any trees to shade the plants? "No, there are a few large trees here and there, but not for shade." If your plantations are on the side of mountains, they cannot have the sun all day? "True, in some plantations the plants are in the shade for nearly half the day; some China merchants that come to purchase Tea, pretend to know which is shady and which sunny by the smell, the sunny being preferred." Do the Tea plants cast all their leaves in the winter? "Great numbers fall, but the plants always retain some." Which do you think have the most juice when they are rolled, the leaves from the sunny tract, or those from the shady? "Those from the shady tract." Which require to be most dried in the sun? "The shady tract leaves." Which of the two Teas do you think best? "That from the sunny tract." Which produce most leaves, those in the shade, or those plants that have been cut down, and afterwards permitted to grow up? "The latter twice as many." Which do you think produce most seeds? "Those in the sun." Do you ever in China plant from slips? No." After you have made the Tea in China, how long is it before it is fit to drink? "About one year; if drunk before that, it will taste unpleasantly and of the fire, and will affect the head." How long will Tea keep without being damaged? "If well secured from the air in boxes, it will keep good for three or four years." In which months do you commence plucking the leaves in China? "If the weather is warm and fine, and the season has not been a very cold one, the first crop commences in May, the second crop about forty-seven days after the first, and the third crop about the same time after the second, or forty-two days." When you roll the China leaves, do you think they contain more juice, or less, than the Assam ones? "The China leaves, I think, have more juice, and the leaves are much smaller." Is the soil of the China Tea the same as that of Assam? "The same." How often do you weed your plantations? "Once in the rains and once in the cold weather."

"The place these Chinamen speak of is called "Kongsee," on the mountains, about 40 days journey by water to Canton, and two days journey from the great Tea country "Mow-ee-san."

Egypt.

Singapore Free Press, July 19.

A subscriber has kindly favoured us with the perusal of a letter addressed to him by a friend at Malta, under date 16th April last, on his way from Egypt to Britain, in which there is very favourable mention made of the progress of improvement, slow but gradually increasing, in the communication between India and England. With regard to the conveyance of despatches it is stated that, notwithstanding Mr. WAGHORN's resignation of the appointment conferred on him by the Company, "letters go on equally well by the government-mails, without at the same time being subject to his additional onerous tax." It is also stated that "the Company have now special agents at Alexandria, Cairo, Suez, Cossier, Geddo and Mocha,—and we learned, before leaving Egypt, that they had taken possession of Aden at the Straights of Babelmandel, ostensibly as a depot for coal." The writer after leaving Malta, was to continue his route in a French Steamer by Naples, Civita Vecchia, Leghorn, Genoa and Marseilles; then across France to Lyons and Paris, and thence to London—and well may we think it a safe prediction that in a little time no traveller whether bound to or from India will ever go round the Cape.

The following reference to the progress of civilization under Mehemet Ali's government will we think be read with interest:—

"With regard to Egypt and the improvements going on, I am happy to inform you that the Pasha has actually turned his attention to the deplorable ignorance among the females, high and low, in his country; and before I left, Miss HOLLIDAY of the Ladies Oriental Society for Female Education, who is now residing at Cairo, superintending a native female school, had been requested to tender to the education of one hundred of the females more immediately related to his Highness, and in furtherance of this purpose, to send to England, for the requisite number of female assistants. This is an astonishing instance of liberality for an Eastern mind to display—and the Pasha has probably been influenced in this determination by the urgent representations of Dr. BOWRING and Lord PRUDHOE, who have been for several months past, in the country"—Verily if the era of "blue stockings" once fairly begins in the East, adieu to Islamism, its long bearded and many-wived notaries, and let the Ulemah and Muftis hide their diminished heads."

Reef in the China Sea.

Singapore Free Press, July 26.

On her way down, on the 7th inst, the Rob Roy grounded on a reef in the China Sea. We had not an opportunity of obtaining the particulars from Captain Mackinnon himself; but we are informed that he considers it to be the reef described in the following communication of Captain FREEMAN of the barque Henry Wellesley to the Singapore Chronicle under date 8th October 1836, of which it is said there are no traces in any chart:—

"The following day 6 P. M. while standing to the "southward saw a detached reef right a head running "east and west about 2 miles; its latitude by observation 8° 44' N. and longitude 111° 34' E. being 29 "miles to the south-westward of west London Reef; "it has a sand bank at each end and a small black "rock in the centre and is not laid down in any of the "charts of the China Sea, and consequently very "dangerous to ships navigating that sea. The latitude "may be depended on within a mile or two, it being "from meredian altitude taken by two sextants, and "the longitude by chronometers measured from the "Grand Ladrone.

The Rob Roy sustained little or no damage and, after survey held, proceeded on her voyage to Calcutta on the 23rd inst.

PANORAMA OF CANTON.—We have had the pleasure of witnessing this very interesting exhibition. This view of the city, its suburbs, and the river Tigris was originally taken by Toonequa, a native artist of Canton, and it has been painted by Mr. Robert Burford with a degree of correctness and power which fully sustains the high character which that artist has already attained in works of this description. There is no people whose manners, habits, and country excite a stronger curiosity in the minds of Europeans than the Chinese, not merely from their antiquity, but from their aversion to innovation; not altogether so much from the singular nature of their customs and mode of life, as the jealousy with which they cherish them, and the repugnance that they feel to all foreign interference. As the city of Canton is one of the largest in point of size, for beauty of situation unsurpassed, and the very first of Chinese cities with respect to wealth, we may take this picture of it as conveying to us an accurate idea of the other towns of the Celestial Empire. It is placed on the Tigris, a noble river, which stretches a great distance to the right and left, and is navigable for 200 or 300 miles. The river itself, with the innumerable vessels and boats which float upon its clear and blue tide—their innumerable variety, the gorgeousness of their decorations, and the varied costume of their crews—are all admirably painted, and constitute the most attractive part of the work. It is impossible to give any notion of the streets, so narrow and numerous are they. But the artist has supplied this necessary defect by introducing in the foreground groups of Chinese in many of their ordinary pursuits; and he has been particularly happy in the selection of those scenes which tend best to portray the national peculiarities.—Bells weekly Messenger, April 15.

We see a book, entitled "the Fanquis in Canton," advertised as about to be published. It's author is Mr. T. C. Downing, and last year the time of his visit to Canton. It is in three volumes, and stated to contain more correct information on the Chinese than any previous publication.

CORRESPONDENCE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE CANTON PRESS.

Dear Sir,

One of my Chinese friends has communicated to me the following letter, of which he has had the means to obtain a copy, and, with his assistance, though myself but a beginner in the language, I have attempted to give a translation, which you may publish if you like. I request however that you will not give the writer's name nor that of his friend in Peking. *

Your obedient Servant,

LETTER FROM C——TSE OF CANTON, TO T——UY OF PEKING

Wishing everlasting health and a good appetite to his elder brother, C——tse. His unworthy younger brother, has seized the pencil to relate to his friend, who enjoys life in the immediate neighbourhood of the son of Heaven, and whose distinguished counsels materially assist to govern the black haired race, and to confer on it happiness and wisdom superior to the barbarian nations, what, since his arrival in this provincial city, he has seen and learnt, and more particularly to inform him of the proceedings of the red-bristled nation, since it was his elder brother's command to this his unworthy younger brother, to give him all the information which his intercourse with them should enable him to gather. My much esteemed friend, since that is the title his gracious condescension, and not my want of merit, permits me to take, will therefore know, that having made acquaintance with some of the Imperial merchants who are appointed to conduct the trade with these barbarians, I have from them heard many curious things, and have at their houses some-times indulged my curiosity in looking at them, though, holding an office so near to the person of the Governor of Kwang-tung and Kwang-sze, it would have been derogatory to my rank to allow my thirst of knowledge and even my eager desire to oblige my esteemed elder brother, so far to interfere as to speak to them myself, which, besides, I am told I should hardly have been able to do, these barbarians not even speaking the language of the civilized world, but only one which is harsh and unintelligible, but which the merchants of the central nation have discovered as particularly well adapted to the purposes of trade, and so much assimilated to the sounds which these barbarians use in their own intercourse with each other, that they soon learn to speak this language which the superior sagacity of our merchants has taught them; this circumstance makes me judge somewhat favorably of their capability, and more tuition from our great and wise men might, I have no doubt, civilize them yet more, but how much time will elapse before, in wisdom and virtue, they can equal our good and wise men!

My elder brother will, so hopes his unworthy younger brother, excuse his having, in some manner, been led astray from his subject, in giving his own stupid reflections instead of the information which he has collected, and which he shall attempt to place under his instructed eye, in one uninterrupted stream of, he fears, but badly expressed language.

From the records in the provincial offices I find that, though some barbarians were allowed to settle at Gaou-mun, a small spot of land on the outer waters, more than 5 cycles since, it was only a cycle or more after that time that the red-bristled barbarians of another nation, and to whom the following remarks apply, whose country is in the outer waters, many thousand li from the central kingdom, began to come to Canton every year to request to be permitted to take to their own country, the fragrant tea-leaf, which in their unhappy land is not to be found. How, before they came to the Celestial Empire, they have been able to live without tea, I cannot pretend to understand —for we know that even barbarians must drink, and your unworthy younger brother knows of no drink but tea to slake the thirst — wine, these barbarians may have had; and it is possible, to judge from their hot tempers, which I find they were imprudent enough to show on various occasions, that such alone was their drink; your unworthy younger brother shall however gather more information on this curious point, and present it then to his esteemed friend. Their distant country which they call In-ca-tle, is too small to allow them to live there, nor does it produce either rice nor tea, and this is the reason why these barbarians, in ships of a strange form, vastly inferior in elegance and splendour to our junks, the fanciful paintings of which my esteemed friend had so often occasion to admire, when travelling with his younger brother on the Kiang-nan, are obliged to leave it to search for food far from home. The compassion of the Celestial Empire allowed them annually to come for tea to Canton, and this intercourse with the civilized sons of Han seems to have had a tranquillizing and benign influence on them, since scenes of violence, such as I read of in the old records, now seldom happen; that this should be so, whoever is acquainted with us and the pages of our sages, will not be astonished to hear, though the slowness with which this improvement has taken place, speaks little in favor of the dispositions of these foreigners, who even now, at times, venture to oppose the laws of the Celestial Empire. To accommodate these barbarians, whilst they carry on their trade, the beneficence of our great Emperor has allowed houses to be built near the river, which are really better than those of our own nation, thereby showing how vast is his compassion and how justly famed his hospitality. It is feared, however that these barbarians possess a grasping spirit, and that, if they were allowed to bring their red bristled women, (some of whom i saw when at Gaou-mun, and your unworthy brother has ever since wished, though he hardly dares to say so, to visit the country of these barbarians) they would wish to stay altogether in this country, which is so much better than their own, where there grows no tea, and thereby cause disturbances.—None of their women are consequently allowed to come to Canton, and their servants are ordered strictly to watch these barbarians and to report to the Hong merchants, who again report to the Imperial officers, whatever happens in their houses. Your unworthy younger brother finds that the Courier which H. E. the Governor is about to despatch, will leave very soon, and must therefore hasten to close his letter, and to leave much unsaid; he shall with the next courier again presume to lay before his esteemed elder brother such thin s as he has no time to say now, and shall limit this letter to a few words descriptive of the appearance of the barbarians, giving some account of their proceedings in his next.

Their persons differ much from each other in size —I have seen some that measured not even four covids and a half, whilst others were full a covid taller—they do not shave their heads, nor are their backs adorned like ours with the graceful tail flowing from the head, (age is thinning that of your unworthy younger brother, who is now obliged to thicken it with false tresses) and, besides having their heads covered with hair, some there are whose cheeks and even whose whole faces look like the fur of the foxes we hunted in our earlier days, when accompanying our Imperial master to Mugden. They do not wear the fine and becoming long robes, which so properly adorn the graceful persons of the sons of Han; their dress, on the contrary fits close to the body, made of two pieces, one for the upper and the other for the lower half of the body. In summer it is white, and in winter dark, therein differing materially from the foxes to which I likened them just now, whose skin is white in winter and red in summer, as we are told in the books of the great Le Shechin who had so intimate a knowledge of all things in nature.

But your unworthy younger brother has only time to repeat his wishes for the health and appetite of his distinguished elder brother—may he live a thousand years.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE CANTON PRESS.

Dear Sir,—It is impossible for any reader of the periodical press of Canton to avoid the conviction that the Opium question is getting a deeper and faster hold upon the public mind. Formerly it was talked of, now it is written about; the fluctuations, the profits and losses of the trade once absorbed attention, now the morale is mooted; the subject then went no further than the voices of those interested in it could be heard, now it goes abroad with every impression of our local press, to work upon men's minds, to mould public opinion in distant lands.

Henceforth the question can sleep no more, and we may be assured, whatever our connexion with the drug may be, that we must be prepared to clear or defend our course respecting it, or to find judgment going against us, by default. This however, is the individual view of the case, and whether the time be come when personal reputation, social estimation, requires a resident in China to disavow all connexion with the drug or not, we shall not pretend to decide. As to the public bearing of the question, I like the suggestion of your Cotemporary, of the C. R. that "the present time is peculiarly favorable for all governments and parties interested in the Opium trade" to take up the subject. In order that the manner of treating it both in petition to the Emperor and in statement to the governments and people of the West may be the more fair and full, I would suggest that the compositions to be elicited, should be drawn from both the parties existing in our community—those who are interested in the Opium traffic and those who are not. The plea in behalf of, and against the traffic will then be before the tribunal, the issue be joined, and the judge will decide.

To expedite the cause, I now propose, on the part of those who are not interested in the traffic, a short declaration, to which those like-minded can give in their adhesion (under any amendments agreed on), on the principles of which, the signers will unite and act.

"We, the undersigned, believing that the opium trade with China is fraught with evils commercial, political, social and moral; that it gives just offence to the government of this country; arrays the authorities and the people against the extension of our commerce, and the liberty of our residence; and defers the hope of true christian amelioration; do hereby declare that we will not take part in the purchase, transportation, or sale of the drug, either as principals or agents; and that (abstaining from all personal inquisition, imputation or censure) we will use our hearty exertions, by statement, discussion, and all proper means, to bring about the time when the trade in question shall cease."

A corresponding declaration can be drawn for the use of the opposite party, and private men and public bodies can take their sides. The statements prepared will then go up, with whatever added influence names can give, and the measures recommended, and the authority of the movers, can be considered at once.

Will you have the goodness, Mr. Editor, to circulate the above call for the union of those not friendly to the opium trade, and oblige

CANTON PRESS.

Saturday, 18th August.

There have been, as will be seen from our shipping report, several arrivals, during the week, from India, America, and Europe, but they bring no new intelligence of much importance. We have received the Pinang Gazettes to the 14th, and the Singapore Free Press of 19th and 26th July, from the latter of which we have made some extracts.

It appears that one of the objects at least, in the Admiral's anchoring at Chum-pee, as mentioned in our last, was to demand from the Chinese Admiral an explanation as to the firing of the Forts on the Bombay, passage boat, and that the Chinese officer's answer has been very polite, stating that the firing had been the act of inferior officers, and contrary to his orders. This answer has, it seems, been deemed satisfactory, and the Admiral in consequence resumed his former anchorage at Tung-koo bay. Most of the excitement caused by the Admiral's visit has subsided, though only as late as seven days ago the river near Canton, at the Fort in what is called the Macao Passage, was filled with armed Mandarin boats, and to a gentleman sailing in his pleasure boat it was signified that he was not allowed to proceed, which, not heeding, his Chinese crew leapt over board, and he had to make his way home in the best way he could. On the following day all the Chinese boatmen employed in the pleasure sailing boats refused to go out, fearing punishment from the Mandarins. An application was, in consequence, made to Howqua and the sailing is again permitted.

An Edict from the Viceroy will be found below, very severe against the Passage boats coming up the river, as likely to contain on board the foreign eye, and the Hong merchants are threatened with punishment if the orders concerning these boats are not strictly followed. From a postcript from the Hong merchants, it will be seen that the boats from Whampoa may still come up, unmolested as heretofore.

The papers and general correspondence by the Girard from Philadelphia, have, we understand, not yet reached Canton, but we learn that the Canadian revolt was considered as completely quelled. The "Great Western" steamboat from Bristol, had reached Newyork after 16 days navigation. The commercial affairs of the States we regret to hear unfavorably reported on, the question of the currency being by no means settled, and the Tea market and that for Silk manufactures were in consequence much depressed. We hear that 8 @ 9 p. Cent premium was the rate of Exchange on England.

In a question like that which our Correspondent S. S. S., has brought forward, we shall, for the present, remain neutral. Much has of late been said and written on the deplorable effects of the use of Opium on the Chinese population, not only by people whose residence on the outskirts of China, and therefore not able to collect evidence founded on fact, but also by Chinese themselves. But still, it must be remembered that most of the writings are declamations founded upon no statistical facts. We will allow, for we have seen it, that the use of Opium has now and then, where it came under our personal observance, reduced it's votaries to the lowest state of physical and mental prostration, but we also know of a great many who take their pipes as we do a glass of sherry or of port, or even, horreco referens! a tumbler of brandy and water, and who are by no means injured thereby. The formula which our Correspondent proposes to those that may take his view of the question is about the same as that entered into by the adherents to the Temperance Societies. Far be it from us to deny that these societies have done very great good, we are quite aware of it, and think that mankind in general is indebted to them for much of practical good they have produced. We are, however, at same time, by no means inclined to subscribe to every one of their doctrines, nor will we ever become, what is absurdly called, Tea-totallers, the etymology of which word, a friend of ours, the other day, wished to persuade us was of Chinese origin, and which in a learned paper on the subject we may yet be inclined to prove, As in the case of severe illness, powerful medicines are required to stop it's ravages, so, in a society where drunkenness prevails to a great degree, the necessary reaction must be one of total abstinence, and we doubt not, though it may have gone much against the feelings of those to whom the medicine of abstinence was administerd, that it had the most salutary effects. We see however no reason why people who never indulged in the use of spirits or wine to an extent to injure either their health or their reason, but used both or either of them in such moderation as to encrease their "creature comforts" without any subsequent alloy of headache etc., etc; should be punished with those that were improvident; nor why they should not continue using in moderation, the good things which, it appears, an all bountiful providence has created for them. Though we are not in general great sticklers for either laws or customs merely because they are of great antiquity, yet we must say that the endeavors during the last 16 years to unseat Bachus from the throne he has now occupied during more than thirty centuries find no sympathy with us; we are ready to cast off those that imprudently abuse the favors of the God, but do oppose that his genuine votaries should be put on short allowance. This question of the Opium has led us into one somewhat congenial; Opium and Wine or Spirits seem to have a similar effect on those that use or abuse them, and it becomes a question whether, it is more beneficial or prejudicial to the few or the many, that their use be permitted.

THE number of Chinese Roman Catholic Christians in China is thus given in the Rev. J. B. Marchinni's Map of the Missions, presented, 1810, to the Bishop of Macao.—

Macao	7,000
Peking	40,000
Nanking	33,000
Fuh keen	30,000
Sze-chuen	70,000
Shan-se	35,000
	215,000

Foreign Passage boats.

ANOTHER EDICT FROM THE GOVERNOR.

The Hong-merchants having reported that early on the 18th inst. a decked boat with an awning arrived from Macao I issued orders accordingly to institute enquiry. It appears, from their report, that there were foreign merchants on board, and consequently there must have arrived some cargo ships. What cargoes did the ships Felei Pene and another bring? On what day of what month did they enter the Port and report themselves for examination? By what Hong-merchant are they secured? The report mentions not a word of this. I, the Governor, have repeatedly brought to your notice the prohibitory laws on the subject. Large decked boats are altogether forbidden to enter the river: and small open boats whithersoever they go —either to or from Canton, Whampoa, or Macao—must apply for passports, in obedience to said laws, and after having undergone a search, may be allowed to proceed. Thus there could be no escaping the eye of justice.

Your petition mentions not a word respecting the size of the boat the said foreigners came up in, or whether she was examined at the Custom House stations, or not. So, because you have not enforced your search by means of cruisers, it is possible that the foreign eye and his sailors have been allowed to come and go at will, without your taking any trouble to prevent them. Truly you, the Hong-merchants, seem blind to the immensity of your crime. Day after day do you go on in the same unstable and confused course, so that the English foreigners, being kept in ignorance of our laws, become insolent and presuming. Now while it is of the first importance to check them, you avoid your duty and endeavor to impose upon me with lame excuses. Truly I am at a loss to imagine what you are thinking of. Had you your deserts you would be now severely punished, but at present let this my reply be obeyed. Exert yourselves and instantly investigate the facts and report to me that I may act accordingly. You, the Hong-merchants, have already caused mischief enough by your neglect and delay, and if you do not instantly awaken to a sense of your duty, instead of relying upon your own influence to get you off unpunished, and assisting the foreigners in their schemes, truly I, the Governor, have no alternative but to visit you with the most dreadful punishment. Your petition is returned herewith.

The above edict was accompanied by a letter from the Cohong in which that body threatened to stop the trade of any vessel whose boats did not "in obedience to the laws" apply for passports. Even ship's boats coming from Whampoa were not exempted; but were directed to apply at the Whampoa chop house for their passes: thereby entailing great inconvenience on all, but more especially on those anchored at the other end of the reach. This circumstance and the hinted probability of disturbances between the boats crews and Hoppo-men (in consequence of which ship's boats were exempted from this custom thirty years ago) have induced the Cohong to rescind that part of their communication, as will appear by the following letter:—

A respectful communication,

We received, the other day, an edict from H. E. the Governor directing that all small boats passing between Macao Whampoa and Canton should take out passes: when, having been duly searched they would be allowed to proceed.

We now beg to inform you that we were in error when we stated in our previous letter, that all ships' boats, ere leaving Whampoa for Canton, should stop at the Whampoa Custom House for passports.—By the old regulations the Hoppo boat of each ship furnished the passports, which, on arrival at Canton, were delivered and cancelled at the Creek chop house. We now request that this old custom be again adopted, and that the several gentlemen concerned be informed thereof. It is for this purpose we write and with compliments remain,

COMMERCIAL REMARKS.

IMPORTS.

COTTON MANUFACTURES.—There is no activity in the demand for LONGCLOTHS, and prices are rather lower, the supplies being so very heavy. COTTON YARN, continues much depressed, and some sales are reported at very low rates—one lot of 180 bales Nos 22 @ 50, fair yarn, part water and part mule, at, we believe $30—we could not learn the proportion of the higher Nos., but most holders seem unwilling to submit to such a sacrifice. For inferior yarn and low numbers there are no offers.

WOOLLENS.—We have heard of no sales of SPANISH STRIPES, during the week, the prices of which continue much the same. LONGELLS are, if anything, rather firmer, but no sales have been yet effected at any advance. A parcel of about 1700 Pieces was sold a few days since, we believe, as low as $5 or even under; they were of very inferior and mixed quality, and in unsuitable packages.

METALS.—No alteration. An importation of 200 bottles of QUICKSILVER, is reported, but we have not heard of the sale of it.

STRAITS PRODUCE.—PEPPER, continues the same. TIN, is wanted, and a moderate supply would command fully our quotation. BETELNUT, an importation of 7000 Piculs is reported outside for which we hear $3 is not offered.

RICE.—rather flatter from the plentiful supply of rain lately.

COTTON.—No sales of any extent are reported during the week of the Bombay staple, but the small lots sold have been at a reduction on the previous currency, particularly in the lower qualities. Bengal has also declined from the eagerness of holders to realize. One or two parcels were sold at an average of 10 7 @ 10. 8 consisting of Banda and Jalone, and 200 bales of fine Banda fetched 11. 3. For new Tinnevelly Cotton they offer 10. 5, and for the old 10 @ 10. 2 Of the Western we hear no sale.

OPIUM, —There has been an active demand for the new Bengal drug at our quotations, and the stock in first hands is small. The old has also, in consequence, advanced. Malwa has been more enquired after within these few days, and holders are more firm. Deliveries to the 15th not yet known.

EXPORTS.

SILK.—We hear of no transactions, and the late accounts confirm the probable small supply this season, and the high cost.

TEA.—Musters of new Souchongs, Congous and Pekoes are now arriving and the teas themselves are expected to arrive early—we hav heard no particular report on the quality. The third picking i reported short, and the price very high.

ART. II. Notices of the city of Borneo and its inhabitants, made during the voyage of the American brig Himmaleh in the Indian Archipelago, in 1837. From a Correspondent.

From the Chinese Repository for July.

May 19th. In the morning accompained a young pangeran to his house to visit his sick brother, and then as a recompense he took us in his boat on a short excursion. We landed at two or three different places, and ascended the high banks. In one place we saw a number of graves. We have before found similar burying grounds in several places, upon the sides of rivers. Each grave is marked by two pieces af wood, (occasionally they are of stone,) from one to two feet high, and two or three feet apart. The earth over the grave is raised a few inches, and kept in its place by four pieces of wood forming a parallelogram three or four feet long and one or two broad, and rather neat in its appearance. The whole resembles the graves of the Makassars and Bugis, except that these tribes, instead of wood, commonly use stone for the upright slabs and the surrounding frame.

Having seen the town from five or six different hills, and having passed through it in all directions, a more particular description is now given. It is situated ten miles from the river's mouth, at a spot where it divides into two branches, the smaller of which comes from the north, and does not extend far above the town, while the larger branch comes from the west, and may be ascended in small boats, it is said, twenty miles or more. There are also two other very small branches, which we ascend as far as a boat could go. The site of the town, whether regard be had to defence, or convenience, or beauty of scenery, is well chosen. The houses are built upon nibong posts over the water, along both sides of the river, and on both of its branches. As the river is divided in the midst of the town, at the house of the sultan, it has at this point the appearance of three broad canals lined with houses, and coming from different directions to meet at a common centre. The rise of the tide is from four to eight feet, and usually there is water under most of the houses during the whole twenty-four hours. At very low water, however, the houses are left standing in the mud for a short time, there being only sufficient water to allow boats to approach the ladders of the front range of dwellings, while the housee in the rear, at such times, are inaccessible to boats, and must be approached by passing along the platforms and verandahs of other houses. There are from two to five ranges of houses, one at the back of another, connected together to some extent, but not sufficiently so to make it possible to go many rods without getting into a boat. At low water the breadth of the river is about a third of a mile, and at high water two thirds. In many places when the tide was up, a broad sheet of water extends between the houses farthest in the rear and on the shore. The largest parahus ascend the river as far as the town; and formerly in the days of Chinese comuerce with Bruni, junks of large size were to be seen in the midst of the town. The construction of the houses is like that of Malay houses in other places. The roof is covered with layers of palm leaves called hatap. The sides are either hatap, kajang (also made of palms leaves), or boards. Boards being hewed, and not sawed, are expensive and little used. Neither is bamboo much used, probably because it is not easily obtained. We see but little of it in the forests. There is but one muzjid (mosque), and that is small. The town is surrouuded by hills on the east, south, and northwest, varying in height from 100 to 250 feet. These hills and the windings of the different branches of the river, render truly beautiful a place which would otherwise be without attractions. There would be still more of the beautiful, if the hills, instead of being left as they are, for the most part, in the wild luxuriance of nature, were adorned by the hand of cultivation. The Creator has done everything for this lovely region, while man has done nothing, or worse than nothing. Those spots from which the forest has been removed by former attempts at cultivation, are now overrun with bushes, or with a coarse grass called lalang, which taking deep root, and being more difficult to be subdued than the original jungle, is regarded as almost the ruin of the land.

Concerning the number of the inhabitants it is impossible to speak with accuracy. The place appears larger as one passes along the river in a boat, than it does from the hills just in the rear, whence the whole may be seen at once, and with entire distinctness. The population cannot exceed 25,000, and probably does not fall below 15,000. The number may be estimated at 20,000. According to Pangeran Yusuf, there are about 3000 boats. Good water is obtained from the base of the hills along the river side. Salt is made from the water of the river by boiling. We passed some of the little houses or sheds where it is made.

May 20th. The sultan called for us to go with him in a boat a short distance. We went a few yards, as far only as the little island of half an acre in extent, upon which the muzjid stands. Here, between the muzjid and his own houses, the sultan pointed out to us ten or twelve cannon, most of them brass, and very large, lying about at random in the grass, some on broken or decayed carriages, and others on the ground. Part of them were of native manufacture, and others were from abroad. There was one very large piece, bearing the name and arms of Carolus III. of Spain,

Every day persons apply for medicine to cure them of diseases, caused by their licentiousness. Rheumatism and diseases of the skin are also very common. A roughness of the skin, resembling scales called kurap is often met with. Out of the thirteen men who were at work today at the sultan's, replacing the decayed posts under the house and the platform surrounding it, seven have this cutaneous disease. The proportion, however, from the whole population is by no means so large.

THE METHOD OF MAKING
Black Tea.

From Mr. Bruce's account of the manufacture of black Tea, in Upper Assam.

In the first place the youngest and most tender leaves are gathered; but when there are many hands and a great quantity of leaves to be collected, the people employed nip off with the forefinger and thumb the fine end of the branch with about four leaves on, and some times even more, if they look tender. These are all brought to the place where they are to be converted into Tea; they are then put into a large, circular, open-worked bamboo basket, having a rim all round, two fingers broad. The leaves are thinly scattered in these baskets, and then placed in a framework of bamboo, in all appearance like the side of an indian hut without grass, resting on posts, 2 feet from the ground, with an angle of about 25°. The baskets, with leaves are put in this frame to dry in the sun and are pushed up and brought down by a long bamboo with a circular piece of wood at the end. The leaves are permitted to dry about two hours, being occasionally turned; but the time required for this process depends on the heat of the sun. When they begin to have a slightly withered appearance, they are taken down and brought into the house, where they are placed on a frame to cool for half an hour. They are then put into smaller baskets of the same kind as the former, and placed on a stand. People are now employed to soften the leaves still more by gently clapping them between their hands, with their fingers and thumb extended, and tossing them up and letting them fall, for about five or ten minutes. They are then again put on the frame during half an hour, and brought down and clapped with the hands as before. This is done three successive times, until the leaves become to the touch like soft leather; the beating and putting away being said to give the tea the black colour and bitter flavour. After this the Tea is put into hot cast iron pans which are fixed in a circular mud fire-place, so that the flame cannot ascend round the pan to incommode the operator. This pan is well heated by a straw or bamboo fire to a certain degree, about two pounds of the leaves are then put into each hot pan, and spread in such a manner that all the leaves may get the same degree of heat. They are every now and then briskly turned with the naked hand to prevent a leaf from being burnt. When the leaves become inconveniently hot to the hand, they are quickly taken out and delivered to another man with a close worked bamboo basket ready to receive them. A few leaves that may have been left behind are smartly brushed out with a bamboo broom; all this time a brisk fire is kept up under the pan. After the pan has been used in this manner three or four times, a bucket of cold water is thrown in and a soft brickbat and bamboo broom used, to give it a good scouring out; the water is thrown out of the pan by the brush on one side, the pan itself being never taken off. The leaves all hot on the bamboo basket are laid on a table that has a narrow rim on its back, to prevent these baskets from slipping off when pushed against it. The two pounds of hot leaves are now divided into two or three parcels, and distributed to as many men, who stand up to the table with the leaves right before them, and each placing his legs close together; the leaves are next collected into a ball, which he gently grasps in his left hand, with the thumb extended, the fingers close together, and the hand resting on the little finger. The right hand must be extended in the same manner as the left, but with the palm turned downwards, resting on the top of the ball of tea leaves. Both hands are now employed to roll and propel the ball along; the left hand pushing it on, and allowing it to revolve as it moves; the right hand also pushes it forward, resting on it with some force, and keeping it down to express the juice which the leaves contain. The art lies here in giving the ball a circular motion and permitting it to turn under and in the hand two or three whole revolutions, before the arms are extended to their full length, and drawing the ball of leaves quickly back without leaving a leaf behind, being rolled for about five minutes in this way. The ball of Tea leaves is from time to time gen ly and delicately opened with the fingers, lifted as high as the face, and then allowed to fall again. This is done two or three times to separate the leaves; and afterwards the basket with the leaves is lifted up as often, and receives a circular shake to bring these towards the centre. The leaves are now taken back to the hot pans and spread out in them as before, being again turned with the naked hand, and when hot taken out and rolled after which they are put into the drying basket and spread on a sieve, which is in the centre of the basket, and the whole placed over a charcoal fire. The fire is very nicely regulated; there must not be the least smoke, and the charcoal should be well picked.

When the fire is lighted it is fanned until it gets a fine red glare and the smoke is all gone off; being every now and then stirred and the coals brought into the centre, so as to leave the outer edge low. When the leaves are put into the drying basket, they are gent'y separated by lifting them up with the fingers of both hands extended far apart and allowing them to fall down again; they are placed 3 or 4 inches deep on the sieve, leaving a passage in the centre for the hot air to pass. Before it is put over the fire the drying basket receives a smart slap with both hands in the act of lifting it up, which is done to shake down any leaves that might otherwise drop through the sieve, or to prevent them from falling into the fire and occasioning a smoke, which would affect and spoil the Tea. This slap on the basket is invariably applied throughout the stages of the Tea manufacture. There is always a large basket underneath to receive the small leaves that fall, which are afterwards collected, dried and added to the other Tea; in no case are the baskets or sieves permitted to touch or remain on the ground, but always laid on a receiver with three legs After the leaves have been half dried in the drying-basket, and while they are still soft, they are taken off the fire and put into large open-worked baskets and then put on the shelf in order that the Tea may improve in colour.

Next day the leaves are all sorted into large, middling, and small; sometimes there are four sorts. All these the Chinese informed me become so many different kinds of Teas; the smallest leaves they called Pha-ho, the 2d Pow-chong, the 3d Su-chong, and the 4th or the largest leaves, Toy-chong. After this assortment they are again put on the sieve in the drying basket (taking great care not to mix the sorts), and on the fire as on the preceding day; but now very little more than will cover the bottom of the sieve is put in at one time, the same care of the fire is taken as before, and the same precaution of tapping the drying basket every now and then. The Tea is taken off the fire with the nicest care for fear of any particle of the Tea falling into it. Whenever the drying basket is taken off, it is put on the receiver, the sieve in the drying basket taken out, the Tea turned over, the sieve replaced, the tap given, and the basket placed again over the fire. As the Tea becomes crisp it is taken out and thrown into a large receiving basket, until all the quantity on hand has become alike dried and crisp; from which basket it is again removed into the drying basket, but now in much larger quantities. It is then piled up eight and ten inches high on the sieve in the drying basket, in the centre a small passage is left for the hot air to ascend, the fire that was before bright and clear, has now ashes thrown on it to deaden its effect, and the shakings that have been collected are put on the top of all, the tap is given and the basket with the greatest care is put over the fire. Another basket is placed over the whole to throw back any heat that may ascend. Now and then it is taken off and put on a stand, the hands with the fingers wide apart are run down the sides of the basket to the sieve, and the Tea gently turned over, the passage in the centre again made, &c. and the basket again placed on the fire. It is from time to time examined, and when the leaves have become so crisp that they break by the slightest pressure of the fingers, it is taken off, when the Tea is ready. All the different kinds of leaves underwent the same operation. The Tea is now little by little put into boxes and first pressed down with the hands and then with the feet, (clean stockings having been previously put on.)

There is a small room inside of the Tea house, 7 cubits square and 5 high, having bamboos laid across on the top to support a net work of bamboo, and the sides of the room smeared with mud to exclude the air. When there is wet weather, and the leaves cannot be dried in the sun, they are laid out on the top of this room on the net work, on an iron pan, the same as is used to heat the leaves; some fire is put into it, either of grass or bamboo, so that the flame may ascend high, the pan is put on a square wooden frame that has wooden rollers on its legs, and pushed round and round this little room by one man, while another feeds the fire, the leaves on the top being occasionally turned; when they are a little withered, the fire is taken away, and the leaves brought down and manufactured into Tea, in the same manner as if it had been dried in the sun. But this is not a good plan, and never had recourse to, if it can possibly be avoided.

Chinese Currency.

From a Correspondent.

The complaints about the scarcity of bullion, which seems to be severely felt by the Supreme Government, have been so frequent, that there must be some truth in them. Now, we cannot exactly look behind the screen and take a view of Taoukwang's money chest, but we really believe, that the old gentleman is a little short of cash. He has not yet arrived at the profound political wisdom of the petty Barbarian states in the West, who apply to Rothschild in all their troubles, and let posterity pay their debts. It is a real pity, that some sagacious minister does not memorialize the sacred Lord upon this subject, instead of continually accusing the barbarians of carrying the sycee silver out of the country.

Debarred from the Dragon's throne, we cannot make our sympathy directly known, but, still at least give publicity at the provincial city, peradventure the Hoppo who has H. M.'s ear, may be informed that we have found out means for stopping the sycee silver from oozing out Our proposal ought to be the more acceptable, since the execution of it will neither require a guardacosta nor fulminating edicts. Thus we set cheerfully to the task, and though born beyond the boundaries of civilization may still in our ignorance hit the mark.

First of all we should humbly advise H. M. to take ample revenge upon the barbarian depredators by melting down their foreign coin into sycee silver, and if the goodness of the dollars would not yet answer the purity of the bullion current in the Celestial Empire, to extract the alloy. By this process a great deal might be gained, for many a dollar is considerably curtailed by being chopped, and solid lumps of silver are less subject to clipping. How much has China lost by defacing the coin and beating it to rags. We venture this suggestion, because Chinese statesmen consider the trash which barbarians import of different metal from the silver which comes from the bowels of the Central Kingdom, a discovery which will astonish our chemists. We have always been surprised, that as long as so many millions of dollars are current in this country, foreigners should be charged with lessening the circulating medium, the very circumstance that they are in possession of the Chinese clearly proves, that the importation has been greater than the exportation, and it is really extraordinary, that there is none in the Privy Council who was struck by this circumstance. *

* On a comparison of the Exports and Imports of Silver, our correspondent will find that the former at present by far exceed the latter in value, the balance of the trade being about 5 millions of dollars in favor of imports, which balance must naturally be paid in for in bullion.

Secondly we should permit every body to export as much silver of whatsoever description as he chooses, for this seems after all to be the safest plan for ensuring a constant supply of bullion. Now this simple maxim of political economy, if once adopted by this government, would do more good than a thousand thundering edicts, but how to render this truth intelligible to those wise heads at Peking is a very different question.

Thirdly; the Government should come forward and establish a bank. Such an institution is of so much palpable utility, that it has been set agoing in several large emporiums, where the notes issued by respectable merchants bear their full value in cash, because they can be immediately commuted into bullion. Why should then the Government, which is far more wealthy and powerful, not imitate this homely measure and relieve its necessity by substituting paper. The only objection which could be brought forward, is that the people would suspect its good faith, because, who could arraign the court if, after having put a great number of bank notes into circulation, it would refuse to receive them again. Such things have happened in times of yore, and why should they not recur.

To these three points, the first merely to quiet fears and to soothe, we should confine our suggestions for salutary reform, and by and by advise to open the silver mines, for the population is dense enough, and millions of workmen might be found without withdrawing the attention of the people from the pursuits of agriculture. But the evil is really greater than the mere want of bullion for paying the taxes would let us suppose. The finances are in a dilapidated condition, and, to remedy the evil, every body seems to be at a loss. There is no doubt, but this cancer is deeply seated, and it is thought more expedient to have recourse to temporary means than to eradicate it. The deficiency in the treasury is large, and the state of things becomes every year worse. It will perhaps end in confiscations and heavy fines, by which individuals are empoverished, distrust roused, and the tyranny of underlings encouraged. But can such arbitrary proceedings save the state? Alas, when once the withering hand of a public bankruptcy has struck terror into a nation, what can save a country from ruin!

The budget of the last year would furnish a criterion whether the alarm so frequently sounded was strictly true, or merely the offspring of overanxious care. As this however is never drawn up, and the Emperor himself is in total ignorance of the exact sums of the revenues and public expenditure, we shall not trouble our head about it. Three years will decide whether things can go on as they have hitherto done, or whether a national assembly ought to be convoked to deliberate about ways and means. In the latter case we hope Howkwa will be delegated as the representative of the good borough of Canton, and not only assist in the deliberations, but also aid by his purse in removing the public distress. Since this salutary step however may be deferred, until steamboats ply between Peking and London, and the latest advices from the stock exchange can be had within less than three months, the Emperor had best declare himself sole proprietor of the country which his fore father took sword in hand, and thus put himself in possession of all goods and chattels to defray the expenses of his administration.

Mines in China.

It has often been erroneously stated that no silver mines are worked in this country. We were in this belief, until we met with a considerable list of names of places where the respective metals are dug. To cite them would throw little light upon the subject, and we only remark here, that the mines in Yunnan and Kweichoo are the most productive, and that almost every province has a few of various descriptions. Most are wrought by private individuals, who pay to government from 25 to 30 per Cent of the net proceeds. The revenue thus derived from gold, silver, copper, lead, and iron mines does not amount to a million of taels per annum, which is a sufficient proof, that much ore is smuggled, and the working stands in no proportion with the extent of the country and the mountains which produce the ore An other observation we made, is that silver mines are the least numerous, and that the statistical amount of the metal which is annually fetched from the bowels of the earth is so trifling (not fully one million of taels) as scarcely to make it worth the labour. The Chinese miners we have seen at Banca were hard working men, but not very expert in melting the ore or in constructing the mines. Ingenious as the natives are, a few lessons in this useful art from foreigners might not come amiss, and if they would permit a man like Humboldt to travel through their mountainous districts, some great discoveries might still be made. But a government which refuses all advances even if made for promoting its own interests, ought to suffer the evils which narrowmindedness and ignorance engender, and pay the penalty for self sufficiency.

The commercial advices received from Batavia by this opportunity are very unfavorable for British imports, particularly for Cotton Goods—of which the supplies had been large by the Bencoolen, Hope, Superior and Chippewa, and sales were difficult to effect at almost any price. The Bencoolen was to leave for Singapore, in about 8 or 10 days after the Chippewa. The Hope was to proceed to China and the Superior was loading Rice for the West Indies.

Ava Affairs.

In reference to the late bloody transactions at Ava, we learn that it has been reported by an eye-witness, that the late Heir Apparent was put to death in the most violent and outrageous manner—the usual forms in all cases of executions of any of the royal family, having been dispensed with. He was dragged forth and beheaded like a common criminal. That he had been guilty of attempting to recover his rights of which he had been deprived by the usurpation of the present King, has not yet appeared to us to be established on sufficient evidence. If the proclamation, of which we gave a translation a fortnight ago, presents all the grounds which the King had for this bloody proceeding, the fact of the Prince's imputed guilt certainly requires further confirmation. According to that paper, a single individual, who pretended to know something about the matter, was brought to the High Court, and there made a revelation of the conspiracy. The representations of this one man were enough, in the opinion of those who wished to remove the Prince out of the way, and to find an apology for so doing, to furnish reasons for putting him to death. We suspect, however, that most people will do the King the justice to believe that he had very strong reasons of his own, connected with ambitious projects in regard to his own sons, which prompted him to act as he did in this instance. While some persons will, perhaps, deem the accusation an invention of one of these 'hopeful youths;' for the royal proclamation above alluded to, represents one of them and his servant as acting a very prominent part in discovering the conspiracy and inculpating the Prince. The latter being an obstacle in the way of the succession of the new King's son, was consequently, whether guilty or innocent, to be sacrificed. It does not yet appear that the ex-King has been executed, but report says that his confinement is much more rigorous than it was—that those, who manifested sufficient interest in his misfortunes to induce them to visit him and minister to his wants, have received a check in the form of a man with pencil and paper for the purpose of recording their names. They will of course desist from their offices in preference to having their names "handed up to Government." Maulmain Chronicle, May 26.

We have been favored with the following important communication, which we give as it reached us,

"Runjeet Singh is DEAD."

"I have just received the accompanying slip in an Agra Ukhbar of the 23d June. It appears to have been put into the paper after it was packed up for despatch by the post. My correspondent is worthy of entire credit."

It is impossible at this moment to conjecture what may be the effect of this event on our relations with the Seiks. The heir apparent, it is rumoured, is no friend to British connection; but his interest is so closely wrapped up with ours, that we cannot readily persuade ourselves, he would play the absurd game of aiding and abetting the schemes of Dost Mahomed or the Ruler of Nepaul.

We may here mention, as a piece of gossip, that in the bazaar there is a report that the British and Russian Fleets have been engaged in the Black Sea.

If so, we infer the Sultan must have opened the Dardanelles to us.—Calcutta Englishman, July 6. —Sing. Free Press, August 9.

CORRESPONDENCE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE CANTON PRESS.

Dear Sir,

Nothing can be farther from my meaning, than to deprive you or any other friend around me, of the right of suspending an opinion on the Opium question, or any other, to you, doubtful point.

When the first movers in the temperance reform, farther westward, first lighted on a few of the facts, which were afterwards made public with such singular effect, they were themselves surprised. Although living in a country where discussion scarcely left any thing alone, and where scarce a hamlet could be found without its press, the whole community were startled, when not the half of the truth as to the ravages of intemperance was first told. It is well to recollect this, and to remind ourselves, that the use of Opium, unlike that of spirits in the west, is illicit and secret and penal; that indulgence in it leads to slumber, not to active appearances abroad; and moreover that we are not permitted to penetrate the interior of the Chinese territory and society; in order to understand why what has been written on the subject, consists rather of general inferences, than of statistical facts.

I was conversing with one of the most intelligent of my Chinese friends, a few days ago, on this very point. I asked him if he could furnish facts, as to the ruinous effects of the drug, on his own observation. He replied immediately, "Can do so many you please." I told him such statements were now likely to produce a powerful effect on the traffic, he interrupted me. "My understand, my bring you counter, my very glad help stop that Opium come in, my too much fear for my son, my grandson."

Now, Mr. Editor, though we cannot collect statistics ourselves on the effects of Opium, it is not so with the intelligent natives, and is it on declamations — words — that their opinions are formed? Their uniform testimony is, that the drug is working the ruin of thousands, and if we are not already satisfied with the grounds of their testimony, is it their fault or ours? A friend of mine who knows the Chinese better than I do, tells me, I have conversed with some thousands of the people on this subject, and I never met with one who would advance one plea for the drug. The use of samshoo, they often defend or extenuate, but not a syllable do I even hear in favor of the pipe.

In the same way, says a Gentleman who has seen much of the Sumatrans, they will never allow, not the lowest of them, that they buy Opium for their own use. And with these private sentiments, the laws of most of the eastern Governments, independent and colonial, corrresponding. The testimony afforded by our own observation, scanty though it be, is a concurrent, not a conflicting testimony. In our narrow circle, we can each of us recal some half a dozen at least, whom the drug has brought to an untimely end. I have just been listening to a story of this sort, though it had not so tragic a termination. A foreigner, walking near the outskirts of our suburb a day or two ago, was struck with the appearance of a man in deep distress. He had left his home to go to his Opium-haunt, but had been overtaken by his wretched wife, whose tears and entreaties had brought him to a stand, though they had not constrained him to return. When my friend left the scene, the conflict was still going on between the wretched man's imperious appetite and his grief, remorse, and shame.

But even if it be supposed that we ourselves and our Chinese informants are mistaken as to the amount of injury done by the traffic, it is unquestionably true that it is their sincere belief, that the mischief is done, and that the foreign merchants are the immediate instruments of the harm. This brings us to perhaps the most lamentable part of the present state of things; i. e. that the poison, or what the whole moral portion of the Chinese people regard as such,—comes to them through christian hands. The same agency, from which we look for civil liberty, and social elevation, and christian purity to come and bless them, now employs itself before them, in proffering the intoxicating, debasing, destroying drug. The very arms that should be stretched out to rescue, are dealing aryund a thousand deaths.

If the introduction of Opium could be turned from Christi-n to Pagan channels, if the native growers of Bahar and Malwa would send the drug by their own agents and in their own ships, the matter would not be half so bad. But the misfortune is, the most respectable of the foreign residents, the best specimens the Chinese have of christian mercantile character, are now identified with the drug. In the present apathy of western Governments as to all that concerns their true honor and interests here, we can scarcely expect that they will direct their representatives to interpose. What then shall be done? Must the progress of improvement of the commercial, civil, moral, amelioration be thus stayed? Must the cause of Christianisation in China continue to be crushed under the weight of the drug? No. The Chinese must be told that the set of motives which operate to give them the Bible, is not the same, which operates to feed the opium-pipe. The success of Christianisation and the honor of its author, require, that influences so opposite, yet so apparently identified, should be placed each in its own proper light.

Your sympathies seem awakened, Mr. Editor, for those moderate smokers, who might be compelled, by any reduction of the importation, to forego the pipe. But pray remember that native writers tell us—the home growth is very extensive, and surely it may be calculated to yield much more opium, than is likely to be used aright.

You regard it too, as a case of "punishment," when a moderate user is constrained to give up a luxury, because it is a sacrifice necessary to the progress of reform. But let me remind you that our societies propose to supply the opium-smoker with the proper motive to impel to such sacrifices, by putting him in possession, for instance, of the writings and the example of Paul. "If meat make my brother to offend,—says this better guide than our imaginations, I will eat no meat while the world standeth, lest I make my brother to offend." "If thy brother be grieved with thy meat, now walkest thou not charitably; destroy not him with thy meat, for whom Christ died." It is one of our highest hopes, (not fears) that many a moderate smoker in China will come to feel and exemplify, one day, the spirit of these words.

Now though you, Mr. Editor, oppose (in a neutral way) "the genuine votaries of Bacchus being put on short allowance," you would not regret to see opium smokers giving up "the good thing an all bountiful providence has created for them," in the spirit and after the example of Paul. As none of the foreign sellers of the drug use it, the case does not apply to them; it is profit, not enjoyment, Mammon not Bacchus, that is on their side the sacrifice, or the God.

Like yourself, Mr. Editor, I am no friend of ultra movements, or ultra doctrines of any kind. I owe to a disinterested position only the views I now give. The opium-game does not excite and blind me; I see clearly, because I look on. Others, in the same position, no doubt come to much the same conclusions, and when we have compared our views at a future day, be it the first Wednesday in November, as proposed in the Canton Register,—we shall, I hope, be ready to act a proper part.

Meantime, I trust you will continue to give the subject such attention, as your neutrality allows.

Your's truly,

S. S. S.

CANTON PRESS.

Saturday, 25th August.

The Ann from Calcutta 8th July, and Singapore 9th August has arrived. By her we have received Singapore papers of 2nd and 9th of this month, from which, in another column, we have made some extracts. Opium had risen considerably in Calcutta since the last sale being now quoted at 1105 for Patna, and 980 @ 1000 for Benares. The following was the quantity remaining uncleared on the 6th July in the Company's warehouse, viz.t.

	Old	New	Total
Patna,	190	2,615	2,805
Benares	85	1,721	1,806
		Chests.	4,611

The Ariel had arrived at Kedgeree on the 30th June, and was to leave again for China on the 25th July. The following vessels were laid on for China in Calcutta. Ariel, Bolton, Forth, and Mermaid.

We have again been favored by S. S. S. with a letter, the subject of which is the Opium trade, or rather its discontinuance in future, and at same time with this communication we notice another letter having a similar object in the Canton Register of the 21st inst. signed by Messrs Olyphant & Co. American merchants here, who call for a public meeting to be held by those who will pledge themselves to abstain entirely from all participation in the Opium-trade. This meeting these Gentlemen propose to take place on the first Wednesday of next November. Messrs. Olyphant & Co. have, we believe, not traded in Opium from a conviction of it's injurious tendency to the Chinese, and however creditable to them to abstain conscientiously from a source of gain, we expect that their example and their call to the pledge will have but few followers, most of the merchants here being general Agents, and all of them, we believe, more or less trafficking in Opium, either on their own account or that of their constituents, nor willing, we presume, to give up the advantages they have hitherto derived therefrom. In fact, we do not know of any one, permanently established here, with the exception of the house already named, who are not, we are told, commission agents, but carrying on business solely on their own account, and of the missionaries, who naturally abstain from trade altogether, who could possibly give the pledge recommended by Messrs. Olyphant & Co., and affairs being in this position we do not see that the method by which these gentlemen propose to gain their end is at all likely to be successful. Supposing even that merchants in Canton were to discontinue dealing in opium, a position which we deem not likely to be made good, the traffic would only be removed from one place to another, and instead of Canton being, as now, the culminating point, would be carried on to the extent of the demand, in the numerous bays near our river and along the eastern coast of China. The trade of which S. S. S. complains would therefore continue to exist, though it had changed hands. The Chinese informant of our correspondent seems to argue wrongly when he says "that the foreign merchants are the immediate instruments of the harm." The Chinese smokers are the immediate cause, and as long as they have a taste for, or are allowed to indulge the use of, Opium, we are afraid that any external measures to do away with the trade can be of no avail, for, our correspondent must be sufficiently aware of commercial affairs to know that, wherever demand exists, enterprize will not be wanting to supply it. Can it be supposed that the Temperance societies in America would have found a prohibition against the introduction of spirits into the United States any effectual aid to them? Would such prohibitions not have been circumvented, as they here are in the case of the Opium. trade? Or, if in Great Britain the distillery of spirits were no longer legal, would not means be found by illicit destillation to supply the demand? The same holds good as to Opium. Were the foreigners, now settled here, to refuse the usual supply, other foreigners would immediately come in their stead. The Opium trade can only be diminished and, perhaps, finally destroyed by a determination, such as we see described in the Temperance journals to exist in North America against the use of all distilled liquors, being come to by the Chinese with regard to the drug; their government, we know from many years experience, are either too weak or too supine to suppress the Opium-trade. A moral influence to act upon the Chinese is the only one that can effectually counteract it, but how such influence is to be obtained, and whether at all obtainable we are too little acquainted with the Chinese character, and with the means their wise and good men have to act upon the feelings of their countrymen, even to guess at.

The following edict from the local authorities has been addressed to the Hong-merchants. We do not believe it entitled to much attention, similar papers having frequently appeared, and having had no influence upon the manner in which the trade is now carried on.

"Tung, President of the Board of War and Governor of the two Kwang Provinces, E., Vice President of the Board of War and Lieutenant Governor of Canton, and Yu, late an acting King of the Imperial Household, and Commissioner of Customs at the Port of Canton, proclaim to the Senior Hong-merchants for their full information.

"On the 18th day of the 5th moon, of the 18 h year of Taoukwang we reverently received the following Imperial Edict: "It has been reported to us that Tea and Rhubarb are indispensable to the outside barbarians; and further, we have been requested to ordain that certain fixed prices are to be established for said articles, to be paid for only in Sycee Silver, and not on any account to be bartered for Opium and other foreign goods. Let the said Governor and his colleagues deliberate and devise means for carrying the above regulations into effect. Raw Silk is also to be included in said regulation. Let a satisfactory report be prepared for inspection." This coming before us, we have examined into the subject. How much Tea Silk and Rhubarb is annually exported? What are the usual average prices of those articles? What goods have the outside barbarians hitherto been accustomed to barter for them? Have the prices hitherto been fixed or stationary, or have they been governed by the market values? Now we have received directions from the Emperor to establish fixed prices, and to limit the payment for them to sycee silver. They may not be bartered for foreign goods. What is the best mode for fixing the prices? and, putting aside Tea, Rhubarb, and Silk, (which are to be paid for in specie) what other goods can be bartered for the foreign articles of import? We now issue this Edict for the information of the Hong-merchants. Let them instantly make enquiries, and ascertain the facts, and within five days, report the same to us, that we may prepare our report to the Emperor. Do not attempt to deceive us: and let there be no delay.

"Haste—Haste—A special Edict."

6th moon, 28th day, (18th August, 1838.)

A petition signed by many of our Parsee neighbours, complaining of the delay in the settlement of the Kin-qua debts was presented at the City gate on Wednesday last by about 30 of the Parsees resident here. Some of the party, we hear, penetrated beyond the city-gates, and entered the house of a Mandarin near it. After some time spent in waiting, the proper Chinese officers arrived, and took charge of the Petition.

It is not H. M. B. Algerine, but H. M. S. Larne that has been sent by H E. the Admiral to go in search of the Antonio Percira. The route that Capt. Blake proposes to take is to go first to the Paracels as the spot most likely to fall in with either with the vessel itself, or the wreck, or survivors of the crew, and should he there not meet with the object of his search he is to proceed to Turon bay, and thence to other places where it is likely that any mischance can have happened to that vessel. There have been several rumors of late concerning her fate, most of which cannot be traced to any satisfactory source, the last that we hear of is confirmatory of the first concerning her, which is, that an "Opium ship" had been wrecked on the coast of Hainam, at least so, we are told, some Chinese, arrived at Macao, state. We sincerely hope that the search of H. M. S.-Larne may prove successful, though from the extent of coast, and, the, we fear, but scanty means of intelligence from one spot to the other, the enterprize is far from promising success.

Five men, natives of Macao, were, the other day, forwarded to the authorities here, and are at present shut up in the Consoo-house, where they seem to be well content with the treatment they receive. From their statement it would appear that they, on coming up the river in a small Macao or Chinese boat, run against some shoals or rocks in the middle of the night and were wrecked. They reached the land by swimming, and thus got into the hands of the Mandarins.

Great difficulties, we are told, attend the delivery of Opium at Whampoa at present, the look out of the preventive guard being very strict.

We hoped to have given to our readers the particulars of the dangers encountered by the Henry Clay in the China Seas from the Tyfong she encountered, but cannot do so in this paper from the necessary notes, to make up the statement which we had been kindly promised, not having yet reached Canton. We are told that the gale which this vessel encountered singularly differed from those usual in the China Sea to the southward of Macao, by the wind veering round from North west to the Southward, by the west, and not the east as is commonly observed. Whether this deviation is owing to the Hurricane having been encountered in a much more northern latitude, (the vessel was driven up as high as 28° N.,) or by what influences the nature of the Tyfong was changed, offers, no doubt, matter for curious speculation.

We have recopied from Mr. Bruce's report, part of which we gave last week, the account he gives of the manufacture of tea in Assam, which, being conducted by Chinese, is probably similar or the same as the process by which the leaf is prepared in this country. It would appear from this report that any quantity, of the commoner kinds at least, can be raised in Assam.

COMMERCIAL REMARKS.

IMPORTS.

COTTON MANUFACTURES.—Several sales of LONGCLOTHS, have been made during the week, but at rather reduced prices—one lot of 9000 Ps. grey cloths of fair quality at $ 4, and white @ 4½. About 2000 Ps. of fine to very fine cloths were sold at about 5½, we understand. COTTON YARN, the dealers appear afraid to speculate in, from the very large quantities: For a small lot of good Yarn, No. 20 @ 32, ½ water, ½ mule, not more than equal to $ 28 was paid, and for the best, say Nos. 20 @ 40, not more than $ 34 could be obtained, and the inferior yarns are unsaleable.

CHINTZES are very difficult of sale, the supply being large of inferior goods and narrow dimensions, which have been selling at very low rates and interfered with the good qualities.

WOOLLENS.—The price of SPANISH STRIPES, remains nearly as before, but there is not a very active demand. Some small parcels have been sold at from 1.20 @ 1.30, and for the best they do not offer more than 1.35, hitherto the supply has been moderate. LONGELLS have rather improved, and about $ ½ advance could be obtained.

METALS. LEAD,—is rather firmer. IRON without much enquiry, although the importations are limited. For the small lot of 203 bottles of QUICKSILVER not more than $ 110 is offered, we hear.

STRAITS PRODUCE.—The stock of PEPPER, is reduced, and moderate supplies would fetch $ 7. A small lot of BANCA TIN sold yesterday @ 20½. There is very little either of Banca or Straits in the market. The cargo of BETELNUT, reported last week, has been sold at Macao @ 3.20, but we doubt if the next importation will realize more than $ 3.

RICE.—The price has again receded almost to our former low quotations, and supplies are coming on from Java which will tend to keep the market down.

COTTON.—No material alteration in price or demand. The rates for the Bombay staple of good quality may be considered fully 3 mace, and for the lower qualities 5 @ 6 mace under the opening price. We have heard of no transactions in the Bengal or Madras cotton, but we hear the dealers cannot realize their purchases of the former except at a loss of 1 @ 2 mace.

OPIUM.—The market is again very dull, and prices nearly nominal. New Patna in the early part of the week was 590 @ 600, and Malwa 700, but the transactions were, we suspect, very limited at these rates. The supplies however come on very gradually, and the clearances continue good, so that for a time the price may be supported. The deliveries to the 15th were, Patna, old 190; new 311; Benares, old 17; new 100; Malwa, 541; Total 1099 chests.

EXPORTS.

RAW SILK.—About 1500 bales of the new crop of Nankin silk have arrived, but as the holders are talking of $ 600 and upwards for it, there have of course been no transactions, nor have the masters, we believe, been inspected. The second as well as the first crop, there seems no doubt now, is also short.

TEA.—The new black Teas are now arriving daily. The crop generally is still reported short, and a long continuation of rains, it is said, will also prevent an excessive supply of green teas.

EXCHANGE.—without alteration.

ART. I. Notices of the city of Borneo and its inhabitants, made during the voyage of the American brig Himmaleh in the Indian Archipelago, in 1837. From a Correspondent.

From the Chinese Repository, for August,

May 21st. A report has came from below, that another vessel has arrived. The sultan has inquired several times whether this vessel has come to take Bruni. He protests that he is not afraid, but he is evidently not altogether at ease. He says that the Dutch and English wish to take his town, but cannot. He calls his orang bichara about him, and boasts of his power, a course well fitted to frighten his people. In the morning he had another cannon of large size mounted on the small platform in front of the palace, and the whole number now mounted is seven. Much annoyed with the begging and the idle questions of the vicious crowd around us, we are careful not to offend them, as we desire to leave upon their minds a favorable impression in respect to white men and Christians. The sultan has sent for me several times for no other purpose, as it turned out, but to frighten a little child, the daughter of one of his slaves; and once, when he could not make the child cry by pointing at me as an object of terror, he turned and kicked the poor thing, and thus secured his object. We are coming to the conclusion, that this man is as odious for his vices as he is contemptible for his folly.

May 22d. The sultan and his attendants were up in the night, holding a consultation respecting the newly arrived. Observing that I was awake, (for nothing can escape the notice of his spies,) he sent for me and inquired whether the vessels have come to make war. He wonders how it is that we, although from Singapore, know nothing about the matter. Two sons of the sultan, good looking boys of about 13 and 15 years, often make their appearance in the morning while their father is yet asleep. This morning they ventured, for the first time, within speaking distance, and begged for some paper.

At 12 o'clock, captain McAlister from Singapore arrived, attended by a Chinese as his commercial agent, and by several of his crew. At the first interview, the sultan made the same attempt at regal state as at our reception. The art of keeping one waiting for ceremony's sake, or from peculiar notions of dignity, seems to be well understood in Bruni. Happening to have a peep behind the curtains, I saw the sultan in full dress, and ready to come forth, but still waiting for a suitable time to elapse before he should make his appearance. The new captain was well received; particular inquiries were made as to the size of his vessel, the number and size of the guns, the number of white men; and finding that there was nothing to fear from a little brig of 100 tons, having but three white men on board, his highness seemed relieved, and was very cheerful.

May 23d. Two Chinese called, one of them a Mohammedan. They say that the few Chinese here are oppressed; that the last sultan was a cruel tyrant; that formerly the Chinese in Bruni were numerous, but that oppression has driven them away. From several quarters similar testimony is derived respecting the former sultan. One of the pangerans declares, that during his reign no white man could come here and much less sleep in his palace as we do.

The vessel last arrived is not able to trade on as favorable terms as were granted to our vessel. The reason doubtless is, that we have already obtained nearly all the peper, the most important article of traffic in Bruni. As money is almost unknown here, all trading is done by barter; a pecul of pepper is given for a piece of cloth of specified length and quality, and other things are exchanged in the same way. The sultan and chief pangerans secure to themselves the first choice of all articles offered for sale. Indeed they nearly monopolize the whole trade. Before any vessel can commence trading, samples of all goods are exhibited, and pangeran Yusuf, being the most active merchant, has the chief voice in fixing the prices.

May 24th. Rumor of the arrival of a third vessel. The sultan's fears are renewed, and to quiet them he boasts of the prowess of Bruni.

May 25th. Three Dayak prahus, containing about 70 men, arrived from Baram. So little do any of these people, whether Malays or Dayaks, know of the geography of the places around them, that I could not ascertain, notwithstanding repeated inquiries, whether the prahus came from north, south, east, or west. The story of the men themselves is, that they have been a day and a night coming from Baram by sea, and that their own country is far interior from Baram. The Baram of which they speak, must be the Tanjong Baram of the charts, some 80 miles to the southwest. The appearance of the men is a little different from that of the Malays, yet the difference would not be noticed by an ordinary observer, if their dress were the same. In complexion they are a slight degree lighter, if I mistake not, than the Malays, and their features are rather more prominent. The faces of several bore marks of the small-pox. Only one had the cutaneous disease called kurap, so common in these islands, and that one differed entirely in appearance from the others, having a bad countenance, with color almost as dark as that of a negro, but with straight hair. Their dress is not uniform. Some have trowsers extending from the waist to the middle of the thigh, but most of them have merely the chawat, a cloth or bark fastened around the loins by a string. The hair of most of them is long, and tied up loosely behind the head, much in the style of Malay females. A few have the hair short, and handkerchiefs around the head, not unlike Mohammedans; and a few others have it a foot long hanging about their shoulders. The dress and general appearance of a majority of them accord with the descriptions given by Dalton, Hunt, and others. The chiefs are distinguished by ornaments in and about their ears. In the upper part of the ear is a hole, through which is thrust the tooth of an animal (of the tiger as they say, but of the hog as the Malays suspect). These teeth are three inches long, and are kept from falling out by a head of gold. Besides this tooth sticking through the upper part of ear, the lower part, or lobe, is stretched beyond measure by the introduction of cylinders of wood, at first small, and gradually increased till they reach the diameter of two inches, and then gold or gilded wire is coiled around this part of the ear, forming a tube two or three inches in lenth. It appeared, on inquiry, that these men are of several different tribes, and speak different languages. I wrote down from their mouths a few words, and the first ten numerals of three dialects. Three fourths of these numerals in each of the dialects are evidently derived from the same source with the Malay numerals.

(here follows a table of numerals which what of space obliges in to omit.)

We cannot but conclude that all these languages, with the exception of the Ternatian, have derived their numerals from a common source.

From all that could be learned of these Dayaks, respecting their language, it appears that their dialects are numerous, each being confined to a district, and sometimes to a village. I inquired of them whether their custom is to cut off heads; and they replied without hesitation, and with apparent pleasure that such a question had been asked, that it is their custom. When I told them it was a bad custom, and inquired why they continued it, their answer was: 'The heads are proof of our power in war.' Being further asked, whether it is their custom to eat men, they replied in the same prompt and decided tone, that it is. They further said, that the parts most liked are the eyes and the heart. The conversation was in the Malay tongue, which a few of the men could understand and speak considerably well. In order to test the power of their poisoned arrows, the sultan ordered a monkey to be brought, and sent for me to witness the trial about to be made. One of the Dayaks, by means of his blow pipe, which is seven or eight feet in legth, discharged four arrows, all of which entered the little animal. At first the monkey was not annoyed by them, but in about ten minutes, from the time the first arrow pierced him, he died with convulsions and vomiting, probably from the effect of the poison. In speaking of the poison, the Dayaks and Malays called it upas. After the death of the monkey, the sultan in his boasting manner, asked what I thought of it. 'I have,' said he, '30 000 men like these, ready at my call, and what could all the white men, the English, the Dutch, the French, the Spanish, do against such men? I know they wish to take Borneo, but I fear them not.' This was all idle talk. He does fear both Europeans and Dayaks. These Dayak prahus, having delivered to the sultan a few dollars worth of presents, consisting of rice, sago, a blow pipe, and a Javanese gong, which they had purchased, took their leave and anchored in another part of the town. Nothing had yet been learned from them respecting their religion, and no other opportunity of talking with them occurred. From the Malay nothing could be gathered further than that the Dayaks are all kafir. infidels.

COTTON AND SILK.—The Liverpool Cotton market was dull on Monday and Tuesday, and prices were rather more in favor of the buyer than previously: the demand, however, has since improved, and the latest quotations do not vary from those of Friday last, the sales from Saturday to yesterday inclusive being estimated at 18,000 @ 19,000 bales. Here the market is quiet, and only about 700 bales have been disposed of comprising ordinary to good fair Surat from 4d. @ 5d. fair Bengal 4¼d., and fair to good fair Bowed 6¼ @ 7d.—Sales to some extent have been made this week of the lower qualities of Bengal Silk at a reduction from the previous prices of about 1s. per lb. in the better descriptions, and in China, nothing worthy of notice has been done, and the quotations for these must be considered rather nominal.

TEA.—The holders generally continue firm, but as this is the season when the ships arrive from China, buyers hold off, and do not take more than sufficient to meet their wants at former prices, it being uncertain as to the quantity that may be received. In another column will be found the particulars of the auction at Liverpool.

The following are the quantities of Tea upon which duty has been paid in the United Kingdom, this year to the 5th April, also the quantities exported from London and Liverpool.

English News.

Monday April 30.—In the House of Lords, Lord Melbourne, in answer to observations made by Lord Lyndhurst, said that, though it was not the intention of the Government to renew the order in Council permitting the enlistment of British subjects in the service of the Queen of Spain, yet it would be a matter for the consideration of the advisers of the Crown whether a special license should not be granted for the protection of those who intended to continue in the service. The same Noble Viscount, in answer to the Marquis of Londonderry, stated that Ministers intended to postpone the Coronation for a day or two—probably to the 28th of June, in order to avoid having the ceremony on the anniversary of the death of George the Fourth. It was not the intention of Government to make any alteration further than this. Some discontent had certainly been exhibited in London because of the omission of the banquet. He was free to confess, however, he did not consider such discontent sufficient cause for departure from the course already indicated by the proclamation, a good precedent for following which was to be found in the last Coronation, which, he believed, gave great satisfaction to the nation. There could not be no doubt that, by adopting that course, much expense and personal fatigue to her Majesty would be avoided. Here the matter was allowed to rest.

In the House of Commons, in reply to Sir Edward Knatchbull, Lord John Russell stated that it was not in contemplation to bring in a Bill to alter the Tithe Commutation Act. * * * *

To a question by Sir Robert Inglis, Lord John Russell replied that the Coronation would be conducted in the same manner as in the reign of his late Majesty, and would take place on the 28th of June. There would be a procession, as on the last occasion, from the Palace to the Abbey, through the streets.—Sir F. French asked if any recommendation would be made that ladies should appear in dresses of British Manufacture.—Lord J. Russell declined to answer. * * * *

On the third reading of the Poor Law Bill for Ireland being moved, Mr. O'Connell moved as an amendment that it be read that day six months. On a division the numbers were 234 for the third reading, and 59 against it.—Before the House divided Mr. O'Connell gave notice of his determination to take the sense of the House on the last question "that the Bill do pass;" but the small number of forces he could muster against the third reading did not encourage any further resistance and he contented himself with denouncing the measure, declaring that he would continue to agitate against it, and asserting that the effect of it would be to bring still nearer, the accomplishment of the great object of his life, the restoration of a Parliament to Ireland.—Adjourned. * * * *

Mr. Hume moved for leave to bring in a Bill "to suspend the payment of the annuity of 6,000l., granted by 46 Geo. III., c. 145, and 47 Geo. III., c. 9; and of the annuity of 15,000l., granted by 1 Geo. IV., c. 109, to his Royal Highness the Duke of Cumberland, now King of Hanover, so long as his Royal Highness shall continue to be King of Hanover."—Mr. Hume very properly left all political differences out of the question, and merely rested his proposition on the reason of the case, contending that the King of Hanover was no longer in a condition to give advice or assistance to his sovereign, nor even to swear fealty; he might ere long be in hostility to the Queen of Great Britain and her subjects, and under these circumstances to pay a large annuity to an independent monarch was a manifest absurdity. He argued, therefore, that events not contemplated when the Acts passed had entirely altered the relations of the parties, and had virtually put an end to the engagement as far as this country was concerned—Mr. Warburton followed up this argument by urging that the reciprocity upon which the contract was originally founded was at an end, and that the King of Hanover being incapable of discharging his duties, the payment for them ought, as a matter of course, to be discontinued. We should like to know the nature of the duties referred to, and in what way the Duke of Cumberland fulfilled them before he ascended the throne of Hanover. We are not aware that he ever exerted himself much in any way excepting to thwart the measures of the Queen Ministers.

The answer of the Chancellor of the Exchequer was very clear and brief. Parliament had distinctly bound itself, "for and during the term of the natural life" of the Duke of Cumberland, to pay him an annuity of £21,000, and ministers could be no parties to the violation of such a solemn and unambiguous engagement. "It is true (said the Right Honourable Gentleman) that the King of Belgium, with a princely generosity consistent with his character, has relinquished the whole of his pension, with the exception of that small portion most properly reserved as rewards for the faithful domestics of his illustrious wife; but that was an act purely gratuitous, HOWEVER WORTHY OF IMITATION. In this country the stability of engagements is of the essence of national prosperity, and Ministers can never consent to set an example, unjust in itself, and derogatory to the character of the British empire." This tribute to the disinterested liberality of Prince Leopold was received with cheers from all parts of the house; but the silence which marked the conclusion of the sentence seemed very significantly to show that members would be glad, if they could, to bestow the same applause elsewhere.

On a division, the motion was rejected by a majority of 35, the numbers being for the motion 62 against it 97.

Lord Palmerston obtained leave to bring in Bills to carry into effect the treaties with Sweden and the Netherlands, relative to the Slave Trade.

In a Committee of the whole House, a resolution was agreed to on which to found a similar Bill with respect to the Hanse Towns.

The Noble Lord then obtained leave to bring in a Bill to establish a Court of Criminal Jurisdiction for British subjects in China; but abstained, till the Bill should be before the House, from stating how he meant to accomplish the object.—The remaining business having been disposed of, the House adjourned. * * *

Monday May 7.—In the House of Lords last night, Earl Grey stated, that while he would advocate to the full extent, the abolition of slavery, he was not in favour of the abolition of negro apprenticeship, before the term fixed on by Parliament in the Emancipation Act. * * *

Mr. Baines then moved for a Committee of the whole House, to consider the propriety to abolishing First Fruits, and for the more effectual rating and the better collections of Tenths, and to substitute, in lieu of First Fruits, a yearly rent-charge, amounting to one-twenty fifth part of the clear improved yearly value of all dignities and benefices. After considerable discussion the motion was carried by a majority of 48 against 27, and the House went into Committee, after which the Chairman reported progress, and obtained leave to sit again to-morrow. * * *

Serjeant Talfourd then moved that the House go in to Committee on the Copyright Bill.

Mr. Wakely moved that the House go into Committee that day six months.

After an interesting discussion, the original motion was carried by a majority of 116 against 74. The House then went into Committee pro forma, and the Chairman asked leave to sit again on Wednesday. * * *

In the House of Commons after Sir Robert Peel had obtained leave to bring in a bill to amend the law relative to controverted Elections, Sir Robert Inglis moved an address to her Majesty, setting forth that the Slave Trade, which had been denounced be the Congress of Vienna, was still continued, in spite of various treaties and the effort of succesive administrations; that the best means to accomplish its extinction would be, the declaraon by all the Christian powers that the slave traffic was piracy, and the determination to punish it as such, and the granting of the right of mutual search; and that it was desirable to effect such an arrangement by treaties. In support of his motion Sir Robert showed that our own Abolition Law, however it might have relieved us of guilt, had greatly aggravated the sum of general misery; that the number of slaves now yearly exported from Africa very greatly exceeded the export at the conclusion of the last century; and the only effect of our law has been to render that contraband which was before legal. In 1791, the mortality on the middle passage had been about 22 in every 100 slaves—a ratio which, in a year and seven months, would depopulate the whole globe. That ratio had since increased, and the Slave trader now calculated upon losing half his entire cargo. These deaths are the per centage of loss on the voyage alone, exclusively of the deaths that happen before embarkation, when wars are waged and villages burnt to get possession of the captives and fugitives. A slave might be bought in his own country for about 25*s.* who would fetch in Brazil between 400 and 500 dollars. The crime is now committed under the colours of all nations, especially Portugal, whose flag may be bought for a few dollars at Cape de Verd, St. Thomas's, and Prince's Island.—Dr. Lushington suggested that a port, established near some outlet of the Niger, would valuably serve the double purpose of maintaining a station to watch the slavers, and of establishing a point of legitimate traffic with the natives. To encourage such a traffic was the surest way to terminate the Slave Trade, by substituting other commodities for human merchandise. Lord Palmerston, on the part of the Government, concurred very cordially in the Motion of Sir R. Inglis. He believed that the horrors of the Slave Trade had been aggravated by the Abolition Law, but he did not think that this measure had increased the numbers of the victims. Government had never lost sight of the subject. Sir S. Canning, Sir T. Ackland, and Mr. Pease, all concurred in the object and sentiment of the Address which was unanimously carried.—Adjourned. * * *

Tuesday, May 11. In the House of Lords, last night, there was no business of general interest.

In the House of Commons, after the presentation of several petitions, Lord John Russell brought forward the Ministerial measure for the settlement of the tithe question in Ireland. The only feature in it differing from the plans of former years, is, that the clergy receive 10 per cent, in a land charge, in lieu of the tithes the payment of which amount is to be guaranteed by the State. Sir Francis Ackland then moved, as an amendment, that the resolutions of 1835, recognising the appropriation principle, be rescinded. An animated debate ensued, which was adjourned till this day.

Spain.

Saturday, April 28.—The important intelligence of an insurrection organized against Don Carlos, in Navarre, has been received. It appears that a column, 400 strong, commanded by Murraguay, presented itself on the evening of the 15th, at Verastegui. The next morning this chief proclaimed the independence of Navarre and Guipuscoa; his troops took a solemn oath to separate for ever from Don Carlos, whom they regard as the author of all the evils with which their country is afflicted. The Carlist Brigadier Iturri, informed of these events, marched from Andoian with a battalion, but was attacked and defeated by the independents, who have established a junta at Verastegui, and it is probable that all the provinces will soon recognize its authority. General O'Donnell has left St. Sebastian to watch and take advantage of what is going on. Murraguay is a native of Artigariaga, thirty years of age, and was educated of Onate; he is well informed and of an inflexible character. In 1830, when the refugees were approaching the frontier, he was confidant of Santos Ladron, and at a later period was intimately connected with Quesada. His partizans, who almost all belong to rich families, have avoided the military service of Don Carlos, by paying a fine each time they were drawn. The population of Verastegui have declared in favor of the insurgents.

By the French papers we learn that a despatch has been received at Madrid by the Minister of War, announcing that Iriarte had completely defeated the troops of Count De Negri, at Salices, and that the Carlists had lost in this affair a great number of officers and 200 rank and file. The Captain-General of New Castile had ordered some regiments stationed between Guadalajara and Alcare to act against a body of Carlists, 1,000 strong, commanded by a nephew of Cabrera, in that part of the country. Strict orders had been issued for completing the levy of 40,000 men. The Five per Cents. on the Exchange at Madrid were done at 19⅛.

Portugal.

Wednesday, May 9.—By the Braganza steamer, which arrived at Falmouth on Monday, we have received advices from Lisbon of the 2nd inst. Lord Howard de Walden was to have left Porugal for England last week, but was detained for some days longer, in order to conclude a convention for the more effectual suppression of the Slave Trade. The effortt of the Ministry to alleviate the financial embarrassments, into which the recent disturbances and changes in the Cabinet have thrown the country, have given very general satisfaction. The King and Queen appear frequently in public, and are well received.

STATE OF TRADE.—We are glad to perceive that the letters from the manufacturing districts are beginning to be written in a more cheerful strain. The accounts from Manchester and Leeds are considerably improved, whilst the Liverpool Cotton Market is also represented as more elastic than for several preceding moths. The return of spring will undoubtedly have a considerable influence upon the home trade, and the certainty that so full a supply of the precious metals is now on its way to the United States, gives confidence in an early and extensive revival of the American trade.

The arrangement between Government and the Gresham Committee and the City of London, on the rebuilding of the Royal Exchange, are, we understand, nearly completed. The Exchequer Bill Commissioners are to grant a loan of £0.000*l.*, and it is said a grant of 150,000*l.* will be given by the Government. Englishman, Extra, May 15.

SOCIETE GENERALE DES NAUFRAGES DANS L'INTERET DE TOUTES LES NATIONS. We noticed the establishment of this society some-time since, and it's correspondent, the Rev. Mr. Gutzlaff has kindly sent us a new publication by that society, giving an interesting account of trials recently made with safety shells, the object of which is, to establish, by means of ropes thrown to the shipwrecked vessels, a communication between the shore and the people on board, and thus to save their lives, when the violence of the weather would not permit any boats to go to the assistance of the distressed. This application of powder and shot, to the saving of life instead of destroying it, is a beautiful illustration of the philantropical spirit of the age, and it is gratifying to find that this novel invention has already been instrumental in the saving of the lives of a number of people, as will be seen from the extract from the pamphlet, we are about to translate. This benevolent society which has met with much encouragement in Europe, where it has already established its Agents in a great many sea-ports, is desirous also to establish a sauvetage at Macao, and we doubt not that it will find thatsupport among our neighbours which it so well merits.

The following is the extract from the pamphlet alluded to. It is a letter addressed to the society by their agent at Elsineur.

"Sir,

"The General Society of shipwrecks has rendered an immense service to humanity by placing, on the sea coasts, mortars to throw shells with ropes (fr. bombes-amarres) to ships in distress. The Society is well deserving of the thanks of seafaring people on this account.

"Having witnessed a remarkable fact of this kind, it is my duty to communicate it.

"The Amer. Ship Antelope, a new ship, of 400 tons, Capt. Law, on her way from Petersburg to Newyork, was obliged, in the night of the 1st November 1837, during a tremendous gale, to cut away her masts. No longer able to hold by her anchors, the ship struck the ground near the fort of Kronburg, Elsineur.

The commander of the fort, seeing the danger in which the ship and crew were, prepared immediately to assist the shipwrecked by means of these shells, as recommended by the General Society of Shipwrecks.

"The commandant, though somewhat unprepared, and though all things necessary were not immediately at hand, owing probably to the rare occurrence of shipwrecks on that spot, soon succeeded by means of a twenty four pounder to throw on board a rope of 6 lines. As soon as those on board had hanled it in, a small cable was fastened to it on shore which was then hauled on board.

"I observed that on the shore the cable was run round a cannon that it might be slackened according to the rolling of the ship, which was tossed by the waves with an indescribable violence. The wind was so high that the commandant could hardly keep a lanthorn lighted on the top of the rampart, with a view to encourage the distressed. However, at two o'clock in the morning, in she very height of the gale, fourteen out of a crew of fifteen people had been saved from the wreck. The cook alone was drowned; a sea had washed him overboard.

"After the gale nothing remained of the Antelope, which but the evening before had been quietly at anchor to the southward, but pieces of wreck with which the coast was strewed."

CANTON PRESS.

Saturday, 1st Sept.

By the arrival of the Hopkinson from Bombay and Singapore, we have received the Sing Free Press extra of 11th August, containing the news from England by the overland mail to 15th May, recopied from the London edition of the Calcutta Englishman. We have extracted such part of them as we thought the most interesting. The Forth from Singapore, 14th August, and Calcutta 18th July, has since arrived, and brings advices of the arrival at Singapore of the Vanelitart from Bombay, bringing the news of the total loss of the fine Ship Ruby bound from this to Bombay with a valuable cargo and a great quantity of Specie. It appears that the vessel started a but and was making water so fast that the efforts of the crew to keep her afloat by the pumps, were of no avail, and they left the sinking vessel in the boats, one of which, in command of the carpenter, was picked up by H. M. S. Jupiter at sea. The other boat, with Capt. Randle and the rest of the crew had not been heard of, but it was hoped that, the weather being fine, she would be able to reach the Mauritius. We are sorry to learn that all the Insurance offices here are deeply interested in the loss. We regret also to hear of the death of Sir Robert Grant, Governor of Bombay. The General Palmer with the letters by the overland mail had not reached Singapore when the Forth came away, but had been seen near Malacca by the Vanelitart. The Syed-khan, though overdue, (having left China in the last days of June) had not arrived at Singapore, and fears are entertained of her safety. By the Forth we have also received the Pinang Gazettes up to 28th July—they contain nothing of interest.

From a notice circulated by the Chamber of Commerce a few days since, we were pleased to learn that Mr. Samuel Fearon had offered his services as Chinese interpreter to the Chamber of Commerce, and been accepted as such by that body. We hope that the community of Canton will assist the Chamber of Commerce so far as to secure an adequate salary to the interpreter; a we were glad to notice notes of approval of this appointment by several of the resident merchants here; the Canton foreign community, which is every day becoming more numerous, whilst the occasions for corresponding in Chinese, either with the local authorities or the Hong merchants, are more frequent, have hitherto been obliged, or, to apply to the Interpreter of the Superintendents, who, however ready to give his services, is often at Macao, and his services on that account not available, or, to other gentlemen who have studied the Chinese language, but whose time no one is entitled to engage for his own affairs, however willing these gentlemen have shewed themselves where their knowledge of the language could be of use to others. From an interpreter regularly appointed by the foreign public this delicacy or difficulty as to engaging his service does not exist, and we are much inclined to believe that the office when once entered on, of a public Chinese interpreter, will meet with general approbation. Of Mr. Fearon's qualifications as a Chinese scholar we cannot speak from personal observation, not knowing the language, but we have no doubt of his competency, knowing that he has for sometime translated from and into Chinese a great part of the correspondence between the foreign merchants and the Chinese, and knowing also that Mr. Morrison, Chief interpreter of H. M. Superintendents, certifies as to his ability for the office proposed. We are, moreover, indebted to Mr. Fearon for the translations of most of the Chinese documents that have appeared in this paper.

It will be seen from our English extracts, that Lord Palmerston is again about moving to obtain a bill for the establishment of a Court of criminal judicature for the trial of British subjects in China. The manner in which his Lordship is to effect this object he has not yet stated, but we suppose the bill will be similar to that proposed before, and which bad probably passed, had not the King's death prevented progress of all business. We have, on a former occasion, stated the objections we felt to exist against this measure, but shall, before we again offer any remarks, wait till we see the new bill of the Secretary for foreign affairs.

Our readers will have found in our columns during the last year, frequent allusions to the debts owing by the Hing-tae and Kin-qua houses, in fact, we have endeavored to inform them of whatever occurred concerning this very inportant affair. We are now glad to be able to lay before them the terms on which these claims have been settled between the Hong-merchants and a number of the Creditors, though not all, some of the latter refusing as yet to assent to this agreement. However, such of the creditors as have thought proper to subscribe to the conditions hereafter to be mentioned, have, we think, shewn their good seuse in settling an affair which has been now so long pending, without, as far as we can understand, any chance whatever of making the Hong-merchants agree to more favorable terms. Such of the creditors as have not agreed to the settlement will, of course, have to fight their own battles for more favorable terms—we wish they may succeed, in which case, we understand it to be agreed between the Hong-merchants and the creditors that have assented to the agreement that they are to be treated like those most favored, any former agreement to the contrary notwithstanding.

The agreement now entered into between the Creditors and the Hong merchants, and to ratify which the latter have signed the necessary documents, are to the following effect.

"The debts of Hing-tae and Kin-qua to be paid, the former in annual instalments during 8½ years, and of the latter in the term of 10 years.

"Interest on Hing-tae's accounts to be allowed until the day of closing the Hong, the 30th November 1837, and at the rate of 1 per cent per month.

"Interest on Kin-qua's accounts to be allowed at the rate of 1 per cent per month until the 1st July 1838, and after that date, and on the accumulated principal at the rate of 5 per cent per annum; but the interest, at this rate, to be paid, after the principal, at the expiration of the 10 years, (i. e. in the 11th and 12th years, in two instalments)

"The Hong merchants to distribute immediately such sums as they have collected in the Consoo-fund, in part payment of the first dividend of the debts.

"The Co-hong engages to assist Kin qua with 100,000 dollars annually, to enable him to pay his debts."

This is the short outline of the agreement which, considering all circumstances, is perhaps as favorable as could be expected, though we must say, that, in our opinion, the most difficult part remains unaccomplished, we mean the fulfilment of the Hong-merchants promise as to the payment of the annual instalments, which will amount to rather more than three hundred thousand dollars per annum. One great point has, however, been gained by the creditors in this arrangement, namely, the acknowledgement by the Co-hong of these debts, and should they, at any subsequent period, wish to evade their obligations, the creditors have their liability black on white, and this will, at any future period, considerably lessen the scope of any quarrel that may possibly arise on this subject.

EMIGRATION.—From official returns, it appears that the number of emigrants from the port of London from the 7th of May 1833. to the 30th December 1837, was 113,178. Of these very nearly 100,000 emigrated to the United States of America, and about 9000 only to the Canadas.

POSTAGE EXTRAORDINARY.—The Devonport mail brought yesterday morning a 'ship letter,' in the shape of a bale of linen, to the General Post Office, St. Martin's-le-grand, addressed 'To his Excellency the French Ambassador, London,' the postage which was £318. 18*s.* 4*d.*

The Paris papers announce the death of M. Tessier, the senior member of the French Academy, at the advanced age of 86 years. M. Tessier at an early period of his life devoted himself to agriculture as a sciene, and rendered an important service to his country by introducing the breed of sheep, in doing which he was assisted by Louis XVI. During the period of anarchy engendered by the French revolution, M. Tessier lived in retirement in Normandy, without ceasing, however, to occupy himself with his favourite pursuit. When order was restored, he re-appeared in Paris, and was welcomed with enthusiasm by his ancient colleagues. To him France is also indebted for George Cuvier, whom M. Tessier, the first to discover his talents, invited to Paris, and introduced to the scientific world.

INTERNAL IMPROVEMENTS IN FRANCE.—A great project is before the Chamber for Railroads and Canals. It is proposed to connect the seven great rivers and basins of France by canals or deepened streams. Making a navigation of 2286 leagues to cost 490 millions of francs! Nine canals only are proposed at present. One by the Marne and Rhine will open via Holland a water route to the Black Sea. Another from Bordeaux to Bayonne. Nine Railroads also are proposed, extending in every direction from Paris.

COMMERCIAL REMARKS.

IMPORTS.

COTTON MANUFACTURES.—LONGCLOTHS, continue saleable, but at low prices, the grey from 3.80 @ 4 and white 4¼ to 4½ for fair goods; of these latter a parcel of 10,000 pieces was sold during the week at, we hear, from 4 40 @ 4.50.

COTTON YARN,—is more depressed than ever; the only transaction reported is of a small lot of inferior as low as $22 or even under, we believe.

WOOLLENS.—There has been a little more demand during the week for SPANISH STRIPES, with an advance of about 5 cents, 2.000 Pieces of a favorite mark having realized fully 1.40, and another parcel of fair quality 1 35. LONGELLS, are rather dull again at our quotations, but holders do not appear inclined to sell under. In CAMLETS, Dutch or English, there has been no transaction, but they are a little more enquired for.

METALS.—LEAD, has again declined a little; IRON, is also dull of sale.

STRAITS PRODUCE.—PEPPER, in moderate supplies, would realize $ 7. Another cargo of BETELNUT has arrived, but is has not yet been disposed of. TIN, and RATTANS, maintain their price under very limited importations.

RICE.—without any improvement in price

COTTON.—The demand for the better description of Bombay Cotton has revived, and sales of one or two parcels have been made at nearly the opening prices; the inferior kinds however keep down, the quantity being large, and holders anxious to realize. We have heard of no sale of either Bengal or Madras, the prices of which continue about the same.

OPIUM.—The market is again rather dull, owing, we believe, in some measure to considerable time-bargains falling due, which the Chinese have a difficulty of clearing; but as the stock on hand is not heavy—the supplies from both sides of India being kept back—the prices have not declined so much as was expected, and the deliveries, although not so brisk as last month, are going on freely, being up to the 22d, Patna old 263, new 374; Benares, old 26½, new 119; Malwa 1021; Total 1803½ Chests.

EXPORTS.

NANKIN RAW SILK.—Nothing doing in the new Silk, the holders still demanding upwards of $600, which, we understand, is not more than the prime-cost of the good silk.

TEA.—The musters of the new Teas continue to arrive slowly, but there seems at present little disposition to treat for them.

ART. I. Notices of the city of Borneo and its inhabitants, made during the voyage of the American brig Himmaleh in the Indian Archipelago, in 1837. From a Correspondent.

From the Chinese Repository, for August.

Friday, May 26th. A white flag has been hanging before the masjid during the day, and at 10 o'clock the drum was beaten. Saw a few persons, perhaps fifty, go to the mosque. But though the mosque seems to be neglected, all those about us, whose habits we have had an opportunity of observing, are careful to say their prayers several times a day, their faces of course turned towards Mecca. Among the slaves about the sultan's house, there is one whose appearance is more than ordinarily interesting. I have for some time been watching for an opportunity to speak to him. I find that he does not speak Malay, but Spanish. I ascertained from another slave, that this interesting youth is from the Sanish islands, and was brought hither by our old acquaintance raja Muda, and sold to the sultan for a mere trifle. The sale was doubtless only a sham to save appearances the slave being in fact a present to the sultan, to secure, if not his protection, at least his connivance, towards piracy and the slave trade.

May 27th. We have succeeded at last in purchasing some cloth; and this morning we presented to the sultan 15 dollars' worth of cloth and other articles, which we thought would be a liberal compensation for the rice we have eaten. He said he was pleased, and that it was proper we should make these offerings, as he had furnished us food for a long time. He then contrived to scrounge out of us as much more, by sending all his slaves to receive each a piece of cloth. There was no refusing them, as they came declaring, and no doubt truly, that the sultan had sent them. Last of all, the sultan himself came in and begged for more cloth. We were afterwards told that he took from the slaves the cloth we had given then. Today one of the courtiers requested me to write down and preserve his name, and also the names of several others, seven in all, who he said were the orang bichara, men near the sultan, to consult with and assist him, a sort of privy council. They are councellors worthy to surround such a sovereign. If seven men were to be taken at random from the dregs of any city, Christian or pagan, they would probably not be inferior to these seven wise men of Bruni. This privy council is a burlesque upon all dignity, when sitting, as their custom is, a few yards from the sultan, listening to his harangues on the superiority of Bruni to all the armies and navies of the white men, and occasionally receiving with profound respect the betel which he condescends to give them from his royal mouth.

Monday, May 29th. Captain F and captain M., with all their men and goods, left early in the morning for the vessels, our captain promising to send for us in the evening by the return of tide. Though I had been ill for two or three days, and was still weak, I ventured to accompany Mr. Lay to the hills, as it was to be the last time. Our walk was a long one, not less than 12 miles altogether. The path was much of the way through the forest. Sago trees were numerous. We passed a place where several men were washing the wood, previously chopped fine, to procure the edible sago. The higher ground and the sides of the hills, were covered with pine apples, which were growing abundantly, and without much labor of the husbandman. Passed over a number of small creeks, a single log being placed across, to serve as a bridge. Ascended and descended several high hills. From the top of one them, which we supposed to be 500 feet high, we had a noble view of the sea, the island of Labuan, the river's mouth, and a broad landscape of hills and valleys, skirted by high lands and distant mountains. On this hill, the natives who were with us pointed out a camphor tree. It was a stately looking tree, with a trunk at least a foot and a half in diameter, perfectly straight, and growing up to the height of fifty or sixty feet before it put forth branches. We passed several of the Kadyons, some of which we entered. Called upon an orang kaya, a title of distinction conferred upon some rich men (the words themselves signifying rich man). He was the chief man of the district. He treated us kindly, and gave us coffee and excellent plantains and pine apples. On our return we stopped by the side of a pleasant stream, (the Rianggi, before noticed,) under the shade of some large trees, to rest ourselves. Here Mr Lay struck his hammer upon a rock, and found it was coal. On further examination, it appeared that there was a large vein of superior bituminous coal, easily accessible, being not over a mile from the town, and capable of being transported most of the way by water. We had all things ready in the evening for our departure, but the boat did not come for us.

May 30th. A day of suspense and anxiety. We hear nothing of the boat, which according to promise should have come last evening. Two of the servants, who have shown themselves friendly to us, were put in the stocks yesterday. The reason of this probably is, that the sultan fears they may make their escape in our vessel. One of these men has acted as our cook, and, under the stimulus of kind words, and an occasional rupee, put into his hand by stealth, lest the sultan seeing is should take it from him, has done as well for us in the way of furnishing food as the allowance dealt out to him by the sultan could enable him to do. This fellow came to Bruni, a few years since, a free man, and the sultan finding him useful, has made a slave of him. Another man who came here from Sambas, and who, supposing he had a right to leave whenever he pleased, had engaged his passage to Singapore on board our vessel, and had laid in his stock of provisions, and put them on board the captain's boat, was ordered by the sultan to get out of the boat, and not to think of going away.

Two priests called. They were talkative and friendly. One of them asked for something, and on receiving a rupee, he thanked me, and seemed to be truly grateful. This man, and our poor old cook and his companion now in the stocks, are the only instances of even apparent gratitude which I have met with here. The sultan promised that his boat, which was going at night to the vessels, should take us along, but we were not surprised to find that this promise was not regarded. We have still some cloth and other articles, which he hopes to get hold of before we go. At midnight there was a brightness in the east, which, when we were first called up to see it, and before knowing the hour of the night, I imagined to be the rising of the sun. It resembled the Aurora Borealis, but exhibited none of the sudden changes and oscillations of light which are so conspicuous in the polar lights. It was a brilliant but steady light, extending some twenty degrees above the horizon, and confined to the one spot where I first saw it. I watched it about half an hour, and saw it gradually fade away. The sultan's people say that they saw the same appearance last night in the south. They wish to know what evil it portends.

May 31st. No boat. The sultan and some of his men declare that our vessel has sailed. Wh ther they really think so, or whether they say it only to vex us, we cannot tell. They at least seem pleased at our disappointment. Several pieces of cloth stolen. Mr. L. has had things stolen before. On the whole, though our situation here, particularly of late, has been sufficiently uncomfortable, both for body and mind, yet it is better for our object that we be in such circumstances, than to have been so situated that we could have commanded the services and good-will of all around us. By being on what they consider a level with themselves, they have had free access to us, have laid aside reserve, have exhibited their faults, and thus have presented to our view much more of their real character than we should otherwise have seen. The contradictory accounts given by different travelers and voyagers among the same people, often arise from one person's having seen the favorable, and another the unfavorable side of things. The picture of a barbarous people drawn by a shipwrecked sailor, cast friendless upon their shores, and first stripped of his clothing, and then reduced to slavery, would differ widely from the representations given of the same people by a captain or supercargo going among them with a well laden and well armed vessel, and thus having, for the time being, all power to command their smiles and their kind treatment.

Today the chief imam called and requested us to visit a sick friend of his, a pangeran. We found him in the last stage of disease of the lungs. The manner in which the sick man was treated by those around him, the kind and delicate attention which was paid him, could not but be gratifying to our feelings: and had this been the only scene we had witnessed in Bruni, we should have come away with a favorable impression in regard to the character of the people. The imam, just referred to, desired me to present his compliments and thanks to a gentleman in Singapore, (Mr. Tracy probably,) who had given books and shown kindness to the people of Bruni.

Several of the sultan's men have been to the mouth of the river, and on board captain M's brig, to search for the Spanish boy before spoken of, who it seems has made his escape. They returned without having found him. With all my heart I wish him safe deliverance from bondage.

We had at length obtained permission of Hasim to go in his boat to our vessel in the morning, and were just getting our effects on board a-going to go to Hasim's house, where we were to spend the night, and be ready for an early start. At this moment our captain arrived.

* * * * * * *

The sultan finding that we were about to leave, changed his manner, professed the highest regard for us, and hoped we should not be displeased at him. At 9 o'clock in the evening we took leave, and at half past two we reached the vessel, the distance being not less than 20 miles. With a grateful heart I laid my head once more upon my pillow.

DUTCH POSSESSIONS ON THE COAST OF BORNEO.

From a Correspondent.

As early as 1608 the Company had already established several factories at the mouth of rivers along the west coast. But the natives being a very treacherous race, and dissatisfied with seeing strangers taking possession of their trade, extirpated one settlement after the other. It was not until 1770 that Abdul Rachman invoked the aid of the Batavian Government in order to carry his ambitious views into effect. To reward the Dutch for the services they had done him in subjecting the neighbouring princes to his sway, he ceded to them the territory of Succadana, Pontianak and Sevangoe. From that period the Company obtained a firm footing, and its territory along the coast was more and more enlarged. At present the following places constitute their colony. The states of the Sultan of Sambas, in the interior of which the goldmines of Semini and Lara are found; the territory of Mumpawa, containing the goldmines of Mantrado and Mandor, famous all over the east; Pontianak, the most flourishing settlement on the coast; the districts of Landak and Sangou farther in the interior; Simpang under the government of a native prince; Matan, formerly called Succadana, once famous for its trade, and acknowledging the prince of Bantam as liegelord; Kandawangan in the interior. Some of these places are more or less under the administration of petty Rajahs, but Dutch influence is greatly preponderating and their sway is extending.

The whole population of all those territories amounts to 545,000, 380,000 of whom are Dayaks, 138,000 Malays and Bugis, and 27,000 Chinese. The income was in 1822—278,417 guilders, and the public expenditure 479,440. Since that the revenues have become much larger, and if they not yet cover the expences, it is expected that they will soon be quite sufficient and even leave a surplus.

The colony on the South coast is of an earlier date. In 1733 the Dutch took formal possession of Banjermassing, which they have retained until this very hour. This colony yielded in 1822, 171,928 guilders, whilst it cost the Government only 134,828.

The Dutch have repeatedly come in hostile contact both with the Chinese as well as the Dayaks. The former maintain obstinately their independence, whilst the latter fight upon the instigation of their Malay lords. Two years ago a very interesting exploring expedition under the command of a Colonel proceeded into the interior, but the results are not generally known. This will however not be the last attempt, for it has been satisfactorily proved by several travelling mineralogists in the pay of Government, that the soil contains rich gold and tin mines, and no means will be left untried to fetch these treasures from the boweis of the earth.

DUTCH TRADE WITH JAPAN. The question has often been asked, whether it would be prudent and advantageous to carry on a commerce with a country, where so many restrictions press upon the enterprize of the merchants and the foreign residents are reduced to honorable imprisonment. But it appears, that there is sufficient profit to cover all disgrace and trouble, and therefore the factory is continued. According to the official account of 1822 the outlay was 718,642 guilders for the articles of trade; expences of the factory 115,452 guilders; sundries 472; Total 834,577. The receipts were, sundries 43 guilders, sale of the copper, camphor, lackered ware etc, 958,764 guilders; clear profit 124,230 guilders, a sum sufficient to indemnify two ships for visiting that distant country.

DECLINE IN OUR EXPORT TRADE AND THE CORN LAWS.

Last week we showed how our export trade was gradually falling off. The year 1837, as compared with 1836, showed a decline in the declared value of exports of £11,143,634. But if we look backward, we shall find that for several years our export has been on the decline, though not so much for any one year as that of 1837, which is accounted for by our monetary unhingement. This great decline, however, for one year is not so alarming as the regular and stated decline of this important branch of trade. And to what are we to look as the principal cause of this decrease of business? To the CORN LAWS, doubtless, which operate by a constant exclusion of foreign grain from our ports to prevent our manufactured produce from finding its way to foreign grain growing countries. The extent of mischief inflicted by these laws must be enormous; and every attempt to impress the landlords of the country with a sense of their injustice and mischief, so as to produce a modification of them, has failed. The landlords are sturdy in their resistance to every measure that has any possibility of being interpreted as hostile to the operation of these laws. COL. SEALE'S Bill for grinding foreign grain in bond in the government warehouses, to be exported within two months after ground, under heavy penalties, and British grain to an equal value being taken in its stead, has been thrown out of the House of Commons during the past week. Nothing could be guarded more than this bill was to prevent the Corn Law advocates from taking alarm, still after all they would not listen to it; and the most cogent reason they could adduce was, "that the agricultural interest was quiet, and did not wish to be disturbed." When we consider that industry is suffering and that trade is suffering, while this interest is enjoying its repose, reminds us of some poor wretches, prisoners in the East Indies, who were dying of thirst in the Black Hole, and yet the governor, who had the care of the water, and without whose permission they could not have any, was asleep, and must not be disturbed! This, if not very sublime, is very beautiful; and can be construed into nothing else than insult added to the injury the CORN LAWS inflict. How long this great mercantile country will tamely submit to such oppression remains to seen. MR. HUME has moved for a return of all the places that have joined the Prussian commercial confederation, the amount of their population, and the dates when they joined. This confederation has arisen very naturally out of the Corn Laws; and when the return is made, we shall call attention to its particulars, and we have no doubt but they will show how great is the mischief inflicted on our commerce, and likely to be, by these odious regulations. English paper for May.

A FEW OBSERVATIONS ON THE TEA PLANT OF ASSAM.

From the report by M. C. A. Bruce.

The Tea plants in Assam have in general been found to grow, and to thrive best, near small rivers and pools of water, and in those places where, after heavy falls of rain, large quantities of water have accumulated, and in their struggle to get free, have cut out for themselves numerous small channels. The sort of land to which I allude will be perhaps better explained by means of a diagram. *

The dotted line shews the limit of the highest flooding. On the top of this land you must fancy a thick wood of all sorts and sizes of trees, and amongst these the Tea tree, struggling for existence; the ground here and there having a natural ditch cut by the rain water, which forms so many small Islands. The largest piece of ground that I have met with, I think was about 600 paces without a break. I also add a section of the little river Kahong, where the Tea plant abounds, exhibiting many small Islands, every one of which is covered with trees of various sizes, and the Tea among them; the land being never wholly inundated in the rains, though nearly so. This kind of land is called Coo-kah Mutty. I have never met with the Tea plants growing in the sun, but invariably under shade, in thick woods, or what we call treejungle, and only there, and in no other jungle whatever. It struggles for existence amongst so many other trees, that it becomes tall and slender, with most of its branches high up. The largest Tea tree I ever met with was 29 cubits high, and four spans round; very few I should say attain that size. I have taken great numbers of Tea plants from the jungles, brought them 4 to 8 days journey to my own house, and planted them in the sun, that is, without any shade; during the first six months the half of them died, at the end of the year about one quarter of what I had originally brought only lived; at the end of the 2d year there was still less; those that did live threw out leaves and blossoms, but the fruit never came to perfection. The plants I speak of were from one to three feet high; if they have grown any thing since they were transplanted, it has hardly been perceptible, either in height or thickness; many of them have had the advantage of a little shade from the trees in my garden, and those that had the most shade, find look healthier than those that had none, and they throw out more leaves. I have often read and heard of the China Tea plant growing no higher than three feet; their being planted in the sun and their leaves constantly gathered, I think accounts for it. A short time ago I requested and got permission from Government to try some experiments in my own way. About the middle of last March, I brought three or four thousand young plants from their native soil in the Muttuck country, about eight days journey, and planted them in the tree-jungles of this place, eight and ten close together, in deep shade. From 4 to 500 were planted in different places some miles from each other; in the latter end of May I visited them and found them as fresh as if they had been in their native soil, throwing out fresh leaves. As these thrived so well, last June I brought from the same place 17, 000 more young plants, and planted them in Coorkah Mutty, about two miles from this place in deep shade; they are now throwing out new leaves and thriving as well as could be expected, although the soil here is nothing like that from whence they were taken—in which point alone the places differ. To shew how very hardy they are I may mention, that they were in the first instance plucked out by the roots by the village people who were sent to bring them from their native jungles, put upright into baskets without any earth, brought two days journey on men's backs, put upright into canoes, a little common earth only being thrown amongst their roots, and were from seven to twenty days before they reached me; and then they had to be carried half a day's journey to the intended new plantation, and were four and five days with only a little moist earth at their roots, before they were finally put into the ground. And yet these plants are doing well; at least the greater part of them. I will give another instance of their hardiness. Last year the Government sent a deputation of three scientific gentlemen to examine the Assam Tea plant, Dr. Wallich, Mr Griffith, and Mr. McClelland,—the two former Botanists, the latter a Geologist. Dr. Wallich who conducted the deputation, requested me to accompany them, being the only European who had ever visited the Tea tracts, as the different localities are called. One day after having seen some Tea in company with these gentlemen, and as we were returning, I was informed by some natives of another patch or tract of Tea that had been cut down. We went and examined it, and found the plants just coming up, about 6 inches high. On enquiry we were told that the villagers took the Tea plant to be so much jungle, and therefore nearly cut all of it down close to the ground, and set fire to the whole, and then planted paddy or rice on the spot. The crop of paddy had just been cut and brought in; when we saw the plants, the shoots were coming up from the roots and old stumps, thick and numerous. Some Tea plants I noticed had only been cut a foot, and some two to four feet from the ground; all these threw out numerous shoots and leaves an inch or two below where they had been cut. I afterwards converted this piece of ground into a Tea garden on account of the Government, and now it is one of the finest I have; where there was formerly one Tea plant, there are now upwards of a dozen, the new shoots from the old cuttings forming a fine bush, and shewing a great contrast to some of the original trees, which I have permitted to stand, with slender trunks and a few branches only at the top. This tract or garden has yielded more Tea this season, than twelve times the same space of ground in the jungles would have done. I found that as the plants that had been cut down grew up again, the leaves acquired a yellowish tinge from their exposure to the sun, and were much thicker than those in the jungles; but this yellow tinge has worn off, and the leaves are now as green as those in the shade. As this tract answered so well by being cut down and set fire to, I tried the same experiment upon another tract close by, and it has come up to what I expected of it, eight to twelve new shoots having risen from the old stump, in the place of one. It is now a very fine Tea tract. Not knowing how this plan of cutting down might answer eventually, and how it might effect the plants, I took another tract in hand, allowed all the Tea plants to remain, but cut down all the other trees, large and small, that gave them shade, piled them up, and what I could not set fire to, I threw into the water courses. These Tea plants are doing well, but still each plant remains single, consequently has not many leaves, and is much in the same condition as when under shade. We have not had sufficient time to show what effect the sun may have on the leaves, and the Tea made from them. This tract has a curious appearance, the plants appearing hardly strong enough to support themselves now they are deprived of their friendly shade. I have some other tracts under experiment; some where I have permitted the jungle trees to grow, and only cleared away the brushwood and other small trees to admit the rays of the sun; others with very little shade. I have cut off branches of the Tea plants and laid them horizontally in the ground, with an inch or two of earth on them, and they have thrown out numerous shoots the whole length of the branch; other branches were simply pushed into the earth, and they have grown; but this was all in the shade. I do not think they would answer so well in the sun.

CORRESPONDENCE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE CANTON PRESS.

Sir.—Being a poor fellow and a simple, minded man, whose ideas do not rise above his business, i hope you will excuse the plain unvarnished way in which I relate to you the story of my griefs. I have received, Sir, great injury from the grand Hoppo of Canton and his ministers and they all refuse me satisfaction! I am ready to decide the question either in a boxing match or with my ell-wand, like a true English operative, as pistols make my blood freeze, and swords make me shiver. I would have no objections to fi'e a bill in chancery against my arch enemy the Hoppo, and (like a true born Englishman who loves fair play) give the d——d chinaman the advantage of "The Glorious Perfection of human reason," but I don't know that the superintendents have authority to settle questions of the kind, and the judge with the bigwig, now on his way out, will I fear arrive too late to redress my wrongs.

To come to the point Mr. Editor: a few days ago, I received my first consignment consisting of 2 Bales containing just 100 pieces of white longeloths known in this market as 66s and 72s. The Hoppo's minister, a strapping Tartar, full six feet high, dressed in blue crape, with a tirly wirly cap and button, and so ugly that he looked for all the world like an avatar of the evil one, classed my first consignment as 90 pieces No. one, and 10 pieces No. two! I thought "surely there must be some mistake in this" and got the linguist to intercede for me, but the big Tartar scowled and gave me a look that I translated "go to h—" you lousy English weaver!" Upon this I felt my English blood boil in my veins! my bunch of fives involuntarily curled up, and I told the linguist to give my defiance to the mandarin and tell him that "altho' surrounded by his followers. I'd waive every consideration as to time and place, and giving him all the benefit of his inches, decide this affair of honor on the spot;" The linguist soothed me with something that looked like reason, besides, just at the moment, the saying of "Catching a Tartar" occurred to me, else, I verily believe that my bones would have rattled on the mandarin's ivories! The linguist said "alla longeloth just now countee number one—cause number one number two just now alla same, number one pay one dollar duty, no hab got Consoo—inside, number two pay half dollar duty, —half dollar Consoo—truly countee alla same same!" Now I understood very little more of this than that two half dollars make a whole dollar, which is as plain to my humble capacity, as that one boh is equal to two benders. But, to make sure, I waited on the Hong-merchant, who said very nearly the same thing, only adding "my freen! your countee welly small pigeon—more better no so much bobbery!" and with this he bowed me out of his Hong in the civilest way imaginable!—With that noble spirit so worthy of Englishmen which will never suffer them to remain quiet under oppression, I got a friend to draw up a petition to the Hoppo stating the hardship of my case! In three or four days he brought me an answer to the effect "that the laws of the Hoppo were like the laws of the Medes and Persians, which never alter, that he, the Hoppo, was a just and upright man, that he had treated me with the utmost tenderness, and that I had better give him no more lip lest I might chance to catch the worst of it!" "Well" said I to myself "I'm blessed but this is like giving a dog a bad name, and killing him afterwards because he has it! I must go and seek advice from wiser heads than my own," so I went to a friend who is "old Canton" and laid my case before him. He said "that it is very true that No. 1. longcloth pays no consoo, whereas No. 2. longcloth does pay consoo, which brings the duties pretty nearly the same. There is, however, this difference, that if charged No. 1, the half dollar goes into the Hoppo's pocket, if charged No. 2, the half dollar goes into our own." My friend further expressed his wonder at the apathy of the foreigners generally, and at the Chamber of Commerce in particular, for said he, what is the case with your first consignment, is at this moment the case with every foreign merchant in Canton! Not only do they quietly allow this money to go into the Hoppo's treasury instead of into their own, but they allow the Hoppo just now to establish a precedent which he will be loath to give up, even when the debts of the bankrupt Hong-merchants shall be paid, and there shall be no occasion for continuing the Consoo charge! The Chinese have a proverb, "the first time we give it you as a favor, the second time you plead it as a right," and they are continually casting this in the teeth of the foreigners as a reason for granting them no favors. Why then cannot the foreigners retort it upon the Hoppo, especially when backed by the edict of the Vice-roy which expressly states that there are fixed laws and that there shall be no innovations! Now for my part" said my friend" I remember in the Company's time, all cloth of the 66 and 72 qualities used to be classed as No. 2. Three years ago, if cloth of this quality was taxed as 3 or 4 ps. of No. 1 and 6 or 7 ps. of No. 2, it was accounted enormously high; these facts are fresh in the memory of every Hong-merchant and foreign merchant in the place! But if the foreigners tamely submit to have this cloth taxed as No. 1, and leave the spiritless Hong-merchants to fight their battles for them, they will find the truth of the old saying which being interpreted means, that it is a very easy matter now to let the Hoppo go on increasing his charges, but if you sit by calmly and suffer it, you will find it no easy job to get matters brought back to their old footing!"

——"Facilis descensus Averni

So spake my friend, and it seemed to me as if there was a little reason in what he said. It was certainly most consolatory for me to learn that others were in the same situation as myself! Only I felt annoyed at the insults heaped upon me personally! I have got a stomacher from a petty mandarin—a cross buttock from a saucy Hong merchant,—and my head is at this moment in chancery to the Grand Hoppo! and yet no satisfaction! no revenge! What would you advise me to do?

I am, Mr. Editor,

Your Humble Servant to command,

SHIRTINGS PIECE GOODS.

N B. The linguist who assisted me on the occasion was a regular goodun, and a very honest feller. I had him home with me when he took off a quart of Alsop without winking! This with me, was quite conclusive, for I have travelled a good deal, Mr Editor, and, blow me, if I ever know'd a cove who chinked the pewter like a gentleman, as turned out a rogue yet.

S. P.

CANTON PRESS.

Saturday, 8th Sept.

We have had several arrivals from Bombay and Singapore, as will be seen from our shipping report; The Mary left the latter port on the 23d of last month, but, though from a private source, we have received the Free Press Price Current of the 16th, our papers yet come to hand are of no later date than the 8th August. The Vansittart, we hear, spoke H. M. S Larne in about 16° North, but the latter had not succeeded as yet in hearing any thing of the fate of the Antonio Pereira.

From a notice circulated by the Chamber of Commerce we learn that the Co hong has through that body informed the community, that a security-merchants charge for a ship secured by him will in future be as follows, viz:

On Rice-ships	..	....	$ 1,789-50
On Country-ships	....	...	„ 700 —
On Company's-ships	....	....	„ 1,000 —
On American-ships	....	....	„ 700 —

This charge on Rice-ships is the whole of the harbour dues to which they are liable, they being, by imperial order, free from all duty, but the local authorities have contrived to levy, in various charges, the above sum. On the other three descriptions of ships the above charge made by the Hong-merchants is over and above the measurement dues and cumshaw, the former paid according to the size of the vessel, the latter being the same on all vessels and amounting to 1,600 Taels. The Hong-merchants charge covers linguist and compradore fees and a variety of other charges payable to petty mandarins. We suppose the class of vessels here called country ships to comprize all English or other vessels, whether from India or Europe, of less size than the ships formerly employed by the Company, and of which a number is still in this trade and retaining their old denomination of the Company's.

The Co-hong have also answered the letter addressed to them by the Chamber of Commerce complaining of the many grog-shops in Hog-lane, to which sailors are enticed, and getting there drunk in bad liquor, not only commit all kinds of noisy excesses, but also ruin their health. The Co-hong promise to exert themselves to shut up these shops.

We are informed that a new weekly paper, to be called "Buletin do Governo" is about to be published in Macao, subject to a Censorship. We hear that the Gentleman who was supposed to be the Editor of the Macaista Imparcial, has been appointed to the management of this new journal, which will be entirely under the control of the local authorities of Macao.

THE NEW CONSU TAX. Our readers will find, in another column, a letter from our correspondent SHIRTING PIECEGOODS, complaining of higher duties being now levied on white Cottons than have been customary hitherto, and that this extortion is partly owing to the manner in which the new Consu-tax is levied on these articles, for though No. 1 white cottons pay a dollar per piece duty, and No. 2 only 50 cents, yet they are in reality subject to the same payment, of a dollar each, for the Cohong levy half a dollar on the inferior, and nothing on the superior quality. The great difference is however that in one instance is the duty paid to the Government altogether, and in the other one half of it goes towards the Hong-yune or Consu-tax out of which the bankrupt debts are to be paid, and any unjust decision by rating as first quality the second of white cottongoods, is a fraud committed on the fund, and, through it, on the creditors of the bankrupt merchants. It is therefore of the greatest importance, that no such unfair decisions from the Hoppo should be submitted to, and if the promise on the part of the government, to expose musters of the different qualities at the Consu-house, has been complied with, there can be no difficultty whatever in the settlement of such disputes. But we fear that such musters, as was the case with the last thus deposited, would soon be used for the Hoppo's or his friends necessities, and the quality remain as open to discussion as before The easiest way of settling what quality was meant to be number one, two, or three, would be to count the threads of a square of a given size, and have their number registered. This may however perhaps be a new method to the Chinese, and therefore not palatable to them, to whom moreover an uncertainty in all such affairs must be more pleasing, as leaving more openings for extortion.

Being on the subject of duties, we are naturally led to review those lately imposed on the foreign trade by the Hong-merchants, by them called Hong yune (i e. Hong necessities). For the following statement as to their amount we are indebted to a gentleman who has taken much pains to get at the truth, and in which, probably he has been successful, though he does not vouch for their perfect correctness.

The following then is the tariff:

Tea	..	..	..	per Picul	T. 1, 4
Cotton	..	..	..	„ „	—, 6
Silk (Nanking)	..	..	..	„ „	7,
„ Canton	..	..	..	„ „	2,
White or gray Longcloths No. 3 p. Pe.					$ —, 25
White	do			„ 2 „ „	—, 50
Longcills	..	..	..	„ „	—, 50
Woollen-cloth	..	..	..	„ „	1, —
Cotton yarn	..	..	..	per Picul	„ 3, —
Pepper	..	..	..	„ „	—, 4 1
Betelnut	..	..	..	„ „	—, 20
Tin	..	..	..	„ „	—, 75

Ivory	..	..	..	„ „	1, 50
Iron	..	..	..	„ „	2, —
Quicksilver	..	..	..	„ „	—, 20
				„ „	2, —

On most articles this duty is equal to about 5 per Cent on the market value, but on Long cloths, No. 2, it amounts to 10 per cent, and to nearly that on the present value of Cotton-yarn. On Iron also it is very high, whilst on Quicksilver again it is not 2 per cent. This duty falls heavy on Cotton, being nearly one dollar per Picul. The duty which will yield most is that on Tea, equal to $ 2 per Picul; thus estimating the whole annual exports at 400,000 Piculs, and they exceeded this in 1836-37. would alone give the large sum of $ 800,000.

The article of exports next in importance is that of RAWSILK, of which, taking the annual exportation of Nankin silk to be about 10,000 Piculs at 7 Taels or 10 dollars, the duty would be equal to „ 100,000

CANTON SILK. 5,000 Piculs @ 3 „ 15,000

Of Imports it may be estimated as follows.

COTTON 600,000 Piculs @ 6 m. „ 502,000

COTTON YARN, 18,000 Piculs. @ 3 „ 54,000

LONGCLOTHS, of which one half will probably come under the denomination of No. 2—say 70,000 Ps. „ 35,000

Do., one quarter will be grey and No. 3 @ 25 cents „ 8,000

WOOLLENS. Broad cloths and Spanish Stripes, say 60,000 Ps. „ 60,000

LONG-ELLS say, 100,000 Pieces @ 50 cents „ 50,000

Other smaller articles, such as PEPPER, BETELNUT, TIN, LEAD, EBONY, SANDALWOOD, IRON, QUICKSILVER, FISHMAWS, etc., will probably yield a duty of about „ 122,000 for the Hong-yune duty, wherewith to defray the necessities of the Co-hong. This duty is, of course, independent of the regular imperial duties; the Hong-merchants call it a Commission, and say that out of it they defray the numerous calls made upon them by the Imperial Government and their servants, whose extortions, they say, amount to 700,000 dollars per annum. But even, if this be really the case, the residue is much larger than what they can possibly require for the payment of the bankrupt merchants debts, which do not quite come up to $ 300,000 per annum. Whether they mean that the Hong-expenses of their respective establishments are likewise to be paid out of it, we know not, but the excessive amount of the duty seems to hint at it;—moreover the name they give it, as their commission or remuneration seems to justify this supposition. It would therefore appear that the Hong-merchants wish to appear in their connexion with the foreign trade, as brokers only, content with a fixed percentage. That they should however continue acting as such the very nature of their establishment forbids, and as soon as they feel that either through the possession of property of their own, or of credit, they can control the market, they become speculators; and from their privilege are enabled to injure the foreign trade very sensibly. There can be little doubt but that the system of the Co-hong has an injurious influence upon the trade generally, and we heartily wish it's discontinuance. How this latter is to take place it is difficult to say, though of late the mode of transacting business with them seems to have somewhat changed; they are, generally, no longer trusted to such large amounts, neither by foreigners, nor the natives; this has caused them to confine themselves more generally to strict agency; their want of credit has brought a great many Chinese into contact with foreigners, and the trade carried on between them, undermines that of the Co-hong; and, finally their exposure to extortion and vexation of all kinds from the local authorities renders it extremely difficult to keep their ranks filled up by any but such as have nothing to lose. We can therefore but repeat what we have attered many times before, that the Free-trade must, at no very distant period, subvert the bulwark which under the name of the Co-hong the Chinese have hitherto opposed to the more general intercourse between their nation and the white men from the west.

Thus giving a total of $ 1,730,000

What, however, we would recommend most particularly to our neighbours, is to watch the Co-hong in the collection and appropriation of the Consu-tax, that it may really be put to the use it is partly intended, viz. that of paying the creditos of the bankrupt hongs. It is in the recollection of most that similar Consu-taxes have before been levied for the payment of the debts of former Hong-merchants, but that it is generally understood now that, after paying those debts, the tax was continued to provide for the always increasing extortions of the Imperial court and the local authorities. The article alone of Ginseng for the court, which the Hong-merchants are obliged to provide, is a heavy sum; moreover, the repairs of the yellow river cost annually a very large sum; and many presents the Co-chong is besides obliged to send to Peking. The extortions of the local authorities are equally heavy, and, if any more barbarian eyes threaten the Provincial City with a visit, but little will remain in the fund wherewith to satisfy the creditors who have the only just claim upon it. It is said that the late mission by preparations, to repel the British squadron, in case it should attempt to force a passage up the river, have cost the Co hong upwards of 100,000 Taels. This expense, we presume, is still going on, we hear at least that the war-junks still remain at and near Macao to watch the motions of the British Admiral, who has, for some time, been quietly anchored at Tung koo Bay. The best way to prevent the fund being squandered upon objects with which the foreign trade has nothing to do, is, to press upon the Hong-merchants the necessity of making distributions among the creditors of the bankrupt hongs as soon as any sufficiently large sum shall have accumulated. This will prevent its being diverted for other purposes, and at same time compel the merchants to collect the duty in cash, instead of the former inefficient manner of debiting each Hong with the whole amount, but calling for payment only such quota as the expenditure of the year warranted.

THE LOSS OF THE RUBY. We mentioned in our last the circumstance of this vessel having foundered at sea, and having since seen the protest of the carpenter, William Crail, who with 35 lascars had left the ship in a boat, and was picked up by the Jupiter, we proceed to give from it the following abstract. The Ruby passed Anjer on the 25th May, and about 20 days after, when, at about 5 o'clock in the afternoon, the carpenter sounded the well, he found six feet water, though, when, as customary, he sounded in the foregoing watch the vessel had no more than 15 or 16 inches, her usual quantity. It became evident that she had sprung a leak, though the crew was unsuccessful in finding it. To keep the ship afloat, Cargo was thrown overboard, and the pumps were worked incessantly for five days and six nights, in hopes of reaching the Seychelle Islands, when at last the crew took to the boats, and abandoned the ship, which went down about half an hour after. Capt. Randle, with about 13 of the crew, took one of the cutters, while the mate, with the same number of men, took the other, and the carpenter and 34 lascars got into the long-boat. The boats kept together during the first three days, but parted company during bad weather then coming on, nor did the longboat's crew see anything again of the two cutters, and the latter were, as already said, picked up by the Jupiter, Capt. Elder, bound for Bombay, when about 180 miles to the eastward of the Seychelle Islands.

From the evidence of the crew it appears moreover that the vessel foundered on about the 20th June, about 900 miles to the eastward of the Seychelles Islands, and was going 8 knots an hour when her having sprung the leak was discovered. Hopes are entertained that the two cutters will have reached the Seychelles in safety. The loss of this vessel is likely to be severely felt in the bazar of Bombay, remittances in bullion having been made to native merchants there, many of whom are not insured. A few packages of gold leaf, altogether 43, landed by Mr. Crail is, we are told, all that has been saved of the valuable cargo unless Capt. Randle reaches land, he having also taken charge of a quantity of the precious metal. The whole loss of this vessel is estimated at about 9 lakhs of Dollars.

On Thursday last, at about 3 o'clock of the afternoon, during a very short thunderstorm, the lightning struck and killed a barber while engaged in his profession in the street Se-ying-ho. The razors and number of other iron instruments there people carry with them, probably attracted the electric fluid.

Statistics of France.—Territory.—France extends 537½ miles in greatest length, and in greatest breadth 512½ miles; the circuit of her extreme boundaries comprises 2500 miles, and her superficial are contains 202 500 square miles, in which number are included 25,458 square miles of forest land.

Forests.—The most extensive forests are situated in the eastern and southern parts; in those provinces which are also the most fertile. Of the whole forest land of France, an extent of rather more than 4210 square miles is the property of the State; about 7120 belong to corporations and public institutions; 247 to the crown; 720 to the royal princes; and 12,162 to private individuals. In the forest thirty-seven kinds of trees are found; they grow to a height of between thirty and forty feet: only seven species are applicable to ship building and carpenter work. The yearly produce of all the forest land of France is valued at 4,000,000.

It must be a source of consolation to his bereaved relatives to know, that if the most assiduous attentions of friends, and the best medical skill could have sufficed to arrest the destroyer, they never would have been called upon to deplore his demise in a foreign land.

COMMERCIAL REMARKS.

IMPORTS.

COTTON MANUFACTURES.—Some sales of LONGCLOTHS have been effected during the week, both of Grey and White, but at about 10 cents decline on previous rates. COTTON YARN. The inferior descriptions are as unsaleable as ever; but there has been a little more inquiry within these few days for good yarn. CHINTZES; one or two small parcels have been sold within the week, of good quality and fair patterns at from 4½ a 5 $.

WOOLLENS.—The market for SPANISH STRIPES, is again a little more languid, the dealers for the present being fully supplied. LONGELLS, are also rather duller; for CAMLETS the demand appears to be reviving a little.

METALS.—LEAD is rather down but we have heard no sales of it or IRON.

STRAITS PRODUCE.—PEPPER is advancing from the short supplies, and would now fetch 7½ $. BETELNUT cannot be quoted higher than 3 $ TIN continues the same; RATTANS rather lower.

RICE,—remains at its former low prices

COTTON.—In the Bengal and Madras staples, of which the stock is very small, there have been no transactions, but the nominal price is rather lower. Several sales of Bombay have taken place of the middling and inferior kinds at the previous low rates or rather under. The holders of the finer kinds, of which the supply is moderate, are firm for an advance; the present rates may be given at 9.3 @ 9.5.

OPIUM.—The principal demand for Malwa for the supply of the Junks having ceased, and the news of the advance having induced parties to send it on more freely, there has been a considerable decline, and sales to some extent have been made at 640 @ 650, and for a time it may be lower. Patna on the contrary is advancing, from the stock being short, and in few hands. Sales were made we belive yesterday even rather above our quotation for new Patna. For deliveries last month see above.

EXPORTS.

NANKIN SILK.—There is nothing new to report. We do not hear of much more having arrived, and the holders are not at all inclined to relax in their demand for high prices.

TEA.—The only movement we hear of in the tea-market is a purchase of 2 chops of the new Caper at 21 and 25 Tales, the latter for 10 Caty boxes. The prices are about 20 per Cent above the rates at which the market opened last year, and fully 50 above those to which it subsequently declined.

ART. I. Notices of the city of Borneo and its inhabitants, made during the voyage of the American brig Himmaleh in the Indian Archipelago, in 1837. From a Correspondent.

From the Chinese Repository, for August,

June 1st. At 10, A. M. pangeran Hasim, with 50 or 60 attendants and slaves, arrived. Captain F. arrived at the same time, and a scene occurred which must have made a most unhappy impression upon the minds of Hasim and the other natives who witnessed it. * * * * * * * * * *

The Brunians though troublesome enough on board the vessel, are far less so than on their own ground. Many of them are begging one thing or other; but usually one or two refusals silences, without offending, them. After drinking wine, for which they manifest a fondness (notwithstanding their Mohammedanism) those who before had too much sense of propriety to beg, waxed bold and became beggars like the rest. Even Hasim sent one of his men to request that I would give him a pair of pantaloons, a request which was readily complied with, as Hasim was a great man, and had never before asked for any thing, although he had received from us several pieces of nankin as a present.

June 2d. Persons on board most of the day trading, or talking about trading. They are excessively cautious and tedious in making a bargain, and their word is not to be relied on. They break their promisses, and then seem not at all ashamed of what they have done. They are not worse, however, in commercial transactions, than some who are called Christians. Indeed it must be admitted, to the disgrace not of Christianity or of civilizations, but of some who live under their protection, that there are persons in Christian countries who are in all respects worse than the people of Brunì.

June 3d. Before sunrise Kini Balu distinctly visible, N. E. ¼ E., its well defined outline projected upon a deep red sky, distant more than a hundred miles. At sunrise we weighed anchor, but did not leave the port till the next day.

The question naturally arises, What is the origin of the people of Brunì? From what country or countries have they come? This question has often been proposed to the better informed among them, and the reply uniformly received has been, that the Brunians came from Johore. They further say that Menangkabau was the parent country of their race; that from Menangkabau the Malays emigrated to Johore, thence to Malaca, Rhio, Linga, and Brunì, and from Brunì to Sambas and Matan. The time of this emigration we have no means of ascertaining except from the number of rajas that they reckon. According to one of the most intelligent pangerans, the number of rajas who have reigned in Brunì is twenty-nine. Another pangeran makes the number twenty-four, and others thirty. Allowing fifteen years for a reign, which is probably sufficient in a country like this, we shall be carried back to about the year 1400 as the period when the Malays established themselves here. According to some of the pangerans, the Brunians derive their origin from two other sources besides Johore. One of these they call the bangsa Mrip (Birip race) which came from the country Type, the other the bangsa China (Chinese race). They could give no information concerning the country which they called Type.

The government of Borneo proper, in theory, approaches near to a pure despotism, all power being supposed to rest in the hands of the sultan. And were the sultan a man of sufficient talent to make the most of the advantages of his position, and were the higher pangerans at the same time inferior men, his will would be the only will. But practically, the government is a feudal aristocracy, the power of the sultan and of each of the nobles depending upon personal ability, the number of dependents and slaves, and amount of wealth. In theory the government is hereditary also, but only partially so in fact. Much depends upon the qualifications and popularity of the different aspirants to the sovereignty. In the event of the present sultans death, there can be little doubt that Hasim would be his successor, although there are five persons whose claims on the ground of inheritance would stand before his, viz. two brothers, and Yusuf the sultan's uncle by the father's side. Hasim being his uncle on the mother's side. There seems to be nothing like a regular tax for the support of government. The sultan is supported partly by voluntary tribute, which is probably very small, partly by the privilege which he posesses of calling upon all persons for any labor or service which he may require, partly by the labor of his own slaves, and partly by traffic. The pangerans support themselves by traffic and the labor of their slaves.

The territory over which the sultan claims and exercises control, extends from the north end of the island to the district of Sambas, a distance of 50 miles, his authority being confined mostly to the coast. Formerly the territory of Brunì extended around on the eastern side of the island, into the straits of Makassar, embracing half the coast of the whole islands. The eastern coast was long since ceded to Sulu, and by Sulu to the English.

Of the number of inhabitants subject to Brunì it is impossible to give anything more than a guess. To put down a mere conjecture is undesirable, and yet it may be better than nothing in the absence of precise knowledge. The limits below which the population will not fall, and above which it will not be found to rise, may be fixed at 80,000 and 180,000. In this conjectural estimate the Moruts (Dayaks), over whom the sultan claims authority are not included. The reply of the pangerans to all questions in reference to the amount of population, was: 'Allah tau, orang-ta'hulih bilang' (God knows, but men cannot count them). They seemed to have no definite conceptions of numbers beyond a few tens of thousands. They inquired as to the number of the English, and when told that their number is twenty millions, they said the subjects of Brunì are more numerous.

A large proportions of the inhabitants of the town are slaves. Many of these slaves have been purchased from the Ilanun pirates. Others have been reduced to slavery in consequence of debt or crime. The ordinary price of a slave is said to be 50 dollars. The debasing effects everywhere attendant upon slavery, both on master and servant, are visible here. A middle class, consisting of the younger and weaker brothers of the chief pangerans, and of a few of plebeian birth, also suffer in consequence of slavery—being thrown out of employment, and made dependent upon their relatives or some great man to whom they have attached themselves.

Piracy does not now exist here, at least the subjects of the sultan, strictly so called, are not allowed to engage in piracy. The port, however, is open to pirates, who come here to dispose of their booty, and to obtain their supplies. Under the last sultan it was notorious for piracy. The present government have adopted a different policy, partly from fear of the European powers, and partly, probably, from a persuasion, on the part of Hasim at least, that commerce in the long run is more profitable. The very name of Singapore is a salutary restraint upon the people of Brunì. Having formerly assassinated a Dutch resident, and having in their piratical excursions captured and carried into slavery many of the inhabitants of the Philippines, they are thus by their bad character excluded from Dutch and Spanish ports, and Singapore is the only mart to which they dare resort. For a few years they have taken, and will probably continue to take, some pains to preserve a fair reputation, in order that their commercial intercourse with Singapore may not be interrupted. The seeds of piracy, however, are still in their minds. With most of the inhabitants of the Archipelago, except the Javanese, piracy, especially when committed against white men and Christians, is popular, and it is too deeply wrought into their minds and habits to be easily eradicated. The influence of the Arabs, in connection with the treatment often received from men bearing the Christian name, has tended to foster this spirit of freebooting. The commerce of Brunì is carried on chiefly with Singapore, and employs 40 or 50 prahus. Besides the prahus, a country or a European vessel is occasionally seen here. Chinese junks have long since forsaken the port. The staple article of export is pepper. The quantity annually furnished is said to be about 4,000 peculs. Camphor of the best quality is obtained to the amount of a few peculs. The articles imported are cotton goods, silks, brass wire, brass plates, iron, iron-cooking utensils, &c. Opium, by a wise prohibition of the government, is excluded. Only a very small quantity finds its way into the country by smuggling. All business is carried on by barter. Our vessel was well supplied with dollars, but no use could be made of them in trading. Pieces of iron are employed as coin in buying articles of small value, such as fruits and fish in the market. The small traffic of the market is chiefly in the hands of women, who meet together in their little canoes, sometimes in one part of the town, and sometimes in another. Comparing the statements of Leyden, Hamilton, Hunt, and others, with the present condition of Brunì, it would appear that commerce has declined during the last century. This would be the necessary result of such a government as that of the present sultan. According to Foster, as quoted by Leyden, there were seven Amoy junks at Brunì, in 1775. It was natural that the wealth of the Chinese should have tempted the cupidity of the government, and that their influence should have excited its jealousy, and then followed oppression and the ruin of the Chinese trade.

The Brunian exhibits some skill in manufactures. They succeed well in filagree work. Their krises (dirks) are elegant, and of superior temper. They make sarongs of great beauty. But the article of most extensive manufacture is brass cannon. Large quantities of the Chinese brass coin called cash, have been melted up in making cannon. All the brass pieces in town, (most of which are made here) are said to be worth several hundred thousand dollars. Indeed the wealth of the place consists almost exclusively in cannon, krises, and slaves, so that a through change in the customs and character of the people, from wrong to right, would go far towards annihilating all that they now call property. Almost every householder is to some extent a manufacturer and a mechanic. He makes his own cloth, his own kris, his own boat, builds and keeps in repair his own house, and thus relies in a great measure upon himself and his dependents for every article which he needs.

Roman Catholic Religion in China.

It is now fifteen years since the Roman Catholic priests were banished from Pekin, and sent with all those who were discovered in the Chinese provinces, to Macao. Yet the French monks of the order of St. Lazarus, among whom there is no want of money, union, or enthusiasm, have been secretly laboring for the maintenance of the Roman Catholic Church in China, and their exertions have succeeded even beyond their own expectations. For some years they have annually sent two or three young priests to China, who quietly proceed to the headquarters of the Missions in the interior of the country, and join in the work of conversion. There are now Roman Catholic communities in all the provinces; and in many places there are public chapels, where service is performed uninterruptedly, since the mission have had the good sense to train native Chinese as priests. In furtherance of this subject, the mission have founded two seminaries; one of these establishments is for the southern provinces, and is situated in Macao, whence the Chinese candidates are sent to Manila, where they are ordained by the Archbishop. On their return they are sent into the interior of the country, where they live in the midst of their flocks as peaceably as ecclesiastics in Europe. The other seminary is in Tartary, beyond the wall of China. In this establishment the priests destined for the northern provinces and for Pekin, are educated; for, incredible as it may appear, there is in Pekin a Catholic community amounting to more than 24,000 members! There are at this moment two French priests in the community at Pekin; for the chief direction of ecclesiastical matters cannot yet be intrusted to the Chinese priests. The provincials are therefore always Europeans, though the necessity of averting the suspicion of the government obliges them to travel clandestinely, and often places very great difficulties in the way of the mission. Christian worship is publicly performed, in many of the principal towns. In Tschingtufu, the capital of the province of Setchuen, Christians are interred in the church-yard and cover their graves are erected crosses and other symbols of Christianity. The government, when not suspecting the presence of Europeans, observe the most perfect indulgence towards Christians. Christian communities, too, being generally remarkable for moral and peaceable conduct, are liked by the local authorities, who having once tolerated them are greatly interested in preventing their detection by higher quarters, because they would then be called to account for their previous want of vigilance. When, therefore, a community is once formed, it incurs very little risk of being molested. An additional guarantee of its security exists in the peculiarity of legal forms in China. The first attempt to establish a community are not very readily appreased, because the transport of suspected persons to the seat of the higher tribunal must be at the expense of the local authorities, who are therefore naturally disposed to wink at such matters, as long as they do not apprehend disturbance or publ preachings, which might render them responsible. The reason why so little is known respecting the Chinese Mission is, that formerly the missionaries were chosen from among the most ignorant of the clergy, and on their return they were unable to write intelligible accounts of their proceedings. The Lazarists, however, have seen their error for some time past, and have sent out persons who, in addition to the possession of theological knowledge, have, like the Jesuits in earlier times, passed through a regular course of scientific education. They have now in China astronomers, botanists, &c. from whom interesting narratives may be looked for. It may reasonably be expected that ere long the Roman Catholic Mission will recover the extensive influence which they enjoyed in former times. They have, indeed, already established themselves on a better footing than they have maintained since the expulsion of the Jesuits, and should they hereafter succeed in secretly forming a native Christian clergy, competent to dispense with the direct superintendence of European provincials, Christianity will undoubtedly make rapid and uninterrupted progress for the government seeks to suppress it not on religious grounds, but because it is an instrument of European influence. This observation is sufficiently corroborated by the following curious fact. Some time ago the protestant missionaries distributed on the coast of Fokien 20,000 copies of Bibles, prayer books, catechisms, &c. translated into the Chinese language. These books were sent to the Emperor who immediately issued a very severe decree on the subject of the distribution of foreign publications. But, singularly enough, this decree made no mention of the religious books, and merely referred to some of the publications of the Society for the Diffusion of Useful Knowledge, consisting of treaties on geography, history, politics, &c. which had been distributed also with the bibles.—M. A FEW OBSERVATIONS ON THE TEA PLANT OF ASSAM.

From the report by M. C. A. Bruce.

I have the pleasure of furnishing a map which I have made of all the Tea tracts I have discovered. Since it was composed several more tracts have been discovered, which I have not had time to enter. It should be observed, that south from Sudderah to the Debree river is generally termed Chyquah. South of Debree river is called the Muttuck country, as far the Burro Dehing river. South of the Burro Dehing, river is situated Rajah Purundah Sing's country. From the hill and river called Jowrah Poong, which is nearly at the source of the Debree river, to a place called Beesa, south of the above hill, on the Burro Dehing river, near the little river Juglow Pauney, is called the Singpho country, being all to the east of the above line. Now it will be perceived, that not a single Tea tract has been discovered north of the Debree river, and that they are all on the south side of it. The Muttuck country, which I have traversed most, appears to me to be one vast Tea country, and I feel confident that not one half of its Tea tracts have been yet discovered. The whole of the soil of the Muttuck country appears well adapted for Tea; I have taken particular notice of it, digging and examining it at every place where I have stopped. Great numbers of the Tea tracts have been cut down in sheer ignorance by the natives and converted into paddy fields. I know of three tracts, where the paddy had been collected, and the Tea plants had sprung up again; when these are neglected they all rise up into thick wood jungle. Several of these places have been pointed out to me by some of the old inhabitants. Almost every inhabitant of the Muttuck country know now the Tea leaf, seeing how much we prize it, and getting little rewards from me when they bring in a branch from any new tract. There is plenty of Tea in Rajah Purundah's country, but he is too lazy to trouble himself about it; he is not even acquainted with those places laid down in my map. I have lately heard of a very extensive tract in his country, said to be as large as a dozen tracts put together. Several tracts are 800 paces long and nearly the same in breadth, and others only 100; but they have not all been properly examined, and may prove much larger. All these tracts can be enlarged almost to any extent from the numerous seedlings that are found amongst the Tea plants, from the great number of seeds that can be collected every year, and from the immense number of cuttings that may be planted. With respect to the seedlings, I have sown numerous seeds at Sudderah in the sun; many have come up and appeared to thrive very well for the first year, but there was an insect, the Mole Cricket I think it is called, which used to nip off the young and tender leaves, and carry them into a hole under ground near the root of the plant; and I never succeeded in getting one plant to live. But last year I sowed some seeds in my garden under the shade of trees and bushes, they have come up and are thriving very well. The seeds I sowed in the sun last year, in the Muttuck country, and in their native soil in one of my Tea tracts, have also come up and are doing well. The Tea tracts in the Singpho country are much larger than those in the Muttuck. The Singpho have known and drank the Tea for many years, but they make it in a very different way from what the Chinese do. They pluck the young and tender leaves and dry them a little in the sun; some put them out into the dew and then again into the sun three successive days, others only after a little drying put them into hot pans, turn them about until quite hot, and then place them into the hollow of a bamboo, and drive the whole down with a stick, holding and turning the bamboo over the fire all the time, until it is full, then tie the end up with leaves, and hang the bamboo up in some smoky place in the hut; thus prepared the Tea will keep good for years. A good way further east they dig holes in the earth, line the sides with large leaves, boil the Tea leaves, throw away the decoction, put the leaves into the hole, which they cover over with leaves and earth, and then allow the whole to ferment; after which it is taken out, filled into bamboos, and in this manner prepared taken to market. There Singaphoe pretend to be great judges of Tea. All their country abounds with the plant, but they are very jealous and will give no information where it is to be found, like the Muttuck people. All the Singpho territories are overrun with wood jungle, and if only the under wood was cleared, they would make a noble Tea country. The soil is well adapted for the plant. Nearly three years ago I by accident left a few Singpho Teaplants, which I had carried away, on the banks of the New Dehing, three days journey from the place where I had got them; they were discovered by some Singpho friends of mine and stuck into the earth; and there they are now growing, as if they had never been transplanted, and notwithstanding they were put in the shade. The Singpho country is a fine one, but as long as that nation can get the Tea leaves from the jungles, they never will cultivate the plant; the country is thinly inhabited by a set of men, who are always fighting amongst themselves. The Tea is said to grow on the top of the Nagah Hills, marked in my map, South of Ningrew, on the banks of the Burro Dehing. All the Tea tracts laid down are in the vallies.

The above observations have been thrown together in a hurry, without much order. I therefore hope that allowances will be made for their imperfections. I may at some other time resume the subject if it is thought of any interest.

I was delighted with an observation of a Boston merchant who had made several voyages to China. He dropped a remark by his own fireside on the narrowness which causes us to conclude, avowedly or silently, that, however well men may use the light they have, they must be very pitiable, very far behind us, unless they have our philosophy, our Christianity, our ways of knowing the God who is the Father of us all, and the Nature which is the home of us all. He said that his thoughts often wandered back, with vivid pleasure, to the long conversations he had enjoyed with some of his Chinese friends on the deepest themes of philosophy, and the highest truths of religion, when he found them familiar with the convictions, the emotions, the hopes which, in religious New England, are supposed to be derivable only from the Christianity of the region. His observation gave me intense pleasure at the time I heard it; and now, though I have no such outlandish friends as the Chinese appear to narrow imagination, I can tell him, from a distance of three thousand miles, that his animating experience is shared by other minds.

Retrospect of Western Travel by Miss Martineau.

ARRIVAL OF THE GREAT WESTERN.

The following appeared in part of our impression yesterday:—

BRISTOL KING'S ROAD,
TUESDAY, MAY 23, 12 O'CLOCK.

It is with the greatest satisfaction that I communicate to you the safe arrival of the Great Western steam-ship from New York here at half-past 10 o'clock this morning. Having lain in the Roads in expectation of her I had a full view of the majestic vessel immediately after her passing the Holmes (about 21 miles down the Channel, and nothing could exceed the beauty of her appearance as she gallantly breasted the waves; and although a short breeze was blowing from the N. W., she sailed triumphantly along, whithout rolling in the slightest degree, or appearing to be at all affected by them.

At the time of the departure of the Sirius from New York, on the 1st, she had not finished discharging her cargo, and upon departing from New York quay, at half-past 2 o'clock p. m. on the 7th inst., upwards of 100,000 persons were assembled to witness her departure with bands of music, and a variety of steam-boats attended her to Sandy Hook, which she left at 5 o'clock, with 68 cabin passengers at 35 guineas each (the greatest number of cabin passengers which ever came across the Atlantic by one ship), upwards of 40,000 Post-office letters, and a cargo consisting of cotton for our new factory, indigo, silks, and miscellaneous articles. During her voyage home she encountered head-winds 9 days out of the 14, and on one occasion a severe gale, yet she accomplished 7½ knots during its greatest severity, with the wind directly in her teeth, and completed her voyage to King's-road in 14 days and 17½ hours, her engines averaging from 17 to 19 strokes a minute, and with a consumption of less than a ton of coal per hour.

You will regret to perceive in the file of papers which I send you, that a most awful fire has taken place at Charleston, consuming whole streets, and occasioning a loss of property to the amount of $3,000,000, and that the French fleet are blockading the Mexican ports. Among her passengers are Lady G. Duncan, Lord James Butler, and Colonel Webb, the editor of one of the New York papers.—The Times, May 24.

India.

Without praising ourselves after the fashion of certain of our cotemporaries, who deal not in any but the most authentic gup, we shall now proceed to inform our readers that we take it upon ourselves to assert for reasons which we will presently give, that there will be no war for the present, either on the North West Frontiers, nor in Burma, unless circumstances undergo a very material change, and that a totally different order of things from that now subsisting shall make itself apparent. With respect to our relations with the Nepaulese, the chances of war are less easy of calculation, but upon that point also we shall presently give such information and reasoning as the case demands. To begin with King Tsurawaddi. It is quite evident that all is quiet there, and that Major Benson has been well received. For that officer's orders were, that upon the slightest reason being given him, by the conduct of the Burmese, to suspect them of hostile designs, he was to send back the Steamer—now the Steamer has not came back—ergo, King Tsarawaddi and the Resident are on excellent terms.

With reference to the treaty with Runjeet, it would appear that that Prince has undertaken to put Shan Soojah on the throne of Cabul, but that he thinks he is strong enough to compass the business, without the aid of the British power; and that it is only in the event of the Persian or other forces coming to assist Dost Nahoused, or in the event of the enterprise presenting greater difficulties than now contemplated that he wishes to have recourse to British assistance; and this is the subject of the treaty now concluded by Mr. Macnaghten with Runjeet—at least this is we incline to believe its principle article,—and constitutes, we believe, what in diplomacy is called an alliance, offensive and defensive, under certain provisos, modifications and stipulations. In these two quarters therefore it is quite clear that for some time to come, we shall have no war;

The Nepaulese question is not so easily settled. They have on foot an army of 40,000 fighting men, that is, their army is on the war establishment—they have occupied all the passes into their country, and have in fact assumed towards us, what is called, a threatening attitude. This for reasons of our own we think cannot be permitted by the British Government. Our army being on the peace establishment, and our relations with the Nepaulese being on an amicable footing, we have thought it necessary only to place our force on that frontier, on the pence establishment. It becomes necessary now, in consequence of their having placed themselves in a warlike attitude, to put the question to them as to their intentions, and they must either reduce their force, or we must encrease ours. The simplest and cheapest expedient will be to make them reduce their army—which must be done either by coaxing, or by cudgeling, and upon the persuasive powers of our resident, will, in a great measure, therefore, depend the mode in which this question is to be settled—for our own part, we love the Nepaulese, and we hope, that the good sense and good feeling of their Sovereign, will enable him to see the propriety of his putting his force on a footing more conducive to the maintenance of that harmony, which has so long, and ought always to subsist between the two Governments.

Our Nepaulese ally has nothing to gain in a war with us. There is no chance of a general disturbance; the North Western Frontiers is well cared for, and the Burmese King is quiet. The Nepaul Sovereign therefore will consult his interests in tranquility. — Calcutta Courier, July 31.

Trade of Bengal.

We have been furnished with a copy of Mr. Bell's "Comparative view of the external Commerce of Bengal, during the years 1836-37 and 1837-38," full of valuable information both to the merchant and the financier.

It is satisfactory to notice that the effect of the commercial crisis, which so powerfully affected Europe and America last yearr, have not fallen very conspicuously on the trade of Calcutta, as far as the aggregate amount of exports and imports to and from all countries is concerned. In 1836-37 the total value of imports of merchandize and treasure was

	Co's Rs.
In 1837-38	3,72,65,602
	4,06,99,504
Increase, ...	34,33,903
The total value of Exports was,
1836-37 ..... Co's Rs.	6,70,71,409
1837-38	6,50,45,959
Decrease, ...	20,81,450
Net total increase on Exports and Imports	14,02,452

The result would have been against 1837-38 had imported treasure been excluded from calculation. In this item the increase has been very great.

In 1836-37, the value was,	Co's Rs. 64,48,495
1837-38	,, 108,41,609
Increase, ... Co's Rs.	83,93,104

Of course the countries with which our commercial relations have principally decreased in 1837-38, as compared with 1837-38, are the United States and Great Britain.

In Imports the decrease with Great Britain is ..... Co's Rs.	18,09,881

United States ..... ,,	3,05,866
Exports—Great Britain, Co's Rs.	13,87,744
United States ..... ,,	24,91,583

The whole decrease with Great Britain is, ... Co's Rs. 29,97,625

and with United States..... Co's ,, 25,96,448

but the proportionate falling off is more serious with the latter than the former, inasmuch as the trade with Great Britain forms 56 per cent. of the whole import trade and above 37 per cent. of the whole export trade.

We could pursue our extracts to a much greater length, were we not fearful of depriving Mr. Bell of the fair reward of his labours; but we can truly say, no mercantile man, nor indeed any person desirous of ascertaining our commercial progress and the amount of revenue realizable from the customs department should be without a copy of this valuable work.—Harkara July 7.

Honolulu.

From the Sandwich Islands Gazette.

Honolulu, the principal town and sea-port, in the Sandwich Islands, is situated on the S. W. side of Oahu, and is in Lat. 21° 18' N. and Lon. 158° 1' W. The harbour is one of the best in the Pacific Ocean, and is accessible to vessels drawing not more than 21 feet. It affords good anchorage for at least 100 ships, and is defended against the action of the sea, and strong southerly winds, by a coral reef. Occasionally, the strong N. E trades cause vessels to drag from their anchorage, but no serious injury has resulted from this, nor is any likely to result, even in case a vessel should be driven as far as the reef; in as much as this is lined on the inner side with a mud bank. The harbor is protected by a fort of 34 guns, built upon a point which projects from the main land. But this fort, though it commands the channel and the outer road-stead, may itself be commanded by a fort of 14 guns, situated upon Punch-Powl Hill, at an elevation of about 550 feet above the sea, and about ¾ of a mile distant from the lower fort. Honolulu is built on the western extremity of a level plain, which streetches some four or five miles along the shore, and from half a mile to one and a half miles inland, where it is met by hills, which, rising gradually at first, finally terminate in a range of mountains, which stretch across the interior, in a direction nearly parallel with the north-east side of the island. The town is about three quarters of a mile in length, and a half in breadth, and has been built up with very little of order or regularity. We are happy to state, however, that the government are now taking prompt and efficient measures to improve the general appearance of the place. Several straight and broad streets are being opened through the town, to take the place of the narrow, and crooked, and filthy lanes, which have heretofore been, at once, a serious inconvenience and a disgrace to the town. One of the streets is to be extended to the valley of Nuuanu; and soon, it is hoped, will reach as far as the Pali of Koolau. The houses of the natives are constructed, principally, after the common fashion of the country—upright poles covered with dried grass. A truly commendable spirit of improvement is exhibited, however, in this respect by many of the natives, who have adopted the stile of building introduced by foreigners. Some few of the houses erected by foreigners are wood, or are constructed of coral stone, an excellent material for buildings, and found at hand, in an exhaustless abundance. But the larger proportion of buildings occupied by them, are constructed after the style of building which prevails extensively on the coast of Spanish America. The common soil is mixed up with dry grass and made in moulds into bricks, (called adobe,) of a large size; usually 18 inches or two feet long, one foot wide, and six to eight inches thick. These are dried in the sun, and are then laid up into walls.* As there is no frost to heave the ground, and no long continued rains, to destroy the bricks by accumulated moisture, walls constructed in this manner are very durable, and when plastered with lime and sand, as they usually are, present an appearance of singular neatness and comfort. The whole number of houses occupied by the natives, is probably about 900.

The native population of Honolulu proper, is about 6,000. The population of the Ahupuaa, or whole district, is about 9,000. The district of Honolulu, extends from Kewalo, on the east, to Kapalama, on the west; and from the sea to Nuuanu, north and south. Kewalo is the site of a house built a few years ago for the king, a short distance bo the right of the road leading to Waikiki. Kapalama is district commencing some 15 or 20 rods beyond the creek, on the west end of the town. The suburbs thus confined, contain about 3,000 inhabitants. The entire foreign population of Honolulu may be estimated at about 350—400: say 200 to 250 Americans, 75 to 100 Enslish; 30 to 40 Chinese; and a small number of French, Spanish, Portuguese, and from various other countries.

* This illustrates very clearly, the mode of making bricks and of building in Egypt, and the eastern countries. See Exodus, Chap. V.

CANTON PRESS.

Saturday, 15th Sept.

Capt Warden, of the Ariel, has favored us with the following particulars: spoke the Cawajee Family in Calcutta river, on the 6th Aug., with loss of topmasts—all well. The Eliza had left Calcutta before the Ariel, which latter passed her in the river. The Bolton, Sir Edward Ryan, Virginia, and Imogene, all from Calcutta, had arrived at Singapore. The Ariel spoke the Syed Khan on the 24th August off Parcelar Hill.

Capt. Lyon of the Sir Charles Malcolm reports his arrival in Anjer roads on the 16th Aug. and that of the Thomas Lowrie on the 13th, of the Anna Maria and Bombay Castle on the 14th, and of the Bonanza on the 15th.

We notice the arrival in England of the following, From China Dankbarheid passed Dover 23d May; Eliza Siew art, off Falmouth. Abercrombie Robinson off Isle of Wight. From Singapore: Orissa and Ann.

By the Ariel from Calcutta, 9th August, and Singapore 28th, papers from the former city up to the 5th have been received. By some it seems to be thought that a war with some of the native powers is unavoidable. We have recopied an extract from the Calcutta Courier who considers things to wear a more peaceable aspect, though he also thinks the position taken by the Nipalese to be threatening. They have, it seems, 40,000 soldiers and may give the Company a good deal of trouble, and should a war there break out, military operations will necessarily approach the Chinese or rather Tibetan frontier, and cannot fail to rouse the attention of the Chinese, between whom and the Nipalese diplomatic intercourse has existed for some time, and the latter may be tempted to invoke the aid of the former, though from the reluctance with which the Chinese Government have of late years entered on foreign wars, it is probable that they will quietly look on. This war may however cause British merchants here and their trade to be more narrowly watched than before.

By the Alexander Baring from Liverpool 26th May, London papers, to the 25th have been received. These represent the commercial affairs of the country to be somewhat improving. The two great steamboats the Syrius and Great Western had returned from New York, the former in 17 and the latter in 14 days, bringing advices from that City to the 8th May, according to which several banks had resumed specie payments, butthe United States Bank not yet. The money affairs in the United States are represented as being rather more favorable than before, but the discount upon all notes from the west continued very great.

The French after an unsuccessful negotiation with the Mexican Government, for an indemnification of 600,000$, for losses alleged to have been suffered by French subjects, throughacts of the Mexican government, and for satisfaction for insults offered to the person of the French Minister, Baron Deffaudis, have blockaded the ports of Veracruz and Tampico, with a flottilla of 1 Frigate and 4 brigs of war, which was expected soon to be considerably reinforced, threatening not to raise the blocade until their demands are complied with. The Mexican President has issued a manifesto in which he declares his resolve not to treat with the French until the blocade shall have been raised. It is fortunate for the Mexicans that their quarrels with the United States are for the present so far settled, as to have mutually agreed to have their differences arranged by an Umpire.

Prince Talleyrand died at Paris, 83 years old, after having, by penance and submission, made his peace with the Roman Churh, of which he was a bishop before the Revolution. His funeral has been magnificent.

The Irish Poor Bill was read in the Lords a second time on the 22d May. The bill for the immediate abolition of the apprenticeship of the negroes in the Westindies, which was thrown out in the Commons, has again been brought forwrad and carried by a majority against ministers. Lord Brougham stated in the House of Lords that within a few days he had received no less than 250 petitions to that house in favor of the bill.

The London Mercantile Journal of 22d July has the following:—"Advices from Canton to the 31st January have arrived, but they communicate nothing fresh watever, relative to trade in contradistinction from the last accounts. The Chinese Government, finding that the prohibition of opium is counteracted by smuggling, have agreed to admit it on paying a certain rate of duty, and the whole of the business in this commodity is to be under the sole management of the Hong-merchats".—Such erroneous information, coming from a paper which, on most commercial matters, is considered a good authoritiy, is likely to mislead people in England. The legalization of the Opium trade, as far as we or we believe our neighbours know, is a distant as ever, nor is there perhaps much probability of its ever taking place, for, though a party at the Court seems to be favorable to it, the opposition has been very great, and elicited from time to time, not only memorials from censors against the measure, but also Imperial edicts approving their views of the matter.

By the late arrivals we have received Singapore papers to the 23d August, of which we give some extracts. The Penang Gazette of the 11th has likewise reached us, and also, by way of Java, we suppose, the Sandwich Island Gazette to the 26th May, of which we have embodied a few articles in our columns.

Kin-qua Affairs.

Tăng, President of the Board of War, Governor of the two Kwang Provinces &c. proclaims to the Senior Hong-merchants for their full information: On the 21st day of the 7th moon, of the 18th year of Taoukwang, Nanabhoy Framjee and others petitioned as follows:

"We, the foreigners, before petitioned your Excellency, urging our claims against the Teenpo Hong, when Y. E., for which we shall be ever grateful, was pleased to direct the Hong merchants to meet together and consult; and report to Y. E. the result of their deliberations, that you might pursue the necessary measures; and on the 11th day of the present month, we received the following Edict from Y. E."

"I have examined into the subject of Kinqua's "debts to foreigners, and find that Dent and others "have before petitioned, when I directed the "Hong-merchants to meet together and consult, "and report to me the result of their deliberations, "that I might act accordingly. Now it appears from "their report that Dent and others in obedience "to my order, had consented to the arrangement, "that the principal of their claims should be paid "in ten years, and the interest after the expiration "of that period: but that Nanaboy insists on obtaining interest at the rate of 12 per Cent. per "annum, which interest is to be paid up regularly "with the principal. In consequence, the Hong-"merchants again met together to consult, but the "said foreigners (Nanaboy &c.) continued obstinately "deaf to all conviction, when it appears Dent and "the others also turned round for similar terms, "notwithstanding his former agreement. ——— It "appears to me that the first great object of mer-"chants is to amass riches:—failing which, to "avoid losses. Kinqua of the Teenpo Hong contracts debts to foreigners, and is, of himself, totally unable to liquidate them: there is consequently no prospect of their being repaid:—but "the other Hong-merchants, mindful of the respectability of their class, come forward with the "assistance, in the shape of an annual sum of $ 100,000, to enable him to pay his debts, that "the foreigners may not be without a guaranty "for their claims. Thus the money, which was as "lost, is, by their assistance, regained; and the "foreigners extremely fortunate."

"Now Dent and the other Creditors whose "claims amount to upwards of $ 800,000, have, "in obedience to my orders, agreed to the arrange-"ment of paying the principal in ten years, and "the interest after the expiration of that term, thus "evincing a most reasonable disposition; but Nanaboy &c. whose claims do not exceed $ 300,00, "insist upon being paid interest at the same time "as the principal. The principal creditors of the "Teenpo Hong, evince their reasonableness by an "early acquiescence in my views, while the minor "creditors obstinately withhold their concurrence, "by which they evince the boundless avarice and "meanness of their dispositions, and set all prin-"ciples of reason at defiance — Considering the "circumstances, I again issue an edict, that they "(Nanaboy and others) may ponder over its contents "and awaken to a sense of their errors. Let the "Hong-merchants forthwith explain its contents "to the said Nanaboy &c., and impress upon their "minds the unreasonableness of their demand for "interest: let them at once concur in the arrange-"ment of Dent and the others, that the principal "be paid in ten years and the interest after the ex-"piration of that term. There must not be two "plans for liquidating these claims. Let the Hong-"merchants be unceasing in their endeavours to "support the Teenpo Hong and let them not relax "their former kind efforts. Their attention must "be unceasing to this matter, and let not the "foreigners again pester me with their petition, "'This is of the first importance.'"

Our Parsee Neighbours, on receiving this answer, again addressed the Vice-roy, urging as a plea for the preference to be given to their claims, their being not so wealthy as their English neighbours, and, consequently, unable to wait ten years for the repayment of their claims on the Kin-qua hong. To this the Vice-roy answers:

"This coming before me, the Governor, I have examined, and find by the records that I have already clearly signified my pleasure on this subject for the guidance of the foreigners. Nevertheless Nanabhoy &c. persist in their obstinate disobedience. Why does not the debtor Leang shing he of the Teenpo Hong exert himself in this matter? Why does not he, in cojunction with his brother Hong-merchants, meet together and form some arrangement for quieting the said Nanabhoy &c.

"It appears by the petition of Nanaboy and others that they are poor and distressed, while Dent and the others are wealthy: and that large sums are due the latter, while only trifling ones to the former; and they consequently earnestly entreat that interest may be allowed them, and a shorter period allowed for the payment of their claims, and they pester me with their noisy and clamorous petitions. Is the recovery of a debt so very important a business, that they presume, notwithstanding my repeated orders, to trouble me with their petitions? Do they think that I, the Governor, have nothing to do, but to attend to them? Truly I am very indignant at such behaviour.

"I have now directed the Namboy-yune to take the said Hong-merchant Kinqua into his custody and there cause him to make some arrangement respecting these debts, and report same to me for my consideration, when he may be released."

"In order that I may not again be pestered with petitions, I issue this edict. When it reaches the said Hong-merchants let them transmit and explain its contents to Nanabhoy &c. for their information and obedience. Do not oppose. A Special Edict."

The Cumsha; or Present Fee is paid by all vessels 1600 Taels or $ 2223. Linguists fees $ 173½ and Comprador's fees $ 56 Also Pilotage $ 60, inwards and outwards the same. A sum of from $ 5 @ 600 is also usually required by the Hong-merchant, for securing a Cargo-ship, to defray fees and charges usually incurred by him. On French and other Foreign vessels the charges are slightly varied. The several fees paid to the Hoppo &c. on Rice laden ships amounting to $ 939 50., by a decision of the General Chamber of Commerce, are to be considered a charge on the vessel, as also the sum of $ 250—paid to the Linguist—making the whole charge on a Rice-ship, $ 1189.50—besides Pilotage inwards and outwards.

COMMERCIAL REMARKS.

IMPORTS.

COTTON MANUFACTURES.--Sales to some extent have been effected during the week of grey LONGCLOTHS, and the market has declined a little more, the dealers hands being quite full. COTTON YARN. There has been some little enquiry for yarn of low numbers, say 16 @ 26 for the Chinchew market, and we hear 30 @ 32 $ has been offered for some of good quality, but we do not believe any actual sales have taken place

WOOLLENS.—The demand for SPANISH STRIPES is not brisk, but sales could be effected at our quotations according to quality. LONGELLS, are, if any thing, rather firmer, except blacks which are very low

METALS.--continue without much altetation.

STRAITS PRODUCE.--PEPPER still in good demand from the short supply. BETELNUT is also arriving more slowly than was expected, and the importation per Layton has been sold in consequence, we hear, deliverable at Macao @ 3¼ $.

RICE.--has further declined nearly 10 cents.

COTTON.--Quotations continue much the same, but the demand is languid, and sales can only be effected of small lots of 100 @ 200 bales, in which way perhaps 1000 bales of Bombay have been got rid of during the week A small parcel of Bengal of good quality fetched 11 T., there being very little in the market. In Madras we hear of no transactions.

OPIUM.--The brokers generally have taken alarm at the seizure of many of the small dealers and smokers, being doubtful to what extent the authorities will proceed, and they have been eagerly forcing sales of their previous purchases, which, being principally in Malwa, it has declined considerably, and, we believe some has been sold as low as 580. Patna is better supported, but the prices of all at present must be considered nearly nominal.

EXPORTS.

NANKIN SILK.--One or two more small parcels have come down, but nothing has been done as to purchases, the holders still demanding exorbitant prices.

TEA.--There is nothing yet doing, and our quotations for the present are altogether nominal.

Dutch Possession on New Guinea.

From a Correspondent.

Of all the islands of the Indian Archipelago none is so imperfectly known and has attracted so little notice as the extensive territory of New Guinea.

Though in the neighbourhood of the Moluccas, which have for more than two centuries been in the possession of the Dutch Company, a government welle stablished, and, at the commencement, desirous of making new discoveries, yet neither the merchant nor traveller have thither directed their way. The early Arabian navigators touched frequently at the Northwest coast, and described the aborigines of the interior as fond of human flesh. Thus they were not very anxious to penetrate into the country, and as the poor natives could offer very few articles for trade, they soon left off visiting this coast. Antonio Ambrese arrived here in 1511 in a Portuguese vessel and was followed in 1530 by Meneses. The Spaniards had at first in contemplation to form there a permanent settlement, and orders had for that purpose been sent out to Mexico, but the hostility of the natives, a race of untameable savages, prevented the execution of this plan. When the Dutch Company took possession of the Moluccas, they had to sustain a dreadful struggle with the Portugese, and then with several of the native princes. But when these islands were in a state of tranquillity, Pool, a commodore of the Colonial fleet, built at Ounien, on the Northwest coast, a fort. Two years later an expedition under Bortsman reached the coast, and his discoveries were so important as to induce the celebrated navigator Tasman in 1644 to take a nearer view of the country. But these settlements were never sufficiently supported, and the few Europeans who lived in them became either a prey to infectious diseases or fell into the hands of relentless savages. It was therefore found advisable to fix some stations on the surrounding islands Wammer, Maykor, and Oudjier, where the natives were less bloodthirsty, and the sandalwood of the forests would repay the expenses. These attempts, however, also failed, and during the middle of the last century not a single trace of them was left. Under such circumstances, no more notice was taken of this country as if it had been thousands of miles distant, until the Governor, Van der Capellen, in 1824 sent thither an exploring expedition during his visit in the Moluccas. Of this voyage no full account has yet been published, but the results have been such as to induce the King of Holland, six years later, to declare the whole island a Dutch possession. A fort has been built at the nearest point, but the expenses of the settlement are considerable whilst it gives no returns; the number of soldiers being very soon reduced by diseases, new reinforcements are constantly necessary. The soil around the settlement itself it unproductive, though there is not the least doubt that, if this land were properly explored, it might equal in fertility the western islands. The natives of Banda, Gilolo, and the adjacent isles carry on a traffic with the aborigines, who themselves possess frail barks with which they visit the neighbouring islands as far as Bally. Their wants being very few, the whole commerce is confined to a few piece goods and beads, whilst the returns consist in gold dust, shells, birds of paradise, and other productions of the island, in very limited quantities. Though the Papuan races have gradually dwindled away, or retired from the coast to the jungle, the Malays have never yet been able to effect permanent settlements. What immense treasures for the botanist and mineralogist does this spot contain, and how rich would be the harvest which an intelligent traveller might collect! if the treasures lavished in war and bloodshed were used for ameliorating the state of mankind and opening new resources for trade, and fresh scenes for civilisation, New Guinea might also have obtained its share, whilst even at the present enlightened age, it remains a dreary jungle, the fit abode of wild beasts and savages.

INNER PASSAGE FROM SYDNEY TO TORRES STRAITS,

Ship John, August 24, 1837.

I SEND you a copy of our log * through Torres Straits, which will interest you.

It shows that the passage through the "Inner Channel" is not attended with more delay than the outer, as we spoke the "Runnymede" and "William," at Booby Island, both of which vessels sailed from Sydney a few hours before us, on the 8th.

We anchored four times, and I am satisfied that it only requires a good look-out to effect a speedy and pleasant passage through the inner channel.

We found no hidden dangers which are not marked on your charts so clearly that, together with the sailing directions, a very ordinary navigator could take a ship through without the chance of accident. The masters of the "John" and "Adam Lodge" have declared to me their determination to adopt it in future, and speak indignantly of the representations of fancied dangers and delays which were made to them at Sydney, and are very glad to have had an opportunity of judging for themselves. The dangers, as I have before said, are accurately laid down, and are all pointed out in the charts. I need not speak of delays, from what I have already mentioned, when we arrived off Booby Island, on the morning of the 21st, and left the Heads of Port Jackson on the evening of the 8th, at six o'clock.

I think it proper to mention to you, that Captain Whyte, in standing into the proper anchorage laid down at Turtle Island, stated to me, that he carried eight fathoms just inside the island, when it suddenly shoaled to four and a half, that he hauled out immediately, and anchored six miles from the island, in five fathoms, where it is laid down ten. The Rattlesnake anchored about four miles and a half from the island with breakers and sharp-pointed rocks, appearing through them about half a mile from her starboard side. In troop ships, at this time of the year, there can be no question which is the most desirable passage of the two; the weather throughout the time we passed has been fine, with strong fair winds, tending much to our comfort in many ways. I hope from our extraordinary success, independently of the dangers to which troops are exposed in the outer channel, from which there is no relief if the transport strikes on the Barrier Reefs, that all future tenders for conveyance of troops to the northward, will meet with the same considerate attention as ours did from Sir R. Bourke, in making the inner channel one of the provisions."

J. F. M.

[The question whether the passage to Torres Straits from Sydney shall be made inside or outside of the Barrier Reefs has frequently occupied our attention; and considering the arguments both for and against each that have been advanced by our correspondents, our readers have no doubt long since decided that the certain security, and smooth water of the inner track, is preferable to the great risk of meething with bad weather with the reefs to leeward, which attends the outer one at the very time of entering the reef. A vessel may have made a good passage outside, with fine weather, and at the very time that a continuance of the latter is wanted, boisterous weather has come on, preventing an observation from being had to enable her to bear up for one of the passages through, and wreck has ensued. Loss of time has been advanced as an important objection against the inner route, but this has been shown to be erroneous; and the preceding letter, from an officer of Her Majesty's service, to Captain King, at Sydney, tends to confirm the advantages of this route over the outer one.—ED. Hawaii.

From the Hawaiian Spectator, April 1838.

The height of the mountains of Hawaii has been variously represented by different travellers. The elevation most commonly assigned to them, has been about 15,000 or 16,000 feet. By a series of observations made in 1831, by the late Mr. Douglas, he found the elevation of Mauna Kea, to be 13,764 feet, and of Mauna Loa to be 13 430 feet, above the level of the sea. These were the results of a great number of observations, both trigonometrically, and with the barometer, and may be relied upon as correct.

The ascent of Mauna Kea is, comparatively, an easy task, and has been frequently accomplished; but greater difficulties are met with in ascending Mauna Loa. The attempt was made by Ledyard, who accompanied Capt. Cook in his third voyage; and it has been frequently made by subsequent travelers. Mr. Goodrich was the first to accomplish it, and to discover the enormous crater, on the very summit of the mountain. His visit, however, was too hurried to allow him to make any particular observations; and it was left to Mr. Douglas to ascertain the dimensions and depth of the crater, as well as the height of the mountain. The following extracts from his correspondence, will not be deemed uninteresting, as we are not aware that his observations have been published. Mr. Douglas ascended Mauna Loa in Jan. 1834.

"The summit of this extraordinary mountain is so flat, that from this point no part of the islands is seen, not even the high peak of Mauna Kea, nor the distant horizon of the sea, though the day was remarkably clear. It is a horizon of itself, of about seven miles diameter.

After proceeding to the N. W. for the distance of 2¼ miles, at 2 o'clock the great terminal volcano of this curious mountain burst on our view. We came on the S. E. side, and from this part attempted to reach the black ledge, but finding the fissures hid by the snow, prudence, after having sunk twice to the arm-pits, dictated to me to return. This I regretted exceedingly, as I was prevented from measuring accurately its extraordinary depth. From this point I walked along the high ledge on the east side to the hump of the mountain, the point which appeared from Mauna Kea to be the highest.

On the brink of the ledge the wind whirled up from the crater with such furious violence, that I could scarcely stand 20 paces from it.

The circumference of the black ledge, or nearly circular crater, is, as near as my circumstances would allow me to measure, six and a quarter miles. The outer ledge, which represents the extent of the ancient crater, is about 24miles; the depth of the ledge, from the highest part, from accurate measurement with line and plumb, is 1270 feet. It appears to have filled up considerably at round. That part, to the north of the circle, appears, at no remote period, to have undergone the most violent activity; not by boiling and overflowing, or by discharging under ground, but by throwing out stones of immense size, and for the distance of miles around its opening, ashes and sand. Terrible chasms are in the bottom; in some places it is as if the mountain were torn asunder to its very bottom. No termination of this depth is seen by a good glass in an intense sun, and all clear. There is no smoke.—Terrible indeed must have been the sight, when in a state of action!

The part on the south side of the circle, which has evidently been the outlet of the lava, perhaps to an infinitade of overflowings, has enjoyed a long state of repose. Were it not for the dykes on the north and west sides, which show the extent of the ancient cauldron, and the direction of the lava, together with its proximity to the existing volcano, it has little to arrest the attention of the naturalist.

To day from 8 till 9 o'clock, while passing ledges of the lava of a more compact texture, with small but numerous vesicles, the temperature of the air being 36° to 37°, the sun shining powerfully, a sweet musical sound was heard coming from the cracks and small fissures, like the faint sound of musical glasses, but at the same time having somewhat of a hissing sound, like a swarm of bees; this, in a lower region, might be overlooked as the sweet humming of insects but, in this high altitude, is too powerful and remarkable to escape the attention.

Near the top of the mountain I saw one small bird, about the size of a common sparrow, of a light mixed grey color, with a faintly yellow back, perched on a block of lava—the only animal that came under my notice above the region of vegetation, save a dead hawk, which I found in a large cave. This little bird was quite tame, and allowed me to catch him, when I instantly gave him his liberty. On the east side of the great terminal crater is a small conical funnel of scoria, the only vent hole of that substance I saw in the crater.

This mountain apdears to bd differently formed from Mauna Kea. It seems to be an endless number of layers of lava from different overflowings of its terminal crater. In the deep caves at Kapapala, 2,000 feet above the level of the sea, the different strata are well defined, and may be traced with accuracy, varying in thickness with the intensity of the action, and the discharge which has taken place. Between many of the strata are strata of earth containing vegetable substances, some two feet to two feet seven inches thick, which bespeak a long state of repose, between the activity of the crater. It ought to be noticed that the thicker strata are generally lowest, the thinner toward the surface. In some places twenty-seven layers are counted, horizontal, preserving the declination of the mountain. In the caves at my camp, 40 to 70 feet deep, thin layers of earth are seen between the successive strata of lava, but none is found nearer the surface than 13 layers. No trace of animal, shell, or fish, can be seen in any of the craters or caves, either on this mountain or on Mauna Kea.

At 4 P. M. I returned to the centre of the dome, where the three men left, were huddled together to keep themselves warm After collecting a few specimens of lava, no time was lost to leave this dreary and terrific scene.

The descent was more fatiguing, dangerous and laborious, than the ascent, and required great caution to escape unhurt; and the men benumbed with the cold, could not walk fast. Night came in so fast on me, that though the twilight there was of considerable duration, I was obliged to lay by at 10 minutes past six, in a small cave. Though sheltered from the N. W. breeze, which set in stronger as the sun sunk on the horizon, the thermometer fell to 19°, and being yet far above the line of vegetation, no fire could be had, and having no clothing, but what I traveled in during the day, and that soaked with perspiration, the cold to the senses was most intense. I remained here till 26 minutes past ten, when the welcome moon appeared over the volcano. Never can I forget the singular face she presented. The darkened limb was uppermost, and as I was waiting with watchful anxiety her rising on the horizon, I discovered a narrow silvery belt, four or five degrees high, merge from the pale fiery cloud of the volcano. I conceived this to be a portion of the light from the fire, but a few moments shewed me a beautiful moon, shining with splendour in a cloudless sky, which illuminated my rugged path; her pale face actually threw a glow of warmth throughout my whole frame, and I thankfully and joyfully rose to scramble over my rugged path during the solitude of night, in preference to awaiting the approach of day, in this uncomfortable place of rest."

Smuggler's Boats.

From Downing's "Fanqui in China."

A large mandarin-boat was seen one afternoon passing down the river beyond the first bar, and then entering at taking up its station in one of the numerous little inlets which abound in that neighbourhood. In a few minutes it was perfectly at rest; the yellow sails were taken in and furled, and all that was then to be seen of it over the paddy, were the slender sticks with little balls on the tops and which were hardly to be distinguished from the tall reeds which were growing at the edge of the water.

It had scarcely taken up its position, before the faint croaking sound of an approaching smuggler was to be heard in the distance. By the time it approached the open entrance of the little inlet, the mandarins were ready to receive it, and issued forth just at the moment it was passing. The centipede must at that moment have had the other firmly hooked on to it, if the spare hands on board of it had not used the long bamboos, and by their means prevented the two boats coming in contact. These long spears were pushed out at their full length, and then applied to the bows of the other vessel, while, at the same time, all the other men worked with desperation at the oars; so that in a few minutes, notwithstanding the most violent exertions of the mandarins' party, the smugglers kept clear, and were soon a boat's length ahead of their enemies.

Then the chase began. The screams and yells of the smugglers were mixed with the rickety sound of their vessel, and the orders and cries of the mandarins behind them. Every now and then the long ornamented gun was turned upon its swivel, and the loud report reverberated across the country as it was discharged against the chace, but with little effect: the shot was generally seen dancing along the water wide of the mark, resembling the stone thrown by the boy, in making what he calls 'ducks and drakes."

Although the most violent efforts were made by the other party, it was soon evident that the smuggler was walking away from his pursuer. The brown machine with its hundred feet, was seen ahead, while the gaudy boat with its white oars, followed, fulminating forth its ineffective missiles, by which it was enveloped at each discharge in a cloud of blue-gray, curling smoke.

After leading the way through many intricate channels, and dodging in and out to cut off a corner, the smuggler appeared as if she would very soon be out of all danger of being taken; when, suddenly, another mandarin boat was seen issuing from a little creek right ahead, and thus completely cutting off all hopes of getting away without a scuffle. The stream was at this place so narrow that it was impossible to pass by the one ahead without coming into contact, while the one behind, now coming up very fast, prevented them making an honourable retreat. It is thus sometimes in the streets of London, when a thief is congratulating himself upon leaving far behind the hue and cry of his pursuers, upon suddenly turning a corner, he runs into the arms of a policeman.

Thus completly blockaded, the smugglers determined to stand at bay, and make a vigorous resistance. All the oars were thrown aside, but placed ready for instant use, and every man seized a bamboo-pike and awaited the attack with great determination They then resembled a nest of demons, chattering and yelling out their notes of defiance. As the mandarins cautiously approached, the white oars were laid back, the spears were taken up, and the savage features on the shields were displayed in the faces of the resisting vagabonds. In a short time, the poor devoted boat had its two enemies on its quarters and the whole multitude were engaged in a desperate struggle.

It appeared to be the object of the mandarins to board, and thus fight hand to hand, while the object which the others wished to attain was to keep their enemies' boats off with their spears, until they could have a fair opportunity to get another run for their lives. The different manner of engaging by each party was very apparent during this conflict, and showed the decision and vigour which fighting in a good cause will give to the weakest combatant, while the arm of the strongest man is paralized, and its power withheld by the still, small voice of conscience. The mandarins rushed to the attack without hesitation, and laid about them in right good earnest with their swords and pikes, frequently cutting and wounding in a dreadful manner; but the poor smugglers appeared to act merely on the defensive, and, although slight wounds were occasionally inflicted with their spears, yet it was evident that the great aim was to keep the mandarin-boats at a distance.

A principal reason, no doubt, for this line of conduct was the knowledge of the state of the law with regard to them. If, as I heard, they are taken alive in the act of smuggling, they are sent to work in the mines during the remainder of their lives, but if the death of a single mandarin takes place during the struggle, their lives are all forfeited.

The unequal contest lasted for a longer time than might be imagined, but it was soon evident in whose favour it would terminate. The gaudy vessels were soon alongside, and the gay caps of the mandarins were seen intermixed with the bald heads of the illicit traders. The struggle was then soon over. Many of the defeated jumped overboard, and as they struggled in the waters to gain the shore, formed excellent marks for the spears and javelins of the conquerors. The great mast of them, however, were seized before they could try this doubtful chance of escape. The long pigtail served instead of the cord collar of our part of the world, and when twisted two or three times round the hand, formed a handle with which the owner could be moved at pleasure.

The men were thrown down at the bottom of the boat and their securely lashed and fastened. In a short time, the din and hubbub of so many voices were over, and the mandarin boats were seen leading away in triumph their silent and crestfallen captives.

The new Quicksilver Steam-Ship.

LIVERPOOL, April 24 The splendid new steamer (Columbus,) destined shortly to cross the Atlantic, which has created so much interest from the novel construction of the machinery, made after Mr Howard's invention for the rapid vaporisation of water on iron plates over heated quicksilver, this afternoon took a trial trip down the Mersey, and round the light ship, with a highly respectable party of gentlemen on board. She excited curiosity on the river from the novelty of her appearance and the beauty of her model. In her construction she has more of the appearance of an elegant made brig. She has two chimnies, both very low, and from the peculiar coal, the anthracite, consumed by her, no smoke is emitted By the politeness of Captain Daniel Green, her commander, and Mr. Howard, the inventor of her machinery, we have been furnished with the following particulars:—The Columbus is 330 tons builder's measurement, being 214 feet beam, and 145 feet keel, with 13½ feet depth of hold. She has 110 horse power. two 55 feet engines, the cylinder being 40½ inches diameter, and 3½ foot stroke, and wheel 17½ feet diameter. Her speed through the water is 10 statute miles per hour: the immersed section at her present load is 150 square feet. She has now on board 20 days' fuel, besides 30 tons of iron ballast. The novelty of the engines (Mr. Howard's patent) consists in a new method of producing the steam and of condensing it, the latter part of the invention being applicable to the ordinary boilers. In a boiler the heat from the fuel is passed over very extensive surfaces, in contact with which is a large body of water, the temperature of which is always such as is due to the density or pressure of the steam, and consequently, the evaporation is limited by such circumstances. In the invention, the steam is formed by bringing a small quality of water, previously made boiling hot, in contact with a comparatively small surface, heated to red maintained at the temperature of most rapid vaporisation, viz. about 400 degrees, to effect which a quantity of mercury or amalgam lies between iron plates, the one near the fire being a plain surface of only three quarters of a foot per horse power, and the other, or vaporising surface, being about four times as much. The steam never obtains a density or pressure due to the temperature, but is itself heated to about 400 degrees, and worked in about 10 pounds to the inch, and sent off from the cylinder at half the stroke. The fuel made use of is coke or stone-coal, or other fuel giving a strong local heat and little flame. That employed to-day was Kilkenny coal. The consumption of fuel is three tons per day of twenty-four hours, and the fire grates have a total bar surface of only 22 feet, the air being supplied by a small blowing-machine, under easy regulation.

The following has been circulated by the Chamber of Commerce for general information.

Macao, 4th September, 1838.

"Wellesley" in Toong-Koo-Bay
3rd September 1838.

SIR,—I have received a despatch from Sir J. Gordon Bremer, Captain of Her Majesty's Ship "Alligator," dated the 31st May last, from the Cape of Good Hope, informing me that he was so far on his voyage to New South Wales, to establish a Post on the Northern Coast of Australia, for the purpose of giving protection to British Commerce, carried on, through Torres Strait with China and India, and with the Islands of the Indian Archipelago, and of affording an Asylum for those who may be shipwrecked on the Coast.

In a private communication he further informs me, that the Bughis Traders come to Port Essington (which is situate on the Cobourg peninsula in North Australia, in about Latitude 11° 10 South and Longitude 132° 10 East) in great numbers, for the purpose of taking and curing the Trepang or Beche de Mer, which they carry to Macassar, and thence to the China Market, and that there is no doubt that these people, their numbers being great would take a large portion of British or Indian Cloth, Hardware and other manufactured goods from us, for which they now depend wholly on the Dutch, who charge them enormously; but he is of opinion that the great mart will eventually be the islands in the neighbourhood.

Sir Gordon expected to reach Adelaide, in South Australia, by the 8th July last, and Sydney by the 25th, and after making the necessary arrangements with the Governor of N. S. Wales, would proceed to form the Settlement.

The officer in charge of this expedition having requested me to publish some kind of notice of the undertaking, addressed to the public in India, as it may possibly induce some one to venture on sending a vessel down to the new settlement (which I understand is intended to be Port Essington) with cottons &c., and thus commence a communication.

I have been induced to acquaint you therewith, that you may bring it to the notice of the commercial gentlemen carrying on business at Canton, in such manner as you may deem most proper.
I have &c.

(Signed) FRED. L. MAITLAND.
Rear Admiral and Commander in Chief.

DISTURBANCE AT WHAMPOA. A serious disturbance has taken place at Whampoa during the week, attended with loss of life. The particulars, as far as we have been able to learn them, are the following. On the night of Sunday last, some Mandarines, on information given them of Opium being concealed in some of the houses in Whampoa, went with a guard to attack them and to confiscate the Opium. They had taken about 20 chests, when the alarm was given by the owners that they were attacked by robbers, when all the neighbourhood rose in arms upon the mandarines, rescued the greatest part of the Opium, severely wounded one mandarin in the head, another in the arm, and killed three soldiers and a mandarin's servant. The defeat of the party was of course immediately communicated to the authorities at Canton, and on the following day about 900 soldiers appeared before Whampoa, to reduce it to obedience, but these did not enter the town on the promise of the elders of the village to produce the ringleaders of the riot. The military accordingly remained in boats before the village, while most of those who had shared in the night's disorders escaped. Notwithstanding this, the municipality of the place has apprehended and delivered over to the Canton authorities about 40 prisoners, who, poor fellows, will probably be hardly dealt with, some, it is feared, will be executed, and others sent to exile, while they possibly are by no means those most guilty. As is the case in most towns and villages, the population of Whampoa is divided into families or tribes. Of these there are three, the Sing-roo, of about 300, the Sing leang of between 2 and 3 0. and the Sing foong of about 1600 families. The two former tribes chiefly gain their livelyhood as shopkeepers or mechanics, the latter is mostly employed in the shipping, and the smuggling of Opium, and they alone have been implicated in this disturbance They being the most numerous, it has probably not been difficult to arrest men of their tribe or name, and they must suffer the punishment due to the crimes of their cousins.

The inhabitants of Whampoa have on several occasions opposed the government officers sword in hand, and they are reputed as a disorderly, lawless set, and now, since the Opium smuggling trade is carried on again at Whampoa, they, employed in that illicit occupation, are, of course, more than ever inclined to oppose the regular authorities. We understand that since this disturbance took place, there has been no intercourse between the land and the shipping, and it is probable this occurrence will for a time at least, put an entire stop to the smuggling of Opium there It is impossible to say what motives the mandarins may have at the present time to act with such great severity against the Opium trade as to have stopped all deliveries almost, not in Whampoa only, but also at Hong-Kong, and even on the East-coast we hear deliveries are but with difficulty effected. Whether it be true, as suspected, that some of the principal Government-officers are speculators in the drug, and that by these means they attempt to depress prices, or that they honestly act upon orders from their Government to suppress the trade, it is difficult to determine. These attempts, however, prove to us with what ease the Government, when they are in earnest, can stop the smuggling, but we doubt very much their willingness to do so permanently, indeed we have generally seen that, after a temporary stoppage like the present, mandarins having squeezed more favorable terms for themselves than before, the trade is resumed with increased briskness. That it was in contemplation to do something against the trade at Whampoa before we heard of the occurrences at Whampoa would appear from the following placard which was stuck on the back door of one of the principal foreign hongs a day or two previous. We give a literal copy of this elegant production, which is at sametime a good illustration of the Chinese-English as spoken in Canton.

"Sir Sam Man he name A-ming and A-fi call "mandarin kich * your Penis † Boats now i come "tall ‡ all Ginkle man not sent so much opin § "come up sir you like sent up two vick after that "madrin go home no fear."

We have, in another column, made an extract from the 2d number of the Hawaiian Spectator, a quarterly publication, conducted by an association of Gentlemen, and published at Honolulu, Oahu, Sandwich Islands. Our subscription volume of the first number of this publication has not yet reached us, but we have now one kindly lent to us, before us. Mr. S. W. Williams, agent for the distribution of the Spectator here, informs us that only a few Copies of the 1st and 2d numbers have yet been received, owing to which many of the subscribers have not been supplied, but that they will receive them by the next arrival from the Sandwich Islands, by which a new supply is expected. It is not a little satisfactory to see such vigourous efforts made in a part of the world hitherto deemed by most to be inhabited chiefly by mere savages, to diffuse the light of civilization. It is now about two years since a weekly paper appeared regularly at Oahu, and from the beginning of this year the Spectator, of which the first number is dated January, is issued. The style in which these volumes are got up, as to type and paper, is equal to that of some of the best periodicals in Europe and America, and as to matter much has already appeared in them which was altogether new to most readers, and from Polynesia, of which the Sandwich Islands form in some respect the centre, being as yet so little known, we may expect that much new and curious intelligence of these so long neglected regions will be rendered attainable through means of the Hawaiian Spectator. We shall from-time to time transfer to our columns a good deal of the interesting matter it contains.

We have given an extract from Mr. Downing's new book "The Fanqui in China," as a favorable specimen of it's style The narrative is pleasing and lively, and amusement may be derived from its pages, though we do not recommend to trust too implicitly in the information the writer pretends to give, much of which is erroneous, and evinces the haste with which the book has been compiled We have as yet seen the first volume only of the three, and shall, on a future day, devote more space to a critique on the "Fanqui."

CHINESE FESTIVITIES. A great part of the population of Canton was afoot a few days ago, to view a procession held in honor of a local deity(the tutelary god of several streets the inhabitants of which defrayed the expense,) the like of which, we are assured by natives, has not been seen for the last twelve years and consequently had drawn together an immense concourse of people, not only of the inhabitants of Canton but of it's environs also. Most of the shops in the streets through which the procession passed were barricaded, so as to prevent the multitude pressing into them, and, inside, platforms were erected from which the female part of their respective families enjoyed the spectacle, in all the pride of ornament and red and white paint, which latter, but for their lively eyes gives the Chinese women the appearance of wearing masks. The procession itself was to the European spectator certainly an interesting and novel sight. It was formed by about 4000 people, mostly inhabitants of the streets placed under the protection of the honored deity, who were either sumptuously arrayed in silk and gold, and riding on richly caparisoned steels, or they carried on beautifully adorned tables objects of curiosity for the populace to gaze at. Many of these were, certainly, remarkably beautiful, and as the Chinese inform us, of great value, being mostly made of jasper and other costly and precious stones. The beauty and splendour of the miniature temples and dwelling houses, flowerboats etc. was very great, and well worth admiration, as were also the banners and richly embroidered umbrellas of state. Curious asticles of European workmenship, such as clocks with ingenious mechanical contrivances etc., were also peraded. At intervals troops of children walked dressed as mandarins some, and others as warriors, others, again, in costly robes, were mounted on horses, and they seemed to go through the ceremony highly pleased to be made objects of wonder. Two little fellows not more tan 6 years old, on horseback, and dressed as savage warriors, naked, from the waist upwards, and adorned with golden and silver bracelets, looked particularly well. Many females also bore partin the procession, who, richly dressed, as amazones with bow and arows, etc., and attitudinizing, were carried standing, two and two, on litters borne on men's shoulders. A singular ornament worn by almost all these females were silvernails to imitate those on the fingers of great length at their fingers-ends. The procession lasted the whole day, and such was it's length that it did not pass any given spot in less than two hours. It's splendour has even engaged the curiosity of the Viceroy, at whose request it passed by his palace to enable him and his family to see it.

The fine Siamese ship the Conqueror, belonging to the King of Siam, has been wrecked on the west of Hainam, and totally lost, though the crew, consisting of 82 individuals, chiefly Siamese, has been saved. The ship was on a voyage from Bancock to China. The crew after crossing the narrow channel between Hainam and the continent, were sent on to Canton, which they reached after a journey of about 36 days, the greatest part of which they performed on foot, marching during 23 days, and have arrived here in very good health without the loss of a man. To judge of the appearance of some of the men, Malays, of whom there were five among them, the treatment they received from the Chinese must have been very good, and they seemed well satisfied with their lot. These Malays, chiefly natives of Soerabaya, have, by the government, been sent to Macao, there to be embarked for Singapore, whilst the Siamese are awaiting an opportunity here to return to their country. The humane conduct of the Chinese authorities on this occasion deserves much praise.

We have seen the first number of the Boletim Official do Governo de Macao, a new paper which, as we mentioned a few weeks since, appears now in Macao under the patronage of it's Portuguese local authorities. This paper appears once a week, price of subscription 10 $ per annum, 6 $ for 6, and 4 $ for three months, paid in advance. It is well got up as far as it's typical arrangement is concerned, and the list of subscribers we saw promises a moderate support from the public.

By the Sir Ed. Ryan we have received the Sin-Free Press of the 30th ulto., and the Penang Gazette of the 18th, neither of which papers contain news that have not been anticipated by previous arrivals here.

KIN-QUA'S AFFAIRS. In our last week's paper we gave the Vice-roy's answer to the petition of the Parsee merchants, regarding Kin qua's debts, in which he intimated that Kin qua would be imprisoned unless some arrangement was made by him with his creditors, and the Nam-hoy did, in consequence, take charge of him on Saturday last.—This was never intended by the Parsees, and as they found that a perseverance in the measures they were pursuing would only distress the hong without benefiting themselves, they proposed assenting to the same terms as the other creditors, but with the view of making the hong more secure and efficient, insisted that the Co-hong should make an annual payment of $ 195,000,—instead of 100,000, and that the interest should be 6 per Cent instead of 5, and we believe the Hong-merchants have agreed to these terms, so that the general creditors will be all benefited by this arrangement, and Kin-qua's hong become more safe.

On Judging Justly.—A perfectly just and sound mind is a rare and invaluable gift. But it is still much more unusual to see such a mind unbiassed in all its actings. God has given this soundness of mind but to few; and a very small number of those few escape the bias of some predilection, perhaps habitually operating; and none are at all times, and perfectly, free. I once saw this subject forcibly illustrated. A watchmaker told me that a gentleman had put an exquisite watch into his hands that went irregularly, it was as perfect a piece of work as was ever made. He took it to pieces and put it together again twenty times. No manner of defect was to be discovered, and yet the watch went intolerably At last it struck him that possibly the balance wheel might have been near a magnet. On applying a needle to it, he found his suspicions true. Here was all the mischief. The steel-work in the other parts of the watch had a perpetual influence on its motions; and the watch went as well as possible with a new wheel. If the soundest mind be magnetised by any predilection, it must act irregularly.—Cecil

BEETHOVEN was eternally quarrelling with his domestics, whom he would swear at constantly, nay sometimes drive them in a body from his house. In dress and appearance he looked like a beggar—in manner sulky, or spiteful, as it suited his humour; he would call people names as they passed him in the street, and tell them of their faults in public assemblies; being deaf, he was regardless of their expostulations, or censures. His laugh was more like a scream, and he gave utterance to it, in defiance of place or circumstance—yet he was much to be pitied. His manner towards his servants made them dislike him, and in revenge they thwarted and cheated him. He was mistrustful of every one; consequently had no friend to watch over his comforts, and cheer his solitary state. He would frequently walk out alone in the fields, and several times, sitting down to compose and write, has fallen asleep and remained there through frightful storms, which drenched him to the skin, and confined him to the house for days afterwards, with severe colds and fevers —Musical World.

ECCE SIGNA!—Signboard fame is of all kinds of popularity the most fleeting. It is not long since every second shop for the sale of haberdashery was a "Waterboo House." Then succeeded "Navarino House," and these in their turn made room for "Reform Establishments," with variations of "Grey," "Russell," and "Brougham." These, too, have had their day, and now "Victoria" is the popular nomenclature, there being no fewer than four Victoria Houses" in two of the leading metropolitan thoroughfares. In fact her Majesty's name bids fair to drive "Halls of Commerce," "Equity Houses," and "Economical Establishments," wholly out of the field.

TURKISH SUPERSTITIONS.—Another singular custom is that of pouring water where any one has fallen, to prevent a recurrence of the accident on the same spot, which is religiously observed by the lower orders; as well as flinging stones at the body of a decapitated criminal, in order to secure the dreams of the spectator from an intrusion of the ghastly object. No Turk of the lower ranks of society ever passes a shred of paper which may chance to lie upon his path; he always gathers it up with the greatest care; as the popular belief leads him to place implicit faith in an ancient superstition that all paper thus obtained will be collected after death, and scattered over the burning soil through which he is to pass to paradise; and that consequently the more he is enabled to secure, the less suffering he will have to endure hereafter.—City of the Sultan.

COMMERCIAL REMARKS.

IMPORTS.

Cotton Manufactures.—Both Grey and White Longcloths are rather lower, so many being thrown upon the market and several small sales have been made during the week of the former at 3.75, and of the latter at 4½. Cotton Yarn of common quality continues almost unsaleable. A considerable sale of good was reported to us yesterday, but we could not obtain the exact terms. The quantity was about 1000 Piculs No. 16 @ 30—the price not under $ 34.

Woollens.—Spanish Stripes continue at the same quotations but without active demand. Longells, are rather lower both for scarlets and assorted colors. Camlets without much enquiry, and no sales are reported of either Dutch or English, holders looking for an advance.

Metals. Lead and Iron are both rather down—several parcels offering.

Straits Produce.—Pepper is not in so brisk demand, but it would fetch still 7½, the supply being very short. There has been no further sale of Betelnut, the price of which will greatly depend on the supply, which at present would appear likely to be rather short. Tin and Rattans without alteration.

Rice,—is stationary at our low quotations, but as rain is required it may advance a little from the want of it.

Cotton—There is no alteration in either price or demand, and no sales of any sort have been effected. The Bombay is taken off in small lots, the good quality at from 8. 7 @ 9. 3, and very little of the fine is now here. The lower descriptions sell from 7 @ 8. 3, In Madras and Bengal nothing has been done during the week. The clearances in the last 4 weeks are reported at

Bombay	Bengal	Madras	Total
20.500	2500	680	23,680	Bales.

Nothing is yet known of the Nankin crop, but accounts may now be shortly expected.

Opium.—In addition to the seizure of the small dealers and smokers in Canton, some dirturbance took place in the early part of the week between the Mandarins and villagers on shore at Whampoa, which at first was expected would seriously interfere with the Opium trade, but it has been arranged. The brokers however are still alarmed and have, we believe, got rid of all their purchases, so that, when the market again opens, a good demand may be expected. Malwa has been sold as low as 560; it is now held a little higher. Patna has been firmer @ 570 @ 580. being in few hands. The deliveries to the 15th were, Patna old 27; new 226; Benares, old—; new, 4; Malwa, 71; Total 32 8 chests.

EXPORTS.

Nankin Silk.—The Chinese still maintain that the supply will fall short of last year, and are still demanding upwards of $ 600 for their new silk, but there are no purchasers.

Tea.—We hear of no transaction, and our quotations are altogether nominal.

N. B. The Chinese government being ignorant of or not recognising the bonding system, imported goods are subject to an export duty when exported which duty is extremely heavy on most articles and generally greatly exceeds the import duty

Note.—It will not be amiss to remark, that these Nominal duties being almost always a matter of specific bargain with the hong merchants, either on the part of the foreigners or of the outside native merchants, the only use of the above list is as a guide, from which to learn the general average of charges which are classed under the same of duties. The charges of outside merchants are necessarily greater than those of hong merchants; especially on staple articles. [Morrison's Chinese Commercial Guide.

WHAMPOA PORT CHARGES.

Pilotage inward and outward	$120
(Linguist's and comprador's fees vary on ships of different nations.)
English country ships pay for Comprador	50
for Linguists' fees	173
Cumsha, on French vessels 1,680 Taels.
On other vessels 1,600 Taels, or	2223
Charged alike on all vessels large or small	$2566

Measurement is charged at three different rates, according to the product arising from multiplying the length between the mizen and foremasts by the breadth at the gangway, and dividing the product by 10.

The First class, of which the product so arising is not less than 160 covids or 1950 feet, pays 0.7874755 taels per covid, or about $0.8974 per foot.

Second class, above 1200 covids, or 1462½ feet, pays 0.7221091 taels per covid, or about $0.8229 per foot.

Third class, 1200 covids and under, pays 0.5062341 taels per covid, or about, $0.5769 per foot.

By a conclusion of the Committee of the General Chamber of Commerce, the sum paid to the Hoppo on Rice laden ships, should be considered a charge on the vessel not on the rice . . . $ 9 39 50

And that the sum paid to the Linguist, should also be charged to the ship 2 30.

Total Charges on ship . . . 11 89.50

And that all other charges should fall on the Rice.

When the Consignee of a ship has no share of her import or export cargo under his management, the hong merchants usually demand $ 600 or $ 700 to defray the charges on securing her

CANTON CURRENCY.

The circulating medium at Canton is broken Spanish dollars by weight the proportion of which to a tael varies in different transactions; being in calculations of prices, or accounts between foreigners and native merchants, at the rate of 720 Taels per 1000 Drs.

But in the weighing of money for payment . . . . 717 " 1000 "

Excepting to the Company's treasury, or for Bengal opium, when it is weighed . . . . . . 718 " 1000 "

Or o native merchants not of the co-hong, who receive, unless otherwise agreed . . . . . . 715 " 1000 "

As do also ship and house compradors.

* Not more than 100 peculs of raw, and 80 peculs of wrought, silk may be exported in one vessel. When this law is contravened, a fee of $ 10 a 15 per pecul, besides the duty, is paid for connivance. This is sometimes called 'double luty' on silk. The amounts here iven as duties on silks can be but little depended on, particularly the charges per piece.

COMMERCIAL REMARKS.

IMPORTS.

CAMLETS.—Very dull.

COCHINEAL.—No demand.

COTTON.—About 2000 Bales of middling qualities Bombay have been sold at Taels 8.3 mace a 9.1 per pecul, and several parcels of inferior froth Ts. 7.2 a 7.5 and Ts. 8 per pecul; but the market is without animation, though the dealers have only moderate stocks on hand.—In the Bengal and Madras staples nothing doing.

COTTON YARN.—A sale of 200 a 300 Bales is reported, at about $33 for Nos. 20 a 40; inferior qualities are dull and difficult of sale.

IRON and LEAD } Little business doing in either of these metals at present.

LONG CLOTHS.—Keep going down, and though some parties have realized at present rates, others prefer holding in hopes of a slight improvement. We have not heard of much business having been done. Grey goods are dull.

FOO ELIS.—There has not been much done lately.

OPIUM.—Most of the Brokers are still absent, and no transactions in the regular trade have taken place during the week. Sales from Chinese to Foreigners have been made of Malwa at 855o and Patna at 560 and Benares at 8520, but our present quotations are the nominal rates of the day; which denote a slight recovery from the late depressed rates.—Deliveres of Opium 1st to 8th September, Patna old 7, new 179; Benares, new 4, Malwa 13, Total 203.

STRAIT PRODUCE.—Nothing has occurred in these articles lately to cause any particular observation.

WOOLLENS.—We have heard of some sales of very good Stripes at $1.40 a $1.45 per yard, and the article is represented as steady.

EXPORTS.

RAW SILK NANKIN.—Foreigners forbear treating with the dealers, whilst they persevere in their exorbitant demands of more than $600 per pecul.

SYCEE SILVER.—Sill continues scarce outside.

TEA.—The masters of the New Comer are daily arriving; parties are employed in their examination, but no prices are yet spoken of. The market therefore is perfectly quiet, and very few full chests have reached Canton.

EXCHANGE on LONDON.—Little doing, and we have no alteration to notice.

FREIGHT.—About 300 Tons to London have lately been engaged at £4.10 per Ton.
